HUNGARIAN PARLIAMENT

Formally Opened by the Emperor-King, Francis Joseph.

Expresses Thanks That All Misunderstandings Have Passed Away.

Budapest, May 22.—The Hungarian parliament was formally opened at the royal castle today by the emperor-king, Francis Joseph, who in the speech from the throne bid the deputies a hearty welcome and expressed his keen thankfulness that the misunderstandings had passed away. "It is painful to our paternal heart," he said, "to look back on the events of the recent past which disturbed the orderly course of constitutional life. We are thankful to Divine Providence that following the desire freely expressed the disastrous misunderstandings have vanished, and it is our ardently cherished wish that the constitutional co-operation of all the legislative factors may remain undisturbed in the future."

After enumerating the measures which are to be presented for the consideration of the new parliament, the speech declared that although close relations exist with the country's allies, aiming at the maintenance of peace, and in spite of the friendly ties with other foreign powers, which afford a guarantee of peace, provision must be made for the defensive power of the country and therefore an extraordinary contingent of recruits must be supplied and equipped in accordance with the rule followed by the previous delegations.

The speech also announced that after the question of electoral reforms has been settled a new parliament will be summoned.

SAND SAVED BY HIS NEIGHBORS

Elevator Buyer Failed to Take Enough for Dockage.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 22.—M. T. Sand, a wheat buyer, was found to be $1,351 short in his accounts recently, and the elevator company by which he was employed preferred a criminal charge against him.

The justice before whom the complaint was filed came to the conclusion that Mr. Sand's difficulty was not due to anything bordering on embezzlement, but was the result of his failure to take a sufficient amount from the farmers in dockage, or to leaks from cars or errors in weighing.

Neighbors felt the same way, and a popular subscription was started and sufficient money raised in the course of a few days to satisfy the elevator company. The money has been turned over and the case dismissed.

There is much criticism of the present law, as failure to dock sufficiently or errors in weighing may submit an elevator agent to charges of shortage and consequent imprisonment.

REVOLUTION AT SANTO DOMINGO

Attempt Likely to be Made to Overthrow President Caceres.

Washington, May 22.—Disquieting advices relative to revolutionary movements in the West Indies, directed against the administration of President Caceres of Santo Domingo, led to a conference today between officials of the state and navy departments. Details of these movements are vague, but they indicate that ex-President Morales is now at or near St. Thomas, and is making a determined effort to expel Caceres and regain the presidency of Santo Domingo.

Some of the leaders who were instrumental in ejecting Morales from office, are reported to be now on his side, and many rumors have been received of purchases of arms and gathering of revolutionists in ports adjacent to Santo Domingo.

POPE PIUS VERY MUCH IMPROVED.

Rome, May 22.—The improvement in the condition of the pope continues. He was able this morning to descend to the apartment where he gives his audiences, which is on the floor below the one where he sleeps, and received Cardinal Merry del Val, the papal secretary of state, Mgr. Bisleti, major domo of the Vatican, and Cardinal Katschthaler, archbishop of Salsburg, with whom he conversed for some time. The pontiff joked about his illness, saying that he had been much amused by certain reports in the press depicting him as being at death's door.

SAY THEY SAW MUENTER.

Madison, Wis., May 22.—It is reported that Prof. Erich Muenter of Harvard, wanted for the murder of his wife, is in Madison, having been seen yesterday by people who knew him in Chicago. The police are investigating.

STORER LEAVES FOR PARIS.

Vienna, May 22.—Bellamy Storer, the former American ambassador here, and Mrs. Storer, left Vienna for Paris today. They are going to the United States in the fall.

ANOTHER SENATOR

Takes Offense at Article Published in New York Paper.

Senator McCumber Intimates Writer is Without Reasoning Power.

Washington, May 22.—The railroad rate bill found an early echo in the senate today when Senator McCumber rose to a question of personal privilege to make reply to a publication in the New York Tribune charging that one of the North Dakota senators would accomplish the defeat of certain purposes of the bill. The amendment was described in the newspapers as a "little joker," and it was represented that in the changing of "regularly" to the word "lawfully" the common carriers would be enabled to disregard the orders of the commission. It was stated that the senator had admitted that such would be the result. Senator McCumber said that he had never made any such admission nor any admission that would seem to be of that character. He expressed the opinion that if there had been any "joke" on any one it was on the writer of the article, but he regarded it as rather a slur on the committee which had accepted it, and to the lawyers of the senate, none of whom had detected any covert character in it. He also said that the amendment could not have any effect like that indicated and he did not understand how any person with the slightest reasoning power could have reached the conclusion arrived at by the writer of the article.

HAS FURTHER INFORMATION

Garfield to Tell More About the Great Oil Octopus.

Washington, May 22.—Commissioner of Corporations James R. Garfield stated today he would submit to the president further information on the result of his investigation of the oil industry. The report recently submitted to congress covered the question of transportation and freight rates, and Mr. Garfield is now engaged in preparing reports on the production and refining of oil, the control of pipe lines, organization, foreign trade and conditions and competitive methods. Mr. Garfield said he did not believe he would be able to submit to the president any of these reports before the adjournment of congress.

THREE LEPERS HAVE BEEN CURED

Announcement is Made From the Louisiana Leper Home.

New Orleans, May 22.—In a lengthy report submitted to Governor Blanchard, the board of control of the Louisiana leper home, announcement is made for the first time, that a definite cure has been obtained in three cases of leprosy. The cures are mentioned in the reports of Dr. Hopkins, visiting physician, and Dr. Isador Dyer, consulting leprologist. These patients have been discharged.

It is stated in the report that the disease continues to spread in this state and that the cases show evidence of a recent outbreak and that there are certain centers of infection yet to be investigated. In some instances the disease has been carried to non-infected points by patients who escaped from the home. The legislature is asked to locate all points of infection.

The members of the board suggest that an appeal be made to the federal government to establish a national hospital for lepers.

ATTENDANCE LIGHT.

Railroads Refused to Issue Passes to Democratic Delegates.

Excelsior Springs, Mo., May 22.—The Democratic judicial convention to name two judges for the state supreme court met here today. The state nominating convention will be held in Jefferson City in June. There were fewer delegates present than for many years, about one half of the number selected having sent proxies. The railroads for the first time in years declined to furnish delegates with passes, and this was said to be the cause of the small attendance.

MAN AND WOMAN TO HANG FOR MURDER.

Jefferson City, Mo., May 22.—The state supreme court today upheld the death sentences imposed by the lower court in the cases of Frank Hottman and Mrs. Aggie Myers, convicted of murdering the woman's husband, Clarence Myers, at Kansas City, on May 11, 1904, and set June 29 next as the date of execution in each case. Hottman and Mrs. Myers deliberately planned to get Myers out of the way so they could marry.

PATENT FOR McDOUGALL.

Washington, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—A patent for an apparatus for moving and mining material of a guaranteed and comminuted nature has been issued to Capt. Alexander McDougall of Duluth.

VOLIVA IS ENJOINED

From Disposing of Zion City Assets in Any Way.

The Court to Preserve Estate Which Can Make Money.

Chicago, May 2.—Judge Landis today, in the United States district court, issued an order restraining Wilbur G. Voliva and all of his attorneys, agents and employes, from disposing of, or in any manner dissipating the assets of Zion City. An injunction previously issued, enjoining Voliva from attempting to secure the dissolution of an injunction in the state court, which prevents Voliva from interfering with Dowie, was dissolved by the court. Judge Landis said he preferred to preserve the estate under his own order.

An order declaring Dowie, individually, to be insolvent was entered by the court, but it will not become effective until tomorrow, because some of the creditors desire to contest the insolvency of Dowie.

In making these orders, Judge Landis said that the agents who had been appointed by him to inquire into the affairs of Zion City reported that the Zion City industries can make money, that there has been no misapplication of funds, and that under proper management the estate can be made to pay 100 cents on the dollar.

NON-UNION MEN DESERT MINES

Cripples Company So That Works Cannot be Started.

Smithfield, Ohio, May 22.—Desertions from the ranks of the nonunion men imported by the United States Coal company have so crippled the available force that the concern was unable to start its mines today as planned. Of the first thirty brought in only eight remain. One hundred men were brought from Chicago last night. Fourteen of them arrived at Plum Run. The remainder were persuaded by union delegates to desert. The men now at the mine, sixty in number, are absolutely insufficient to man the machines. The union already claims a victory.

There was more firing on the hill last night, but there are yet no reports of personal injuries.

KING HOLDS LEVEE

London, May 22.—King Edward held a levee in the throne roof of St. James palace today. The prince of Wales, the duke of Connaught, the cabinet ministers, the ambassadors and many other distinguished persons were present Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, who was accompanied by all the staff of the American embassy, presented Third Secretary Grant Smith and Arthur Harmon of New York.

AN EMINENT DIVINE COMING TO AMERICA

HUGH BLACK.

Edinburgh, May 22.—The Rev. Hugh Black, minister of St. George's Free Church of this city, has intimated that he will accept the professorship of practical theology in the Union Theological seminary, New York city, which was recently offered to him.

REACTED ON THEMSELVES

Consuls Failed to Return Fees and Salaries Are Smaller.

Washington, May 22.—One of the unexpected results of the consular reorganization act, now being placed in operation, is the discomfiture of some consular officers who have been concealing the actual amount of the unofficial fees of their offices. The practice was not dishonest in one sense, for the consuls are in many cases permitted to retain all such fees. But for the sake of the records of the department, and in order to enable the officials to know the state of business of the consulates it was required that all such fees should be accounted for. But some consuls feared that to publish the amount of such fees they received would be to make their offices too attractive to office seekers, so they failed to make the full returns.

Their punishment came when congress passed the reorganization act, on the basis of substitution of lump salaries for the combined salary and fee system of compensation. There was no intention of reducing the compensation of many of the consuls, but it has naturally followed that the consuls who failed to return their full fees have suffered a substantial reduction.

CURE DEFEATS HOPPE AT MONTREAL MATCH.

Montreal, May 22.—In a 500-point match here last night, Louis Cure defeated Willie Hoppe. With five points to run Hoppe drew the attention of the referee to a foul which neither the referee nor Cure was able to see, owing to their positions. Cure ran out with eleven. Cure's average was 17-86, and his high run 62. Hoppe had an average of 17-69, and his best run was 121.

A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION

Injures a Score of Men More or Less Seriously.

Roof of Glucose Factory in New Jersey Blown Off.

New York, May 22.—A score of men employed in the engine and dynamo rooms of the New York Glucose company's plant, in Shady Side, N. J., on the west bank of the Hudson river, opposite Ninetieth street, this city, were more or less injured today by the explosion of a big steam pipe. The roof of the building was blown off, and the wreckage caught fire. Some thirty men who were at work in the building had narrow escapes from death, and others were taken out of the burning building by their fellow laborers from adjoining buildings belonging to the same company. In the confusion which followed the explosion, many reports of serious loss of life were spread among the relatives of the employes, thus exaggerating the extent of the disaster. The company's force and local firemen fought the flames, which threatened to destroy several other buildings in the big glucose plant.

THE GOVERNMENT DEEPLY REGRETS

The Murder of Consul Stuart, Says Russian Foreign Minister.

St. Petersburg, May 22.—In response to a formal request made by Ambassador Meyer to the foreign office here on the subject of the assassination of William H. Stewart, the American vice consul at Batoum, the ambassador has received from Foreign Minister Iswoldky a note written in his own hand expressing the government's regret at the murder and also stating that the viceroy of the Caucasus has been ordered to make the most rigid investigation of the crime and apprehend and punish the assassins.

Washington, May 22.—Russian officials are making every possible effort to capture the murderers of W. H. Stuart, the American vice consul at Batoum, Russia, according to dispatches received by the state department today from Ambassador Meyer at St. Petersburg and Thomas E. Heenan, the American consul at Odessa.

Mr. Meyer's dispatch says the reasons for the attack on Mr. Stuart are still unknown. The Russian foreign office is advised, Mr. Meyer says, that the murder took place at Makhindjaouri and that Mr. Stuart died an hour after the attack upon him.

KOMURA TO BE AMBASSADOR

Tokio, May 22.—Takahira Kato having declined the tender of the Japanese ambassadorship to London, Baron Komura has consented to take the post. The appointment will be announced soon.

PARLIAMENT ACTED WELL

Course in Overlooking Emperor's Refusal is Now Commended.

Constitutional Democrats' Agrarian Project Will be Hard Fought.

St. Petersburg, May 22.—Parliament will probably not meet again until May 25, today being the fete day of St. Nicholas, the miracle worker, and May 24 being Ascension day, another great holiday. The interim will be occupied by the committees in examining the credentials and elections of members and in preparations for the coming struggle over the measure for the solution of the agrarian question. The attention of the country and of parliament is now riveted on this problem, all sides recognizing that the manner in which it is solved largely will determine the future course of events. The liberal papers, which yesterday clamored for an open war of retaliation owing to the emperor's refusal to personally receive the deputation appointed by the house, after sober reflection commend the course of parliament in overlooking the point of etiquette in favor of the serious work which the country expects it to accomplish. The Constitutional Democrats' agarian project will be attacked both by the Right and the Left. The radical workmen and peasant group, which now numbers over seventy members, has decided to make a fight for the complete abolition of private ownership and the establishment of a system providing for the full nationalization of the land. While the members of the Right have a conservative land program of their own, the details have not yet been given out. They are trying hard to induce the group of forty peasants who are holding aloof from party affiliations to join them. They are proceeding on the theory that the constitutional democrats and extremists by excesses will discredit themselves before the country and bring about a reaction which will give the conservatives a majority at the next election.

As evidence of its desire to work in harmony with the lower house the council of the empire or upper house has decided not to press its own views of the great questions awaiting solution but to await the initiative of the lower house.

PINNED DOWN BY FALL OF ORE

Jacob Timus Is Severely Injured at the Minorca Mine.

Virginia, Minn., May 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—An accident occurred at the Minorca mine, here, yesterday, which resulted in a severe injury to Jacob Timus. He, with others, had been engaged in blasting, and the blast loosened a timber cap. Two men started to restore the cap to place, when a fall of ore pinned them to the ground, with the cap on top of them. The injuries of Timus are severe, but it is thought that he will recover.

The engine house of the Tesora mine, Capt. Fay's property, was destroyed by fire yesterday, which resulted in stopping the pumps, so that the shaft filled with water. The fire caught in the roof from heat from the boilers. The damage was not great, although the stopping of the pumps will result in considerable delay and expense.

FRAZEE WAS WINNER.

Defeated Detroit High School Team in Exciting Ball Game.

Frazee, Minn., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—After a most exciting and fast game, the Frazee high school team defeated the Detroit team by 15 to 8, on the home ground. Last week Detroit defeated Frazee by a big score of 13 to 11. The last game was played before the largest crowd ever on the field. Fully 200 fans came from Detroit, and their rooters were in good condition. The chief features were the fast and puzzling pitching of Arthur Schlehr for Frazee, and the way the boys punished the pitching of Sturtevant, the Detroit expert. The game was the best of the season.

Hawley high school comes here for the next game on the home ground.

KANSAS VOLUNTEERS TO RECEIVE THEIR PAY.

Washington, May 22.—The accounting officers of the treasury have just completed the settlement of a claim amounting to $22,000 for extra pay due the Kansas volunteers commanded by Col. Frederick Funston, now brigadier general in the United States army. The claim grew out of the service of the Kansas volunteers during the Spanish war before they were accepted as a part of the volunteer army. The court of claims over a year ago allowed the claim but the treasury officials contested. A warrant for the amount stated will be issued in a few days and sent to the governor of Kansas for distribution.

THE BARON MUMM, ETC., PRESENTS CREDENTIALS.

Tokio, May 22.—The new German ambassador, Baron Mumm Von Schwartzenstein, presented his credentials to the emperor at the palace today. The emperor will give a luncheon in the ambassador's honor May 24.

CORPORATE DISHONESTY

Justice Gaynor Says It Shocks Decency of Moral People.

August Belmont Makes a Spirited Reply to the Charges.

New York, May 22.—At a dinner last night by the New York Civic Federation to the members of the investigating committee of the federation on municipal ownership on the eve of their departure for Europe, Supreme Court Justice William J. Gaynor made an attack on corporations to which August Bemont, who was also a guest at the dinner, made a spirited reply.

Judge Gaynor said:

"In this day great franchises represent nothing but a perpetual tax on the people of the community. A franchise is granted for 999 years. Nine years is more reasonable than 999 years at this time in the history of the country. Certain rights are granted to great corporations under the high sounding name of 'public franchises,' which are nothing more than gifts. These gifts are bonded, stocked, doubled up, and continued for many years, a tax on the people. Even in this presence I say the action of these corporations is something dishonest, dishonest enough to shock the moral sense of the God-fearing people of this community.

"Last week in Washington we had that great debate on the railroads as a system. If the railroads be taken as an example, we shall have before us for our consideration some startling facts.

"The horrible crimes of the corporations have come to be understood by the people. The people weal, but for the aggrandizement of one man, which is the reverse of public sentiment and public demand.

"Corporations have taken private property, which can only be taken possession upon the assumption that certain rights are to revert to the owners of that property, when in fact they are providing no return to the people.

"We have recently had explained to us how a certain man or certain interests can carry freight from one section of the country to another for one-half of what other men have to pay. Suppose a man with one hundred head of cattle had been allowed to pass through a toll gate by paying one-half of what his neighbor had to pay. What do you suppose the people at that time would have done? Why, they would have torn down the toll gate, and ultimately we will tear down the

WOULD DISSOLVE INDIANOLA SYNOD

Charged That It Has Committed Acts Contrary to Rules.

Decatur, Ill., May 22.—The Cumberland Presbyterian assembly was given a surprise today by a report of the committee on overtures recommending dissolution of the Indianola synod and the attachment of the Indianola Presbyteries to the synods of Texas and Kansas because the Indianola synod had declared a purpose to resist the constituted authority of the church and had committed acts contrary to the rules of the church. Discussion on the report was postponed by other business.

The temperance committee recommended the employment of a temperance evangelist and declared that no man who favored the licensed saloon should be supported for public office. It endorsed the W. C. T. U. and the anti-saloon league.

Mrs. W. J. Darby, president of the women's board of missions addressed the assembly. She told of the progress made in mission work under the charge of the women's board. The offerings last year were larger than ever before. Rev. G. M. Hubbert addressed the assembly as the representative of the Pan Presbyterian alliance.

HAILSTONES WERE AS BIG AS BASEBALLS.

Franklin, Neb., May 22.—This section was visited yesterday by the most severe rain and hail storm ever known here. It lasted forty-five minutes, killing stock, smashing windows and destroying growing crops. This was followed by a rain storm lasting more than an hour during which nearly five inches of water fell. Railroad tracks were washed out in many places. The telephone and telegraph systems are prostrated so that details of the damage done cannot be obtained at this time.

ENGAGE BEDE TO SPEAK.

Name on Chautauqua Program With Folk, Dolliver and La Follette.

Appleton, Wis., May 22.—Congressman Bede of Minnesota will speak at the Fox River Valley Chautauqua here on July 5. A contract has just been closed with him, as well as with Gov. Folk of Missouri and Senator Dolliver of Iowa. Senator Robert La Follette will no doubt speak the opening day.

NEW POSTMASTERS.

Washington, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following Minnesota postmasters have been appointed: Goodland, Itasca county, Hulda Braikin, vice Albert Kurtz, removed; Oakpark, Benton county, Ida Williams, vice D. O. Martin, resigned; Portage, Aitkin county, Hannah Sanders, vice R. Sanders, dead.

GREAT FIRES FROM LITTLE CAMP COALS GROW.

WEATHER FORECAST—Showers and cool, probably fog tonight and Wednesday; northeasterly winds.

The BLUE AND... ...THE GREY

Just The Kind of Clothing You Want.

Blue Serges and Grey worsteds are what men of refined taste are demanding in their clothing this season. In Blue Serges are shown both wide and narrow wales in the new long cut coats, both single and double breasted. The garments are tailored with such care and the fashion plate lines are carried out to such completeness in the Alfred Benjamin & Co. clothes that it is impossible to distinguish them from the production of the very high priced tailors. The grey worsteds embrace every known shade of grey, both plain and fancy, including the popular Dove grey, Twilight grey and Oyster grey which are Fashion's favorites this season.

THREE KINDS, ALL APPLE.

Boston Herald: The following story was told me by the late Hon. E. P. Carpenter of Foxboro. A few years before his death he had occasion to visit a village in Maine, and put up at its one hotel. At dinner he was waited on by the landlord's daughter. After he had finished the early course she asked him if he didn't want some pie. To his inquiries as to what varieties she had, she replied: "Wall, we got three kinds o' pie—open-faced, cross-barred and kivered, all apple."

HORSES GOOD COUNTERS.

New York American: A Russian doctor has spent a great deal of time finding out what animals can count, and has found that horses can count more numbers than any other animals. He states that a parrot can count four, a cat six, crows ten and some few dogs twenty. But he found horses that could count more than this.

One would plow across a field twenty times and would then stop and rest, but it never stopped at nineteen or twenty-one; always just twenty. Another horse always counted the miles along the road by the white mile posts that were set up, and stopped every twenty-five miles, as it had been taught to do, to be fed.

EVERY-DAY MIRACLES.

Philadelphia Bulletin: "Bullfinches fed on hempseed turn quite black," said a naturalist. "Horses kept in coal mines for several years become covered with soft, thick fur like a mole. The mastiff of Tibet, who in the Tibetan highlands has a heavy coat of wool, loses his coat completely when he is brought down to the plains. The ermine in his snow-infested home turns white in the winter, but if he is taken for the winter to a warm climate he does not turn white at al. Quite amazing altogether are the changes that with food and environment we can effect on all living creatures—even on man."

NOT FOR THE MEN.

Boston Herald: When Col. Edmund Rice was in command of the Twenty-sixth Infantry (mostly volunteers from New England) in the Philippines, he organized from his regiment a company of mounted scouts. To equip them for this service he made requisition on headquarters for the necessary outfit, including eight nose-bags.

Some officious clerk in the quartermaster's office in Manila returned the requisition to Col. Rice with these written remarks: "Your report shows but sixty men in your mounted company. Why do you require eighty nose-bags?"

The colonel's explanation was short and characteristic. It was: "It is true I have but sixty men, but I have eighty horses. The nose-bags are for the horses, not for the men."

LOTS OF ORE GOING OUT

Many Vessels Leave This Port Loaded With It.

Many More Waiting at Anchor—Majestic Here Short Time.

A great deal of ore is being sent out of this port and many ships are still arriving for ore. A good many are still anchored in the lower bay waiting for a let-up of the rush at the ore docks so that they can get in for cargoes. Fourteen vessels have gone out in the last 24 hours loaded with ore.

The steamer Majestic of the Northern Navigation company, arrived in port from Sarnia at 7 o'clock last evening and left early this morning. She is taking the place of the Huronic, which struck at the Sault on her last trip down.

An examination of the Huronic, which was docked at the Detroit Shipbuilding company's plant Friday morning, shows that the boat has twelve or fourteen plates damaged as a result of stranding in the Canadian Sault last week. The work of repairing her will be prosecuted day and night, and it is expected that it will be completed in about a wek.

While the S. J. Murphy and her tow, the Roebling, were tying up in the canal at the head of the Sault locks Wednesday evening, to wait for lock service, the Roebling ran into the Murphy's stern and rendered her unfit for towing until she is repaired. The Roebling's bow was not injured by the collision, but a hole was bored into the stern of the Murphy up to her tow post.

ON NEW SCHEDULE.

Tugmen Have More Time Off This Season Than Heretofore.

The tugmen employed by the Union Towing company are now enjoying the new schedule which provides for every other night and every other Sunday off. Heretofore they have been having only very third night and every third Sunday off and this new schedule agreed upon last week between the representatives of the union and the officials of the Great Lakes Towing company, has given the tugmen a comparative snap. They get the same wage scale as last year, but there is this difference this year: The licensed men on the tugs have the hiring and discharging of the firemen, linemen and cooks and are responsible for their acts.

Nothing more has been heard of the referendum vote which the Marine Firemen, Oilers and Water-tenders have taken on the matter of agreeing with the Lake Carriers for the current season. It is not believed there will be a strike ordered.

WILL MEET THREE MEN

Kid Cutler Will Attempt to Throw All of Them.

Kid Cutler, John L. Sullivan's sparring partner, who is at the Metropolitan this week with John L.'s own vandeville company, will attempt to throw three men in fifteen minutes at that popular play house, this evening. In the event that he fails to accomplish this feat, he will forfeit $25 to each man whomb he fails to throw.

He will meet Hans Peterson, a longshoreman, weighing about 186 pounds, Charles Cole, a bricklayer, weighing about 179 pounds, and Bob Carroll, a printer, weighing 192 pounds.

In addition to the match between Cutler and the three men mentioned, there will be a lively mat contest between the "Terrible Turk" and Mauritz Harris. The Turk will attempt to throw Harris, who is a Superior man. Harris is 22 years old and develops his brawn in the West Superior shipyards, o' days.

Of course, John L. and all the other stars in his company will appear as usual. The famous prize ring champion talks very entertainingly off the stage. He believes that everyone should develop their muscles in order that they may not be weaklings for, at one time or another, a man is called upon to use his fists to maintain his rights.

"On the train the other day, I met a priest who was a boy with me in Boston," said John L. today. "We hadn't met in years. He is a member of an order in which every man must be ready at all times to go anywhere and do anything ordered. He was on his way to the Northwest, so far from anywhere that he may never get back, but that doesn't bother him one, two, three.

"'What a missionary you would have made, John!' he said, when we had settled down for our chat. 'Muscular Christianity (I think that's what he called it) has its effect with the people away in the wilds quite as much as fine preaching. Do you remember the time you knocked your boss through a window in Boston and threw up your job? I am ashamed to own up that at the time that incident impressed me very favorably, for that boss was a tyrant and deserved something such, although it was rough on the window.'

"I told him it was hard to tell by the cut of a man's coat how far a distance he could go in a fight, for I remember this friend of mine as a stayer. I saw him work his way through a crowd of toughs one day out at the Point in South Boston, and he hardly needed the help I was able to give him. It was a case where he had to fight, and when I asked him about that and if he wasn't a pretty good Christian with muscles, he begged to be excused from remembering anything so worldly."

Result of Duluth Soot.

A Duluth business man walked into The Herald office today to exhibit the effects of chimneys that belch forth black smoke and soot. He had on an overcoat and hat both light in color and just from the cleaners. Both hat and coat were completely spotted with black soot. There was enough dampness in the air this morning to drive the dirt into the cloth, and back to the cleaners they must go. This man is now a thorough believer that smoke is a nuisance and should be suppressed.

PRICE OF TIN PLATES TAKES A BIG JUMP.

Pittsburg, May 22.—The American Sheet & Tin Plate company, one of the principal subsidiary interests of the United States Steel corporation, today announced an advance of 15 cents a box in the price of tin plates. This fixes the prive at $3.75 a box for f.o.b. Pittsburg, for 14x20 inch, 100 pounds. The advance is due to the heavy increase in the price of pig tin, which is quoted today at 41 cents a pound. Tin plate was advanced from 3.50 to 3.60 April 10, when pig tin advanced to 3.75 a pound. As a result of the high price and the scarcity of steel, several independent tin plate concerns have been forced to shut down their plants.

WANT AND NEED.

There's a big difference between what a baby wants and what he needs. Deny him the one, give him the other. Most babies need Scott's Emulsion—it's the right thing for a baby. It contains a lot of strength-building qualities that their food may not contain. After a while they get to want it. Why? Because it makes them comfortable. Those dimples and round cheeks mean health and ease. Scott's Emulsion makes children easy; keeps them so, too.

BURLINGTON DEMURRER

To Indictments for Giving Rebates Overruled by Court.

Government Now Ready to Take Up Individual Cases.

Kansas City, May 22—The government today, in the United States district court here, announced that it was ready for trial in three of the rebate cases. The cases called were those of George L. Thomas, a freight broker of New York city, and his chief clerk, L. B. Taggart, under indictment for alleged conspiracy in securing rebates for shippers, and that against George H. Crosby, former assistant freight traffic manager of the Burlington road, charged with conspiracy in giving rebates. These men were indicted in December last, with other railway and packing house officials, whose trials have been set for a later date. H. B. Duncan, a special agent of the department of justice, arrived here yesterday to assist in prosecuting the cases, and will aid A. S. Van Valkenburgh, United States district attorney, and Leslie Lyons, assistant district attorney. The government has forty witnesses, among whom is J. A. Roberts, an expert on rate in the employ of the interstate commerce commission.

Judge Smith McPherson of Iowa, sitting in place of Judge John F. Phillips, overruled the demurrer of the Burlington railway to indictments against officials of that company, and they must now go to trial. The defendants in a demurrer filed several weeks ago, contended that congress was without power to enact legislation regulating export rates in the giving of alleged rebates on which the Burlington was charged with having violated the interstate commerce act.

Judge McPherson said in denying the demurrer:

"The import case (162 U. S. 197), was not of or concerning the ocean rates from New Orleans to San Francisco by rail, and applying the holding of that case to the one at the bar why should the statute not cover exports from Kansas City to New York city, even though the purpose is evidenced by contract by a single and through bill of lading, and the purpose is at once place the product on an ocean vessel destined to an European country."

He continued: "It is apparent to many, and the commission so recognizes that by many it is believed that to bring all export shipments under this statute will work injury to the Pacific coast and to the South in exports of cotton, and that the same is true as to the grain-growing and cattle-raising industry of the West. If it be decided that right of contract therefore be denied, the answer is that no one provision of the constitution must be subordinated to another, and full force and effect can be given to both, by enforcing the statute on shipments to New York and then transferring the merchandise to the vessels, when, of course, it passes from under the statute.

"And, it seems to me that when this is done, it can be under established rate, proclaimed by a published and posted tariff rate."

The case against the Burlington railway, in which a demurrer was overruled today, is distinct from that against its former assistant freight traffic manager, George H. Crosby. The Burlington is charged with granting concessions to Kansas City packers on products for export through the port of New York. The date of trial in the Burlington case has not yet been set.

CROWD WATCHES MATAAFA.

People Flock to Canal But Boat is Not Floated.

Quite a crowd watched the wrecking operations on the steamer Mataafa at the harbor entrance today, the craft being raised so that unless a heavy sea undoes some of the work, she can be moved within a few hours.

Two derricks were at work on each side of the boat and she was raised considerably during the day. The stern has been quite high out of water for some time and now she is higher amidships, where the big break was.

The watchers waited in vain to see the craft moved, however. Up to a late hour this afternoon, she was still in the place where she has lain ever since the big storm of last November.

ELEVATORS DEFECTIVE

Freight Lifts Do Not Comply With Terms of Ordinance.

But Few of Them Have Pits at Bottom of Shaft.

Hardly a freight elevator in the city complies fully with the provisions of the new building ordinance.

Adolph Anderson, the assistant to the building inspector, yesterday began an inspection of all the freight elevators in the city, to ascertain whether or not they are safe and constructed in accordance with the provisions of the ordinance. Practically all that have been inspected up to the present time are defective in one or more ways, and alterations will have to be made in them before they will be considered satisfactory.

One of the provisions of the ordinance is that all freight elevators shall have a pit three feet in depth at the bottom of the shaft. This would prevent a person being crushed to death in case he should fall into the shaft, and the elevator descend upon him. Only a few of the elevators in the city have this pit, and and in the others there would be no chance of escape for a man in the shaft if the elevator operator did not know of his presence.

"I don't like to appear to be stirring up trouble all the time," said Building Inspector Keilley this morning, "but these elevators that do not comply with the ordinance will have to be altered. This is the first opportunity we have had to get around to the inspection of the elevators since the new ordinance was passed, and many of them are not provided with proper safeguards. I have no alternative but to enforce the ordinance. If I let one man off because of conditions peculiar to his case, others could demand the same favors, and every provision of the ordinance would have been violated several times before the inspection was completed."

The billboards of the city will be inspected after the elevators have been looked over. Alderman Barnes, in the council meeting last evening, called attention to a heavy board that had fallen across the sidewalk in West Duluth, and also to another which is in a dangerous condition. A person passing when one of these boards fell across the sidewalk would probably sustain serious if not fatal injuries. Mr. Keilley stated that he intended to inspect all of the billboards just as soon as he could find the time. At present it requires the service of one man to do nothing but remain in the office and issue building permits and other licenses which come under the supervision of the department.

About the American Navy.

Naval men claim that this important lesson was learned from the Russian-Japanese war, namely, that the navy of the United States must be well provided with heavy warships, in order that we may hold the proud position we now occupy among the nations of the world. Thousands of sickly persons long ago learned the lesson that for making people well and keeping them so there was no medicine like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Every bottle is now backed by a 50-years' record of cures, which ought to convince the most skeptical that it contains true merit and is worthy of a fair trial. If the stomach is weak, appetite poor, sleep restless or nerves unstrung, the Bitters is needed at once. It also cures dyspepla, indigetion, costiveness, heartburn, bloating female ills, dizziness, fainting spells or malaria.

RAISE ELEPHANTS.

Los Angeles Cor. New York Sun: Edwin Cawston's success raising ostriches at South Pasadena has inspired capitalists who have formed a syndicate to establish an elephant ranch on which to breed elephants to supply the constant demand from menageries and parks. The men who are planning the elephant ranch have figured it all out and are satisfied that it can be made to pay.

The climate of South Pasadena has been found to be suited to ostriches, and it is said elephants will thrive in the same climate. Mineral Park, a densely wooded section adjoining South Pasadena and the ostrich farm, is a natural jungle, such as elephants have a fondness for, and it is large enough to accommodate a heard of 200 or 300 animals.

CHEAPEST TOWN.

Kokomo (Ind.) Cor. Pittsburg Chronicle: Greentown, a village of 2,000 population on the Clover Leaf, ten miles east of this place, holds the record for municipal economy.

A town board of three members, serving without salary, administers its affairs.

The town marshal, who also acts as street commissioner, gets $1 a day for his services. The school board receives $2 a year. The salary of the city clerk has been reduced from $1 a week to 50 cents a week.

The city clerk resigned, but a man was found to serve at the reduced salary. The salary list is less than $350 a year, or 17 cents per capita.

TRYING TO ABOLISH FLIES.

London Mail: A prize of £600 has been awarded by the Paris Matin to the anonymous inventor of a new method of getting rid of house flies. The method is strictly scientific, and, it is claimed, will completely destroy the eggs, which are usually deposited in drain pipes. Crude petrol mixed with water is used for houschold disinfecting purposes. The drain pipes become lined with the oil, which both kills the eggs already there and precludes the deposit of others. When desired the petrol can be poured on fine soil and the latter sprinkled in corners. This, it is said, is thoroughly efficacious in destroying the eggs. The operations should be carried out in the spring to obtain the best results.

Suffered Over Two Years—Health In a Precarious Condition—Caused By Pelvic Catarrh.

HEALTH AND STRENGTH RESTORED BY PE-RU-NA.

Mrs. Emma Fleissner, 1412 Sixth Ave., Seattle, Wash., Worthy Treasurer Sons of Temperance, writes:

"I suffered over two years with irregular and painful periods. My health was in a very precarious condition and I was anxious to find something to restore my health and strength.

"I was very glad to try Peruna and delighted to find that it was doing me good. I continued to use it a little over three months and found my troubles removed.

"I consider it a splendid medicine and shall never be without it, taking a dose occasionally when I feel rundown and tired."

Our files contain thousands of testimonials which Dr. Hartman has received from grateful, happy women who have been restored to health by his remedy, Peruna.

Revised Formula.

"For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends, urging that Peruna be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Peruna that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character. WITHDRAWS HIS OFFER

John M. Root Secures Return of His Bid From Council.

Comptroller Presents Report Showing Condition in General Fund.

Following out the promise he made at the meeting of the citizens in the afternoon, John M. Root last evening asked the council to return to him his bid for the garbage collection, and the bond which accompanied it.

"The city passed its garbage ordinance April 2 and it was approved April 4," said Mr. Root. "The council ordered the advertisements for bids. I looked the matter up and bid in good faith. I was later asked to make a number of concessions, which I did make. On my return to Minneapolis I consulted my attorney, and he showed me where I had no protection whatever in making these concessions, and I decided to withdraw the bid. Before the meeting this afternoon, I told the president of the council that I intended to withdraw it.

"I figured everything out on a fair basis. I would have given double the service you are getting now for the same price, and those who did not require service would not have been compelled to pay for it.

"I wish to say this in closing, however. When you have figured out exactly what you want, I will be glad to come to Duluth and take the matter up again."

On a motion by Alderman McEwen, the bid and the bond were both returned to Mr. Root.

Alderman Haven took exception to the statements that had been made by H. H. Phelps at the public meeting held in the afternoon.

"I understand that Mr. Phelps made some statements about graft," said Mr. Haven. "I believe we are entitled to know wherein this garbage business was permeated with graft. I was chairman of that committee and I am naturally sensitive when such statements are made. A number of people have spoken to me about it since, in a joking manner, and I don't like such a subject mentioned concerning me, even in a joking manner."

Alderman Getchell stated that he was satisfied that Mr. Phelps had no intention of charging any members of the council with graft, nor to cast any reflections on their conduct.

"I think," said Alderman Wilson, "that people should learn not to make such wholesale charges thoughtlessly. If Mr. Phelps has anything to base it on, we want to know it. If he has not, it would be a wholesome lesson for him. If it was not so intended, he should have the opportunity of saying so."

Alderman McEwen tried to show that The Herald had been inaccurate in its report, and had made it appear that Mr. Phelps had directly charged the council with graft, which he did not. He quoted from memory the remarks made by Mr. Phelps, and his quotation was almost identical with the report which appeared in The Herald.

"I think that if anything The Herald's report was more accurate than the way in which the alderman has stated it," said Alderman Moore. "I was present at the meeting, and was particularly interested in the remarks of Mr. Phelps.

"I appreciate the way Mr. Haven feels. I felt that way myself when Mr. Phelps was speaking. When the people elect a man to office, he occupies a position where his character is in peril every moment. If he takes care of their interests faithfully, they owe it to him to take care of his reputation, and refuse to believe any wild rumors regarding him until they have positive proof."

The motion of Alderman Haven that Mr. Phelps be requested to point out wherein graft may have existed in the garbage measure, and that he produce any proofs or evidence that he may have to back up his statements, was finally carried.

Mr. Phelps did not make any statement that the council or any city officer had been guilty of grafting, nor did The Herald so quote him last evening. He made an argument for municipal ownership of such a plant, and wound up by stating that such deals, where the city entered into a contract with individuals or private corporations, were almost invariably permeated with graft.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Alderman Haven introduced an ordinance repealing the garbage collection ordinance which was passed by the council on April 2. The repealing ordinance was given its first reading and laid on the table.

Since the plans for collecting garbage have fallen through, the city has no means of enforcing the former ordinance without causing great hardship, and it will probably be repealed.

City Comptroller McCormick submitted an additional report on the city finances, supplementary to the one prepared several weeks ago.

The report shows a condition of affairs in the general fund that is almost alarming. The balance available, after all fixed expenditures have been allowed for, is but $1,675.32. This amount must cover all emergencies for the remainder of the year. The money for the repairs to the bridge approaches, amounting to $1,315.75, was to have been paid from this fund, but the comptroller has refused to sign the order, claiming it should come from the board of public works fund. If it were taken from the general fund the balance would be practically wiped out.

"The general fund was never in such bad shape as it is at the present time," said Alderman McEwen, chairman of the committee on finance. "I intend to take the stand of opposing every expenditure from that fund, of any extraordinary nature, even if it is only $1, until we can see our way clear to come out even at the end of the year. We are running very dangerously close to the line."

The joint committee which examined the point of rocks at Thirteenth avenue west, reported that it is in dangerous condition, and recommended that a portion of the cliff be removed.

A motion that the board of public works expend not to exceed $2,000 in removing the rock, was carried.

An ordinance allowing gas to be used in illuminated signs, under the same restrictions as electric light, was placed upon its final passage. Alderman Burgess moved an amendment that no gas be allowed in wooden signs, which carried, and the revised ordinance was passed.

Alderman Barnes requested the building inspector to look over some billboards in West Duluth, which are in a dangerous condition, and the latter consented to do so.

"Just as soon as I can find the time," said Mr. Kelley, "I intend to inspect every billboard in the city. We are working on the elevators now. They should have been inspected long ago, but we are so rushed with work in the office at present that we cannot do the things that are needed. I turned over to the city $1,500 last year, above the expenses of the office, and this year the amount will probably be double that. I want to give warning that next Monday night, I will probably ask for another assistant."

Alderman Moore gave notice that there would be a meeting of the committee on streets, alleys and sidewalks, representatives of the telephone and telegraph companies, and of all other citizens interested, in the city hall next Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock for the purpose of discussing the proper method of handling the telephone pole nuisance in the alleys, and arriving at some amicable settlement.

railroads, destroy them peaceably if we can, forcibly if we must."

Mr. Belmont said in response:

"I did not expect when I came here this evening that any argument would be advanced on this subject. I do not think it would be delicate on my part to answer these arguments that have been advanced. I could do so and I should very much like to do so.

"I want to repudiate, in the most unqualified terms, the insinuation that I manage, or that my associates manage, these corporations in any other spirit than that of honesty or of correct purpose, or with any other purpose than that of complying with every letter of the law. I think every corporation and every corporate manager is entitled to be heard in court first, and that his action shall be tested after the verdict of the court and not before. You know to what I refer and therefore it will not be necessary for me to reply to it, and I am sorry that I have to make this statement."

When Mr. Belmont had concluded his retort to what Justice Gaynor had to say, he turned and, looking the justice in the face, struck the table a blow with his right hand, which caused the china to rattle. Continuing, Mr. Belmont said:

"So anxious was this organization that the report of the commission should be absolutely impartial that it took every step to free the commission from any possible embarrassment to the federation other than that it should lean upon that body for its expenses. The federation has chosen their own committee and whatever the result may be, the work will bear no half mark of any splinters, and least of all has there been made any effort to create any argument against municipal ownership of public utilities as has been intimated here tonight.

"I wanted to be here tonight, because it has been insinuated by those who desired to discredit this commission that it had another purpose in view.

"Realizing that the subject before the people was one that was going to be discussed on the stump during our political campaigns, and vitally concerned the two elements which the federation is trying to bring together, the federation thought that it should, if possible, obtain for the public a text book on municipal ownership. I know that would probably be said to you, but from the fact that I am the representative of a large traction company, I thought I would like to tell you myself, because it has nothing whatever to do with myself.

"At the meeting of the commission I said that, if the result of this investigation furnished an argument for the acquisition by the municipalities of the property which I have been elected to manage, that would not deter me. On the contrary, as a citizen I welcome a correct interpretation of this subject. As the president of the federation, it was my duty to try to secure a proper interpretation of that subject."

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Wednesday afternoon and evening, lecture by Frederick Warde.

FREDERICK WARDE LECTURES

This evening Frederick Warde will lecture at the Lyceum on "Hamlet," tomorrow afternoon on "Shakespeare and His Plays" and tomorrow evening on "Julius Caesar." Mr. Warde's lecture recitals are described as very fascinating and instructive in the highest degree. Here is what one exchange said of his talk:

"In conclusion, Mr. Warde urged all to read Shakespeare. Do not be afraid of him. Do not consider him too deep. He wrote for everybody, that all his works might be presented to the common people. His characters are sweet, clear, simple and natural. There is nothing difficult to understand in his works. Confusion, in the minds of readers, has been caused only by the commentators. Discard the commentators. Read Shakespeare only with a glossary. Do not seek for hidden meanings. There are none. Do not attempt to impart to his simplest sentences meanings of great significance. Do not sink a shaft, expecting to find rich ore at the bottom; but first gather the flowers that are so easily found on the surface, and when you have gathered the flowers that are so easily found, you will have beauty and fragrance to last for all of your lives.

"Read Shakespeare three times said Mr. Warde—first, for the story, then for the poetry and then for the philosophy, and when you have read him three times, you will read again and again, whenever you can lay hands upon his works. If you wish to get the keynote of any character of Shakespeare, read the first soliloquy of that character—not his first speech, but the first soliloquy—and the character will be revealed by that. Do not attempt to analyze Shakespeare according to the rules of grammar, of syntax or of prosody; you cannot do it, any more than you can conform the song of the lark to standards of music. He is simple; he is all-comprehensive; he is grand and he will endure forever."

JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

John L. Sullivan and his vaudevillians were greeted with another large audience at the Metropolitan last evening. The star, the Exposition Four and Hall and Thorndyke made big hits. The moving pictures of the San Francisco fire and earthquake are attracting a great deal of attention, also. Besides the matinee this afternoon, matinees will be given Thursday and Saturday.

ELOPED WITH FRENCH MAID

Scion of Foremost Pittsburg Society Has Been Disinherited.

Pittsburg, May 22.—Pittsburg's absolutely first family has been rocked to its social foundation. John Alston Moorhead, son of John Moorhead, Jr., and grandson of John Moorhead, who built the family name and fortune, with his iron and steel, has married his mother's French serving maid, and has been disinherited. The only name by which the French maid is known is Frances.

Young Moorhead is known to more people throughout the country, probably, than any other young Pittsburger. He was formerly a member of the Yale football team, and was an all-round athlete while at the university. His younger brother, Turner, is now prominent at Yale.

Young Moorhead has been what is termed a "terror" in the social set. He absolutely refused to have anything to do with it. He had no more use for the grand opera and the swell society crowd than the late lamented Billy Baxter.

Mrs. Moorhead spent last summer in Europe, and returned with a new serving maid from Paris. With the young man it was a case of love at first sight.

There were tears by his mother. His father announced that he would disinherit him if he did not break off the attachment. He steadfastly refused and it was announced that Frances must go.

Young Moorhead declared if she went he would go with her. She went last Sunday, and he followed. They went at once to New York, where they were married.

They were heard from by the Moorhead family here last week, and are now supposed to be with Horace Moorhead, an uncle of the young man, at his country home on Long Island sound.

A Change

It is almost as hard for an old coffee toper to quit the use of coffee as it is for a whiskey or tobacco fiend to break off, except that the coffee user can quit coffee and take up Postum Food Coffee without any feeling of a loss of the morning beverage, for when Postum is well boiled and served with cream, it is really better in point of flavor than most of the coffee served nowadays, and to the taste of the connoisseur it is like the flavor of fine Java.

A great transformation takes place in the body within ten days or two weeks after coffee is left off and Postum Food Coffee used, for the reason that the poison to the nerves has been discontinued and in its place is taken a liquid that contains the most powerful elements of nourishment.

It is easy to make this test and prove these statements by changing from coffee to Postum Food Coffee.

"There's a reason."

Scrambled in Iron Man's Hair by Wilson Mizner.

New York, May 22.—Wilson Mizner, who married the widow of Charles T. Yerkes, has received an ultimatum bidding him begone from New York for one year or suffer prosecution for the alleged compounding of an omelet in the hair of Henry P. Crouse and scrambling eggs upon the back of Crouse's neck, together with other indignities. Mr. Mizner called the bearer of the ultimatum an insect, and is still in New York.

His accuser is a wealthy iron manufacturer and salt mine operator of Utica, who spends most of his time in New York. He was staying at the New Grand hotel last week.

One morning early he entered a restaurant in Sixth avenue, near Forty-third street, where Mizner was standing at the bar. Mr. Crouse stood beside him, though they were not acquainted, until four men whom Crouse knew entered. He took a seat with them and with his back to Mr. Mizner.

Soon a spray of champagne showered on Crouse's back and on his friends. They thought the man who threw it was Crouse's friend and overlooked it, and because they did so Crouse thought the wine had been thrown by some acquaintance of the other four and did not even turn around.

Then there was a crash on the top of Mr. Crouse's head and another on the back of his neck. The contents of two very meaty eggs ran over his hair, into his eyes and down his neck. When he could see again and loked around behind him there was only a big bartender there, and he was grinning.

Mr. Crouse squirted seltzer on him. The big fellow dodged and said he "didn't do it."

Some one told Crouse his assailant was outside, and he dashed out. As he passed through the door a big man snatched him up and, holding him under his arm, took him to Forty-second street, kicking and struggling, and there dropped him hard on the street.

Crouse put the affair into the hands of a private detective, who was told that his employer's assailant was Mizner. The latter could not be found at the residence of his wife. He was discovered at the Seymour, in West Forty-fourth street. Mr. Mizner's "man" came down to learn the visitor's errand.

"Mr. Crouse demands that Mr. Mizner leave New York at once and remain away for one year," the detective announced, and the man agreed to deliver the message. Mr. Crouse, however, insisted that personal communication be had with Mr. Mizner, and the detective reached the latter by telephone. Mr. Mizner, when told he must go away or be arrested, used strong language. Mr. Crouse was called out of the city, but will return soon. He has a reputation for extreme pertinacity.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, mannufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

PROWLERS ARE CAUGHT

Police Round Up Gang of Three Alleged Professional Thieves.

Claimed to be Responsible for Several Thefts From Hotels.

The police made a nice haul this morning when they visited the lodging house at 207 West Superior street, and took three alleged hotel prowlers out of bed to headquarters.

The men gave their names as Frank N. Malay, Robert Martin and Joseph Benzin, and the police found enough stolen goods in the room to make a very strong case against them on a grand larceny charge.

The arrests were made by Captain Resche, Sergeant Fritz and Detective Irvine.

When searched at headquarters, one of the prisoners was found to have a Lenox hotel cloak room check in his possession, and Detective Irvine took it to the hotel, and recovered three suit cases filled with wearing apparel of all kinds. Some of the stuff has been identified as stolen property, and the police are convinced that all of the property they recovered will yet be claimed.

The three men arrived in the city on Sunday, and they evidently began their work at once, as the police began to receive reports of stolen property early yesterday afternoon. Four or five reports were made before night, and the total value of the stuff taken amounted to nearly $200.

W. N. Merrian of the St. Louis hotel, was the chief victim. While he was out, his room at the hotel was entered, and ransacked. Two suit cases belonging to him were packed with his clothing and personal belongings and carried off. The property taken was valued at about $65.

Another report came from the lodging house where the three prisoners were taken. One of the other lodgers lost a suit of clothes and a watch and chain.

Some lodgers at 220 Lake avenue south also reported the loss of two suits of clothes, a razor, a suit case, a pair of shoes, and other smaller articles.

As the reports continued to come in, the police grew suspicions and began to believe that the thefts were all the work of an old timer or perhaps of a gang of professional sneak thieves who had arrived in the city. A careful search was made of all hotels and lodging houses, for suspicious persons, and finally the three prisoners were located about 8 o'clock this morning. They were still asleep, but were routed from bed by the officers, and went to headquarters without a protest, and without even asking the cause of their arrest.

In the room a cravenette overcoat belonging to Mr. Merriam was found, and one of the suit cases packed with a selection of the stolen property. The other goods were distributed among the three suit cases found at the Lenox hotel.

The men carried some old skeleton keys in their possession, and the police are convinced that all three are professional sneak thieves and house prowlers.

Robert Martin is later claimed to have admitted in the presence of witnesses, that he is Robert Brown, and that he is wanted at the Red Wing Training school. The other two are also believed to have given fictitious names.

All three will be held on a grand larceny charge.

SEEKS OFFICE OF SENATOR

Roger S. Munger After Republican Nomination in Fiftieth District.

Roger S. Munger has declared his intention of seeking the Republican nomination for senator in the Fiftieth district, the district that is now represented by Senator T. M. Pugh, who has already announced his desire to succeed himself. Mr. Munger's affidavit of nomination was filed with the county auditor this morning. Mr. Munger has been out of politics for a few years. He was formerly register of deeds one term, being defeated for a second term.

VALUE SET ON WOLVES

Court Called Upon to Decide What They Are Worth.

Cubs for Exhibition Purposes Should Bring About $30 Apiece.

Young cub wolves on the hoof are worth about $30 a head.

The information is not likely to cause any wild scurry on the part of the shorts in wolves to cover, nor is it likely to result in an effort on the part of holders of long lines of wolves to dispose of their holdings. In fact, the wolf market in Duluth at the present time is rather dull, and the decision of Judge Windom that cubs are worth $30 apiece, will not cause any bigger splash in the wolf market, than a pebble dropped into the middle of Lake Superior.

Just at the time the decision was handed down, information was received from a farmer in the northern part of the state, that the visible supply was decreasing, and this tended to steady the market. The falling off in the demand for fresh wolves, and the decision of the court might have caused a flurry in the market, had not this bull report been received.

The wolves in dispute, were the property of Edward Martell who lives near one of the range towns. Martell loaned the cubs to a saloonkeeper for exhibition purposes. The latter was unable to produce the animals when Martell demanded their return, and Martell entered suit to recover for them.

In his bill of complaint he fixed the value of the wolves at $50 apiece, and asked judgment for $100 and his costs.

The lawyers submitted briefs on the case about a week ago, and Judge Windom took it under advisement. He handed down his decison today, and in it he allowed the plaintiff $30 apiece for the wolves, giving him a judgment of $60.

It is probably the first case on record in Duluth and perhaps the state of Minnesota, where a judge has been called upon to decide the value of a wolf.

CURIOUS PAT.

The Tatler: The scene was a village inn. Pat was boasting that he could drink a gallon of ale, whereupon an old stager from the corner remarked: "I'll bet thee a pint tha can't." Pat hesitated, and when opportunity arose left the room. Presently, however, he returned and the bet was made. Pat won the bet. "Wha didn't yer tak it on befoor for?" asked some one. "Shure," replied Pat, "I thought I'd try it first and make sure."

WEST DULUTH

DIBBELL IS DEAD

Superintendent of Bay View Heights Incline Passes Away.

Sick Only Since Saturday —Was Preparing for Operation.

Edgar W. Dibbell, superintendent of the Duluth Belt Line railway which is the line that runs between West Duluth and Bay View Heights, died at 11 o'clock this morning at the Graham hospital in West Duluth. The cause of death was intestinal obstruction. He had been sick only since Saturday, but rapidly grew worse. This morning he was brought down on the belt line road to West Duluth and taken in a carriage to the Graham hospital.

It was proposed that an operation should be performed upon him to relieve the trouble and Drs. A. J. Braden, S. H. Boyer and D. Graham were in attendance. However, on the arrival at the hospital, Mr. Dibbell's condition was such that an operation was deemed unsafe at the time. In a very short time afterwards he died.

No arrangements have yet been made but probably will be some time today. Mr. Dibbell and his wife have lived at Bay View Heights for 17 years, almost all of the time they have lived in the city. He was well known and the news of his death comes as a distinct shock to his relatives and friends as it was believed that his illness was not serious and that the operation would put him on the road to rapid recovery. He was 51 years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Dibbell have no surviving children. A few years ago their only son accidentally shot himself while out hunting. Besides Mrs. Dibbell who survives him, are his mother, Mrs. Cornelia Dibbell of Bay View Heights, his brother, Charles H. Dibbell who runs a livery on East Superior street, and his sister, Mrs. Herman H. Covert of 1811 West First street. His father, Irel H. Dibbell, died on July 13 last at the advanced age of 81 years.

SALES TO BE PRIVATE.

Creditors of Merchants' Bank Want Better Profits on Assets.

The 10 per cent dividend declared in the matter of the bankruptcy proceedings of the Merchants bank of West Duluth is payable at once. Assignee Barnes has made out the checks, and as soon as they are signed by himself and W. W. Sanford, trustee in bankruptcy, they will be given to the creditors. At the meeting of the creditors yesterday, at which this dividend was declared, adjournment was taken to Aug. 20, after the creditors had agreed to let the trustee sell the rest of the assets of the bank privately and at the best terms possible, not forcing them on the market and getting anything possible for them.

Before the bankruptcy proceedings were started, which were delayed one year by agreement between H. E. Smith and the creditors, a dividend of 10 per cent was paid. On the 90 per cent remaining, two dividends of 10 per cent each have been paid, including the one now declared, which will make the payments 28 per cent of the original debt.

To be Shipped to Hancock.

The body of John A. Buchanan, the young man drowned at the Merrill & Ring dock, in St. Louis bay, on Sunday, will be shipped this evening to Hancock for burial. A cousin of the dead man, C. E. GOT FINGERS AGAINST SAW Nels Wedan Asks Damages of Merrill & Ring Company.

Trial was started in Judge Cant's room this morning of the personal injury case of Nels Wedan against the Merrill & Ring Mill company of West Duluth. Mr. Wedan lost three fingers of his right hand in an accident at the mill last July and he demands $5,270 damages, alleging that the company was negligent in that it did not keep its equipment in the proper condition.

Wedan was employed as feeder on the carrier to a saw that was used to saw up cordwood. He claims that the carrier failed to work because of a slackened belt, and that a stick of wood he was pressing against the saw broke and permitted his hand to come in contact with the whirling disk. Wedan alleges that the company knew of the condition of the belt, but neglected to put in it a safe condition.

He is represented by Alexander Marshall and R. R. Briggs and the mill company is defended by Howard T. Abbott.

In Judge Ensign's room evidence is still being introduced in the damage case of Harry L. Legge against G. W. Martin and others. Mr. Legge was employed to explore with a diamond drill some lands under option to Mr. Martin and his associates. He claims that he performed his contract, but that his employers refused to pay him a balance of $1,258 alleged to be due for services performed.

Mr. Martin and the others, it is said, will set up a defense on the claim that Mr. Legge did not keep faith with them and that he is not entitled to any more money on the contract.

Mr. Legge is represented by P. J. Neff and Mr. Martin and his associates by John Jenswold, Jr.

A SAFE BET.

Los Angeles Times: Morris Wood, the national skating champion, was discussing an absurd bet.

"The men who made that bet," he said, "had as little nerve as a farmer my father used to tell about.

"This farmer, after a crop-selling trip to the city, found himself, with his wallet full of money, at the race track. "The betting interested him a great deal. The enormous odds were almost incredible to his inexperienced mind. The idea of betting a dollar on a horse, and, if the horse won, getting $50 or $60 in return for it! There must certainly be some mistake, or some swindle.

"After a while the farmer walked up to a bookmaker and said:

"'Look-a-here, friend, if that thar hoss Socks wins, an' I bet a dollar on it, do ye mean ter say ye gimme sixty?'

"'That's what I do,' replied the bookmaker. 'I do that and more. It's a sixty-to-one shot, and you get, if Socks wins, $60, and your own original $1 back again, besides.'

"'Then I'll take a chanst,' said the farmer firmly, handing up a silver dollar. 'But if I win I'll be satisfied with the even sixty. You needn't give me my own dollar back unless I lose.'"

THE PATRIOT'S RETORT.

Los Angeles Times: Corporal James Tanner, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., was condemning those who appear to regard the national uniform as a disgrace—those who object to seeing non-commissioned soldiers or sailors in the parquet of a theater or the restaurant of a fashionable hotel.

"Such people," said the veteran, "make me think of a recruiting sergeant whom I used to know in Richmondville—a true patriot.

"This sergeant, at the beginning of the Civil war, urged a rich man's son to enlist.

"'Come on, Hank,' he said earnestly. 'Come on and join the —— New York.'

"The rich man's son sneered.

"'Join the —— New York?' he cried. 'Not I! I'd rather enter a lunatic asylum than the —— New York.'

"'Well,' said the sergeant, 'no doubt you'd feel more at home there.'"

Why Doctors Say Drink Pabst Beer

Because It is Clean, and They Know the Importance of Clean Food and Drink.

We have found by careful inquiry that doctors, in perhaps the large majority of cases, prescribe Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer because they know of its absolute purity and positive cleanliness. "It is the cleanest beer in the world," said one of Chicago's leading doctors the other day when asked about it. "What appeals to me," he said, "is the Pabst process, so very different from all the rest. We doctors appreciate sterilization and we are teaching the people in their homes the value of sterilization. On almost every visit we make we emphasize that. I have visited all the breweries of importance in the country, and I must say that for absolute cleanliness there is no beer to equal Pabst. I prescribe it in my practice and drink it myself."

In our own homes we insist most strenuously upon our food being clean. If we stop at a hotel or restaurant where the food or the dishes are unclean, we are quite likely to change boarding places next time. Are we as careful of what we drink? Purity is essential. We want the best always and especially do we want it if impurity or adulteration means harm. But is not cleanliness in the preparation of our food or drink of equal importance? We think so and we believe our readers agree with us that when we drink beer we must know it is not only absolutely pure and wholesome, but that it is absolutely clean. Pabst beer, as we said before, is recognized by doctors as the cleanest beer.

The aging of Pabst beer is another point wherein the great Pabst brewery excels. Pabst is the perfecily aged beer. Not a bottle or a keg ever leaves the brewery until science and the test of time shows it fully aged and mellow.

Food Authority

A Famous English Physician (who requests that his name be withheld from publication) says of

Grape-Nuts

"In cases of slow digestion, lack of stomach tone, and debility, this food is invaluable."

NOW FOR THE REASON:

The great bulk of human food is starch in some form—bread, pastry, potatoes, rice, cereals (such as oats) wheat, rye, barley, etc.

This class of food supplies "energy" if it be properly digested, but there's the rub. Starch and sugar in food are digested by the liver and intestines. When these organs are overworked or become weak, then the food is not entirely digested and lies in the warm moisture of the stomach until it decays, producing gas, and therefore disturbance and incipient disease of the liver and intestines and frequently appendicitis.

To meet this trouble Grape-Nuts food was invented. In it, the starch of wheat and barley is transformed by long soaking, warmth, and time, into sugar—just the same method as the body employs in digestion. Hence when one eats Grape-Nuts he eats a predigested food, ready for immediate digestion and assimilation, supplying the body with the needed food elements in a soluble and delicious form.

THE LONDON "LANCET" SAYS:

"The features worthy of note in our analysis are the excellent proportion of of proteid, mineral matters, and soluble carbohydrates per cent. The mineral matter was rich in phosphoric acid. 'Grape-Nuts' is described as a brain and nerve food, whatever that may mean. Our analysis, at any rate, shows that it is a nutritive of a high order, since it contains the constituents of a complete food in very satisfactory and rich proportion and in an easily assimilable state."

The food is naturally pre-digested by heat, moisture, and time. The diastase is thus produced and the transformation of starch into sugar accomplished.

A perfect food for persons with weak intestinal digestion and who need, but cannot fully digest ordinary bread and starchy food.

For athletes, brain-workers, or the weakest babe.

(For infants, pour hot water over three or four teaspoonfuls of the food. Use that water with a trifle of the food dissolved in it.)

"THERE'S A REASON"

DR. FED HIMSELF.

Found the Food That Saved His Life.

A good old family physician with a life time experience in saving people finally found himself sick unto death.

Medicines failed and—but let him tell his own story. "For the first time in my life of 61 years I am impelled to publicly testify to the value of a largely advertised article and I certainly would not pen these lines except that, what seems to me a direct act of Providence, saved my life and I am impressed that it is a bounden duty to make it known.

"For 3 years I kept failing with stomach and liver disorders until I was reduced 70 lbs. from my normal weight. When I got too low to treat myself, 3 of my associate physicians advised me to 'put my house in order' for I would be quickly going the way of all mankind. Just about that time I was put on a diet of Grape-Nuts predigested food. Curiously enough it quickly began to build me up, appetite returned and in 15 days I gained 8 lbs. That started my return to health and really saved my life.

"A physician is naturally prejudiced against writing such a letter, but in this case I am willing to declare it from the housetops that the multiplied thousands who are now suffering as I did can find relief and health as easily and promptly by Grape-Nuts. If they only knew what to do. Sincerely and Fraternally yours." Name of this prominent physician furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

LARGE JOBS UNDER WAY

Board of Public Works Gets Early Start on Improvements.

Only Two Remaining Big Contracts Are Now Being Advertised.

Thanks to the early start secured this year by the board of public works on the large improvement contracts, all of them will be under way by June 1.

The board this year adopted the policy of letting the large contracts first and leaving the smaller ones until later in the season. Last year the reverse was the case. All of the small contracts were let early in the year, and as a consequence there was not enough money in the revolving fund to let the larger ones, until late in the season.

This year, however, the preliminary work on the large contracts was pushed early in the season. Second street was advertised first. The contract was let and work has already begun. The improvement of Seventeenth avenue east was advertised at about the same time, and the contract for it was let on the same day.

These two were followed within two weeks by the Greysolon road, and this contract was let and approved yesterday, and work will be begun at once.

This morning the board of public works figured up the balance in the revolving fund, after making allowance for all the contracts that have been let. It was found that the advance assessments had been exceedingly well paid, and there was a sufficient balance in the fund to allow the contracts for the improvement of Robinson street and Tenth avenue east to be advertised. The Robinson street improvement calls for a macadam road and a sewer, to cost about $14,000, and the Tenth avenue east job will cost about $20,000. Bids on both of these were called for this morning, and they will be opened at the meeting a week from Friday.

These are practically the only two large contracts remaining to be done this year, but there are innumerable small jobs for short sewers, and road grading which will come in just as rapidly as the fund is in a position to allow the bids to be called for.

With such an early start on all the late jobs, there is no reason why any work should be carried over the winter, as had to be done last year on West Superior street. The Second street and Greysolon road improvements are the largest undertaken this year, and they are already under way.

POISONING IS MYSTERY

Chemists Find Nothing the Matter With Crescent City Food.

Samples of Supply Prove All Right—Sick Men Recovered.

Mystery now surrounds the poisoning last week of the members of the wrecking crew at work on the stranded steamer Crescent City, of the Pittsburg Steamship company's fleet, at Lakewood.

At the time of the crew's indisposition, it was supposed that the illness of the men was due to some taint in the food they had been eating and to the end of ascertaining the cause, samples of the camp's supply, including meat and milk, were sent to the state chemists at St. Paul by State Dairy and Food Inspector Harris Bennett. Now, the chemists report that they found nothing whatever the matter with the food.

It was thought that either the milk or the meat the wreckers had partaken of was responsible for their illness but an analysis of samples of both brought forth nothing which would cause the epidemic of stomach trouble and lassitude which was experienced at Lakewood.

The theory which now presents itself is that the men were made ill by the water they had drunk. Possibly they secured it too near to the wrecked boat and some foreign substance which it had polluted the Lake Superior fluid.

None of the men was dangerously ill at any time, but every man in the camp confessed to illness at one time or another during the week. Several were confined to their beds for a day or so, but all of them are recovered now and are back at work on the boat. The chief symptoms of the complaint were sickness of the stomach and lassitude.

Since last week, there have been no new cases of sickness at the camp and none is expected. Capt. W. W. Smith and his men feel that they are through with that sort of thing.

MIXED FARE.

Boston Herald: A Maine jury had been out for some time on a case, and as the supper hour was approaching the presiding justice sent an officer to inquire if the jurors wanted their supper served in the room. It seems the jury stood 11 to 1, and the young man who was standing out against the rest of the panel answered the sheriff's knock at the door.

In reply to the message from the judge, the odd juror sent the following: "You tell the judge he can send one supper for me and eleven bales of hay for the eleven jackasses that are in here with me."

AMERICANS TALK REVOLT

Residents of Isle of Pines Will Not Stand Cuban Oppression.

Washington, May 22.—According to a statement by S. H. Pearcy, a large land owner in the Isle of Pines, a revolt against Cuban authority in that island will occur in the near future unless the United States resumes control over it. Mr. Pearcy and his brother, J. E. Pearcy, called at the White House yesterday but the president declined to see them and they were referred to Secretary Root. Mr. Parcy declared that he did not come to Washington to threaten the president with revolution in which hundreds of American lives would be endangered, but simply to tell him the facts. He said that Americans now own nine-tenths of the property in the island which they purchased solely on the assurances of President McKinley and the war department that the island was American soil. Conditions, he says, however, were at a critical stage and the majority of the Americans have stated they will stand their oppression no longer. Mr. Pearcy said that these American citizens have received many offers of aid from the United States in case of a revolt.

Not If as Rich as Rockefeller.

If you had all the wealth of Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, you could not buy a better medicine for bowel complaints than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The most eminent physician can not prescribe a better preparation for colic and diarrhoea, both for children and adults. The uniform success of this remedy has shown it to be superior to all others. It never fails, and when reduced with water and sweetened, is pleasant to take. Every family should be supplied with it. Sold by all leading druggists.

PRESBYTERIAN BROTHERHOOD

General Assembly Decides to Organize a Men's Society.

Des Moines, May 22.—The Presbyterian general assembly yesterday afternoon determined upon one of the most important church movements undertaken by it in many years. It voted unanimously to begin at once the organization of a men's society under the name of "Presbyterian Brotherhood," whose purpose shall be to bring the men of Presbyterian churches more closely into sympathy with the church and to bring about spiritual development, fraternal relations, denominational fealty, the strengthening of fellowship and the engagement in works of Christian usefulness.

A committee is to be appointed before the assembly adjourns to take up at once detailed plans for the new society. This new step is the direct result of the appointment of a special committee at the last session of the assembly. This was done in response to repeated requests for action along this line.

The committee found an overwhelming desire for such an organization and so reported to the assembly. There was no opposition in the assembly to the project and it had the enthusiastic support of all who spoke on it. The new society is to be entirely subordinate to the general assembly and will report annually to it. The powers of its annual conventions shall be advisory and declarative only.

The training of medicinal missionaries is one of the interesting questions to which attention is directed in the annual report of the board of education. On this subject the report says:

"Many choice young men who did not feel that they have a call to the ministry, but are full of zeal for Christian services, are turning their attention to medical missions. It is very important that candidates for this service should be highly educated men, taking both the college and the medical course, and, if possible, securing hospital experience besides. Such a course can only be pursued at great expense, and, in order to encourage the seeking of full equipment, it seems desirable to provide scholarship aid for the purpose. We believe that great advantage would be secured if candidates for medical work were to take their course under the supervision of the church, as is the case with candidates for the ministry, and we raise at this time the question whether the board of education may not wisely be authorized to accept and apply to this purpose any funds that may be specially designed for the work."

Announcement is made in the report that representatives of the Educational society of the Cumberland Presyterian church have examined into the feasibility of transferring to the board of education of the Presbyterian church in the United States the property and trusts belonging to it, and that, in their opinion, such a transfer is entirely practicable and that it can be accomplished at any time.

During the past year the board received from various sources $89,634. In the same period the board enrolled 699 young men as candidates, of whom 219 were new men and 480 renewals.

FOUGHT FOR THEIR LIVES.

Thrilling Experience of Two Halfbreeds in the Mississippi River.

St. Paul May 22.—For over three hours last evening Charlie White and Johnny King, half breeds, living at Mendota, fought for their lives in the icy waters of the Mississippi river near Fort Snelling, finally being rescued by a mounted patrolman and John Carpenter, an experienced river man. The men struggled with the swirling current, managing to keep their heads above water by clinging to a slender limb of a river willow, which threatened to snap at any moment. When rescued they were on the verge of exhaustion and were unable to stand.

They had gone down the river to fish and had reached one end of a submerged island. Their boat was swamped and the men swam to the island of which only the willow tree was visible. Their bodies were in the water up to the neck. The limb of the tree bent and at times it threatened to break and send them into the current. Finally the men succeeded in attracting attention by shouting, and a boat was launched and with great difficulty the men were saved from their perilous position.

After the men were rescued there was a desperate fight to bring them to shore through the current of the swollen river.

NEW EQUIPMENT

Secured for One of the Minnesota National Guard Batteries.

St. Paul, May 22.—New equipment worth $50,000 has been secured for one of the two Minnesota national guard batteries by Adjt. Gen. Wood from the department at Washington. Whether Battery A at St. Paul, or Battery B at Minneapolis, will get the new guns will depend upon which shows up best at inspection, but, in either case the new equipment will turn over the most of its present equipment to the other battery. The equipment consists of four new three-inch guns with all equipment pertaining thereto.

Because they were asked to handle freight that is ordinarily transferred in Binghamton, but is being sent there because of a strike there, all the Erie freight handlers in Elmira, N. Y., struck.

Governor Higgins of New York, Monday vetoed the bill passed by the legislature to regulate the amount of water to be taken from the Niagara river for power purposes.

William B. Schwartz, a member of the Indianapolis bar, was arrested Monday by federal officers on a charge of counterfeiting. Schwartz confessed to the officers and surrendered the dies he used in making the spurious coin. His law practice, he said, did not yield a sufficient income for the support of his sick wife.

T. B. Wheelock of Moline, Ill., 61 years old, Monday committed suicide by holding his head under water in a cattle tank at Madison, Wis.

Lawrence Muan, aged 30 years, of Vinten, Iowa, Manday shot his wife in the head and then shot himself. His wife is expected to recover, but he died. They had difficulty over money.

Mrs. Josephine Baruth of Medical Lake, Wash., was sentenced Monday to serve ten years in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $1,000 for the murder of her husband, whom she shot during a family quarrel. Her plea was self-defense. The trial developed the fact that the Baruths was divorced in 1895 at Windham and they had been living together again without having been remarried.

GREAT HAVOC BY THE FIRES

In Upper Michigan Even Worse Than at First Reported.

More Than Fifty Farmers Near Marquette Lost Their Homes.

Marquette, Mich., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The forest fires in a territory of which Marquette is the center have subsided, and while embers are smouldering in many places in the devastated area there is no danger of another conflagration similar to that which so recently swept so wide a zone in Upper Michigan. Details of the extent of the havoc in this county are still coming in, and they are even worse than indicated by the first reports received. As closely as may be estimated at this time, in addition to the damage to timber and forest products more than fifty farmers living in the townships south and southwest of the city lost their homes, and in many cases their household goods, livestock and farming implements. There have been no reports of loss of life, although many persons had narrow escapes from being overtaken by the fires as they crept through ravines and into the clearings where the refugees were huddled together.

The towns of Birch and Big Bay, northeast of the city, were at one time in serious danger. At both places a large number of men are on the payrolls of the lumber companies, and they were pressed into service for the purpose of protecting the mill properties and piles of forest products assembled in hte distributing yards. In addition, recruits were sent from Marquette by special train. At Birch, the station house of the Marquette & Southeastern railroad was the only building burned. A force of men set fire to slashings in the vicinity of the cedar yards, three-quarters of a mile from the mill, and holding the fire in control a wide swath was burned around the entire location. This was a precautionary measure adopted for the purpose of affording protection to the nearly half a million dollars' worth of property assembled there, and it was entirely successful.

The Chocolay valley, containing some of the finest farms in the county, was swept almost as cleanly as if visited by a tornado. Many farmers lost everything they possessed except the clothes on their backs, and many had narrow escapes from death. On the roadsides in many places are dead animals and fowls, overtaken by the flames and roasted to death in their tracks. Within 200 feet of the ruins of a farmhouse on the Little Lake road in Chocolay township are the blackened remains of a flock of thirty-five chickens, literally roasted alive while huddled together under a shed as a place of safety. One farmer reports that at least fifty rabbits and squirrels took refuge in his barn before it was burned, the animals showing no signs of fear because of the presence of human beings or dogs.

Antoine Lebeffe, a green garden farmer, lost his household effects in a peculiar manner. When the fire reached his clearing he had the furniture removed from his dwelling, which he thought it would be impossible to save. The furniture was taken to a field near the house, and the owner, assisted by two neighbors, returned to the dwelling for the purpose of fighting the fire. After an hour's work they succeeded in warding off the flames and saving the house, but when they went in quest of the furniture they were surprised to find that the fire had reached it in their absence and had burned everything in sight.

A partial list of the losses in the farming settlements follows. The list is by no means complete, as it will take several days to get returns from the burned district:

Joseph Largeness—Barn, implements, outbuildings, orchard.

Ezehiere Tousignant—Implements and barn.

Alphonse Malette—Barn and eighty cords of wood.

Doyle Bros.—Dwelling, barn, horses, implements, orchard, cattle and fowl.

J. Bucelles—Dwelling, barns and all personal property.

Fred Basal—Two barns, twenty hogs, sixty chickens, horses, hay, 150 bushels of grain, and house damaged to the extent of $50.

J. King—Barn, hay press, implements.

Joseph Bourassa—Dwelling, barn, cordwood, implements.

Joseph Robarge—Two dwelling houses, barn implements.

Henry Malholt—One house, two barns.

The Brunnelle farm—All buildings on the premises.

The Despjardins farm—Completely destroyed.

Alex Paquette—Dwelling, two barns.

Patrick Donahue—Large barn containing hay, grain and implements, cattle and fowl.

Theodore Corrette—House, two barns, farming implements.

Antoine Lebeffe—Household goods, cattle and implements.

Soren Johnson—Two barns containing hay and grain, horses and implements.

Estate of Robert Kroskey—Dwelling house, barn, outbuildings, farm implements.

William Bazler—Two teams of horses, farm implements, grain, out buildings.

August Ratke—Dwelling house, barn, cattle sheds containing several cows, farm tools.

August Borrow—Large barn, tool house, wagons, implements, cattle.

The Henry Blemhuber farm, two miles south of Birch, was swept by fire, every building on the place being destroyed. A renter living on the farm attempted to save the property, but was driven off by the flames and barely escaped with his life.

In some places the fires spent their force by coming in contact with tracts of green timber after sweeping through slashings, across meadows and open spots where farm buildings were located. There are numerous areas which have been laid in blackened waste, the fires having eaten their way through tracts of underbrush and slashings with almost the velocity of a hurricane.

Proprietor Dan Sullivan of the Hotel Clifton, who had a thrilling experience while returning from a fishing trip, says: "We saw women and children standing by, crying and wringing their hands, while their homes were destroyed before their eyes. In some cases people fled for their lives, glad enough to get away with a few personal belongings, like bedclothing, wearing apparel. Farm houses located in clearings apart from slashings were immune to the flames, and to these many sought refuge. We saw any number of wagons loaded with women and children seeking safety in flight.

"The woods in many places were like a roaring furnace, and the air was filled with dense clouds of smoke and embers. The cracking of twigs and limbs as the fire swept through the underbrush, the falling of trees and above all the roar of the flames, fanned by the fierce gale, made the scene terrible to behold. Farm animals and even rabbits filled the highways, and forest birds flew along the fences from post to post as if dazed. We had to stop a number of times and drive cattle from the road in front of the buggy in order to pass. No doubt a great many cattle perished. We were forced to change our course several times before we were finally able to get to the main traveled road leading to Marquette. The greatest danger was from falling trees, which one could scarcely at times see, owing to the density of smoke."

During the hottest period of the fire, the flames gradually encroached the very outskirts of Marquette, centering in the hills in the vicinity of Mount Mesnard and westward from the county farm location. The wind, blowing at the rate of thirty miles an hour, carried burning brands before it and filled the city with a smoke none too pleasant for nostrils or eyes. There was no little apprehension for a time, but when the fire reached a swamp adjoining the Lewis farm it apparently spent its force in the green timber there. About this time also the wind veered from the southerly to northwest, a cold wave following. The change had the effect of driving the fire back over burned ground and stayed its advance.

The Austin mine location, also the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company's surface equipment at the Stephenson property, a short distance from the Austin, in the county south of Negaunee, had an exceedingly close call. The flames had crept to within a short distance of the Stephenson, when the wind changed, starting the fire directly toward the Austin. The men employed at the Stephenson, Austin and Princeton mines, several hundred in all, fought the fire for several hours. Had it not been for their desperate efforts it is likely that the Austin location, where the Cleveland Cliffs company has a heavy investment, would have been wiped out completely.

Princeton reports that the Stephenson Lumber company's camps, six miles west of that place, have been destroyed, along with much forest products. Two men who drove teams in from the camps reported that they did not know what had become of the men employed there; they had either perished or had succeeded in making their way to Northland, a southern Marquette village subsequently saved only by a narrow margin after most desperate fighting. When the drivers fled with their teams from the camps the woods in the vicinity were burning fiercely. In the destruction of the I. Stephenson company's camps near Wells, further south, in Delta county, it is reported that 140 horses perished.

North of the city of Ishpeming, Marquette county, fires swept a wide path from a point near the Carp river valley almost to the Deer Lake location. A considerable area north of Lake Sally also was ablaze, and likewise a strip of country to the south. At Palmer, to the south, a large barn owned by W. H. Nichols was destroyed. There was imminent danger of the flames communicating to the village, and the men employed at the Richmond mine were called out to fight the fire. Big fires raged both to the east and south of the town, and especially in the latter district a number of farmers were burned out. All along the line of the Northwestern from Negaunee south to Little lake fires could be seen from the car windows, and there seems little doubt that a considerable number of homesteaders in the Junction basin have been wiped out.

One couple, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hart, came near losing their lives in a bush fire which destroyed their home, and as it was, they lost all their worldly possessions. Their place was located about four moles southeast of Negaunee, near the Iron Kilns settlement. They felt no apprehension until great clouds of smoke were observed in the west in the direction whence the strong wind was blowing. Every precaution was taken to protect the buildings. The fire appeared to be a long distance off when they went to the house to rest from their labors, but they had hardly gotten inside when the air suddenly became dark and a roar like the approach of a tornado was heard. They rushed from the house to see a sheet of flame passing with race-horse speed over their homestead and setting afire everything combustible in its path. For a few moments the heat was something terrific, and they feel that they owe their lives to the fact that they did not get out of the house sooner. As it was, their clothing was scorched and Mrs. Hart's hair was singed. Everything they owned was consumed, including house and barn, four head of cattle and a well-stocked hennery.

The unfortunate couple made their way to the Peterson farm, where they were given shelter. The Peterson farm, although located only a mile from the Hart homestead, was not in the direct path of the flames, which accounts for their escape from destruction of the buildings and many acres of newly planted strawberry plants. This particular fire laid waste to a tract one mile in width extending in an almost east and west line from a point about two miles southeast of Negaunee to the rock hills which bound the junction basin on the west.

A large force of section men turned out to fight fire which started in the hardwood bush near the railroad station at Cascade Junction, and succeeded in saving all the homesteaders' houses located on the north side of the track. It was fortunate that the fire did not cross the railroad right-of-way at this point., for no clearing likely to stop its progress exists north of Little Lake.

J. F. Crooks, who was operating near Swanzey, south of Negaunee, reports that all his logging camps have been destroyed, in addition to much valuable personal property. He visited the site of the building in which he had his office, yesterday, and in the ruins found a melted ball of silver, all that was left of some curency he had left in a drawer of his desk.

A fisherman returning from the Carp river reports that he was driven several miles out of his way and was forced to wade the stream in order to prevent being burned to death. He says that the whole region between Marquette and Eagle Mills, in the water shed of the Carp, is burned over and many houses destroyed.

Seven out of ten readers of this paper are tourtured with piles or some form of rectal disease. You are, or you would not be reading this article. Thirty years ago doctors carried a lancet in their vest pocket and bled people for all sorts of diseases and bled them hard,—sometimes a quart at a time. It was the fashion then. All that is changed nowadays and a doctor with a lancet would be considered a curiosity.

Five years ago doctors "cut out" Piles wherever they got the chance. All that has been changed since the marvelous soothing, healing and curative properties of Pyramid Pile Cure have become known.

By every mail we get letters like this:

"I want to tell you that it was the first thing that eased the terrible pain and itching and allowed me to have a night's rest for 7 long weeks. My husband immediately went to our druggist, Mr. Heinbach, and procured a 50-cent box. I am now cured and will always recommend you highly to every one. You actually saved my life. My mind, too, was almost gone from the pain. Yours gratefully, Mrs. Rose H. Stouffer, 1603 16th St., Moline, Ill."

PREPARING TO REPAIR DAMAGE

Towns and Settlers Set to Work to Rebuild After Fire.

Escanaba, Mich., May 22.—Out of the chaos resulting from the widespread forest fires of Friday, order is gradually being restored, the towns and isolated settlers are all preparing to repair the damage done and all danger is now over because the rain that fell yesterday extinguished the last smouldering fires.

While the rains were light and more are needed, even the slight precipitation was welcome throughout the stricken regions. It soaked the burned over forests and the new slashings which only needed a spark to set them on fire and a brisk wind to spread them through the forests.

Gov. Frank M. Warner of Lansing wired that if help was needed he could furnish it. He addressed Former Senator O. B. Fuller and asked him for information regarding the situation and the condition of the homeless. While there are many who would welcome assistance, those who lost their homes are spread over such wide territory that their friends and neighbors can take care of them and the people at large will not have to be called on.

FIB COSTS SIXTY DOLLARS.

Speaker Cannon That Much Richer by Son-In-Law's Prevarication.

Washington, May 22.—Speaker Cannon is $60 richer by reason of the forgetfulness of his son-in-law, E. X. Le Seuer, who, as the joke is on him, has not the courage to ask "Uncle Joe" for a return of the money.

Mr. Le Seuer is a banker in Danville, Ill., and makes his home at the Cannon residence. One day while the speaker was away, either by accident or design, he wore to his office a pair of "Uncle Joe's" trousers. That night at his club a friend paid him $60, in three $20 notes, which he carelessly placed in one of the hip pockets of his father-in-law's belongings, and then forgot all about the money.

Upon "Uncle Joe's" return, a few days later, he donned the garment which Mr. Le Seuer had been wearing, and, reaching around into the pistol pocket, discovered the three $20 notes. He at once suspected what had happened, and at the breakfast table accused his son-in-law of wearing his trousers during his absence.

"Why, you're much mistaken, Mr. Cannon," exclaimed Mr. Le Seuer. "I don't have to wear your clothes; I have several suits of my own."

"Oh, it's all right, Ernest," replied the speaker, "I simply found $60 in the hip pocket of these trousers and I know I didn't put it there. But as you say you haven't worn them, I suppose, of course, you didn't put it there, so I'll just keep it."

And he did.

never played so large a part in corsets as this season. There are many kinds of corsets that fit, but fitting is not sufficient. A model must do more—it must build a specific type of form; must create, as it were, a base to accord with the gown style that is the prevailing mode.

In our search for choice and accurate models for this season, we made our largest selection from

Warner's Rust-Proof Line

They indicated correctness in every detail and we take a satisfaction not entirely selfish in recommending them to our customers. UPHAM WILL IS PROBATED Estate Bequeathed to Widow and Children—Other Matters.

Probate Judge D. E. Lawrence of Two Harbors, who is acting for Probate Judge Middlecoff of this county during the latter's absence, has admitted to probate the last will and testament of Erastus S. Upham. The petition filed with the court gave the value of the estate as $65,000, of which $40,000 is invested in personal property.

By the terms of the will one-third of the estate is bequeathed to Marion Upham, widow of the decedent, and the remainder in equal shares to his children, William E. Upham of Mexico, and Mrs. Grace Spear and Mrs. Bessie E. Stewart of Duluth.

Another will admitted to probate yesterday was that of Gustaf Adolph Brandt who died at Chisholm some weeks ago. The real property comprises a lot in Chisholm which is bequeathed to Ella Anderson. The personal estate is bequeathed to the decedent's sister, Augusta Engdahl, of Swedent. John & Anderson are the executors of the estate.

William M. Prindle and T. W. Hoopes, appraisers for the local estate of Pauline O. Sooysmith, have filed their report in the probate court. The estate is valued at $68,000 and the state will collect an inheritance tax of $547. The tax is levied on only $46,500 of the value of the estate as the law provides an exemption of $10,000. A mortgage on the property is also exempt.

Judge Lawrence vacated the final decree in the estate of John D. Richardson, deceased, and another decree will be issued providing that the residue of the estate shall be applied toward paying the debts. The first decree provided that the balance of the estate, after the debts were paid, should be given to friends of the decedent. There was no balance and the decree had to be vacated.

WILL HAVE NEW ROUTE

Records of Hill Road, Platted Many Years Ago, Are Found.

Old records have been found in the city engineer's office which will provide a way of establishing a highway from Seventh avenue east to the Rice Lake road and give the farmers on the Rice Lake road an easier route to the hill district than the old road which was shut off by a fence a few weeks ago.

The new road will run from the upper end of Seventh avenue east in an easterly direction to Ivy street and then 240 feet beyond until a junction is effected with the Rice Lake road. This route, it is claimed, avoids the steep grade and all sinkholes, and can very easily be put in condition with a little work by the chain gang.

Business men on East Fourth street have been complaining that farmers on the Rice Lake road, who formerly entered the city at Seventh avenue east and did considerable trading in the hill district, have been compelled to go two miles out of their way ever since Martin Dillon built a fence across the old road up the hill beyond Seventh avenue. Mr. Dillon, it is understood, bought the half acre of land some time ago and, finding that the road across it had never been platted, he exercised his right and fenced in his property. The records show that another route was platted to the Rice Lake road many years ago and this is the route that it is expected to improve.

THE HERALD'S POLITICS.

Gray Eagle Gazette: About the only thing that keeps The Duluth Evening Herald from being the best daily paper in the state is its politics.

This is a very gracious compliment, for which The Herald is duly pleased and thankful. It is perhaps a better and stronger compliment than its author imagined.

For The Herald's politics is one of the principal things that enables it to be one of the best daily newspapers in the Northwest.

Its politics does not interfere with its duty of giving the news—of providing all the news while it is news. It is neither bound nor blinded by partisanship. Its news columns are not tinctured by strains of unholy relationship with political bosses or political machines. It is independent, though it is not neutral.

The Herald's politics does not consist in striving for the material welfare of a political party and its hungry satellites, nor in seeking to provide the members of a party with good jobs and fat rations at the expense of the people. Its politics is the good of the people of the nation, of the state, of Northern Minnesota and of Duluth, to be sought through the best available mediums.

The partisan newspaper must be a partisan first, and a newspaper second. Where the news does not conflict with its political views, it can be depended upon to give the truth as squarely as its facilities permit. But where the news comes into conflict with its politics, so much the worse for the news. Its utterances must be discounted and salted with careful consideration of its political ends. Its views are colored by its political aspirations and by those of its political friends.

The independent paper puts the news first. Its policy is to be a newspaper and to tell the news as it exists, and not, like the partisan paper does, as it wants it to exist. It should not be neutral, but with the best interests of its country, its state and its community and the people thereof ever in mind, should take a vigorous part in the affairs of humanity, and should freely and fearlessly express its views on public policies to the end that right shall prevail.

These things The Herald endeavors to do. It has no politics but the common good. Its firmest political policy is enmity to that blind partisanship that makes such a ready and useful tool in the hands of the specially privileged. In its mission of telling the news it makes no concessions to partisanship. It is an organ of the people, not of any party.

COLLEGE EXPENSES.

These figures showing the expenses of the members of the graduating class at Yale are very significant and instructive.

The average expenses per man for the four years of the course is $4,146, or $1,036 per year. The highest amount spent by one man per year was $7,550, and the lowest $100. Thirty-eight men averaged less than $500 a year. Twenty-four men have earned all their expenses through their college course, and ninety-five have earned part of their expenses.

This shows that the expense of a college education need not be so high as many people imagine. Of course few can expect to get through as easily as the man that spent only $100 in a year, for his case must have been exceptional, though the circumstances are not given in the report. But thirty-eight men out of the class averaged less than $500 a year, which it should not be difficult to earn while attending to the school duties. The fact that twenty-four men earned all their expenses, while ninety-five earned part of theirs, is encouraging to the youth of small means whose ambition demands a college training.

But perhaps the most significant feature of the report is the showing that as a general thing, the higher the scholarship the lower the expenses, and the higher the expenses the lower the grade in scholarship reached by the student. The highest scholarship men spent an average of $731 a year, and the men lowest in scholarship spent an average of $1,244 a year.

This shows that a large scale of college expenditures is inconsistent with the highest grade of scholarship. The man who is busily engaged in spending a large allowance while in college is pretty likely to find his days and nights too much taken up with other things to permit him to spare much of his valuable time to perfecting his scholarship. The man whose means are small enough to bar him from most of the college gayeties, on the other hand, has plenty of time for work, and it is by work that scholarship records are made.

It is easy to imagine how a large allowance for expenses can be made something of a handicap to a college career, and how the enforced plain living and high thinking of a limited income may become a potent source of intellectual accomplishment.

WOULD IT WORK?

It is a little queer that the proposition of President A. B. Stickney of the Chicago Great Western railroad on the rebate question, made in a recent letter to Senator Nelson, should have been greeted in so many quarters as a valuable suggestion, showing how to reach the real heads of railroads guilty of rebate practices.

Briefly, he proposed that instead of inflicting a penal sentence for rebating, only heavy fines should be imposed, because the prison sentences would touch only minor employes and agents, and "would never be inflicted on presidents and high officials of 160,000 miles of railways, who live in New York and do not deal directly with rates, while their demand for more revenue will induce some freight agent on a salary of $3,000 or $4,000 a year to grant a rebate."

So he proposes to make the penalty "as high as you please against the railway company." "This," he says, "is the only way to reach the railway officials and grand dukes."

—How about the widows and orphans owning railroad stocks that the railroad advocates always talk about when rate regulation is mentioned? Wouldn't heavy fines hit them as hard as they would the wealthy "grand dukes" who own a lot of stock? Wouldn't it hit them harder, as a matter of fact, because they are less able to stand it? Any drain upon a railroad's resources comes back upon the stockholders, and unless the widows and orphans for whom such pathetic appeals have been made by railroad attorneys before congressional committees have no existence in fact they would suffer directly from the heavy fines which Mr. Stickney proposes in lieu of imprisonment.

It is true that it is not just to punish underlings acting under orders from above, and to let the guilty ones in higher levels of authority go free. But this is not necessary. The president of a railroad is its responsible head. No vicious and illegal system of getting business could prevail on his road without his consent. It ought not to be hard to indict him and hold him responsible for the acts of his agents, since he is proclaimed to the world as the head of his company and as the final authority on all matters of policy. It is true that in the Paul Morton case eminent authority held that he was not responsible, but it is also true that in the minds of most men rank injustice was done by such ruling.

Fines will not stop rebating, but imprisonment will. If possible, the high officials should be punished, for they are morally and legally responsible. But if they cannot be reached, by reaching those actually guilty of the commission of the crime it will soon become very unpopular.

POWER FROM GARBAGE.

The withdrawal of the proposed garbage-collecting contract leaves it up to the city of Duluth to provide its own system of collection, and while apparently that phase of the matter has not yet been investigated very thoroughly, nobody has any doubt that it can be handled to the common advantage of the city government and the citizens.

On the whole, in view of the strong opposition that developed to the proposed contract, it is well that it is out of the way. The principal thing that led to this opposition was the fact that the proposed system made no provision for disposing of ashes, because the municipal garbage-burner cannot handle them, though later the contractor made a verbal promise to take ashes away once a year. With most householders, however, there is no storage capacity, and ashes must be moved much oftener than that. In addition to this objection, there was the possibility that the service would cost many householders more than their present service, and the further objection that a profit would go to an outsider which might as well be divided among the people by having the city do the work at cost.

The ideal system of garbage-disposal not only consists of taking up all garbage and ashes and burning the former, but of getting a profit out of the disposal of garbage by utilizing the steam produced from burning it. At present there is no way by which the steam that could be produced at the local garbage-burner could be used, but ultimately some way of using it, either by the city or by selling it to private interests, may be figured out.

The United States consul at Birmingham, England, gives an interesting account of the utilization of power from a garbage-burner there. Formerly garbage was dumped into disused clay pits or spread on available land, to the annoyance of adjacent residents. This system was not only unsatisfactory from a sanitary point of view, but it cost $2,638 per annum. Under the new system of burning the garbage all sanitary objections are disposed of, and the destruction of the garbage is to be made a source of profit to the city. The council has turned over to an electrical syndicate the right to generate and sell electricity, and the syndicate has contracted to pay at least $2,433 a year for the use of the steam from the garbage-burner. The syndicate will build a plant near the destructor to generate electricity for power and light, and is expected to shortly use all the steam the burner can produce. It is figured that this will mean an annual income of $7,300 to $9,733 from this source when all the steam is used by the syndicate.

It is worthy of note that in Birmingham the ashes are burned along with the other refuse.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Diamonds are becoming more expensive every year," said J. P. Kersting of Chicago at the Spalding. Mr. Kersting is salesmen for Lapp & Flershem, one of the biggest wholesale jewelry houses in the country. "I think there will be further advances from time to time, and anyone who contemplates the purchase of a stone will save money by investing now. From a business standpoint, buying a diamond is a good investment, for money can always be realized on it, and the prices are bound to advance.

"I have just received notice from my company that recent official reports indicate that the quantity of diamonds extracted from the blue ground is much less than formerly. This reduction, noted in the De Beers mines, is also quite pronounced in the Premier mine, from which so much was expected by some people. The output of the De Beers and Kimberly mines for the year ending last June, was forty-six carats for 100 loads of blue ground. For fifteen years these mines had an average of 32 2-3 carats for every 100 loads.

"A stone which could be purchased for $100 a few years ago, readily commands the $200 now asked for it, and even at this price there is an actual scarcity of the more desirable stones. The present high prices are the natural result of a decreasing supply and an increasing demand. Even today the available supply of diamonds is hardly equal to the demand, and the supply will become less while the demand will continue to increase.

"You see, 98 per cent of the world's supply of diamonds now comes from Africa, and even now there are unmistakable signs of exhaustion in these mines, with no prospect of new diamond fields. Under these circumstances, there is no knowing to what heights diamond prices may soar. This is good news to all who own the gems, for they never deteriorate in value, and always bring the current market price. They are, indeed, the best kind of a dividend-paying investment.

"The expense of the diamond as it is retailed is greatly added to by the cost of cuting. It is a case of 'diamond cut diamond' from start to finish in polishing the rough stone into a sparkling gem, for nothing is hard enough to cut a diamond except a diamond, not even finely tempered steel.

"First, the diamond is sawed in two. The old way was to cleave the stone. But sawing saves waste, and diamond waste is expensive. Even diamond dust has a value. To saw in two a carat diamond consumes a day's time, the sawing being done by a thin copper wheel, into whose edges diamond dust and oil have been worked, until, under a misecroscope, it looks like a buzz saw with diamond teeth. This wheel makes several thousand revolutions in a minute, constantly sawing the diamond. After the stone is sawed in two it goes to the cutter, who rounds it up and cuts off the rough edges with another diamond, using the stone, embedded in cement in the end of the holder, and holding it against another stone imbedded in a spindle which is revolving at high speed.

"Then the polisher takes a hand, putting on the facets, all of equal size, no matter how small the diamond. This is done on a fast-revolving metal disk, covered with diamond dust and oil, a slow, tedious job, requiring days. It is slow and nerve-racking work from beginning to end, and when you see how easily a $5,000 or $10,000 diamond can be ruined in the cutting or polishing, you cease to wonder at the high prices paid the workmen, and at why a diamond is so expensive."

"Everybody, almost, has his little superstitions," said John Bailey of Grand Forks, N. D., at the McKay. "Jim Lensey was one of the most superstitious ball players I ever knew, and all ball players are more or less superstitious. It was while playing in the Western league that Jim had a batting slump, and immediately attributed it to a hoodoo. He looked to the players for relief, and declared himself ready to give any remedy a trial.

"One of the players spoke of the good effect ham and eggs had on the batting eye, and recommended them to Lensey. Jim took the matter seriously, and hied himself to a hashery, where he stowed away a plentiful supply of the sight-giving food. That afternoon he batted like a fiend, making a home run, triple, double and single. Jim attributed his success to the fact that he had eaten the right food for the batting eye, and bragged of their good properties. But he was not satisfied with the batting streak of the afternoon. He wanted to do even more terrific swatting.

"That evening, as the boys were seated about the hotel, they saw Jim enter the building with a large package under one arm and a basket swinging from his hand. One of the boys gave Jim a playful push, and he slipped. He gave a howl of dismay as the basket flew from his hand and landed in the middle of the lobby floor. A thick, yellow substance slipped from the basket and covered the floor, while the package under his arm burst open and a large, shiny ham rolled under the writing table. Jim looked at his ruined eggs and the escaped ham, and said: 'Stay where you are; I don't care if I never make another base hit in my life.'"

Too Many for Him.

Harper's Weekly: An official of the New York postoffice relates a story of the sad predicament of an Irishman who entered that office for the purpose of mailing a letter to his fiancee.

He had paused in perplexity before a board containing three letter slots bearing the words "City," "Domestic," "Foreign."

"Faith," he muttered, "this is a pretty problem. Maggie's a domestic, she lives in the city, and she's a foreigner. What beats me is how I'm to get the letter in the three holes at wanst!"

THE WEATHER.

Another night of fog and chill and dampness. This morning it was thick, and the fog whistle was uttering its doleful lament at steady intervals. It was not very cold, but it was very damp, and what little wind there was seemed to have easterly tendencies.

The weather man's local forecast for tonight and tomorrow reads very much like yesterday's, which was unfortunately correct. He suspects that showers, cool weather and fog will prevail tonight and tomorrow, with fresh to brisk northeasterly winds. Last night's lowest temperature in Duluth was 38 degs, and yesterday's highest was 46 degs. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"Light to heavy showers fell over Lake Superior and throughout the northwest except in the Red River valley, due to low pressure conditions in the far west. The center of this disturbance has moved somewhat southward to Arizona. It has also caused higher temperature in the lake region and centrailer valleys. An area of high barometric pressure has moved from the Oregon coast to Alberta and has caused cooler weather from Montana northward. Pressure conditions in the far northwest and southwest indicate a continuance of northeasterly winds and cool, showery weather with more or less fog in this locality tonight and Wednesday."

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures, as recorded by the weather bureau:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, May 22.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m., Wednesday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity: Showers, cool temperature and probably fog tonight and Wednesday with fresh to brisk northeasterly winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, May 22.—Forecasts until 7 p. m., Wednesday: Upper Michigan—Rain tonight and Wednesday; cooler tonight; fresh northerly winds.

Wisconsin—Probably showers tonight or Wednesday; colder Wednesday and in north and west portions tonight; fresh southerly shifting to northerly winds.

Minnesota—Fair tonight and Wednesday, except showers in southeast portion tonight; cooler in south and west portions tonight; frost in north portion; fresh northerly winds.

The Pillager Indians.

Frank Abial Flower in Records of the Past: A long, deep, clear and very cold body of water called Burntside lake, north of Lake Superior, near the Canadian boundary, contains, among over 100 other beautiful islands, a certain sunny islet that is of great interest to the archaeologist.

These islands and waters constitute the hereditary home of the Pillager Indians, who are pagans. * * * One of these islands (known as Flower island) is, as it has been for generations, the seat of the Pillager kings. On it sleep, according to tribal tradition, over fifty successive Pillager rulers, the ancestors of the present chief or king, who, he says, must have reigned an average of thirty or forty years each, as he himself has been chief for more than half a century.

Think of a dynasty extending over a period of perhaps twenty centuries! The more modern graves are carefully roofed with cedar bark, which, when kept dry and away from the earth, is almost imperishable. The very ancient graves have been essentially obliterated by the ravages of the elements. At the head of each of the traceable graves is carved the peculiar heraldic insignia of the king who sleeps beneath, and above him are placed receptacles for the mah-no-min (wild rice), fish berries and other food which are brought annually by the remote members of the tribe to appease, as they suppose, the hunger of the departed.

Jefferson's Ten Maxims.

1. Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.
2. Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.
3. Never spend your money before you have it.
4. Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap; it will be dear to you.
5. Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst and cold.
6. We never repent of having eaten too little.
7. Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.
8. How much pain has cost us the evils which have never happened.
9. Take things always by their smooth handle.
10. When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, a hundred.

Thirty Years After.

New York Sun: Was the Hon. William Eaton Chandler, in the seventy-first year of his active and useful existence, the agent of the White House in negotiations with the Democratic minority of the senate?

Or was he the agent of Democratic senators in philosophical intercourse with the Republican administration?

Or was he neither?

Or was he both?

Perhaps we shall never know. History can never even be quite sure whether it was the Hon. William Eaton Chandler who, in his forty-first year, alone and unaided, held South Carolina, Florida and Louisiana open for Hayes in the gray gloom of morning, until his venerable namesake Zachariah got his eyes open and recovered his wits and his nerve.

But the fact remains that the Hon. William Eaton Chandler is one of the most picturesque personages and interesting negotiants now on earth.

Why They Buried Her.

Life: An incident that happened long enough ago to make its telling harmless began with the meeting of two old Cincinnatians on the street. Locking arms, so runs the tale, they strolled slowly along, discussing various topics. Personal ones were touched upon at last, and after exchanging family solicitudes for several moments, the judge asked the major:

"And dear, old Mrs. ——, your aunt? She must be rather feeble now. Tell me, how is she?"

"Buried her yesterday," said the major.

"Buried her? Dear me, dear me! Is the good old lady dead?"

"Yes, that's why we buried her," was the major's method of ending the subject.

A "Glass" for the Parson.

Harper's Weekly: A young and smart-looking Scot clergyman was to preach a "trial" sermon in a strange church. Fearing that his hair might be disarranged or that he might have a smudge on his face, he said to the sexton, there being no mirror in the vestry, "James, could you get me a glass?" James disappeared, and after a few minutes returned with something under his coat which, to the consternation of the divine, he produced in the form of a bottle, saying, "Ye mauna let on aboot it, meenister, for I got it as a special favor; and I wadna hae got it at all if I had na told them it was for you."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Ripple Compass: Forest reserves, summer hotels and transient spendthrifts may be all right for the sandy domes and rocky bluffs of the New England states, but the level slopes and rich wooded stretches of Northern Minnesota call for fields, workers and permanent homes.

Hendrum Review: Men who attend to their own affairs have little time to laugh at the mistakes of others.

Little Falls Transcript: Some lazy editors are doing some awful hard work for state development. Some of them spurt like a race horse that has been doped.

Littlefork Times: One of Southern Minnesota's candidates for governor says that he "thinks" there is a survey being made of the northern counties in the interest of drainage. A man who does not take enough interest in the developmnt of the state to keep posted on what is being done in the matter of improvements is not the kind of a man Northern Minnesota would like to see in the governor's chair.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: Bob Dunn's cottoning to Duluth and St. Louis county has an ominous sound.

Albert Lea Tribune: The dozen or more candidates for secretary of state of this great commonwealth are all hopeful of winning at the Duluth convention, but they admit the candidate for governor chosen will have much to do with their prospects, as locality cuts considerable figure in parceling out the pie.

St. Hilaire Spectator: Down at Washington the officials are just finding out that the Standard Oil company is the most colossal robber in the universe. The public has been aware of the fact for years.

Greenbush Journal: The seven curses of the United States are: Graftism, socialism, commercialism, bossism, suicide, divorce and perjury.

Red Wing Republican: A scientist declares that gold boils at a temperature of 2,400 degrees. There are people in Red Wing who find it melts fast enough at normal temperature.

Ely Miner: It begins to appear as if Julius Schmahl had the nomination for secretary of state almost cinched. Mr. Schmahl enjoys a wide acquaintance in the state and an immense popularity. He is a gentleman and abundantly able to handle the position, in fact many are of the opinion that his qualifications are superior to the majority of the candidates for the place.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The Fairmont Sentinel says it has only seen one Democratic paper opposing Jacobson's nomination. The Sentinel should increase its exchange list with such good Democratic papers as the Long Prairie Democrat, International Falls Press, Milaca Times, Duluth News Tribune, St. Paul Pioneer Press and several more feeble lights.

Walker Pioneer: Railroad regulation and state development are twin policies which in this state would meet general popular approval.

Face to Face With a Muck Rake.

Kansas City Star: Lincoln Steffens was in Emporia this week to see W. A. White, and also to get the teeth of his muck rake filed. In describing his muck rake the Emporia Gazette says: "It was a fierce-looking instrument as it lay on its flat cars, teeth upward, and menacing, and the crowd at the depot curiously gathered around it to see if the remains of any of their friends might be found impaled upon it. Col. X. Y. Z. Morrison, our well-known and respected townsman, claims that he found some hair and a section of hide that formerly belonged to Speaker Cannon. Col. Morrison and the speaker were boyhood friends in Illinois, and the colonel says that the skin he found on Steffens' muck rake tooth has a scar on it that young Cannon got by running into a pin on the slippery slide at the swimming hole on the Sangamon river June 23, 1849." Mr. Steffens was met at the train by the editor of the Gazette, who got the password for Muck Rake lodge, No. 234, of the Amalgamated Inkspillers' union.

A Quaint Oath.

New York Tribune: The judicial oath in the Isle of Man is so quaint as to deserve printing. It runs thus: "By this book and the holy contents thereof, and by the wonderful works that God hath miraculously wrought in heaven above and in the earth beneath in six days and seven nights, I do swear that I will, without respect of favor or friendship, love or gain, consanguinity or affinity, envy or malice, exeecute the laws of this isle justly between our sovereign lord the king and his subjects within this isle, betwixt party and party, as indifferently as the herring's backbone doth lie in the midst of the fish."

WHITTLED TO A POINT.

Philadelphia Record: First Business Man—Your new clerk seems somewhat lacking in self-confidence.

Second Business Man—Yes, he doesn't even seem to think he can run the business better than I can.

Puck: Stranger (in Yaphank)—That show to be given here next week ought to be suppressed. Would you be willing to start a crusade against it?

Local Minister—Who are you, may I ask?

Stranger—I'm the advance agent.

Philadelphia Press: Mrs. Newlywed (angrily)—I just received a silly notice from you that my account is overdrawn.

Cashier—Yes, madam, that seems to be the case.

Mrs. Newlywed—Nonsense! Why, there are still a dozen checks in my check book that I haven't used up yet.

Harper's Bazar: The wolf was at the door.

"Be sure to wipe your feet before you come in," commanded a peremptory voice.

Hastily tucking his tail between his legs, the animal turned and fled.

Cleveland Leader: Mr. Jimson—So old Mr. Titewodd gave you a penny, eh? Well, what did you say to him?

Jimmie Jimson—I was as p'lite as I could be. I told him thank you, an' I said I didn't see why you always said he was the stingiest old slob in seven states.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "What's the bouquet of flowers in the kitchen for, Annette?"

"Why, Henry, I'm in hopes, now that the housecleaning is all finished, that our cook will come back."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "That's a very good-natured crowd at the ball game, isn't it, George?"

"I guess it is, my dear—when the umpiring suits it. But why do you think it's good natured?"

"I noticed that whenever I asked any question about the game everybody laughed."

Philadelphia Ledger: "How did I make out with that case?" asked Dr. Gay in reply to a question of his friend.

"Why," replied the friend, "I called to see you last night and your wife said you expected to be out all night attending to a case—"

"Oh, I drank my share of it."

Chicago Tribune: "Don't you think they are a trifle too small?" asked the elderly customer.

"Too small?" echoed the salesman. "Why, madam, if you should try to wear a larger size you would have to advertise for your feet in the 'lost' column."

"You are exceedingly familiar, young man," rejoined the customer, with much dignity; "but I'll take the shoes."

Engineers and Politicians.

Memphis Commercial Appeal: A citizen of Memphis who wanted a drink went into a saloon in the vicinity of the meeting place of the Brotherhood of Engineers day before yesterday, rather expecting to find a good many of the engineers therein. To his surprise he was the only seeker for a thirst exterminator among those present. The saloon was deserted. Thinking that perhaps the men of the throttle had found a more congenial rendezvous, he, as a matter of curiosity, visited all the other saloons in the vicinity, and he found in none of them any evidence whatever that there was a single engineer in Memphis.

Nothing perhaps could throw a brighter light on the characters of the engineers of the United States than this incident. If a like number of politicians had assembled in Memphis to attend a convention all the saloons of this city would be holding overflow meetings.

WITNESS IS SENT TO JAIL

For Refusing to Testify in Regard to Denver Election.

Denver, Colo., May 22.—Henry L. Dougherty, president of the Denver Gas & Electric company, appeared in district Judge Frank J. Johnson's court yesterday afternoon and was called upon to testify as to what he knew regarding the matter of alleged bogus tax receipts used in the election. On the advice of his attorney, J. F. Valle, he refused to testify and even refused to be sworn.

Judge Johnson informed Mr. Dougherty that he would either have to testify or be committed to jail for his refusal. After consulting with his attorney, Mr. Dougherty announced that he would not testify.

Judge Johnson ordered Mr. Dougherty committed to jail.

Soon after Mr. Dougherty's commitment on application of attorneys representing the election committee, a temporary order was issued by the supreme court restraining District Judge Johnson from proceeding further with his investigation of the vote on franchises at last week's election until Monday next, when he must show cause why he should not be permanently restrained. Subsequently the supreme court ordered that Mr. Dougherty be released in bonds of $500, the order being based on application for a writ of habeas corpus, pending the hearing on the injunction. Mr. Daugherty was immediately given his liberty.

During the day several employes of the Denver Gas & Electric company were put on the stand in Judge Johnson's court and questioned as to the ownership of property for which tax receipts were alleged to have been voted. Several admitted that they had only owned the property for a day or two prior to election day and that it had been purchased on contracts for long time payments. Some of the witnesses could not give a clear description of lots and admitted that a high official of the Denver Gas & Electric company acted as their agent. Other witnesses declined to answer certain questions on advice of counsel that their replies might incriminate them. Attorneys for the Honest Electric league, which is back of the investigation, had succeeded during the afternoon in having records of the city treasurer's office brought into court for the purpose of showing that money was paid for taxes by clerks of certain corporations on property standing in the names of employers. The sitting of the court was to have been resumed at 7 o'clock last night, but all proceedings were stopped by the supreme court's injunction.

Mr. Dougherty is general manager of the McMillan syndicate of gas and electric companies with headquarters in New York city.

WEST END

PAVE PAST GARFIELD

Work on West Superior Street Macadam is Well on Way.

Soon Into Telford Macadam Work—Rain Stops Labor.

If this rainy and foggy weather would let up, Contractor Hugh Steele would soon have the paving contract completed up to the place where he has to put in Telford macadam instead of tar macadam. That part of the work starts at Fifteenth avenue west and continues until Thirteenth is reached, after which the laying of tar macadam will be resumed. The laying of tar macadam is now west of Garfield avenue and the large intersection of streets and avenues at Garfield is just being completed. The new paving can now be used almost down to Garfield from Twenty-fifth avenue west and the West end business men are much pleased over this fact.

It is pointed out as curious that teamsters still tackle Superior street at the intersection with Michigan street over which to draw their heavy loads. The paving has been torn up almost all of the way in order that the road may be made ready for the laying of tar macadam, and the teaming is said to be fierce. Despite this and despite the further fact that there is a much better roadway on First street although a little climbing would be necessary, the teamsters still use Superior street.

OPEN MITE BOX.

Missionary Society of Norwegian-Danish Church Meets.

The Foreign Missionary society of the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church met last night and listened to a very pleasant though informal program. The meeting also signalized the opening of the society's mite box and among other things on the program was a talk by Mrs. Reppee concerning the significance of the mite box and its importance.

Among the other numbers on the program were readings by Miss Clara Olson and Miss Frances Berg, a vocal solo by Miss Inga Dahl and one or two other musical numbers. Refreshments followed.

Salvation Army's Home.

The new building of the Scandinavian Salvation Army at the corner of Superior street and Seventeenth avenue west, is almost completed. It is of frame and the outside work is all done with the exception of a few more coats of paint, after which it will put up quite a respectable appearance in spite of the fact that its top reminds one of bastions on a castle of the Rhine.

Each Has Heir.

Within the past few days three West end men have been made as proud as turkey cocks, and all because of the following events:

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Wickman, 2802 West Michigan street; a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Lingwall of 2530 West Second street; and a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. F. Crotteau of 733 Garfield avenue.

Slow Up for Danger.

Those who are especially afraid of the Point of Rocks are pointing out that street cars passing there prolong the agony by invariably slowing up whether passing another car or not. The slack in speed comes just at the point which is considered most dangerous, too, these say, which is at the western side of the point.

HEREDITY TO BE STUDIED

Men of Learning Hope to Improve Human Race.

Assistant Secretary of Department of Agriculture Names Committee.

Washington, May 22.—William Hays, assistant secretary of the department of agriculture, has appointed a committee of scientists to investigate heredity in man, with the idea of encouraging the multiplication of good blood and discouraging the weaker and more vicious blood in human families, and in other ways perfecting the human race. The work will be done by a committee of the American Breeders' association, which was organized by Mr. Hays, and of which he is the secretary.

The same methods that have produced marvelous results in improving plants and animals will be studied with regard to their application to the human species. Mr. Hays explains that the committee referred to is only one of a number composed of members of the Breeders' association, and that they are all engaged in investigations of the subjects of heredity, breeding and the natural evolution of species.

"The men who have had a large and successful experience in the improvement of domestic plants and animals," said Mr. Hays, "generally believe that the subject of heredity in man should receive more serious scientific consideration. While the general laws of heredity in plants, animals and men are similar, the application of plants for improvements must differ. The methods used in breeding corn differ from those used in breeding wheat, and still different methods are used in originating improved varieties of apples. Only a few principles are being used in animal and plant breeding, but there are many new plans of effecting improvements in animals, and especially in plants, by breeding, and the value of these plans is being abundantly proven by the improvement in varieties and breeds worth many millions of dollars.

"Of the $6,000,000,000 worth of American plants and animal products annually produced, it is believed that $5,000,000,000 worth are of kinds of plants and animals which can be influenced by breeding. The results from breeding sugar beets, wheat, corn, cotton, oranges, carnations and other crops indicate that more than a 10 per cent increase in yield may be produced by improvements in heredity, and that under the same care the crops now receive. Breeders are developing a new interest in the improvement of domestic animals. Numerous plant hybrids of value are even suggesting efforts to produce animal hybrids.

"'Buffalo' Jones of Arizona; President J. J. Hill of the Great Northern railroad, and others who are hybridizing the buffalo and cattle, are gradually arousing public interest in the possibilities of their catalo, which combine the production of robes and meat under conditions almost too rugged and severe for cattle. The suggestion that the blood of the horse, donkey and zebra should be compounded, and from the resulting tripartite hybrid conglomerate there be hewed out, by methods now well known to breeders, a fertile breed of draught animals superior to the best mule, seems no idle dream to our breeders of plants, who are becoming experts in this kind of compounding.

"The world has long improved its plant and animal products, mainly be improving their food and other conditions of their environment. Now that it is making quite as great improvement by modifying the heredity of the species, variety or breed, the question is naturally suggested as to how heredity in man may be improved. The philosophy of society is that by good food and clothing and other favorable physical conditions, aided by education and Christianity, all is done that may be done to elevate a race. No clearly defined plan has as yet been presented of rkapidly changing the heredity of a people, as is done of a variety of plants or species of animals. The subject of investigating the heredity of man is comparatively much more difficult than in case of plants and animals. But it is so important that science and religion should join in an investigation at once conservative, careful and possibly constructive."

In discussing another phase of breeding—that of resistance to disease—Mr. Hayes said: "It may be that the white plague in man can be somewhat lessened by breeding races of cattle and swine more resistant to tuberculosis than are others of the respective species. Resistant families are more valuable to multiply than families readily attacked by this insidious and dreadful disease."

The personnel of the committee to prosecute the investigations, as outlined by Secretary Hayes, will not be announced until letters of acceptance have been received.

BLISS TESTIFIES BEFORE GRAND JURY.

New York, May 22.—Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer of the National Republican committee, testified as a witness yesterday before the special grand jury which was drawn at the instance of District Attorney Jerome to investigate life insurance matters.

At the hearing before the Armstrong committee Mr. Bliss testified to contributions by the Mutual to the National campaign fund and it is supposed that he was questioned along the same lines. District Attorney Jerome refused absolutely to discuss Mr. Bliss's testimony. The other witnesses examined by the special grand jury were Charles Preller and Charles O. Greatsinger, auditor and assistant auditor respectively of the Mutual, and William C. Edwards, treasurer of the Guaranty Trust company, an auxiliary or subsidiary organization of the Mutual.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Grand Forks.
Fargo at Winnipeg.
Lake Linden at Houghton.
Hancock at Calumet.

Grand Forks, May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—About two thousand people gathered at the opening game yesterday and saw the Tigers send the White Sox down to defeat by a score of 3 to 1. It was a beautiful game and on the part of the Tigers was errorless. Treadway was pitching in fine form after the first inning and struck out eleven men, while Geabeau could only land one in five innings.

With two men out and the bases full in the fifth, McNeil called in Geabeau from the slab, after he had issued two passes and sent out Fogerty, who struck out the man at the bat and retired the side without a score.

The lone score made by the White Sox came in the sixth inning. Lovett led with a hit, and Ludwig sacrificed him to second. Adams went out from short to first, and Treadway took a nice clean hit into the center garden which gave the visitors the only score of the game.

The White Sox played a slow game and three errors at critical times came high. Treadway was wild and issued six passes.

The Tigers scored in the first inning and again in the third. In the first Glnecke drew a pass, and Kelly went on an error by Lovett, while Ott was fortunate enough to get a hit. With three men on bases, Treadway forced Glncke home by issuing a pass to Luderus. Harris went on a fielder's choice and Kelly scored on the catcher's error. Leighty struck out, and Wilson reached first on a fielder's choice, Ott being put out coming home. Hentges struck out and ended the scoring.

In the third inning Harris led with a hit, and Leighty sent him home with a clean two-bagger. Wilson sacrificed Leighty to third, and Hentges went out from short to first. Geabeau went out from Treadway to O'Dea and the side was retired.

The fans are well pleased with the appearance made yesterday. tI was the first opportunity they had to see the Grand Forks team line up. Harris and Wilson, on third and second, covered their positions in excellent shape, while Hentges in the center garden is rather slow at times.

The first ball was pitcehd by Mayor Duis, who sent the little sphere across the home plate and helped the pitcher by getting one strike for him, opening another baseball season in Grand Forks.

The detailed score was as follows:

MAROONS WIN.

Defeat Fargo in First Game of Series by One Sided Score.

Winnipeg, Man., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Maroons put it all over Fargo here in the first game of the series yesterday afternoon, winning by the score of 12 to 3. The fielding of both teams was ragged, and in the sixth inning the game developed into a farce, the Maroons running bases until they piled up five runs, when the batters deliberately struck out. Roons pitched for Winnipeg, and allowed but three hits. The score:

LOSES AGAIN.

Hancock Team Drops Fifth Consecutive Game Since Opening of Season.

Calumet, Mich., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hancock lost its fifth consecutive game yesterday, when Calumet won the first of the series here by a score of 4 to 3. The game was an excellent exhibition, despite the fact that most of it was played in a drizzling rain. Only Speiser's inability to pitch to Monahan is responsible for the loss of it. The little Calumet shortstop was evidently too diminutive for the Hancock pitcher to gauge or had Speiser hypnotized, for the twirler walked him on three different occasions, and the shortstop has a record of one time at bat, two runs and one hit.

The passes were turned into runs on two occasions also, and those two runs were what won the game, for Calumet needed both of them. Aside from three passes, Speiser pitched a good game. Calumet had trouble bunching enough hits to drive men in, and he was steady at all times.

Bubbles Foulkes occupied the box for Calumet and the Hancock players had their troubles with him. Jimmy seems to be better than ever this year, for he keeps them all guessing. The eight hits Hancock secured were fairly well scattered, and the little fellow was wonderfully steady at critical times.

The work of Boylan at second for Hancock was the feature of the game. He had but two chances in the field and handled them well. At the bat is where he starred. Three lovely bingles is what he whacked out and one of them was good for two sacks without stretching. Wares also was something of a surprise with the stick. "The Kid" landed on the ball safely twice and one of them was a two-sacker. The double came at an opportune time also, as it meant a run. Cox at third played a good game for Hancock also, and his catch of Mutter's hard liner was a fine piece of work.

The score:

GIANTS LOSE GAME.

Lake Linden Team Administers First Defeat of Season to Houghton.

Houghton, Mich., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Houghton suffered its first defeat of the season yesterday, when Dr. P. Glass' Lake Linden team went after Ed Barry, the big southpaw, who was counted as Houghton's mainstay in the box, and sent him to the bench in the seventh inning.

Barry was erratic from the first. In the third inning it looked as though he would have to be yanked out. The first man up was hit by a pitched ball. The next got to base on a fielder's choice, which retired Wagman at second, and then Barry couldn't find the plate at all. He walked three men, forcing in a run, and it was only by sharp fielding that the side was retired.

Barry had another bad inning in the fifth, when a hit and a bad error on his own part gave the Lakes another run. But it was in the seventh that he saw his finish, and the Lakes cinched the game. Solbraa started the inning with a hit. An error by Sundhim sent him to second and put Wotell safely on first. Lelivelt by and pat Wotell safely on first. Lelivelt by and Becker filled the bases. Solbraa went out at the plate on Lelivelt's grounder and Donavon, by a well-placed hit, scored two. Barry let another man in by an error, and a long hit by Kell scored two more. A fly to Hastings ended the slaughter.

Pete Wagner was given a chance to show what was in him by finishing the game, and he was found equal to the occasion. But six men faced him in the two innings he pitched, and two of them went back to the bench with strike-outs recorded against them. But the Lakes had more than enough to win the game.

Kell occupied the box for Lake Linden, and five hits, scattered through as many innings, was the best that Houghton could do with him. He had plenty of steam and good curves, and Houghton couldn't hit him when hits were needed. The Lake Linden team played an excellent fielding game also. But one error was chalked up against the team, and that came in the ninth inning, when it didn't help Hougaton to any scores.

The first Hougaton score came in the sixth inning, when Keil passed Sundhim and the Houghton third baseman stole second, third and home. Houghton scored again in the eighth, when Klppert walked and scored on Sundhim's two-base hit.

Bill Foster, former captain of the Lake Linden team, played center field for Houghton yesterday, being secured for Donavon in a trade. Foster, an outfielder, has been playing second base for Lake Linden. He didn't make good on the second sack, and as Lake Linden has three excellent outfielders in Becker, Lelivelt and Wotell, they let the captain go to Houghton. Donavon played second for the Lakes and did good work, both in the field and at bat.

The score:

WILL PITCH FIRST BALL

Mayor Cullum Will Open Season With the Usual Ceremonies.

Two More Members of Duluth Team Are Let Go.

Great pains are being made for the opening of the baseball season in Duluth, next Monday.

Unfortunately the day was also selected by the Sells-Floto circus for its Duluth date, and this may prove a counter attraction, although the fans who want to see the circus will attend in the evening, and go to the ball game in the afternoon.

There will be a procession, leaving the city hall at 2 o'clock. Carriages have been provided for the mayor, the aldermen, the city officials, and the two teams. The parade will be headed by Flaaten's band, and on reaching the grounds, Mayor Cullum will open the season by pitching the first ball across the plate, after making a short speech appropriate to the occasion.

All the other cities in the league but Lake Linden, have celebrated their openings. At Houghton and Hancock, about 3,500 fans saw the first game, and an equal number turned out at Winnipeg. Calumet reported about 2,500, and in spite of the cold and rainy weather, Fargo and Grand Forks each turned out from 1,500 to 2,000 fans.

Interest in the game this year seems to be greater than ever before, and if next Monday is a fine day, the grand stands and bleachers at the Duluth ball park should be crowded to their utmost capacity.

Fargo will be the opposing team.

Two more members of the Duluth team have been released, and the squad is now cut down to twelve men. Pool, the left handed pitcher secured from Ashland, and Catcher McCarter, who joined the team at Fargo, have been released. McCarter was signed as a substitute and was simply being tried out. He did not suit, and O'Dea dropped him again.

The reason for letting Pool go, is not so clear, unless it is merely the fact that it was necessary to get within the salary limit. Pool was looked upon by fans as a very likely youngster, and one of the most promising pitchers in the bunch. He was the only left hander, and had not yet been given a trial in league company. In practice games, however, he pitched wonderfully good ball, and there was every reason for believing that he was a winner. The Sox were carrying five pitchers, but the fans would liked to have seen Pool given a show in a league game before being released.

He has had offers from several of the league teams, and has agreed to pitch the opening game for Fargo against Duluth. If he makes good on that occasion, he will at least have the satisfaction of showing his former manager what a good thing he let go.

NICKNAME IS FINDING FAVOR

"Nancy" League is Now Quite Generally Used Around Circuit.

The "Nancy" league seems to have caught on with a number of the fans as a good nickname for the Northern and Copper Country league.

The nickname is a contraction of the initials N. and C. C. and several of the newspapers around the circuit are using the term regularly in designating the new organization. The term was originally suggested in a letter to the Herald from a copper country fan.

The ball players have been calling the league the Polar league, owing to the chilly weather they have been experiencing since the opening of the season.

Circuit Clippings.

"Perry" Sessions is back in his old stamping ground. His rise was rapid, but hardly as rapid as his fall. He went from the Northern league to the American Association and to the American league, and back by the same way.

The Houghton players have new uniforms of navy blue with the word "Houghton" in pearl grey letters. The collars, sox and caps are also pearl grey.

The umpires this season will have a regular uniform as well as the players. It consists of a pair of grey trousers, and a black blouse cap. The four umpires are Dr. Bassen, Ollie Anderson, McGraw and Ruderham.

The Fargo team was given the nickname of the Invalids, and it seems to be sticking. The following are the nicknames of the other seven teams: Duluth, White Sox; Winnipeg, Maroons; Grand Forks, Tigers; Lake Linden, Lakes; Houghtons, Giants; Hancock, Patriots; Calumet, Aristocrats.

Joe L. Miller, who pitched for the Duluth team last year, has been picked up by Grand Forks. Miller led the pitchers of the league last year, thanks to the heavy hitting team he had behind him, and a very prominent horseshoe.

The salary limit is worrying some of the managers, who claim that the other teams are exceeding it, and will continue to do so even after June 1. The enforcement of the limit rests largely with the president of the league, and he has given his assurance that the teams will have to get under the mark by the first of the month.

Duluth has two more days to play at Grand Forks, and will then open a series of four games at Winnipeg. Two games will be played on Thursday, which is Empire day in the dominion. The Sox will then return home to open the season here on Monday.

DEFENDS THE SALVATION ARMY

Eva Booth Replies to the Recent Statements of Solenberger.

New York, May 22.—A reply issued yesterday by Commander Miss Eva Booth of the Salvation Army to statements said to have been made recently by Edwin D. Solenberger, general manager of the Associated charities of Minneapolis, in a paper read before the thirty-third national congress of Charities and Corrections in Philadelphia, says the declaration that "the Salvation Army relief work as carried on through its homes, lodging houses and other agencies, is poorly organized and poorly administered, and that the so-called work of the army is largely subservient to financial interests," is unjust and untrue.

Denying Mr. Solenberger's statement that the army's social work was poorly organized and poorly administered, Miss Booth says:

"Our social officers are specially trained and instructed for this particular branch. The work is thoroughly organized and carefully administered."

The reply continues:

"Our rescue homes are a model to the world. In many localities these rescue homes constantly care for cases handed over to them by associated charities, and in the city of New York its rescue homes have taken direct from the city hospital with the city ambulances poor, unfortunate mothers and their babies, and have looked after them and their babies without a single cent of financial aid from the city for their support.

"The Salvation Army property accumulated in various countries is held under the laws of these countries in indissolable trust for such purposes, and no one, either leader or worker, could pervert any such property to their personal ends, or devise and bequeath it to others. In this country the army is incorporated as a religious and charitable organization, and the books of its finances are examined by public accountant.

"The cleanliness of our lodging houses has received the praise of many health bureaus in many large cities. In these shelters religious meetings are regularly held, and to say that we do nothing to improve the morals of the men is too absurd a declaration to be considered.

"The Salvation Army Industrial Home company, which received such severe criticisms at the hands of Mr. Solenberger, is the result of another scheme that was devised by our board of trustees for the purpose of helping men to help themselves. This is done by the well-to-do, and using it for the benefit of the unemployed.

"It is absolutely untrue that Gen. Booth holds all property and funds of the Salvation Army in trust in America. Gen. Booth is not even a trustee of the Salvation Army corporation. Over ten years ago at the invitation of Gen. Booth a special government commission in England thoroughly investigated all financial reports and accounts of the Salvation Army, and found them to be correct in every particular, and commended the work to the public as being wisely directed."

In conclusion Miss Booth says Mr. Solenberger recently wrote a letter endorsing the work of the army.

THE COTTAGE PLAN

For the Training Schools is Favored by L. A. Rosing.

St. Paul, May 22.—"From my observations on our trip East," said L. A. Rosing, member of the state board of control, yesterday, "I am more convinced than ever that the boys and girls in the training schools should be separated. I believe that the girls should be on a farm by themselves—a farm of eighty acres or more. I believe the cottage plan is the most conducive to the results desired. From what we saw I believe that the best results are obtained where about twenty-four inmates are kept in each cottage. In our training schools we should remember that the inmates are still boys and girls, and we should keep their training as close as possible to natural methods. We should get away from the congregate plan and develop the individual as far as possible."

TO MINE AT SNOWBALL

Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company to Work on Western Mesaba.

To Open Up New Properties With Completion of Alborn Branch.

The Duluth, Missabe & Northern road is building an extension from Alborn to Bovey principally to provide an outlet for Western Mesaba range ore and a striking example of the consumation of that idea comes with the announcement that the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company is preparing to open up one or more of the determined ore bodies which it owns in the vicinity of Snowball.

Snowball is located twenty miles west of Hibbing and about six miles west of Nashwauk. The town was platted about four years ago but the owners decided not to push the sale of lots until a railroad was built through.

The new branch of the Missabe runs through the town and grading has already been completed beyond that place. It is said to be the intention of the townsite people to place the lots on the market and proceed to open up the town as soon as possible.

The Cleveland-Cliffs properties are said to be very good ones and if they are opened soon, it will give the new locality considerable impetus. In addition to the Cleveland-Cliffs holdings, there are known to be a number of largely tested ore bodies in the vicinity which will give Snowball a good foundation upon which to build.

Work on the new road is being pushed rapidly and the officials of the line are confident that the train service can be begun from Alborn to Bovey by the Fourth of July. The track-laying will be completed by the fifteenth of June. Ore shipments can be in full blast in less than a month after that time.

BOVEY SCHOOL CONTRACT

Awarded to Emil Johnson of Minneapolis at About $55,000.

Grand Rapids, May 22.—At a meeting last night at the office of H. C. Dudley, superintendent of the Canisteo iron mine, the contract for the construction of the superstructure of the proposed $75,000 school building on a site overlooking Trout lake, Coleraine, was awarded to Emil M. Johnson, Minneapolis. Though the figure has not been announced, it is understood the contract price is in the neighborhood of $55,000.

There were seven bidders in all, but the highest five of these were discarded at a meeting of the advisory board at Duluth Saturday. The bid competing with that of Johnson was made by the contracting firm of Haughner & Olson, Superior.

Bids for heating and ventilating and plumbing were also considered at the meeting, but no definite action was taken. At the advisory board's meeting in Duluth Saturday, the lowest bidders on each of these contracts were reserved for consideration jointly by the advisory board (consisting of H. C. Dudley, John Eckman, Frank Provinsky, president of Bovey, and Eric Johnson, postmaster at Bovey), the board of education of school district No. 2 (consisting of J. G. Fraser, A. M. Sisler and E. J. Anderson) and the citizens of the district.

Nine contractors made bids for doing the heating and ventilating work and five set their lowest price on the plumbing work. On the heating and ventilating contract, the firms of D. R. Black & Co., Duluth, and William Neuman & Co., Ashland, Wis., have been reserved, and the same firms on plumbing.

Though it was originally intended that the cost of the new school building should not exceed $65,000, it is now almost certain the figure will be much higher than that, but the citizens of that district are determined that no modifications shall be made in the original plans. The meeting was largely attended and all present were enthusiastic over the matter.

Work on the foundation for the building is progressing favorably. According to contract it must be ready for the superstructure by June 15. The foundation alone will cost $3,500.

WOODSMAN KILLED.

John Gager Run Over by Train at Swan River.

Grand Rapids, Minn., May 22.—A man named John Gager was killed at Swan River by the cars. His remains were brought here for interment. He was a logger, and it is supposed he was drunk and fell under the wheels of a moving train. An express receipt giving the foregoing name was issued from Cloquet, and that was the only identification secured.

Word has ben received from Grand Falls, near Winnipeg, that Frank Reusswig of this place has been seriously injured by the explosion of some dynamite in a trunk. Reusswig was with a Canadian Pacific surveying crew, and while en route to the surveying camp rode in a baggage car. The baggage master turned over a large trunk, and the jar exploded its contents, killing the baggage master and injuring Reusswig.

HEBREWS TO ENTERTAIN.

Out of Town Men to Speak at Flaaten Auditorium.

The principal speakers at the entertainment to be given at the Flaaten auditorium this evening under the auspices of the local lodge of I. O. B. B., will be Judge Stein and Seelen Freund of Chicago, Dr. Julius H. Meyer of Milwaukee, and Dr. Mendel Silber of Duluth.

The convention of this order has just ended at Minneapolis and some of the delegates were induced to visit the Duluth lodge before returning to their homes. A musical program will be given, in addition to the addresses. E. Eva and Mrs. H. Y. Joseph will sing and Hugo Kohn will give a violin solo. Miss Belle Jacques will be Mrs. Joseph's accompanist.

DANGER IN DELAY

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Duluth People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney trouble is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in Duluth.

J. E. Watts, bricklayer, living at 918 Tenth avenue, Duluth, Minn., says: "I have had no reason to change the opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills which I expressed in a testimonial given in 1898. At that time it cured me of a bad attack of backache and lameness which made me stop work. I was unable to stoop and the pain was severe just over the kidneys and through the loins. Plasters and other remedies I used brought me no radical benefit. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me so strongly that I decided to try them, I soon found that they were just the remedy for my case. In a few days the pain left me, and the cure has been permanent."

School of Dancing

Regina Smith, member of American National Association of Masters of Dancing; summer term opens

Every grown person who has known children at all remembers vividly the time when some toddler has come from a journey of adventure in the back yard with round eyes of wonder and a crumpled dandelion in a wee, moist hand to give you this astonishing golden thing which he has found in the grass. From that time on, all the available bowls and dishes, or sherbet glasses and finger bowls in the house are filled with beautiful yellow dandelions and when later he goes to school those lovely things are carried to his teacher. Almost invariably this love of flowers is implanted in every child, and that the instinct is one to be cultivated no one will doubt. To reach the little ones in the poorer portions of the city who perhaps would never learn of the wonderful and refining thing of cultivating flowers, the occupation which will bring out patience and appreciation and a number of other virtures, the Women's council of this city has made arrangements for the distribution of seeds. For three years the work has been carried on and that the proceeding is not on a par with the distribution of seeds by congress, is hurriedly assured any who might worry over that feature.

Three years ago the plan was adopted by the council and carried to a successful termination by Miss Jean Poirier. Quantities of seeds were bought and sold to the children at cost. The price was so low that any child who really desired the seeds could get them. The interest was so widespread and the results so satisfying that in the years following that, the children of all the schools of the city were allowed to purchase them if they desired. Last year and this year the chairman of the committee in charge of this work has been Miss Elizabeth Anderson.

The seeds have been distributed for this year and although the report has not been definitely completed, some idea of the demand among children for the lovely things of nature may be realized when it is known that twenty-eight pounds of sweet pea seed, between six and eight thousand pansy plants and 1,360 gladiola bulbs are among the flowers which the children of Duluth will cultivate during the summer. That the attempts at times are pitiful, goes without saying. In the rock portions of the city the little gardeners will carry soil to make a bed of three or four inches depth upon the bare rocks. Many of the principals of the schools of the city keep in touch with the children during the summer and encourage them in their efforts.

An exhibit has been held at the Webster school each fall and prizes provided by the Twentieth Century club have been awarded. This fall prizes will be awarded by the council at any school which arranges an exhibit of the flowers grown in the summer and by another year it is hoped by the members of the council that each women's club of the city will arrange to provide prizes for one school.

People not in touch with the work can scarcely realize the demand for these things among the children and those of the poorer classes will save their pennies laboriously, in order to purchase the seeds.

The seed committee of the council this year consists of Miss Elizabeth Anderson, Mrs. Julia M. Barnes, Mrs. Z. D. Scott, Miss Lydia Poirier and Mrs. I. T. Burnside.

PROGRAM

SATURDAY, JUNE 9.

9:30 a. m.—Business meeting.

2:00 p. m.—Recreation.

8:15 p. m.—Second state talent concert.

Lecture, "The Story of Alice, a New Excursion Into the Domain of Musical expression."

Those taking part in one or the other of the two state talent concerts will be as follows:

Miss Clara Williams, Minneapolis; Mrs. Lucia Judd McAuliffe, Duluth; Mrs. William N. Porteous, Minneapolis; Miss Ednah F. Hall, Minneapolis; Miss Louise Taylor, St. Paul; Miss Bessie Godkin, St. Paul. Miss Ruth Alta Rogers, Duluth; Mrs. Carlyle M. Scott, Minneapolis; Carlyle M. Scott, Minneapolis; U. S. Kerr, Minneapolis; Franz Schultz, Duluth; William Herbert Dale, Minneapolis; Olaf Hals, Minneapolis; Eugene Skaaden, Minneapolis.

Charles W. Clark, the eminent baritone, has arisen in ten years from comparative obscurity to the very pinnacle of artistic success upon the lyric stage. His reception in such critical centers as Berlin, Paris and London have been nothing less than phenomenal, winning the most unmeasured praise from audiences and critics long sated with excellence.

Miss Mary Angell, who will share the evening with Mr. Clark, is a young pianist who has during the last two years played in the South and Middle West with phenomenal success. A Chicago critic described her playing before the Illinois State Music Teachers' association, last year, as "sensational."

Fredrick W. Root is one of the foremost musical educators in Chicago; a man of the best antecedents and the most thorough training. He is, besides being a very successful teacher, a lecturer of wide renown, and his services in this field have been in demand far beyond his ability to respond. It is solely because of the convention coming in vacation season that the committee were able to secure Mr. Root for these lectures. The lecture which he calls "The Story of Alice, a new excursion into the domain of musical expression," is his latest production, and at its recent production, before the Newberry Library association in Chicago, it was listened to with profound interest and pleasure. Mr. Root will also lecture upon the subject, "The Influence of the Public School Upon Future Singers and Musicians." These two lectures by so distinguished a musician and scholar will constitute a very strong feature of this convention.

Home Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Clark of 306 East Sixth street, have issued invitations for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Mabelle Clark and Robert J. Macdonald, which will take place at the home of the bride, Wednesday evening, June 6. The wedding service will be read at 7 o'clock and from 8 to 10 o'clock a wedding reception will be held.

Season Closed.

Miss Laura Frankenfield, who has been on tour since September in her own dramatization of Wilkie Collins' "The New Magdalen," called "Her Double Life," has returned to this city. Her mother was with her during the last weeks of her tour, and has also returned to Duluth. Miss Frankenfield has had a successful year and the Western papers have spoken most glowingly of Duluth's actress. She had planned to end her season in this city, but a nervous breakdown compelled the closing of her season at an earlier date than was planned. Miss Frankenfield will be in Duluth for the summer.

Personal Mention.

Miss Emily Campbell of Spokane, Wash., who is visiting her sister, Mrs. C. G. Howard of 209 South Seventeenth avenue east, has returned from Ontonagon, Mich., where she was the guest of friends for several days last week.

Mrs. P. M. Shaw, Jr., and daughter have returned from a several weeks' Eastern trip.

Events of Interest.

The Women's Alliance of the Unitarian church wil meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. William Burgess of 2017 East Second street.

The children's gymnasium class of the Young Women's Christian association will meet at the gymnasium next Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. The "whole bunch" will go to Lester Park for a picnic. The noon luncheon, a true picnic one, will be eaten out of doors, and a special invitation is extended by Miss Roberts, director of the physical department, to the mothers of the children to be present. One more meeting of the class will be held Tuesday of the following week.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Smoked whitefish, 12½ cents a pound.

Smoked herring, 12½ cents a pound.

Fresh pickerel, 10 cents a pound.

Cottage cheese, 12 cents a pound.

Strawberries.

First bunch of lilacs.

The only interesting feature of the market these days is strawberries. The most desirable ones are marked, "10 cents straight" and the interesting thing is to see if you can't make the market man give you three for 25 cents. Early in the season when berries were remarkable, everybody firmly believed that they were the very finest berry that nature ever produced, but now when you have them for the first course at breakfast and the last thing at dinner and the inevitable shortcake for lunch who cares for strawberries. For a dish of round small, luscious red and ripe raspberries with thick yellow cream, one would trade the market full of strawberries.

The fish market remains good with plenty of variety for choice and the lilacs fragrant, and beautiful and satisfying are here is small quantities.

Kirschwasser Excellent Tonic for the Digestion

By MRS. EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Dear Mrs. Telford:—

Will you be good enough to publish recipes for using orange flower water and kirsch? Have had two bottles brought me from the other side, and am ignorant of their use. H. H.

The kirchwasser, more familiarly known as "kirsch," of which you speak, is an excellent tonic and digestive liqueur distilled from black cherries. Owing its origin to the Germans, it has become very popular throughout Europe and is rapidly gaining favor in this country. It is used as a beverage in plain form or in punches, sherbets, creams and omelets is increasingly popular among the best cooks.

Kirsch Sherbet.

Make a quart of pure sugar syrup as sweet as desired, mix with it the same quantity of white wine, beat well with a wooden spoon, then put in the freezer. When quite stiff add a half cup kirsch, mix and freeze again, then serve in glasses.

Kirsch Punch Iced.

Put into a basin a half pound of powdered sugar and a quart of cold water. Grate in the yellow rind of two small lemons and add the juice of four; beat well with a wooden spoon or paddle until thoroughly blended, add two gills of kirschwasser, stir again, then strain into a freezer; turn the freezer rapidly for three minutes, uncover and with a paddle scrape the punch from the sides and bottom of the freezer; re-cover, turn again for three or four minutes, and again detach the punch from the freezer as before; repeat this operation five times in all, then when ready serve in small punch glasses.

Kirsch Omelet.

While this omelet may be made on top of the stove it is rather easier to achieve in the oven, using a thick enameled metal dish which will heat quickly and retain the heat some time after leaving the oven. Have the oven quite hot before beginning the omelet. Spread the pan with cold butter, taking pains to see that the sides are well greased. Put the yolks of six eggs, six heaping teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar, and a tablespoonful of rich milk in a bowl and beat into a stiff cream. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, quickly add the yolks and sugar, pour into the pan in which it is to be baked, dust with powdered sugar and bake about ten minutes or until delicately browned. When done and glazed, throw around it a wine glass of kirschwasser, set it on fire and servo while burning.

Orange Flower Water.

This affords a delicate flavoring for cakes, ices and creams and is often used in fruit cake in addition to or in place of brandy. It is also one of the chief component parts of orgeat.

Orange Flower Cream.

Sweeten one pint of cream to taste. Put into a double boiler with four well beaten eggs, a tablespoonful of wine, a teaspoonful of orange flower water and the same amount of grated nutmeg. Stir until thickened, then take at once from the fire, cool and freeze. This same preparation makes an excellent filling for cream cakes or tarts.

Pistache and Orange Flower Meringues.

This is one of the daintiest ways of serving cream for a little dinner or lawn fete. The pistache nuts can be bought at the wholesale nut stores or in the Syrian quarter of the city. Shell and blanch two pounds of the little nuts, then pound in a mortar to a smooth paste, flavoring with the orange flower water. Make a vanilla cream, with or without eggs as preferred, add the nut paste and freeze. It is as well to buy the meringues at the bakers as it is not worth while to spend time and strength on them when they can be obtained readily. Press a spoonful of cream between the shells and servo on small plates.

Orgeat.

Boil two quarts of milk with a stick of cinnamon, then remove the spice and allow the milk to cool. Blanch and peel a quarter pound of Jordan almonds and when cold pound to a paste with orange flower water. Sweeten the milk, add the almond paste and let it cook a few moments only lest the almonds become oily. Strain through a fine sieve or linen tammy, leaving the milk smooth. Place on ice until ready to serve, which must be the day it is made, as it does not keep well. This is a refreshing drink in case of hay fever or influenzas of any sort and was formerly considered an indispensable refreshment for parties.

Both kirsch and orange flower water are used in the flavoring of pudding sauces.

Women Can Paper Walls

Not Difficult to Accomplish if a Few Rules Are Observed—Fresh Colors Beautify.

"There needn't be a dingy wall paper on the face of the earth if a woman has a few dollars and her health," said a woman noted for her cheerful home, "yet every one knows how old papers are allowed to hang on in homes where money is scarce and how dismal they make such homes appear. Frequently the carpets and furniture are in so good condition that fresh tinted paper on the walls would give the place that well kept, cheerful look which speaks prosperity to every visitor.

"Another thing—the mental atmosphere that new paper creates in a home of that kind would act like a tonic on the spirits of the family, and every one would be better for it. Faded papers are depressing and give the home a down at the heels aspect more than almost any other sort of interior decadence, for worn out carpets can be taken up and even a floor stained to look well, but for the walls there is no substitute for new paper. One need be hardly $2 out of pocket if they fail, and I know of one woman who never spends more than $1 on a room, the first cost of the papering board and brush not included.

"Her rooms, while not small, are only of moderate size, and she pays 10 or 12 cents a roll for the paper, and by using good judgment, and selecting ones among the many garish designs sold at that price, her walls are always prettily covered. Her paste costs so little that it is really no expense at all. It is made of rye flour and it takes little to cover a whole room.

"Tools for this work are few, but they need to be good ones. One must have a well-made board on which to cut the strips and lay them out for pasting. A carpenter will turn this out for a small price. One can be bought for a dollar and a quarter. The best brush is such as is used for white washing. A new whisk broom, a couple of soft cloths, scissors, a knife and a yard stick completes the list of necessaries, although a "T"-square is helpful when cutting off the lengths, for the cut is sure to be straight when marked by this.

"It hardly pays for any one to buy a paper costing less than 10 cents a roll, and the amateur paperer is the last person in the world who should try to hang the cheaper grade. Only a professional can manage it, for it is thin and tears even with the most careful handling after the paste has been spread on it.

"Too heavy paper is as hard as too light. The ten or fifteen cent one is easier to handle than the others. However much her heart is set on cartridge paper, she must pass it by, for it is so heavy that the walls will have to be sized in order to make it stick, and, moreover, the edges will need to be butted; that is, trimmed close and laid on the wall so as just to meet. With ordinary paper but one edge of a strip needs to be trimmed, and that edge is lapped over the margin of the last strip on the wall. New paper can be put on over the old, if that still clings firmly to the walls, but it is best usually to soak and then scrape off the first layer.

"Then, with the room and paste all ready—and the latter is prepared like any other flour paste—mount the papering board on a couple of barrels, set the pan of paste and brush at the lower ends and have all the other tools near at hand. Having measured the wall to get the length of the first strip, mark this on the roll of paper, and by means of a T-square cut across the strip with a sharp knife. Now turn the cut length of the paper over and cover it with paste.

"Many prefer to trim the right edge of the roll and to paper a room from right to left. The beginning must be made in the corner. Most of the paperer's efforts are expended in laying the right hand edge in a straight line down the wall and in joining the upper edge properly to the ceiling. If, however, there is a moulding close to the latter, extreme care with the upper edge need not be taken. Whatever the conditions are, the strip must hang straight on the wall.

"Mount the step ladder, press the paper lightly with the hand along the top and right edges; a soft whisk broom should be used if it is wanted to make the paper smooth all over, brushing the middle out to each side. Should there be any blisters on the surface of the strip after this, it may be laid hold of with both hands at the lower edge and lifted out from the wall to a point just above them, and then let fall back into position and brushed down again.

"It is most economical to cut from two rolls as one works, unless the paper is plain. With every pattern paper it will be found that the difference in pattern on the two sides of the strip or the slight unevenness of all walls makes it necessary to do this, if one wants to match the strips with the least possible waste.

"Every one takes it for granted that matching must be done, but it is not realized how carefully. Take as a guide in cutting the strips some prominent figure or detail of the design that comes close to the ceiling line, and joining the same detail of the strip in hand closely to that, begin to straighten the right hand edge and top. It will be almost necessary to have the help of a second person in hanging the strips, for while one holds the paper in place at the top the other must lay the right edge.

"Fitting corners seems to present difficulties, especially when the last strip on one side wall has not quite reached the corner. Then the next strip must be made to fill this deficiency and lap over on the adjoining wall. It will sometimes happen that in joining the top edge of the paper to the ceiling in such a case, the strip will seem to get a bias swing out of line. To remedy this and keep the right edge properly matched, one may have to cut the strip across from the left margin at the point where there seems to be an unnecessary fullness, letting the upper edge of the cut slip down over the other. Part of the under edge is then cut off, and the other falls so perfectly into place below that no one would dream that the paper had been severed.

PATHETIC CASE AT NEW ULM

Dr. Humphry and Wife, Pioneers, Lose Their Mental Balance.

New Ulm, Minn., May 22.—A peculiar condition exists in the case of Dr. T. B. Humphrey of this county and his wife. They are both very old, the doctor being past 92 and both have suddenly grown very childish. He is possessed with the belief that his wife is the sister who died some years ago, and she has forgotten that she is his wife and accepts the belief that she is really his sister. They live in different places, and when he calls on her he always inquires for his sister.

Recently he called and his wife informed him that their parents had just died. Both of them were terribly affected with the sorrow that had come upon them, when in fact the parents have been dead nearly a half century. Mrs. Humphrey lives with her son, who is a paralytic and is unable to recognize any of the family, and is cared for by his wife, but the old lady believes that she has the care of the house on her hands and that the daughter-in-law is the hired housekeeper and the son is a man whom they have taken in because he had no other place to go.

Upon some things the aged doctor is rational, and in good physical health, and were it not so pathetic the case would be one of real humor, for the old people carry out the ideas they have created as if they were real facts. Dr. Humphrey came to this county in 1863, and gave the name to one of the townships of the county.

Imitation Jewels to be Worn With Summer Frocks

With the donning of the diaphanous summer gowns women feel the desire of some of the dainty neck chains or dog collars to wear with them; or, in the case of the evening gown, there is still the need of some pretty neck decoration. And the scores of stunning things now the product of the workers in imitation jewels answer the purpose beautifully and place many beautiful bits of jewelry within the reach of women with comparatively small means.

Some of these dog collars come as low as $3.50, while others are more expensive but once purchased will last a life time. Pearls which cannot be detected from the original article are made in the workshops of the Parisian manufacturer, where most of the imitation jewelry comes from. Rubies, sapphires and emeralds also are admirably copied and the paste diamonds, queen of all stones, when set in platinum cannot be told often from the real article.

One of the stones which is within reach of almost any woman is the turquoise matrix, and this is happily one of the best liked and most generally becoming to blonde and brunette alike. A festoon necklace set with these stones makes a most beautiful ornament and dresses up even the plainest of frocks. This can be said also of many other of these pretty trifles.

For more dressy wear, if a woman so desires, she can rival an Eastern princess on an infinitesimal portion of the sum if she invest in a few pieces of modern imitation jewelry. In fact, so general has the custom become of wearing paste jewels that scores of society women with unlimited wealth have gone to the trouble of having their own jewels copied exactly in the imitation, and have placed the others in a safe, not to be brought forth except upon some unusual occasion.

TROOPS ARE RETURNING

Repatriation of Russian Armies in Manchuria Progressing Well.

In Three Months Fully 400,000 Men Started Homeward.

Washington, May 22.—According to statements made in the Russian and foreign military press, the repatriation of the Russian armies in Manchuria is making good progress, and should be nearly completed in the course of the next month or two. During the twenty-one months ended Nov. 30, 1905, there had been carried eastward over the Trans-Siberian railway 20,000 officers, 1,270,000 men, 239,000 horses and over 1,600 guns, besides a vast quantity of stores and supplies. The number of reservists in this total is given by the Russian press at 400,000 men, representing 40 per cent of the effective strength. At the date of the ratification of the peace in October last the ration strength of the Russian armies in Manchuria was 1,050,000. There were with the field armies 12,000 officers and 917,000 men, besides 270,000 horses, excluding the Thirteenth Army corps, in process of transport eastward. In Japan there were over 74,000 prisoners, made up as follows:

Where	—Army— Officers.	Men.	—Navy— Officers.	Men.
Captured.
Port Arthur	485	28,000	117	7,787
Sakhalin	106	5,584	...	.....
Other places	457	23,676	311	6,197
Total	1048	57,320	428	13,984

Including hospital attendants, the total number of Russian prisoners in Japan was 74,815.

So far as the prisoners are concerned, the first detachment from Japan reached Vladivostok three days after the ratification of the peace, and the last on Feb. 19 of this year. There remained in Japan only a score or more of men who were too ill to leave Nagasaki; 1,801 Russian prisoners died in captivity. The demobilization of local troops and militia guarding the lines of communication appears to have followed immediately after the conclusion of peace. There remained some 500,000 officers and men to be carried home over the railway or by sea.

Between Nov. 14, 1905, and Feb. 13, 1906, that is to say, in the short space of three months, no fewer than 400,000 men are said to have entrained west of Irkutsk, and it was anticipated that this average would be exceeded during the three months March to June inclusive. By the end of the latter month, tabulating upon six through trains a day, and taking count of transport by sea, it was expected that the evacuation of the army would be concluded.

The first elements selected to proceed home were the cadres required for training recruits of the new levy—that is to say, 600 officers and 10,000 other ranks, and the transport of these numbers is said to have been completed by Dec. 8 of last year. The intention then was to carry home entire army corps one by one, upon a roster decided by political exigencies. But the Thirteenth army corps, which headed the movement was checked for some time near Lake Baikal in order to suppress disturbances, and a change then took place in the depositions. General Linevitch, the commander-in-chief in the Far East at the time, unfortunately decided to send home at the reservists first, and did not take the precaution of causing them to be accompanied by a due proportion of cadres. The reservists became involved in the political unrest of the moment, and caused serious disturbances, which the local troops were unable to repress. Isolated cases of insurrection also caused trouble between Omsk and Manchuria, and for six weeks the work of the railway was seriously interrupted. A state of siege was declared in the territory traversed by this part of the railway on Jan. 5 of this year, and traffic scale a month later.

The Thirteenth European, Fourth Siberian and First European army corps were all back in their quarters and demobilized by March 17 last. Divisions of the Tenth and Seventeenth European army corps followed next, intermingled with reservists of all the armies and various Cossack units. At the present date, so far as Russian statistics authorize an opinion, there should be five and a half army corps from Manchuria repatriated, together with all the reservists save those that have been sent, or are yet to proceed, by sea.

It was the intention at first to send only 40,000 men by sea, but these numbers grew to 100,000, and may possibly exceed this figure considerably. Seven Russian steamers were chartered to carry 12,146 men, while 35 foreign steamers, mainly German, were engaged to take 73,186 men, or a total of 85,632. It was expected that some of these vessels would return and take home more troops. Sea transport began in November last, and the first sea-borne detachments reached Odessa on Jan. 19 last. Besides some reservists and prisoners, the chartered vessels are carrying Cossack infantry and the fifteenth division of the Eighth army corps. The latter embarked at Vladivostock on March 16. These are all Russian figures, but they appear to have obtained credence on the part of at least one very wide-awake foreign general staff, and there is no reason to doubt their general exactitude. The conduct of this arduous operation by the Russian departments concerned deserves a tribute of admiration, and the thought that before long the balance of military power will be restored by a return to normal conditions in Western Europe is not of a nature to cause regret.

MAY REWARD FARMER.

Man Who Prevented Great Northern Wreck May be Remembered.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 22.—J. J. Hill has instructed the Great Northern representatives at Ashby to inquire into the circumstances of August Anderson, the man who saved the Winnipeg flyer last Monday night, and it is currently rumored that he is going to be handsomely remembered. Mr. Anderson is a farmer residing near the track, and when the veritable cloudburst occurred he at once surmised that a section of the railroad, where a culvert had been recently put in, might be endangered.

He started out with his lantern and found that the culvert had been inadequate to carry away the water in such a downpour, and the flood had washed away the earth under about 100 feet of ties and rails.

The Winnipeg flyer was already within hearing distance, and he stopped the train within a few yards of the danger point.

J. J. Hill was close behind in his special train, and a brakeman hurried back and signaled it to stop.

The washout occurred on a piece of level track, where the train ordinarily made very fast time, and but for Mr. Anderson's timely discovery the flyer would have been wrecked, and there is every probability that Mr. Hill's train would have crushed into it. Several passengers alighted and examined the washout while the brakeman was signaling Mr. Hill's train, and the two trains were then backed down to Evansville.

BIBLE IN 400 LANGUAGES.

Last Year's Output of the Scriptures Was 6,000,000 Volumes.

London, May 22.—The British and Foreign Bible society now distributes the Scriptures in no fewer than 400 languages. During last year the Bible was issued in the following new languages:

Ladakh, Singpho, Kuluvia, Mech (or Kachari), Zigula, Laotian, Saa, Bemba, Colloquial Arabic, East Santo, Bri-Bri.

Ladakhi is spoken on the Tibet frontier. Singpho is the language of the people residing among the hills in the Far East of Assam. Kuluvia is spoken on one of the islands in the New Hebrides. The people pay for these books in arrowroot. Mach is a dialect spoken by a quarter of a million people living on the plains of North Assam. Zigula is spoken by the Wa-Zigulas, who cover a largeareal in German East Africa, Laotian is spoken by the Laos tribes, who live in the interior of Annam, French Indo-China, and in order to print this special type has to be cast from designs that have been supplied by native scribes. Saa is spoken on the island of Mwala, one of the British Solomon Islands which have become Christianized. Bemba is spoken by the tribes living in Central Africa to the north of Lake Bangweolo. Colloquial Arabic is being prepared for the unlearned in Egypt, who do not understand classic Arabic. East Santo is another of the many languages spoken in the New Hebrides. Bri-Bri is the language of Indians near Panama.

At Winnipeg the society's depot supplied the Scriptures in forty-three languages to the polyglot stream of emigrants pouring into Sanada. Amid the babel of tongues in Johannesburg, Bibles in fifty-two languages had been sold, but the resources of the depot there were beaten when a newcomer to the "Golden City" asked for the Bible in Icelandic. There was a record output of the Scriptures last year, the volumes issued being only a few short of six millions.

SMALLEST MAN IN THE WORLD

Vernon Pierce, Living at Dunkirk, N. Y., Claims That Distinction.

Dunkirk, N. Y., May 22.—Vernon Pierce, said to be the smallest man in the world, is a resident of this city. He recently moved here with his mother, Mrs. Gertrude M. Pierce, who has a store in the Arcade building. Vernon is 41 years old, 42 inches high, and weighs 45 pounds. He wears a boy's No. 8 shoe. In facial appearance he is a middle aged man, but in voice, action and disposition, a boy of 8 or 10 years. His mother treats him as she would a child. He enjoys the company of children, and is happy when playing games with them. He is an inveterate smoker, and it is a great sight to see the little man puffing away on a large corn cob pipe.

Vernon was born at Fort Henry, N. Y., and weighed 2¾ pounds at birth. His father, long since dead, was a large, strong man, tipping the scales at 200 pounds. His mother and his two sisters are large women, none weighing less than 150 pounds, and one sister weighing nearly 200 pounds. Twenty years ago he toured the United States and Canada with Bates & Burnell, visiting every city of importance. He was at the Richmond hotel in Buffalo when that building burned with great loss of life, and ever since has lived in private with his family. His mother has declined many flattering offers from circusmen, declaring that so long as she is able to earn a comfortable living, "her little boy," as she styles him, shall stay with her.

Mrs. Pierce says that Tom Thumb and Count Rosebud, the Italian midget, both characterized Vernon as the smallest man they ever saw or heard of. Tom Thumb said to her, so she states: "Mrs. Pierce, put Vernon on the stage in my place and I'll go to unloading canal boats."

The Pierces lived in Buffalo for a number of years, and in Bath for some time.

A course, leathery complexion made unbeautiful by eruptions, calls for a general reform in living. The diet should be plenty of Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

INFANT FOUND DEAD

At Cloquet---Probably Suffocated by the Bed Clothes.

Cloquet, Minn., May 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilkisen of the reservation, was found dead in its bed Sunday morning. Indications pointed to suffocation by bed clothes and an investigation will be made. The funeral took place at the reservation yesterday afternoon.

Andrew Lunth, an old offender in the police court, was arrested Sunday for being drunk and disorderly. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $30 or thirty days in jail.

Frank S. Kemp returned from the State Medical University of Minneapolis Saturday evening.

On Friday, June 1, a number of the ladies of the Presbyterian church will assist at the Cloquet Lumber company's store. The church will receive a percentage of the day's sales.

The 3-months-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Johnson was buried Sunday afternoon from St. Andrews' church.

John Huseby spent Sunday with his uncle in West Duluth.

The Cloquet high school baseball team played the Blaine high school of Superior at Hammond park of that city. Cloquet lost by the score of 15 to 2.

Annual Meeting of American Medical Association---Annual Meeting of The First Church of Christ Scientists Boston, Mass., June 5-8, 1906.

For the above occasions the North-Western Line will sell excursion tickets to Boston and return at one fare plus $1. Tickets on sale May 31st to June 9th inclusive. Final limit for return July 15th, 1906.

On tickets reading through New York, a stopover of ten days may be had upon deposit of ticket with joint agent, and payment of fee of $1. For further particulars apply at City ticket office, 302 West Superior street, or address City Ticket Agent.

HAS THEM GUESSING

Sale of Bowery Property Excites Real Estate Brokers.

Location of Depot Would Affect Property Values Materially.

Real estate men in Duluth are going through mental gymnastics in their efforts to figure out the speculative value of Bowery property, if the report is true that the Lake Superior & Southeastern Railway company is the real purchaser of the two blocks of Superior street and Michigan street property, between Sixth and Seventh avenues west. If the railway interests have acquired the property, the real estate men say there is but one conclusion to draw, and that is, the land has been selected for a depot site. The real estate brokers are inclined to scout the idea that the property has been purchased for an out-and-out realty investment, because quite a number of the lots are unimproved.

In connection with the transfer of the property in the two blocks to the North Star Realty company, a transaction that was first mentioned in The Herald, Saturday evening, it is rumored that President W. F. Fitch of the South Shore road, who is one of the owners of the Metropolitan Opera house property, was approached recently by representatives of a railroad company to see if the owners of the theater property would consider an offer.

In the two blocks comprising 800 feet, there are now, it is claimed, about 575 or 600 feet, either sold or under option, to the North Star Realty company. Real estate men say that if it is the railroad company back of the purchasers, nothing would be more natural than for those interests to acquire all the land they possibly could by direct purchase, at the lowest figures obtainable, and then condemn the rest.

The lots already purchased in the blocks are said to have been purchased all the way from $400 to $500 a front foot, on Superior street. Each lot runs through to Michigan street. Bowery proprerpty, on the lower side of Superior street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues west, is said to have been sold recently for $1,250 a front foot, but at that figure there is little if any Superior street frontage in that locality for sale. It is claimed that some owners would refuse $1,500 a front foot. One prominent real estate dealer has remarked that Superior street frontage in the central part of the city is practically off the market.

The sale of the Superior street frontage in the blocks between Sixth and Eighth avenues west has already had the effect of making the owners of the property on the north side of the street between the two avenues named, tighten hold on their own frontage, as the prospect of a depot on the other side of the street is an alluring one, when considering probable future values.

No record has yet been made of the purchase of any property by the Lake Superior & Southeastern Railway company east of Eleventh avenue west, where the street railway power house is located, but this, it is claimed, does not necessarily mean that the company did not intend to acquire a depot site nearer the business center of the city when the time arrived to make a move in that direction. The land in the two blocks mentioned is many feet above the level of the railroad yards, and the theory is being advanced that a depot may be erected on the Superior and Michigan street levels, with stairways leading to trains on trucks underneath.

Future developments as regards the recent deals will be watched with great interest.

It is Dangerous to Neglect a Cold.

How often do we hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and has gained its great popularity and extensive sale by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by all leading druggists.

COPPER IS STRONGER

Advance in Prices of Metal Owing to Heavy Demand.

Producers Are Sold for Months Ahead—The Copper Shares.

Copper prices are advancing and both the domestic and foreign situations are such that there is reason to look for a further advance. There is little if any spot copper in the market and even future contracts are being made with some little difficulty. George L. Walker says in his weekly letter:

"Copper continues to show great strength. Domestic and foreign prices advanced during the week as the result of an increased demand for the metal. Lake is held at 18¾ to 19 cents per pound, electrolytic is 18½ to 18¾ cents and casting is 18¼ to 18½ cents per pound. Several of the large producers are practically out of the market, so far as delivery in nearby months is concerned. They have made sales at ruling prices for delivery in August and September. One large producer says: 'We cannot quote prices on electrolytic as we are virtually out of the market for the present. Our product is sold for several months ahead. There is no cessation in the demand for the metal.'

"An instance of the demand for copper ahead, is the call for proposals by the United States government for a supply of 2,600,000 pounds of the best Lake Superior copper for the Washington navy yard, to be delivered in monthly installments of 200,000 pounds up to June 15, 1907. Doubt is expressed in certain metal circles as to whether the government will obtain satisfactory bids for delivery so far ahead, owing to the present scarcity of the metal. One lake producer says: 'I would not undertake to fill the order at any price. There is too much red tape in dealing with the United States government.'

"Producers and selling agents state that there is very little, if any, spot copper on the market, and, furthermore, that very little business is conducted on the spot or cash basis. Consumers as a rule make contracts for their requirements several months ahead.

"It is estimated that over 95 per cent of the trade is conducted on the future basis. Manufacturers would find it extremely hazardous to adopt a hand to mouth policy in buying their supplies, especially in a situation like that which exists at present, when the consumption is running ahead of production. One selling agency states that the proportion of cash or spot sales during the year amounts to less than 2 per cent of their total sales. The belated buyer has great difficulty in filling his requirements at present, and is able to get his supplies only in small lots, for which he has to pay premium prices.

"Considerable excitement was caused early in the week by the sharp advance in the London quotations for spot G. M. B. copper. The rise was caused by the hasty covering of shorts in this particular brand.

"European copper buyers have been influenced for some time in their speculative dealings by the theory that there were large hidden supplies of the metal stored in this country and China which were sooner or later expected to come on the market. Metal interests say that these alleged hidden stores are purely imaginary. The problem, they say, which now confronts the trade is to get enough copper to supply the demand. The demand for copper is apparently ahead of the supply, and while this condition exists high prices are bound to prevail. Good authorities say there is nothing in the outlook that would indicate a lessened demand for copper for some time. On the other hand we can anticipate a greater demand than ever before.

COPPER SHARES

"The Boston coppers as a whole have displayed much strength during the past week. The sharp losses in Atlantic and in Parrot were due to special causes, not to general conditions. Their declines had remarkably little influence on the general list. Unless the metal market suffers a sharp break, of which there is not the remotest evidence, there is only one way for the local copper stocks to move, and that is upward. These stocks have been sold at a standstill. All the speculative holdings that were not generously protected have been wiped out.

"The coppers are held now by people who intend to keep them for permanent investment, or at least for a long pull. It must be remembered that a large part of these holdings were purchased at considerably lower prices, and that the present dividend rates give an unusually large rate of income. Even were the dividends to be reduced many of these holdings would not be sold, as they would still return better than the average income.

"There is a strong bear party in the market, which talks very discouragingly, even if it does little active work. It is good opinion that a large short interest exists in the copper stocks, and that the shorts have been attempting to cover as far as possible, but with little success.

"To this pressure is attributed the lack of response to favorable trade and market conditions. If this view of the situation is correct, and there is scarcely any doubt that it is, it is merely a question of time when the shorts in stocks will have to cover, as have the shorts in the London copper metal market."

GIRL STEERS

Biggest and Fastest Sailing Ship Across the Atlantic Ocean.

New York, May 22.—Miss Renie Rickmers, pretty, talented, and only 20 years of age, has the distinction of steering across the Atlantic the biggest and fastest sailing ship afloat, the R. C. Rickmers, which has just arrived in this port.

The ship is named after the owner, who is the head of a big shipping concern in Bremen and the father of the pilot.

The ship is 450 feet long, 54 feet wide, and 31 feet deep.

With a net tonnage of 5,360 tons, it is constructed of steel, bark rigged and is equipped with an auxiliary engine which drives it through calm at a five knot clip.

In good sailing weather it can make seventeen knots.

Soon after the ship left Bremen twenty-three days ago Miss Richmers begged her father to be allowed to take the wheel. Her request was granted, for she is no novice at handling a vessel, having sailed since she was a little girl. Never before, however, had she guided so big a ship, but never seemed to tire of holding the Rickmers to its course.

There were days when giant seas boarded the vessel and the spray was driven the full length of the ship, but Miss Rickmers donned a "Sou'-Wester and a slicker," and stuck to her post.

WOMAN FAINTS IN COURT ROOM

When Girl Charged With Murder Tells Story of Ill Treatment.

New York, May 22.—Josephine Terranova today took the witness stand in her own behalf at her trial on the charge of having murdered her aunt.

The defendant said that she came to this country when 8 years old, going to live with her uncle and aunt, the Reggios.

"I did not go to church or school," she said, "for several years after I came to America. My uncle and aunt would not let me. I wanted to go. I did everything, washing, scrubbing, everything, and sometimes there were ten, eleven, sixteen boarders in the house."

"Do you remember one winter morning, when you about 11½ years old?"

The girl replied that she did; that her aunt had taken her to the uncle's room that day.

"That is what I am on trial here about," she added.

As the girl told of her uncle's treatment a woman spectator fainted and the court proceedings were interrupted by the resulting commotion. The girl hesitated in giving her testimony, saying that she was ashamed to speak it.

She said that her aunt had forced her to obey her uncle and had beaten her, breaking a stick during one of the whippings and making the witness so sick that she went to bed. The girl said she was never permitted to play with other children and was forbidden to talk English or associate with the boarders in the house. She said she wanted to go to her mother but was not permitted to do so.

ASK BIG DAMAGES.

Two Pitmen Sue Wallace Contracting Company on Personal Injuries.

Two personal damage suits have been filed in United States court against the Wallace Contracting company as a result of an accident which occurred on July 25 last on a stripping contract at the Pillsbury location between Hibbing and Chisholm. The complainants in these actions are Sam Morenelli, who sues for $21,000, and John Petti, who asks $5,000 damages.

The complaint in each suit is almost identical with the other. Both were employed as pitmen on the stripping shovel and a heavy portion known technically as a "chair" fell off. These two men, with others, were ordered to put it on. They claim they did not know the danger and while so at work, the "chair" fell upon them. Each sustained a fractured and crushed leg and have since been laid up.

Morenlill claims that because of this crushing of his leg that member will be fully an inch and a half shorter than before and he will never again be able to earn as much money as he formerly did.

PRESBYTERIANS TO ASK CONGRESS

To Stop All Appropriations for Sectarian Purposes.

Des Moines, May 22.—The Presbyterian general assembly today voted to authorize Moderator Hunter Corbett to name a committee of ten ministers and eleven elders, one of whom shall be from the Cumberland Presbyterian church in case union is effected to draft a plan for consolidating all the boards of the church into one organization, to be divided into executive, legislative and judicial departments.

A resolution was offered by Dr. A. Trumbell Lee of Philadelphia, memorializing congress to stop appropriations for sectarian purposes. This is the outgrowth of the recent charges in congress that Catholics and Lutherans are receiving substantial assistance from the government in their religious work among the Indians.

The resolution was referred to the committee on bills and overtures and it will undoubtedly be adopted by the assembly. The assembly today voted to combine with the Hungarian Reform church and the Reform church in the United States (German) in Hungarian religious work. These organizations were invited to name committees of three each, to serve with a similar committee from the general church, in carrying out that work. About 44,000 Hungarians come to America yearly and the desire is to bring them into Presbyterian churches.

CITY BRIEFS.

Greysolon Camp R. N. A. will meet tonight in Irwin-Sloan hall.

John W. Boardwell, a petit juror, who was absent from duty May 15, has been discharged by Judge Ensign in contempt proceedings. Boardwell produced evidence to show that he was ill and unable to appear and the court merely deducted $3 for that day. By consent of both parties the case in which Boardwell was sitting was decided by eleven jurors.

PROGRAM IS GIVEN OUT

Committee in Charge of Memorial Day Announces Plans.

Will Visit Schools Friday and Attend Church Service Sunday.

Preparations for the observances of Memorial day are complete.

One week from tomorrow is the date set aside for honoring the memories of the soldiers who have passed away, and decorating their graves.

The program for the day is left in charge of the committee appointed by the G. A. R. posts. The two local posts united this year, as usual, and left the arrangements in the hands of a joint committee, of which F. H. Barnard is chairman, and S. F. White, secretary.

Next Friday was chosen as the day for visiting the schools and holding patriotic services with the scholars, and on Sunday special services will be held in the First Methodist church.

Following is the official program as given out by the committee:

Friday, May 25, details of veterans of the Civil war will visit the schools, the high school at 9 a. m., and the other schools at 2 p. m.

Sunday, May 27, the G. A. R. posts, ladies of the G. A. R., and Women's Relief Corps, escorted by the Sons of Veterans, companies of the National Guards and Naval Reserves will attend services at the Methodist church at 10:30 a. m. They are invited to attend vesper service at 5 p. m. of the same day at St. John's Episcopal church, Grand avenue east.

Wednesday, May 30, at 10:30 a. m., the usual memorial exercises and the strewing of flowers on the graves of the soldiers buried there, will be held at Forest Hill cemetery, by the posts. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock a parade of the G. A. R., attended by the police, fire department, Sons of Veterans, National Guard and Naval Reserves, will move from the Federal building on First street to the Armory, where a public meeting will be held, commencing at 2:30. Immediately after this the usual ceremony of strewing flowers in honor of deceased sailors will be held at the piers of the canal.

By order of the committee.

F. H. BARNARD, Chairman.

S. F. WHITE, Secretary.

CANDIDATE FROM RANGE

James Sullivan May Run for Sheriff on the Republican Ticket.

James Sullivan of Virginia will probably be a candidate for sheriff of St. Louis county. The Virginia Enterprise has the following to say of his possible candidacy.

"Recognizing the fact that the 'scrap' for the office of sheriff has nailed two or three of the Duluth candidates to the cross and made much brighter the chances of a range aspirant for the position James Sullivan, of this city has made announcement of his intention of filing for the Republican nomination at an early date. And we will give the Duluth bunch timely warning that they will have to hotfoot some one to keep out of the way, as Jim is accredited with being a regular 'cyclone' when he starts."

BALL PLAYERS GO ON STRIKE

Hancock Men Want Stevens Reinstated Before They Will Play.

Hancock players have gone on strike.

INFLUX OF FOREIGNERS

To United States Regulated Largely by the Labor Market.

Senate Discusses Bill Amending Present Immigration Laws.

Washington, May 22.—Mr. Dillingham, chairman of the committee on immigration, today called up in the senate the bill amending the immigration laws.

Presenting the merits of the measure, he said it was intended to strengthen the law of 1903, which is working admirably. He did not accept some of the popular theories concerning immigration, but held to the belief that the influx of foreigners is regulated by the labor market—that in dull times, the number is small and in good times large, as, for instance, 1,026,000 in 1905 as compared with 229,000 in 1898. He also found encouragement in the fact that a vast majority, over 80 per cent, of the immigrants are between the ages of 14 to 45, or at the age when persons are least liable to become public charges. This fact he considered not only reassuring to those who fear an influx of paupers, but also an indication that those who came to our shores came on their own initiative.

The Vermont senator also found encouragement in the fact that many of the immigrants, especially those from Italy, return to their homes after spending the working season in the United States.

The senate directed the committee on privileges and elections to investigate the effect of yesterday's decision by the supreme court in the case of Senator Burton. The resolution was offered by Senator Hale, and read as follows:

"Resolved, That the committee on privileges and elections be directed to examine into the legal effect of the late decision of the supreme court in the case of Joseph R. Burton, a senator from Kansas, and as soon as may be to report their recommendation as to what action, if any, shall be taken by the senate."

The resolution was adopted without debate.

The senate passed the following bills today:

Authorizing lessees in Yellowstone National park to mortgage their property.

Forbidding the carriage in interstate commerce of falsely stamped articles of merchandise made of gold and silver.

SECURITY, CONVENIENCE, PRIVACY.

SAFE DEPOSIT BOXES, $3.00 PER YEAR.

THE WOMAN WHO WALKED AT NIGHT

A GHOST STORY

By M. E. M. Davis.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles).

As Sinclair drew near Mrs. Lawson's house, he slackened his somewhat nervous pace, and halted with an air of indecision. But Mrs. Lawson caught sight of him from the porch where she sat, with a huge handbell on her knee, waiting for her boarders to come home for supper.

There was a shade of embarrassment on his handsome face.

"Mrs. Lawson," said Sinclair, with visible effort, "I came by to see if you would take Katharine and myself to board—"

"In the name of the blessed Lamb!" ejaculated Mrs. Lawson, staring at him over the gate pickets, "whatever has happened? What do you want to go anywhere and board for? Ain't the Catalpas—"

"It is a wrench to me to leave the old place," Sinclair interrupted, "and my father will be very lonely now that my mother is dead. But Katharine has set her heart on it, and if you will take us—"

"I haven't a sign of a room left, Alick," Mrs. Lawson broke in, "except the room on the roof," she added dubiously.

"Well, what is the matter with the room on the roof?" demanded Sinclair, whimsically.

He threw back his head as he spoke, and screwed his eyes up at the box-like structure planted on the roof of the low cottage.

"Nothing," returned Mrs. Lawson, hastily, "nothing at all, except that it is so small. Katharine would never—"

"All right! I'll take it at your own price, Mrs. Lawson."

Sinclair slackened his pace again as he approached the gate which opened into the quiet garden at the Catalpas. His heart beat violently. He lifted the latch with as little noise as possible. But, as he had foreboded, the slight sound startled his wife. She sprang with a sharp cry from the bench where she was sitting, pressing her hand to her side and trembling from head to foot.

"My poor Katharine!" exclaimed her husband, catching her in his arms, where she lay pallid and almost lifeless.

She was very beautiful, the golden-haired girl whom Alick Sinclair had brought, a bride, to his father's house less than two years before. The mysterious malady which developed shortly after her marriage, and which continued to baffle her physician, had robbed her cheeks of their color and bloom. But it added an indescribable charm to her delicate face and fragile figure. An unearthly expression dawned into her large blue eyes—a prescient gaze, as if her vision, like her sense of hearing, had become abnormally acute. Something almost akin to awe filled those around this exquisite young creature at sight of her strange and inexplicable sufferings. She had, apparently, no bodily ailment. But the slightest irregular sound thrilled her with nervous alarm; her attenuated frame shook with convulsions at any unexpected appearance; she paled at a whiff of unaccustomed perfume. She ate but little, and seemed to have lost the faculty of sleep. Latterly, a morbid distaste for the old Sinclair homestead had possessed her. She breathed with difficulty within its lofty walls; she was oppressed by the atmosphere of its shadowy garden.

The same night saw them installed in Mrs. Lawson's room on the roof.

The room was small. A four-posted, mahogany bedstead, with balduchin and side steps, occupied at least one-quarter of the floor space.

Sinclair, seated on the side of the bed, smiled as he compared this cramped rookery with his wife's ample dressing room at the Catalpas. But he felt an unwonted lightness of spirit. He could see the reflection of Katherine's face in the mirror opposite. She stood with her back to him, brushing out her long hair. There was a look of content on her white brow; he even fancied a touch of color in her lips; her golden hair seemed to have regained somewhat of its lost luster.

"She was right," he thought; "the change has already helped her."

He watched with delight the rythmic motion of her slender arms. Meanwhile he chatted gayly of his boyhood days, and the recollections aroused by Mrs. Lawson's motherly gossip. Katharine listened, turning from time to time with a nod or a smile.

"Once, I remember," he went on, "Mrs. Lawson came to the Catalpas with a—"

He stopped amruptly, staring confusedly into space. He passed his hand across his forehead and continued his story. But the words were uttered mechanically. Was there—he was asking himself—was there something moving between Katharine and himself? Something faint and shadowy?—cloudlike? Misty? Yes! No. He shut his eyelids tightly and opened them again. Yes! He could see it plainly now, the gray-clad figure of a woman with head drooped to her breast and arms hanging at her side. It—she—was tall and slender; a veil drawn over her head concealed the upper part of her face, leaving visible only a sharp chin and pale, compressed lips. She paced slowly back and forth, from the window opening upon the roof to the washstand set against the opposite wall, pausing slightly at each turn, and passing through the lamp-stand as if it were not there. His heart froze in his breast. He looked at his wife, now winding the heavy coil of hair about her head.

"My God!" he groaned, inwardly, "now Katharine will turn around! She will see it! The shock will kill her! She will die! She will drop dead before my eyes!"

Even while he strove to utter the word of warning which his paralyzed tongue refused to frame, she came across the room, touched her warm lips to his forehead, and passed on to the washstand. She stood laving her slim hands; the woman! the thing!—Sinclair knew not how to name it—continuing its measured tread, turned at the window, crossed the intervening space, and paused for a second beside her. The floating ends of the veil, as if blown by an invisible breath, fluttered above Katharine's head and lay like a white vapor on her golden hair.

"Katharine!" the words burst involuntarily from his lips. He sprang forward with outstretched arms.

"Did you speak, Alick?" asked his wife, looking over her shoulder.

"Yes—no—that is,—"he stammered, a cold sweat beading his forehead.

The visitor had resumed her ghostly walk.

"Dear Alick," said Katharine, caressingly, "I know you must be tired. I will be ready for bed in one moment."

"She sees nothing! She hears nothing! Oh, thank God!" thought Sinclair, turning his hot eyes from the white-robed figure kneeling in prayer by the bedside to the gray-clad shadow moving up and down the room.

Katharine nestled like a tired child among the pillows and fell instantly asleep. Her husband hung over her in an agony of amazement and incredulity. Could it really be that she was sleeping? Was she not rather dead? Her regular breathing, the smile on her slightly parted lips, the soft abandonment of her limbs, reassured him. Yet, how strange! How long since she had slept thus! "Thank God!" he breathed again, drawing the lace netting over her.

Then it came nearer, steadily nearer. He saw behind the veil a pair of dark, sad eyes. A chill sensation quivered along his veins. He struck out savagely—at nothing. He whirled about; it had passed through his opposing body and was already nearing the window.

"I am certainly going mad," he muttered, staggering back with upthrown arms.

The short summer night passed with lagging monotony. Suddenly the watcher felt his tense nerves relax. It was gone. A fresh breath, as of coming dawn, stole in through the latticed window. He sank upon the bed with a long-drawn breath of relief.

He was awakened by hearing Mrs. Lawson moving about in the hall below. He arose swiftly and descended the stair.

"Mrs. Lawson," he demanded, abruptly, laying his hand on her shaulder, "is there anything—has anything ever been said about the room on the roof?"

"Don't say a word, Alick," she interrupted in an awe-struck whisper. "I can see it in your face. She hasn't walked before, not that I know of, since my mother saw her, and that was before you were born. I've never seen her myself. I never dreamed that she was walking yet. Lord, what have I done? I didn't mean to put you there. Poor Katharine—"

"Don't worry, Mrs. Lawson," he said, kindly. "Katharine has seen nothing as yet; but I have." He smiled grimly, yet with a certain sense of relief. "At least," he thought, "it is not quite madness. What does it mean?" he asked aloud. "Who was it—she?"

"They say," returned Mrs. Lawson, still speaking in a whisper, "that old Squire Lawson, my husband's grandfather, had that room built as a sort of jail for his young wife, who went out of her mind, poor thing, and no wonder, for the squire was a terrible old man! He took her baby from her and shut her up in that room and kept here there by herself until she pined away and died. My husband clomb out on the roof once when he was a boy and saw her through the window walking up and down. She had a well on her head. That was before she died. After she died she came back and kept on walking just the same. All the Lawsons used to see her. I never saw her myself, but my mother did once. That was before you were born." Mrs. Lawson was sobbing and wringing her hands. "You must take Katharine Sinclair away before she sees her. It would kill her. But don't say anything about it outside, Alick. My boarders would all leave me. I would be ruined."

Sinclair soothed the excited old woman into quiet. Then he remounted the stair. Katharine, in her white dressing gown, met him on the landing.

"I missed you when I awoke, Alick, dear," she said. Where were you?"

"Katharine," he began with studied carelessness, "I find this room very small; don't you? And Mrs. Lawson is well-meaning, but she is tiresome, good soul! I think I will look up more comfortable quarters during the day. Can you be ready to leave here this afternoon?"

She placed her hands upon his shoulders and held him at arm's length for a moment without speaking. Her eyes were brimming with mischief; a smile danced about her red lips.

"Alick," she said, "I know why you wish to go away. You are afraid of the woman who walked here last night. Did you think I had not seen her?"

Sinclair's jaw dropped. He stared at her with an amazement which was almost ludicrous. But before he had recovered himself sufficiently to speak Mrs. Lawson came panting up the stair and thrust a pallid face in at the door.

The house was on fire! In an incredibly short time the old wooden building was laid in ashes.

Sinclair and his wife returned to the Catalpas. It was Katharine who insisted, with a sort of gay perverseness, upon this. But even as they passed under the arched gateway the mysterious gloom fell back upon her. Sinclair, now almost as morbid as herself, could have sworn that he saw its descent in visible form. Her hair on the instant became dull and lifeless; her cheeks fell hollow; the red on her lips changed to a gray pallor.

A moth fluttered against her bosom. She fled, palpitating with terror, across the old garden.

Sinclair stood, hardly a month later, looking down on his wife's upturned face. Once more she slept profoundly. A mocking-bird whistled in a catalpas tree by an open window. The stricken man frowned and lifted instinctly a warning hand, but dropped it, remembering.

"What does it all mean?" he questioned, stooping to the face on its coffin-pillow.

The dead lips smiled, but withheld the response.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Predictions of Rain for Entire Belt Causes Heavy Selling.

Flax is Very Active in Duluth—July Option Stronger.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 22.—Wheat declined in all the American markets today on predictions of rain for the winter wheat belt. There was heavy selling in Chicago. Liverpool closed unchanged to ¼d higher, Paris ¼c lower and Antwerp unchanged.

The May option closed ½c lower in Duluth and Kansas City, 1¼c in Chicago, 1½c in Minneapolis, 1⅜ in New York, 1½c in St. Louis and ⅞c in Winnipeg. The July option closed ¾c lower in Duluth, Chicago and New York, ⅞-1c in Minneapolis and Kansas City, ⅝c in St. Louis and 1c in Winnipeg.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

General Selling Induced by Predicted Rain Makes Wheat Weak.

Chicago, May 22.—The wheat market opened weak today because of general selling which was induced by predicted rain in the wheat belt. The official forecast was for showers tonight and tomorrow, and the prospective improvement in the crop caused considerable selling by shorts. Commission houses were the best buyers. July opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 83⅝@83¾c, advanced to 83¾c and broke to 83¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 276 cars against 206 cars last week and 193 cars a year ago.

The market was weak all day, chiefly because of the weather conditions in the southwest. The low point for July was 82⅝. The close yas easy with July off ¾ at 82⅞@83.

Predicted rain also caused an easy corn market. July opened a shade lower to a shade up at 48⅛@48¼c, and declined to 47⅝@48c. Local receipts were 463 cars, with 325 cars of contract grade.

The low point for July was 47⅝ and the market was weak all through the session. The close was weak with July off ⅛@⅜ at 47⅝.

The oats market was easier in sympathy with other grain. The trade was dull. The July option opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 34@34⅛c and declined to 33¾c. Local receipts were 168 cars.

Provisions were steady on a firm tone in the hog market. July pork was 2½c higher at $15.75. Lard was 2½c lower at $8.62½. Ribs were up a shade at $9.07½.

Close: Wheat—May 85c; July 82⅞@83c. Corn—May 48¾c; July 47⅝c. Oats—May, 33½@⅝c; July 33½@⅝c. Pork—May, $15.60; July, $15.65. Lard—May, $8.50; July, $8.57½@8.60. Ribs—May, $8.95; July, $9@$9.02½. Rye—Cash 1⅓@65c; July 62@63½c. Flax—Cash northwestern $1.15; southwestern, $1.09; May, $1.09. Timothy—Cash, $11. Clover, Cash 41@54c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red 91c; No. 3 red 85@88c; No. 2 hard, 84¼@87c; No. 3 hard, 78@86c; No. 1 northern, 86¼@87¼c; No. 2 nohthern, 85@86c; No. 3 spring, 82@86c. Corn—No. 2, 49¼@⁰c; No. 3, 39c. Oats—No. 2, 32¾@33c; No. 3, 32½c.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, May 22.—The flour market is unchanged. Millers report a quiet tone to the flour trade. Shipping directions are fair but show a dropping off tendency. The weakness in wheat has caused buyers to hold aloof. Shipments, 29,488 barrels. First patents, $4.45@$4.55; second patents, $4.30@$4.40; first clears, $3.50@$3.60; second clears, $2.45@$2.55.

Duluth Car Inspection.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago—Wheat: The fighting point in July wheat, while the uncertainty continues in regard to general rains, appears to be around 83 cents. The market closed barely a shade under this figure, with the advance of Monday all lost. It is a natural market, to this extent, that the very strong upturn of Monday was on the continuation of the dry weather, while the selling back of the market today was distinctly on southwest rain reports. These rains are not at all general, covering northern counties of Kansas and portions of Nebraska. The bears in wheat took fresh courage quite as much from the forecast, which indicates showers over a large portion of the winter wheat states for tonight and tomorrow. Nothing more is heard of rust reports from today's reports and a St. Louis authority who has been over Oklahoma claims the state will raise 30,000 bushels of wheat. The entire soft winter wheat country east of St. Louis is entirely without rain fall. If this forecast for general rain fails, as many others have of late, the trade will again be in a shape to take hold for possibly a stronger turn than before.

Corn—July corn lost about ¾c for the day, and the September a shade more. The close was at a moderate rally from the low point of the session. There appears to be an uncomfortable feeling on the part of the small short sellers. This feature of the pit trade for the day was the open short selling by at least two very prominent operators in the trade. Commission houses appeared to have buying orders to absorb this corn at reasonable decline. The larger run of receipts does not seem to paralyze the trade, either in cash or futures. The Southwest rain reports and an easier feeling in wheat were the features which encouraged the short selling. The general buying was based on very small stocks; the weather, which is only partly broken, will put the trade in a strong position if the local bear leaders press the market for a little further break.

Oats—Conditions which took about ½ cent from oats prices today were much the same as in the leading markets, some increase in professional short selling, selling out of holdings by tailers who followed up the recent advance. From many sections in the oats regions the reports are discouraging on the new crop. Any important turn in prices from the present level must depend on whether or not the great oats raising states receive abundant moisture in the near future.

Provisions—It was not a big market in provisions at any time. Locals were inclined to sell some stuff in sympathy with easier grain trade. One leading operator sold pork moderately during the morning. Hogs closed at a gain of 2½ cents and the shipments of meats and lard are remarkably heavy. Everything points to natural strength in this market as soon as the principal owners of the property are ready to see it advance.

Secretary Smiley of the Kansas City Grain Dealers association, says: "Conditions are much worse than thought they could be ten days ago. In many counties they are still plowing up wheat. There will not be an average crop of 25 per cent harvested in the Western sections which includes many of the banner counties of a year ago."

REMARKS.

Notice the very heavy rain at St. Paul and Minneapolis. Rain in Kansas, Nebraska, and both Dakotas. Heavy rain over Minnesota.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

T indicates inappreciable rainfall. * For yesterday.  For twenty-four hours ending 8 a. m., 75th meridian time.

Note.—The average maximum and minimum temperatures and the average rainfall are made up at each center from the actual number of reports received. The state of weather is that prevailing at time of observation.

TAKING NO CHANCES.

Boston Herald: An old Vermont farmer, while on a visit to New York lately, was seized with a violent toothache, and, calling on a dentist, was informed that the tooth must be taken out, but that he had better have gas for the operation. He agreed to this, and then started to count his money.

The dentist somewhat testily remarked: "Oh, you need not pay me until I have finished."

"I reckon not," replied the farmer, "but if you're a-going to make me unconscious I'd jest like to see how I stand."

EMPRESS EMBARRASSED.

Kansas City Journal: The German empress recently had a somewhat disconcerting experience. While staying at one of the imperial hunting castles in Alsace she paid a visit to a village school a few miles from Strasburg. Before leaving she gave the pupils the customary permission to ask any request they pleased, with the promise that she would grant it if in her power to do so. Fully expecting the favor would take the form of a whole holiday or a supply of cakes, she was not a little embarrassed when one of the elder girls stood up and in a somewhat trembling voice asked that the French language might be taught in that school. Her majesty looked thoughtful, but realizing the necessity of keeping her word, she gave the permission, to the great delight of the pupils.

"Be busy about some rational thing—so that satan may always find thee occupied."—St. Jerome. To read Herald want ads. is a rational thing to do—and a thrifty.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Market Maintained a Waiting Attitude and Closed Lower.

List Was Under Pressure in the Last Half Hour.

New York, May 22.—The opening trading in the stock market today was without any show of animation. Gains and losses of ⅛c to ⅛c in the principal active stocks were indiscriminately mixed. St. Paul opened at a decline of ⅝ and Pennsylvania ½. Five thousand shares of Reading changed hands at an advance of ⅛.

Much the same tactics were resorted to revive trading as on yesterday, bull traders making a demonstration in the anthracite coalers to bring about a sympathetic rise in other stocks. Renewed offerings made their appearance as soon as St. Paul, Union Pacific and Copper had recovered to about yesterday's closing. Lackawanna added another ten points to its sensational rise, the price reaching 550. D. & H. got up 4. Central of Jersey 3, Reading 1¼ and Erie 1. Wabash preferred and American Ice also recovered 1 and New York, Chicago & St. Louis and United States Reduction preferred 1½. Northwestern fell 3 points, International Pump preferred 1⅛ and Illinois Central 1.

When the advances in the coalers were completed prices yielded slowly to below last night. Amalgamated Copper, Smelting and Canadian Pacific lost large fractions. There was a rise of 1¼ in Consolidated Gas and 1¾ in American Telephone. The market offered no other incident. Bonds were steady at noon.

Efforts of the professionals to make the usual scalping profits of the early afternoon dealings. Scarcely any of the favorites stocks fluctuated ⅛ and the entire speculation was nominal. Rock Island preferred gained a point. General Electric and Distillers Securities declined 1 and Smelting preferred 1½.

Some recovery from the low prices of the day followed a renewed rise in Reading to 133¼, but the general buying flattened out when Reading stopped rising. Manhattan dropped a point and United States Reduction moved up as much.

The drooping tendency carried Canadian Pacific and Smelting 1, International Paper preferred 1½ and Brooklyn Transit 2 over last night. The stiffness of the coalers again checked the drooping tendency. Tennessee Coal rose 2¾. Northern Pacific, St. Paul, Pennsylvania and Locomotive ran off a point and Amalgamated Copper 1½ late in the day and turned the list in sympathy. The closing was dull and easy.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed lower. In the last half hour the list was under pressure, this being particularly severe in Brooklyn Rapid Transit. The leaders sold this stock on a rumor that an attempt was being made to compel the company to carry passengers on Coney Island for 5c where 10c is now being charged. The list throughout the day maintained a waiting attitude, price changes being small in the active stocks. The coal properties were all strong, led by D. L. & W., with an advance of 12 points. In the industrial group U. S. R. & R. common and preferred were active and sharply higher. We look for a slow trading market.

Waldorf to Paine, Webber & Co.: Speculative comment continues to reflect considerable division of opinion regarding the immediate future of the market. The extreme dullness has a double significance. It denotes on the one hand lask of selling pressure and on the other the absence of the public. Both may be of only passing importance. Yet a rather numerous contingent of conservative brokers is either advising a waiting attitude or counsels the sale of the active stocks on a scale.

New York to Baker: This is proverbially a period of dullness, and this condition usually ends with a break in prices, based on a crop scare of some sort. This gives people an opportunity to buy stocks cheaply and is often followed by an upward movement which extends well into the following autumn.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Mohawk continues to show strength and it seems certain that the next dividend will be at least $3. Osceola also was in little better demand and the local traders are predicting that the July dividend will be $6. The rest of the stocks were too dull to mention and should be left alone, for the present.

Calumet & Hecla Dividend.

Boston, May 22.—The Calumet & Hecla Mining company directors today declared a quarterly dividend of $15 per share. This compares with $15 three months ago and $10 a year ago.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 22.—The cotton market opened quiet at unchanged prices to an advance of 1 point which was a little better than due on the cables. Prices soon eased off under continued realizing and bear pressure inspired by favorable weather and crop reports. After selling off to a net loss of about 2@3 points the market steadied to about the closing figure of yesterday on covering.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 11.50; middling gulf, 12.25. Sales, 200 bales.

Futures closed steady; closing bids: May, 11.39; June, 11.10; July, 11.14; August, 10.89; September 10.64; October, 10.59; November, 10.58; December, 10.60; January, 10.64; February, 10.65; March, 10.71.

RAILROADS

WILL MOVE WHOLE TOWN

Northern Pacific to Transfer Winnipeg Junction One Mile.

Milwaukee Pacific Coast Line Means Changing of Officials.

The Northern Pacific road will move the entire town of Winnipeg Junction, in order to avoid a controversy with the property owners and business men of the place, in the removal of its station a mile distant from the present point.

Anticipating the removal of the station and the tracks to a new location, the residents of Winnipeg Junction filed a protest with the railway commission and a hearing was held. The principal grievance of the property owners was that their holdings, which they had bought from the company, would be reduced in value.

The commission has received notice that the trouble will be adjusted satisfactorily to all concerned, and it will be brought about by the removal of the entire town to the new site. New lots will be given in return for the old ones, and the company will move the buildings at its own expense.

About forty fairly substantial buildings will be moved across the prairie about a mile. The town has about 200 inhabitants.

SEVERAL CHANGES.

Milwaukee Road Officials to be Transferred and Given New Positions.

Changes involving a dozen or more important officials of the Milwaukee road are to be made June 1, directly due to the construction of the Pacific coast line. The changes will take Assistant General Superintendent H. B. Earling from Milwaukee and the supervision of the Middle division to Minneapolis, where Earling will act as assistant general superintendent of the Northern district, succeeding E. D. Sewall, who will become vice president of the Milwaukee road in Montana.

H. R. Williams, former general manager of the Milwaukee system, is now president of the Pacific Coast Railway company, and Mr. Sewall will have charge of the eastern part of this road, working under President Earling, and will have his headquarters in Chicago. D. C. Chaney, for years superintendent of the La Crosse division, will be assistant general superintendent, succeeding Mr. Earling in Milwaukee. P. C. Eldredge, superintendent of the Prairie du Chein and Mineral Point division, goes to the position of superintendent of the La Crosse division. E. D. Wright, superintendent of the Northern division, will be in charge of two divisions under Mr. Eldredge. There will be no successor to Mr. Wright on the northern division.

"THE STORIED NORTHWEST"

An Interesting Descriptive Booklet is Issued by the Northern Pacific Road.

"Eastward Through the Storied Northwest," is the title of an attractive little booklet just issued by the Northern Pacific. It is written by Olin D. Wheeler in his usual interesting style, and tells of what a person traveling from Southern California up the Pacific coast to Washington points, and thence eastward via the Northern Pacific to the Twin Cities or Duluth may expect to see.

The Western railroads are accomplishing more in the way of forwarding the "See America First" movement than anybody or anything else. Reading Wheeler's latest booklet makes a person want to take the trip described, and to take it just as soon as he can. In his introductory remarks the writer says:

"It really appears as if an impression had been made upon the great annual hegira to Europe, and that is a reflex flow across continent to shores of the Pacific had be nestablished. Not only the increasing number of winter tourists to that region indicates this, but the growing inclination to make the Pacific coast in all its length the rallying point for annual gatherings and conventions, evidences the fact. Landscapes, climate, people, everything found there, is new, and the broadening and educational effects of such a journey are beyond statement."

ROADS TRANSFERRED.

Wisconsin Central Takes Over Southeastern and Owen & Northern Lines.

Milwaukee, May 22.—A Sentinel special from Madison, Wis., says: The Wisconsin Central Railroad company yesterday filed with the secretary of state an amendment to its articles of incorporation which authorizes it to take over the Owen & Northern and the Lake Superior & Southeastern Railroad company properties, running from Owen, Clark county, to Duluth, St. Louis county, Minn. The line passes through Clark, Taylor, Chippewa, Rusk, Sawyer, Washburn and Douglas counties in Wisconsin, and St. Louis county in Minnesota. The Central company has been engaged in building this branch for some time.

Cafe Car Well Patronized.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

State Loses Chenoweth Case; He May be Declared Insane.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—The jury in the case of Arthur P. Chenoweth, charged with breaking jail at Medora four years ago, returned a verdict of not guilty. The defense was insanity. Chenoweth is remanded to jail to await action of the state on an old charge of stealing $36,000 worth of Huidekoper's horses from his Stark county ranch in 1891. Huidekoper refused to prosecute, as he recovered the horses, and little other evidence is to be had, so the case will probably be dismissed. A warrant, charging Chenoweth with insanity has been issued and he will probably be declared insane by the local board and taken east by his mother. The state law permits this.

Oakes—Paul Hutsinpiller, a 16-year-old boy of this place, was drowned in Bear Creek, two miles north of town, while swimming. The boy, with a companion a year younger, "played hookey" and went to the creek for a swim. Young Hutsinpiller was not an expert swimmer, and, going beyond his depth, sank before the eyes of his horrified playmate.

Grand Forks—William Wirchawsky, aged 26 years, a Russian, who came here about a year ago, attempted suicide by taking a dose of acetic acid. He was found almost immediately and a physician succeeded in counteracting the effects of the poison. Information of insanity has been filed against the young man.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—Through alleged carelessness in turning on an old valve attached to a gas meter, one of the inmates of a lodginghouse in this city was nearly asphyxiated. His condition was discovered just in time to save his life. The victim is Andy Barnes, a homesteader, who has a claim a few miles north of here. He had occupied the room only a few days. The smell of escaping gas alarmed the inmates, who traced the smell to a room on the top floor. Just then groans were heard from the inside and on opening the door Barnes was found lying on the bed in an unconscious condition and the room filled with gas.

The gas company was notified and workmen made an investigation. They found that the gas was pouring through an unused pipe into Barnes' room. A physician was called who worked on the unconscious man for two hours before he declared him out of danger. It is alleged the janitor was to blame for turning on the wrong valve, but he denies this. A thorough investigation is being made into the affair.

Bonesteel—Henry Carson, a homesteader, living three miles south and one mile east of Dallas, S. D., committed suicide Monday morning. He was a single man, 35 years old, and shot himself through the head.

J. R. Kimball, who has been wanted in Gregory county for statutory crime, was arrested at Douglas, Wyo., and Sheriff Sprule left last evening to bring him back.

Salem—This community was surprised Saturday evening by the unexpected return to this city of Nicholas Krebs, who had been absent for almost two years without any of his relatives knowing of his whereabouts. At the time of his disappearance he had much money on his person, and it was feared he was foully dealt with.

He had been married the second time only a few months before his disappearance, and had moved with his family to Vancouver, Wash., coming back here in a short time to remain between trains and draw out of the bank all of his money. This was the last heard of him until Saturday night, when he dropped into town.

He has been in South America and is in the best of health and seems to have been prospering.

Carthage—By a practically unanimous vote citizens have authorized bonds in the sum of $4,000 for the construction of a new schoolhouse.

Sioux Falls—The First National bank of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis, have purchased a controlling interest in the State Banking & Trust company of Sioux Falls.

Chamberlain—Andrew Rekdahl disappeared from his home several days ago, and not the slightest trace of him has been found. He is $2.

OPPOSED TO THE EIGHT-HOUR BILL.

Washington, May 22.—A. C. Hayden, representing the Carnegie Steel company, opposed the 8-hour bill today before the house committee on labor. He said the enactment of the measure would drive every large institution now taking government contracts from that field and would turn over the manufacture of supplies of the government to the small contractor and would increase the cost of the same to the government from 12½ to 25 per cent.

SHOOTS GIRL WITH ARM AROUND NECK.

Springfield, O., May 22.—Alfred Davis, aged 30, fatally shot Hazel Reed early today, because the girl had refused to marry him, and then escaped. The shooting was done in front of the girl's home. With one arm about her neck he pressed the revolver to her side and fired.

FIRE AGAIN BREAKS OUT.

Lenz, France, May 22.—Fire has again broken out in the Courrieres mines, where the disaster of March 10 last occurred, resulting in the loss of about 1,200 lives. The new outbreak is causing galleries to fall in and the strictest precautions are being taken to assure the safety of the miners.

ACCUSED SET FREE

Judge Dibell Dismisses Murder Case Against Spejar and Sertich.

Last Criminal Case on Calendar is Called for Trial.

The murder case of the state against John Spejar and Joseph Sertich came to a sudden end this morning when Judge Dibell dismissed the action and the two accused men were discharged from custody.

The motion for dismissal was made by John H. Norton, who with J. D. Holmes defended Spejar and Sertich. It was based on the ground that the evidence introduced by the state was not sufficient to justify a verdict against Spejar and Sertich even were the jury to return one. Judge Dibell refused to entertain a motion for a verdict in favor of the accused men, but he said that according to the testimony produced by the state the court could not do otherwise than set the verdict aside were one returned for the state.

The murder of Charles Peterson on an unused road near the old townsite of Aurora several weeks ago was a mystery that the county authorities have not yet been able to solve to their satisfaction, although Pinkerton detectives have been engaged ferreting out the evidence. Spejar and Sertich, according to the testimony, were the last persons seen with Peterson, and the evidence connecting them with the crime was purely circumstantial.

Both men claimed they would be able to establish good alibis when their time came, but they will not now be called on to do so.

A large number of the friends of Spejar and Sertich were witnesses, called by the state to establish the fact that the two men were with Peterson at a late hour the night before his body was found in the snow by the police officer at Aurora. When Peterson's body was found it was evident that the murder had been committed only a short time before as the weather was intensely cold and the body was still warm. Death was caused by several bullet and knife wounds, the burned places on Peterson's clothing, indicating that there must have been a hand-to-hand struggle before he succumbed.

Earnestness on the part of one of the attorneys to strike out undesirable testimony caused some amusement during the trial of the case yesterday afternoon. Otto Johnson, a big husky hartender from Aurora was on the witness stand, and had answered one of the county attorney's questions more fully than the opposing counsel desired. J. D. Holmes, attorney for one of the accused men, jumped to his feet and, with emphatic gestures, demanded that the court "strike out" the answer. The witness could not understand English very well, and the excited gestures of the lawyer, together with the words "strike out," which he did understand, led him to believe that Mr. Holmes contemplated striking him. Shifting about in his chair in an uneasy manner, and keeping close watch of the attorney, the big witness doubled up his fists and squared himself to resist the attack that he thought was imminent. His actions were so unmistakable that they brought a general laugh, and County Attorney McClintock explained the situation and soothed the ruffled witness. The last criminal trial scheduled for this term was called after the murder case had been disposed of. John Kelley is being tried for grand larceny in the second degree. His case presents some very unusual features. In the first place the crime with which Kelley is charged was really committed in Superior, and in the second place, he had just committed a similar offense in Minnesota at the time he was arrested.

According to the story told by the state, Kelley and a friend got acquainted with R. C. McLean of Superior on the evening of April 15, while they were taking a drink in a saloon in that city. A conversation and several other drinks followed, during an interval between which the trio visited the rooms of Kelley's friend in the Terminal block. A little while later McLean suddenly missed his watch and chain, valued at about $40, and accused Kelley's friend of taking it. During the scufffle that followed Kelley ran out of the saloon, followed by his friend. McLean pursued and succeeded in having the friend arrested. He did not have the watch and was released.

The next day Kelley is said to have shown up in a Bowery pawnshop with the watch. The pawnbrokers had been warned, and the watch as recognized. The pawnbroker accused Kelley of stealing it when the latter is claimed to have seized a watch that another customer was about to leave as a pledge and skipped out. He was pursued and caught and landed in the city jail.

Although the offense with which Kelley is charged was realy committed in Superior, the state is prosecuting it under a not often used statute which provides that a person who steals property in another state and brings it into Minnesota may be prosecuted in this state for the same degree of the offense for which he would be liable in the state where the alleged stealing occurred.

Kelley is defended by John H. Norton.

VITAL WEAKNESS!

Longest established, most successful and reliable Specialist in diseases of men, as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records show.

We strive to cure the thousands of young and middle-aged men who are tortured by the woes of nervous debility. I have evolved a special treatment for Nervous Debility and special weakness that is uniformly successful in cases where success was before and by other doctors deemed impossible. It does not stimulate temporarily, but restores permanently. It allays irritation of the delicate tissues surrounding the lax and unduly expanded glands, contracting them to their normal conditions, thereby relieving all distressing symptoms. It tones up and strengthens the blood vessels that carry nourishment, thereby restoring health and strength. Meanwhile the patient realizes a great blight has been lifted from his life.

I make no misleading statements or deceptive propositions to the afflicted, neither do I promise to cure them in a few days in order to secure their patronage, but I GUARANTEE A COMPLETE, SAFE AND LASTING CURE in the quickest possible time, without leaving injurious after effects in the system, and at the lowest cost possible for Honest, Skillful and Successful Services. PREDICTS A REVOLUTION

Professor Milukoff Despondent Over Situation in Russia.

Fears Czar Will Not Take Advantage of Opportunity.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—Prof. Milukoff, the spokesman of the Constitutional Democrats, according to a thoughtful article published by him in the Rech today, is rather despondent over the prospect of staying the tide of revolution in the country. He bases his pessimism upon the conviction that the government will not yield a full constitutional regiment, with which, he says, it is still possible to calm the passions of the people. He regards Premier Goremykin and his cabinet as mere puppets, doing the bidding of the powerful influences at court, and believes that Emperor Nicholas is destined to throw away the opportunity, as Louis XVI did, of transferring the country to a peaceful, parliamentary regime. This the professor considers, to be the government's last chance, and that a refusal to do so will cut the ground from under the Constitutional Democrats and strengthen the revolutionary elements, which are preaching that parliamentarism is an illusion, and make anarchy and a bloody revolution inevitable. Nevertheless, the Constitutional Democrats will persevere in their attempt to place the country on a solid, constitutional basis, and if they fail, and disaster follows, the responsibility will not be upon their shoulders.

The central committee of the Constitutional Democrats has completed the drafts of the laws to be introduced in parliament, including universal suffrage, irrespective of sex, and equal rights for all citizens; laws guaranteeing immunity of the person, and inviolability of domicile without due process of law, providing also the guarantee of habeas corpus and specifically excluding all exceptions.

While no party at court favors a complete surrender to the demands of the lower house of parliament, the Trepoff cabal, which secretly favors a dissolution of parliament, is not strong enough for the moment to seriously urge such a course. The emperor continues well disposed, and is supported not only by many nobles at the court, but by other big landed proprietors throughout the country, who now seem fully convinced that unless the peasants can be measurably satisfied by a compromise on the land question, a revolt of the peasants against the nobles will be aroused, which will ruin the latter, as the peasants will forcibly seize their property, to the accompaniment of horrors and excesses.

The provincial papers are filled with advertisements, offering estates for sale, inserted by property owners, who, desirous of saving their property, are ready to accept what they can get, and flee from the country.

BIG SCANDAL MAY DEVELOP

Over Enormous Bill for Use of Autos in Frisco.

San Francisco, May 23.—The extortionate charges for automobile hire during the first two weeks following the fire is likely to develop into a scandal of huge proportions before the finance committee finishes with auditing the accounts. In the tabulated statement filed with the committee of forty on Saturday there appears a charge of $157,590 for automobile service. It is a well known fact that there are not more than 1,000 machines in San Francisco and that all of them could be bought outright for a sum not much in excess of the amount charged for the hire of probably half the number.

Only 129 claims were presented to cover this claim. The average per day was only $35, but in many instances the rental was even higher. What the committee will do with this item is still undetermined. In the same table is a statement of charges for milk, butter, eggs, bread, vegetables, drugs, hay, grain and clothing. The total cost for these necessities does not equal the cost of the hire of automobiles. Some of the garages have relieved the committee from embarrassment by generously donating the amount of the demand to the relief fund.

SHOT IN THE HEAD.

Young Farmer Mistaken for a Fox Near Montevideo.

Montevideo, Minn., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—August Ost, a young farmer, was accidentally shot in the head, Monday, by his cousin, Emil Schoning. They were out fox hunting and Mr. Ost was on his knees and hands a short distance away, when suddenly he raised his head; and, Mr. Schoning, thinking he spied a fox, fired his gun. The shot lodged in the back part of Ost's head. The doctor says his brain is not injured and that he may recover.

STORY DISCREDITED.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—The Nasha Shisha today published a report to the effect that the forests belonging to the crown had been sold to a Berlin syndicate for $25,000,000. There is no confirmation of the story, which is discredited.

FREIGHT HANDLERS RETURN.

Elmira, N. Y., May 23.—The Erie freight handlers, who have been on strike for higher pay since Monday, returned to work today. They get back their old places, but at the same pay as heretofore.

GETTING INFORMATION FROM RAILROAD OFFICIALS IS A HARD PROPOSITION

President Cassatt's Assistant Proves an Unwilling Witness.

Owns Stock in a Large Number of Coal Companies.

A Sharp Controversy Occurs With Members of Commission.

Philadelphia, May 23.—High officials of the Pennsylvania railroad are among the witnesses who will be examined during the investigation this week of the interstate commerce commission into the alleged discrimination by the railroads in the distribution of coal cars. The hearings were resumed today.

The revelations last week, when a number of officials admitted accepting gifts of stock in various soft coal mining companies impelled the commission to subpoena more important officials in an effort to determine the extent of the secret business relations alleged to exist between the railroad and certain coal companies.

The witnesses to be examined during the hearings this week include: Capt. John P. Green, first vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad; William A. Patton, assistant to President Cassatt at Philadelphia; Robert Pitcairn, assistant to President Cassatt at Pittsburg; Congressman George F. Huff, president of the Keystone Coal & Coke company; John Lloyd, president of the Columbia Coal Mining company; J. Howard Patton, a coal man and a brother of William A. Patton; Theo Neely, chief of motive power; D. S. Newhall, purchasing agent of the Pennsylvania railroad; J. K. Johnston, superintendent of the Tyrone division; Victor Wirman, superintendent of the Amboy division; J. N. Purviance, chief clerk to William A. Patton; C. A. Wood, chief clerk to the general superintendent; David Steele, assistant trainmaster, Pittsburg division; A. E. Fitler, Charles C. Culp, H. C. Burkett and C. A. Buch.

As a result of the investigation minority stockholders of the Pennsyl-

LA FOLLETTE IDEA MAY BE DEMANDED

Present Rate Bill Will Not Satisfy Country, Says Cullom.

Washington, May 23.—Senator Cullom, who is an authority on rate questions, gives it as his opinion that the country will not for many years be satisfied with the new rate law, but will insist ultimately on the proposition advanced so forcefully in the senate by Mr. La Follette of Wisconsin, in favor of an appraisal of railroad values, this appraisal to be the standard by which the interstate commerce commission is to determine what is a just and reasonable rate. It may be said in this connection that the La Follette proposition is the only one advanced during the long senate debate to which no constitutional objection has been made.

Should the supreme court decide against the new law, either on account of the Allison amendment or the words "in its judgment," it is quite likely, according to Mr. Cullom, that the country will turn to the La Follette idea.

This idea looks to squeezing the water out of all railroad stock, the appraisal to be on the basis of what the roads cost and the sum it would require to replace them. The making of this sort of an issue would put Mr. La Follette very much in the limelight.

ALASKAN TOWN BADLY SCORCHED

Entire Business Section of Fairbanks Destroyed by Fire.

Seattle, May 23.—A dispatch to the Post-Intelligencer says that the entire business section of the town of Fairbanks, Alaska, was destroyed by fire, which started in the Fairbanks building, a three-story frame structure, yesterday. Details are meagre, but it is feared that the food supply of the town has been destroyed and great suffering may result.

Nothing was left standing in the section lying between the water front and Third avenue and Stacey and Turner streets. The work of the fire fighters was centered in the block of warehouses owned by the Northern Chemical company in order to protect the food supply of the town and the result is still in doubt. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000 and it is announced that the heavier business interests are already planning to rebuild. No lives were lost.

VETERANS ARE HURT

In Street Car Collision at Encampment at Lafayette, Ind.

Motorman Killed and Nearly Seventy Old Soldiers Injured.

Lafayette, Ind., May 23.—One man was killed and nearly seventy were injured in a collision on the Lafayette battle ground electric road today. Both cars were crowded with veterans attending the annual encampment of the G. A. R. The collision occurred at a switch. One car was coming south to the city from the battle ground, filled with veterans and the other was outward bound, carrying old soldiers to the battlefield. Charles Roudebush, motorman of the south bound car was killed. M. O. Farner, the conductor, was slightly hurt. Both cars were demolished. Many doctors were summoned and the injured were brought to the city in special carriages and taken to St. Elizabeth's hospital.

Following is a list of those seriously injured: J. D. Clark, Medariaville, Ind., chest, shoulder and leg hurt, serious; J. M. Leak, Lisbon, Ind., leg injured; Mrs. J. M. Leak, wrist broken and internally injured; Rev. H. E. Butler, Claypool, Ind., leg crushed; Henry Enlesley, Marion, both legs injured; Benjamin Tolson, Washington, Ind., head bruised; William Havey, Lebanon, jaw broken and side injured; Stephen Girard, Bourbon, Ind., nose broken, head and arms injured; S. S. Clevenger, Landis, Ind., both legs and neck injured; H. Bruckmiller, Milford, arm hurt, eye cut and head hurt; A. A. Gill, Reachdale, one leg fractured and other hurts; Isaac Dohner, Edgerton, Ohio, left breast hurt; N. N. Boydston, Warsaw, back wrenched and legs cut; William Robnold, Craigville, face, arm and shoulder hurt; Thomas Marr, La Porte, rib broken and ankle hurt; R. F. Sweeney, Winfield, breast badly hurt; Martin Mann, Dunkirk, left arm, shoulder and ankle hurt; D. S. Whiteneck, Greenwood, left leg smashed and probably broken; N. V. Reehner, Roosville, breast and head badly hurt.

In addition to these forty-five or fifty-five persons were slightly bruised. It is believed all will recover.

MORE DEAD AT 'FRISCO.

Washington, May 23.—Gen. Greely has furnished the war department with the following list of dead, including people who have died from the effects of injuries received in the San Francisco disaster. These are names not previously reported to Washington: Baumister, Annie; Bush, Albert John; Buck, Pauline; Coleman, Hugh A.; Corbus, Sarah C.; Daniels, Hiram M.; Lichenstein, Morris, wife and daughter, Esther; Lawless, Lawrence; McCarthy, Katherine; McCarthy, Mary; O'Toole, Cecil A.; Richards, Elizabeth.

ENTERPRISE OF SKIPPER

Brings a Badly Dismantled Ship Across Two Oceans.

The A. G. Ropes Arrives at New York From Japan.

New York, May 23.—Under jury rig from Kobe, Japan, to New York harbor, the noted clipper ship A. G. Ropes arrived here today, completing successfully what was the first attempt in the chronicles of the American merchant marine to take the dismantled hull of a great, full rigged ship across two seas.

The voyage began last December, following a typhoon experienced last summer near Hongkong, when practically everything above the ship's deck went overboard.

The course of the A. G. Ropes from the moment that the storm struck her until today has been filled with adventure and with striking demonstrations of American enterprise displayed by her skipper, Capt. Rivers. Previous to this accident the time of the A. G. Ropes, built at Bath, Me., was posted in Hongkong, New York, San Francisco, Liverpool and Shanghai for speed records in races which extended half way around the world. For four days after the typhoon the ship drifted, her crew in despair, and the American skipper never once went below deck. When at the end of these days of suspense a German steamer appeared and offered for $3,000 to tow the A. G. Ropes to port, Capt. Rivers promptly refused, although his report states that "it was some temptation to accept."

Eventually, however, after refusing other exorbitant offers for towing, his ship was taken into port by a steamer for $500. At Kobe the ship was sold at auction to A. G. Luckenbach of New York, and the nearly six-months' voyage home under a make-shift rigging began. The A. G. Ropes was built in 1884, is 250 feet long, and 2,460 tons gross register.

ATTORNEY M'GARRY IS PAROLED FROM PRISON.

Lansing, Mich., May 23.—Thomas F. McGarry, a former prominent attorney of Grand Rapids, and the only man, with the exception of Lant K. Salsbury, to serve a prison sentence as a result of the noted Lake Michigan water scandal in that city, and the resultant wholesale indictments, was today paroled from Ionia prison by Governor Warner. McGarry was convicted of bribery, and sentenced in June, 1904, to a four-year term at Ionia. He was living in Florida when arrested, and had prominent connections in the lumber business in that state.

McHALE TO SUCCEED BLENK.

New Orleans, May 23.—News reached Catholic circles in this city yesterday that the Very Rev. Patrick J. McHale has been appointed bishop of Porto Rico, to succeed Archbishop Blenk, who held that office until he was recently elevated to the archbishopric of New Orleans.

DULUTH MAN STABS A WOMAN IN THE BACK IN A HOTEL AT BAUDETTE

John London in Jail at Bemidji on a Serious Charge.

Mrs. F. Flett is Lying Critically Wounded at Baudette.

Efforts Made to Keep the Tragedy From the Public.

Bemidji, Minn., May 23.—As a result of a stabbing affair in Baudette last week, Mrs. F. Flett, a Duluth milliner, is lying critically wounded in a Baudette hotel, and John London, a Duluth business man, is lodged in the Beltrami county jail charged with assault in the first degree.

He was taken before a Baudette justice of the peace immediately after the affray, but waived examination and was bound over to the grand jury. Sheriff Bailey brought him down Saturday.

The story of the tragedy is full of dramatic interest. There is the man's jealous rage; the terror and flight of the woman; the pursuit; and finally in the diningroom of a public hotel, while the victim was eating supper and the room was crowded with other guests, the stabbing.

The knife entered the back of the woman and only a slight movement on her part as the stroke was descending, saved her from a fatal wound.

Of scarcely less interest than the details of the happening is the air of secrecy which has been thrown about the whole affair. Until the present date not a word about the stabbing has appeared in print outside of a short account in the Baudette paper, although it took place a week ago last Saturday. Not a dispatch has gone out of that village over the wire, and the sheriff has dodged reporters and courted the most sphynx-like silence, refusing to give out the names of the parties interested.

And yet there is nothing to suppress; it is merely that the little village to the north, where the tragedy quite accidentally took place, does not want the advertising. The people were not its people, and it feels that it should not be blamed for the affair.

London and Mrs. Flett left Duluth several weeks ago, and were first heard of in Fort Frances, just across the border from International Falls.

A week ago last Friday an International Falls policeman was startled by

HENRIK IBSEN PASSES AWAY

The Famous Norwegian Poet and Dramatist Dies at Christiania.

Many of His Works Produced in America Successfully.

Christiania, Norway, May 23.—Henrik Ibsen, the Norwegian poet and dramatist, died at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The death of Ibsen was unexpected, although for the past year he had been very weak and it was known that his death was only a question of time. He was unconscious toward the end and passed away peacefully. None of his friends were allowed to see him during his long illness, and the only persons admitted to his room were the doctor, the dramatist's wife and son. The news of Ibsen's death made a great impression in this city where he was much beloved.

The most conspicuous name in Norwegian literature is that of Henrik Ibsen, who was born in 1828. His early efforts were not remarkable, and in the end his greatest appeal was through the drama, where he was master. His first tragedy, "Catalina," was published in 1850, and was a work of small importance. It was followed by romantic dramas and tragedies, and in 1862 he began his series of satirical dramas on modern Norwegian life, and since that time he has written satirical comedies of great pungency and wit, laying bare some sores of modern social life among his countrymen. He lived in voluntary exile from Norway for many years. During recent years his plays have been presented and studied in America with much success. Among his most successful plays are "Ghosts," "A Doll's House," "An Enemy to the People," and "The Pillars of Society."

RECKLESS AUTOISTS INSTANTLY KILLED.

Westbury, L. I., May 23.—While running at a rate of 40 miles an hour, a big touring automobile belonging to P. F. Collier, dashed into an eastbound express train at the depot crossing here last night. The two occupants of the machine, George Gabriel, the chauffeur, and Frederick Whitehead, a valet in the Collier family, were instantly killed and the machine wrecked.

TURKS KILL GREEKS.

Salonica, May 23.—A band of 100 Greeks today began burning the Bulgarian village Startchina, near Monastir. When six houses had been burned, Turkish troops appeared and killed seventeen of the Greeks. The remainder of the Greeks fled, the Turks pursuing.

LARGER WATER MAINS ORDERED

For Extension of System in Sawmill Territory at Virginia.

Virginia, Minn., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city council recently ordered an extension of the water system to cover the territory in which the sawmills of the Virginia Lumber company are situated. Last evening W. H. Clark and Superintendent Savage appeared before the council and requested that 6-inch mains be laid instead of 4-inch. The Light & Water company agreed to lay the 6-inch main for $600 additional and Mr. Cook said that if the council would order in the 6-inch main the lumber company would pay the difference in the cost. He also stated that by laying a 6-inch main the lumber company's water system could be connected with the city mains and thus furnish an additional supply of water in case of fire, as the lumber company had as great pumping capacity as the light and water company. The council thought that whereas the city would be benefited by the connection it should stand half the additional expense, and it was so ordered.

A petition for a sewer leading from the new school house in the Southside addition was presented and the matter was referred to the finance committee with instructions to arrange for the sale of sewer warrants in order to provide funds for carrying on the work of building this and other sewers asked for.

A more stringent pound ordinance than that now on the books was introduced and received its first reading. A poundmaster was also appointed to serve until the next meeting at $2 per day. He was also instructed to act as dog catcher and impound all dogs not licensed and running at large.

The city clerk was instructed to again advertise for a city scavenger.

GAEKWAR OF BERODA VIEWS THE SENATE.

Washington, May 23.—The senate numbered among its spectators today a prince of India, in the person of the Marajarah or Gaekwar of Beroda, who occupied a seat in the gallery assigned to senators and their families. The prince was accompanied by his wife. They occupied seats in the front row, and apparently gave careful attention to the proceedings so long as they remained.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 23.—The international conference of Kings Daughters and Sons was called to order here today, with several hundred delegates present.

MURDER MAY BE AVERTED

Victim of Eveleth Shooting Affair Has Chance of Recovery.

Two of the Three Bullets Have Been Successfully Removed.

Eveleth, Minn., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. John Stewart, who was shot last evening by her jealous husband, is not dead, as was at first reported, and she may recover.

The shooting took place in Stewart's room, on Grant avenue, near Jones street. Stewart, who is a painter, about 35 years of age, has lived in Eveleth a number of years. He had some trouble with his wife, and she went to Duluth, returning to Eveleth about three weeks ago to become a waitress in the McNeil hotel.

Stewart met his wife and attended church with her last Sunday. Last evening he induced her to go to his room, and there, it is said, he accused her of wrongdoing. They talked for about fifteen minutes, and then three shots rang out in quick succession.

Stewart walked out of the room and down to the street, where he was met by Officer Teny Azzo. The officer noticed blood on the man's collar, and asked him what was the matter.

"I've shot my wife," said Stewart.

"I guess you had better come along, then," said the officer, who at first was unable to believe that Stewart was telling the truth, and meant the remark at a joke. Stewart, however, went with the officer without resistance, and the latter finally realized that a crime had been committed.

The woman was taken to Dr. More's hospital, where two of the bullets were removed. One was taken from her face and the other from the left breast, and she may recover.

The man was not intoxicated at the time, and jealousy is given as the cause of the shooting.

UNION LOOKS FAVORABLE

Presbyterian Assemblies Likely to Unite Before Adjournment.

Biblical Messages Are Sent Between the Two Bodies.

Des Moines, May 23.—The following telegram was sent by the Presbyterian general assembly, in session here, to the Cumberland Presbyterian assembly, in session at Decatur, Ill., today:

"Presbyterian general assembly, in session at Des Moines, sends sincere greetings. Read first Corinthians, first chapter, tenth verse."

"W. H. ROBERTS, Stated Clerk."

The passage referred to follows:

"Now I beseech you, brethren, through the name of our Lord, Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you, but that ye be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

This reply was received from Decatur:

"With prayerful good will and brotherly love, we acknowledge gratefully your greetings. Read first Thessalonians, second chapter, sixteenth and seventeenth verses.

"IRA LANDRITH, Moderator."

The scripture referred to in the reply follows:

"Forbid us to speak to the gentiles, that they may be saved to fill up their sins always, but the wrath has come upon them to the uttermost, but we, brethren, being bereaved of you for a short season in presence, not in heart, endeavor the more exceedingly to see your face with great desire."

This exchange of sentiments is taken here to indicate that before the adjournment of the assemblies union between the two churches will have been effected.

FAVORABLE TO ALCOHOL BILL

The Senate Committee in Favor of the Denatured Measure.

Washington, May 23.—The denatured alcohol bill was ordered reported favorably today by the senate committee on finance.

There were numerous amendments made to the bill, largely intended to prevent a reduction of the internal revenues by reason of the act. Provision was made that it shall go into effect Jan. 1, 1907, instead of within three months after the passage of the measure. No limitation was placed upon the size or capacity of the stills at which the denatured alcohol is to be manufactured.

CUMBERLANDS VOTE FOR UNION

Decatur, Ill., May 23.—The judge's opinion was read in the assembly denying an injunction against union. Dr. Steel introduced a resolution, that in entering the union, the Cumberland Presbyterians do not surrender any integral part of their doctrine. He read a statement made by the original Cumberland Presbyterians which said that the expectation of fatality would not affect the Presbyterian system of doctrine. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 162 to 106.

Dr. W. H. Black, president of the Missouri Valley college, the chairman, read the report of the committee on fraternity and union.

The report of union was adopted by a vote of 163 to 91. The anti-unionists filed a protest.

DIVIDEND IS HIGHER

Calumet & Arizona Stockholders to Get $3 a Share.

Copper Stock Market is Weak—Some Rallies at Close.

The directors of the Calumet & Arizona have declared a quarterly dividend of $3 on the stock, which is 50c higher than the last dividend. If this basis is maintained during the next year, it will mean $12 per share annual dividends. This $3 dividend is to be paid June 20, and to all stockholders on the books June 4.

Calumet & Arizona was strong in the copper stock market today and was about the only stock that was. It opened at $113, declined to $112.50 and advanced to $116. The closing price was $115 asked.

North Butte was weak, opening at $93, declining to $91.50 and closing at $92 bid and $92.50 asked. Amalgamated opened at $108.25, declined to $106.37½ and rallied at the close to $107.25 bid and $107.50 asked. Anaconda opened at $269, declined to $264.25, rallied to $268.50 and closed at $268.50 bid. Butte Coalition sold at $33.50 and closed at $33 bid and $33.25 asked.

The Bisbees were a little weaker. Calumet & Pittsburg sold at $30 and closed at $29 bid and $30 asked; Denn-Arizona at $14.25 and closed at $14 bid; Junction at $25 and $24.50 and closed at $25 asked; Lake Superior & Pittsburg at $20.50 and closed at $20 bid and $20.50 asked, and Pittsburg & Duluth sold at $19.75 and closed at $19.50 asked.

Black Mountain was inactive and closed at $10 bid and $10.25 asked; Keweenaw sold at $11 and $11.25 and closed at $11 bid; Warren sold at $15.50 and $16 and closed at $15.50 bid; Copper Queen of Idaho was $2.25 asked at the close and Ophir Tunnel 16 cents bid. It was rumored about the streets that some Ophir was to be had at 15 cents, but none has come out so far at that price and from 19 to 20 cents was asked for it today.

HAD NO LICENSE.

S. O. Carlson Ran Employment Office While Council Considered Case.

S. O. Carlson was arrested this morning and brought into the municipal court on the charge of running an employment office without a license.

Carlson has applied to the council for a license, but the police department recommended that it be granted, and it has been held up for two weeks, pending an investigation.

Carlson attempted to go ahead and do business without a license, and he was promptly placed under arrest. He entered a plea of guilty and was fined $25 and costs by Judge Cutting.

Chief Troyer stated to the court that three men answered one of Carlson's advertisements for men for inside work, and they had been given outdoor work in Superior. When they applied for their money back, it is claimed that Carlson refused it.

THE JOY OF A GOOD CIGAR.

S. F. Boyce Tell How Smokers Can be Sure to Get Their Money's Worth.

"How can one be sure of getting his money's worth in buying a cigar?" asked a Herald reporter of S. F. Boyce.

"I'll tell you how to be sure. Just buy a Wadsworth Bros.' Chico. This cigar is always the same—a good, honest, satisfying smoke. It is made with a long Havana filler, so that it always burns with a firm, solid ash, the best sign of a good cigar.

"The Chico burns with a fragrance like that of the Carolina perfecto, a 25c. cigar, but it costs only 5c. My best customers are smoking the Chico, and when they stop in front of the cigar case they say, 'give us more of those good cigars.' I pass out the Wadsworth Bros.' Chico, and they go away happy."

Try a Chico yourself, and see how good it is.

GIRL SEES VISION OF UNCLE IN PRISON CELL.

New York, May 23.—Mrs. Adele Vasta, the first witness in the trial of Josephine Terranova, on a charge of murdering her aunt, Mrs. Concetta Reggio, testified today that when she visited the accused in a cell in the Tombs prison, last February, the girl told her that she had seen the face of her uncle, whom she had killed, on the wall of her cell. Mrs. Vasta is a parish visitor of the Catholic church, who visited Mrs. Terranova to give her religious consolation.

CASE STARTED ON THIRD TRIAL

John Knutson Asks $3,500 for Personal Injuries.

For the third time within five years the personal injury case of John Knutson against the Duluth Street Railway company is on trial in the district court. Twice the case has been dismissed on motion of the company before it was submitted to the jury.

John Knutson was struck by a street car one evening several years ago as he was crossing Superior street at First avenue east to get on a car. It is claimed that he dodged a team on the crossing, and in doing so failed to see an approaching car until it was on him, and he was knocked down and carried under the wheels, or fender, for several feet, sustaining injuries for which he demands $3,500 damages.

Previous to his crossing the street Knutson had been drinking with some friends, and it is understood that part of the defense will be that he was somewhat under the influence of liquor, and negligent. Knutson claims that the car was approaching the crossing at a high rate of speed, and that the motorman did not ring the gong. Knutson is represented by W. B. Moer and Judge McGindley.

In Judge Ensign's room, testimony is still being taken in the civil action of H. L. Legge against George W. Martin and others, a case based on a contract to explore ore lands. Expert testimony was produced by the defendants this morning relative to the action of diamond drills on concrete in holes where Portland cement has been put on the rock below to guide the drill.

The personal injury case of Nels J. Wedan against the Merrill & Ring company is a little nearer its close. It was thought possible, this noon, that the case would get to the jury tonight or tomorrow morning. It was started for trial yesterday morning. Wedan is suing for a little over $5,000 for three fingers cut off by a wood saw.

WILL MEET FIVE MEN.

Wrestler Mattson Would Throw Them All in Fifteen Minutes.

At the Metropolitan this evening, Carl Mattson, the well-known wrestler, who is now a member of John L. Sullivan's company, will attempt to throw five men in fifteen minutes. Last evening before a crowded house, he had no difficulty in throwing three in less than that time.

Mattson will meet tonight George Cole, who weighs 189 pounds; George Castle, 197 pounds; Hans Peterson, 186 pounds; Fred Weiser, 192 pounds; and Adolph Bergerm, 179 pounds.

Last night Kid Cutler, John L.'s sparring partner, threw Mauritz Harris, the husky shipbuilder from Superior, in 2 minutes and 34 seconds.

TO ABOLISH OFFICE

Of Surveyor General for the State of Minnesota.

St. Paul, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson received notice from the department of the interior at Washington that the office of surveyor general in Minnesota will be discontinued, June 30, 1907. This action is said to be due to the fact that there is not enough business to warrant continuing that office.

TO COURTMARTIAL CAPTAIN.

Washington, May 23.—A general court martial has been ordered for the trial of Capt. Perry Garst, commanding the battleship Rhode Island, for grounding that ship, May 6, on York spit. The court will meet on board the Rhode Island, in Hampton Roads, May 28.

SAND BAR IN THE WAY

Channel Must be Dredged to Get Mataafa Off Beach.

New Made Ice Field is Reported Off Outer Island.

Capt. Reid has again qit the work of pulling the Mataafa and sent his tugs into the harbor at 11 o'clock this morning. It develops that he will have to utilize a dredge and big a channel through a sand-bar which it has been found, blocks further work on dragging the Mataafa from the beach. This was discovered this morning after several attempts had been made to pull the Mataafa off the beach.

The sand-bar has only about 15 feet of water over it, while the Mataafa requires about 21 feet, so it would be a case of lift the wrecked steamer over the bar or dredge the channel out. This will be done at once.

The pulling on the wreck began yesterday afternoon shortly before 6 o'clock. The tug Reed and the steam barge Manistique attached lines to the stern of the Mataafa and slowly swung her around until her stern pointed almost out into the lake. She was moved about 75 feet lakeward. The sand seemed to block any further progress and under the strain of pulling, the big hempen hawser on the Reid parted and was replaced by a wire cable.

HITS BIG ICE FIELD.

Steamer Frank J. Hecker Goes Through New Made Field Sunday.

Capt. C. P. Gunderson of the steamer Frank J. Hecker of the Gilchrist line, has reported to Capt. A. Swenson in charge of the United States hydrographic office here, that on last Sunday about 4 o'clock in the morning his steamer, bound up to Duluth, passed through a large field of newly made ice just outside of Outer Island of the Apostle group.

He says that the ice field reached as far as he could see and he believed the field to be about fifty miles wide. It took his boat over four hours to go through it. When the ice field was struck first Capt. Gunderson was in bed and he was awakened by the noise of his boat breaking through the field.

Capt. Gunderson has sailed the lakes for about twenty-five years or over, and claims that this is the latest season he has ever heard of such an extensive field of newly made ice being found in the lakes.

The Briton Aground.

Marine City, May 23.—By the breaking of her steering gear in the St. Clair river yesterday morning, the steamer Briton of the Steel trust fleet veered and ran hard aground on the sandbar at the foot of Fawn island. The Briton was bound up and was going at a good speed when she struck, running out two feet forward and eight feet aft. As the vessel is resting midway on the bar, it will be necessary to dredge her off.

The ceremonies will be more elaborate than usual, and the governor will be present.

Some Call for Boats.

Chicago, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—There was some call for boats to take grain. Vesselmen claimed the rate was 1¼ cents on corn while shippers insisted they had secured room at 1⅛ cents. No charters were closed.

MANILA MAY HAVE ENGINES.

Lafayette's Machinery to be Overhauled and Saved If Possible.

Until what remains of the Pittsburg steamship Lafayette, which was almost totally wrecked on Encampment island, on the north shore, during the big storm of last November, can be overhauled and the salvage determined, nothing will be done toward converting the barge Manila into a steamer.

The barge still lies in the Duluth harbor, at a point off the Duluth Boat club, where she was left when brought in last winter by the Reed Wrecking company's tugs.

At the time, there was some talk of turning her into a steamer by the installation of the Lafayette's engines and making other improvements. This may still be done.

So roughly did the storm deal with the Lafayette that it is not worth while to try to save her. She is a total wreck. It is expected, however, that in a short time, experts will look over her engines and ascertain whether there are enough parts left to make saving the machinery worth while.

STEAMER JAMES LAUGHLIN.

Bill of Sale Transferring Her is Filed in Duluth.

A bill of sale transferring the new steamer James Laughlin from the Great Lakes Engineering works to the Interstate Steamship company of West Virginia, for whom she was built, was filed yesterday afternoon in the office of the collector of the port of Duluth.

The steamer James Laughlin is a duplicate of the B. F. Jones built in the same yards at Detroit and is 550 feet over all, 530 feet keel, 56 feet beam and 31 feet deep. Her gross tonnage is 6,939 and her net tonnage is 5,402. She has thirty-three hatches, spaced 12-foot centers and is equipped with triple expansion engines 23, 37 and 63-inch cylinder diameters by 42-inch stroke. These are supplied with steam from two Scotch boilers 15 feet by 12 feet, fitted with induced draft and allowed 175 pounds pressure.

She was launched at the Ecorse yard on April 7 and will be used as an ore and coal carrier. She will be seen in Duluth before long. Her master is Capt. G. A. Symes.

CONCERNING HARBORS.

Hydrographic Office Tells Changes in Lights, Etc.

The hydrographic department has given notice that the main light on Point aux Pins, St. Mary's river, has been improved by the Canadian government by the substitution of a sixth order lens light for the reflectors and pressed lens heretofore used. In other respects the light is unchanged.

On April 28, 1906, a fixed red lens-lantern light was established 61 feet above mean lake level on a white post about 430 feet N. 80 degs. E. true (E. by N. mag.) in the rear of Grand Haven pierhead light, forming a range therewith for entering the harbor.

Two suomerged cribs have been sunk, 200 feet apart, to form the new entrance to Huron harbor, Lake Erie. Each crib is marked by a red lantern elevated about 20 feet above water. The west crib is connected with the old pier by submerged cribs.

SOO CITY ARRIVES.

Booth Steamer Starts on First Lake Superior Experience.

The steamer Soo City, which the Booth company has just brought to Duluth, arrived here for the first time last Cunday. She has now gone back to the Sault and will return here Saturday. She took a cargo of freight to the Sault, but just whether or not she will be put on that run is not known. She will take a trip or two on the north shore run and one or two in the south shore before it is fully determined as to what run she will take permanently.

The Soo City has heretofore been engaged on Lake Michigan almost entirely. She is a wooden steamer and was built in West Bay City in 1888, but has been kept up to date. She is 171 feet long, 33 beam and 12 feet deep. Her gross tonnage is 670. She carries both passengers and freight.

Marine Notes.

The tugs Whalen and Siskiwit of Port Arthur are at the shipyard in Superior being repaired.

The steamer Nottingham is at the shipyard in Superior having repairs made to her as a result of the injuries she received near the Sault a few days ago.

A section of the north pier at Grand Haven, Mich., about 100 feet from the inner end has caved into the river. The break was caused by the new stone being dumped into the crib. The added weight crushed the superstructire.

Capt. Robert C. Chamberlain, master of the Charles Reitz is dead at Buffalo, being stricken with apoplexy just after his boat left Buffalo on Sunday. It was put back and he was taken to a hospital. He is a brother of Capt. F. D. Chamberlain of the Philip D. Armour, who was at the bedside when death came.

A revised chart, in colors of Saginaw bay has just been issued and is now on sale at the United States lake survey office, 33 Campau building, Detroit, Mich., at 15 cents per copy. The title of this chart has been changed to read "Coast Chart No. 2, Lake Huron, from Richmondville to Au Sable Point, including Saginaw Bay."

STAPLES NOT FOR GOVERNOR

Says He is After Present Job on Railroad Commission.

St. Paul, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Are designing friends trying to pry C. F. Staples loose from his job on the railroad and warehouse commission? A deal with that end in view is said to have originated in Minneapolis.

The scheme is to boom Mr. Staples for governor, thus making his commissionship candidacy a negative quantity, and the whole thing has so far progressed so satisfactorily that, in alarm, Mr. Staples is now trying to kill it off.

"I am not a candidate for governor and will not permit the use of my name for the office at the Duluth convention," said Mr. Staples today. "I have announced my candidacy for a renomination to the job I now hold, and it is that office alone I seek. Parties I know have been suggesting my name for governor, but I cannot be a candidate for two offices and I sincerely hope they will drop the first. I positively am not nor will I be a candidate for it, and further I repeat I will not even permit my name to go before the convention."

That parties were trying to job him, Mr. Staples would not deny nor would he discuss the story.

STORY OF BOND ISSUE DENIED.

Mother Superior's Tribute

Is Similar to That of Thousands of Other Women Who Have Been Cured of Kidney Disease by

WARNER'S SAFE CURE.

She writes: "I am happy to say that we have experienced in several instances the beneficial—I would say almost marvelous—effects of the WARNER'S SAFE CURE in cases of female and kidney complaints.

"I heartily join in the numerous testimonials from those who, like myself, have been benefited by the use of your WARNER'S SAFE CURE, and if possible I will not be without it in the household.

"You can publish my grateful thanks for your valuable medicine, if you deem it best to do so. Very gratefully yours, Mother St. Ferdinand, R. J. M., Convent of Jesus Mary, Kingsbridge Ave. and 232d St., Kingsbridge, N. Y. City."

Thousands of women suffer unspeakable misery through nervous prostration, caused by disorders of the kidneys and female organs. Dark or bluish circles under the eyes, pallid complexion, a feeling of apathy and listlessness, loss of sleep and appetite, pains in the back and loins, headache are certain and unfailing symptoms of kidney disease.

For over fifty years Warner's Safe Cure has been the only complete, permanent and safe home cure for Bright's disease, diabetes, rheumatism, gout, gall stones, uric acid poison and all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Sold at all drug stores, or direct, 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle. Write to Warner's Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y., for free medical book.

A mother goose gymnasium frolic will be the feature of the close of the gymnasium year at the local Young Women's Christian association. The frolic, which marks the close of the physical culture department for the summer, is always a delightful affair, and hugely enjoyed by the gymnasium members. The participants are this year to come costumed as some one of the well known and loved characters of Mother Goose. Instead, however, of chattering off the well known jingles, each member is supposed to come with an original stanza concerning the character she represents. The members only are invited to be present at this function, and no other feature of the year gives as much rollicking enjoyment.

Invitations Out.

Mr. and Mrs. James Foster Tilson issued invitations today for the wedding of their twin daughters, whose weddings will take place Wednesday, June 6. Miss Estelle May Tilson will become the bride of William Murray Gravat, and the same evening the wedding of Miss Anna Isabel Tilson and Herbert Clinton Gravat will take place. The wedding is to be a home affair, and only the immediate families will be present. An informal reception will follow, and after a wedding trip the Messrs. Gravat will be at home with their brides in this city.

Church Wedding.

A pretty wedding service took place yesterday morning at the Church of St. Jean the Baptist, when Miss Marie Belanger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Belanger, became the bride of Stephen Musolf of Washburn, Wis. The wedding service was read by Father Robillard at 9:30 o'clock. The bride was attended by Miss Flora Dolson and Miss Martha Poultney, and the groomsmen were Walter Musolf and Leo Belanger. The bride and her maids were gowned in white, Miss Belanger carrying bridal roses and the maids carrying pink ones.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, at 2401 West Sixth street. Mr. and Mrs. Musolf left for Nashwauk, where they will make their home.

China Celebration.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Stubler were hosts yesterday at their home, 108 East Second street, in honor of their twentieth wedding anniversary. In the afternoon Mrs. Stubler entertained at cards, and pedro was played, the favors being won by Mrs. N. H. Wilson, Mrs. C. Teske, Mrs. Lottie Hatley and Mrs. A. Saxine. The hostess was presented with many pretty gifts of china, and the favors were of the same ware.

In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Stubler entertained at a musicale. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Todd, Pfeffer, Riley and Miss Byer. Nearly 100 guests were entertained during the day.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Ben Heller of Minneapolis, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Henry Abraham of 1430 East First street.

What Retail Markets Offer.

Jellied luncheon tongue, 30 cents a pound.

Boiled ham, 30 cents a pound.

Crabs, 35 cents each.

Crates of berries.
Crates of cabbages.
Crates of tomatoes.
Crates of everything.

Finicky people with capricious appetites want to stay out of the markets these mornings for although the berries are luscious and red, and the lettuce crisp and delicate and green and the summer squash good and the tomatoes nice and the cucumbers desirable, when one sees crate after crate of berries piled up, one on top of the other, and cabbages crated by the dozens, and bushel baskets of lettuce and paniers overloaded with other things, one has the languid feeling that he scarcely ever wants to eat again.

When the morning sun shines and the trees glint a bit more of green than they did the preceding day, one mentally begins to withdraw the brash statement that one would nevah no mo' go to picnics to consume burnt chops and a holy terror of a salad, and to think that maybe a few ham sandwiches and congenial company and a half mile from civilization would be a good combination. The ham costs 30 cents a pound and only a person with a permanent grouch could fail to find congenial company such weather as this.

Epicurean Relishes Served Up by Culinary Expert.

EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly furnish me with a recipe for planked shad, the size of board to be used, the vegetables that accompany it and the way of cooking and serving same for a family of four persons. MRS. F. H. LEE.

Planked Shad.

While all the large housefurnishing stores now carry planks of hard wood fitted out with steel rods or bars to hold the fish in place while being cooked in this most distinctive and delicious way, there is nothing to compare with a plank of hickory, cedar or cherry, specially charred and seasoned under the direction of a veteran fisherman, who understands and loves his calling. Under his skillful ministration a plank about twenty-eight inches in thickness is selected, planed and grooved, a half inch groove running around to the edge of the upper side of the plank. This is to catch the juices of the fish when cooking. The board is then sponged with alcohol, and a match applied to give it its first scorch. Next the plank is relegated to a hot oven to remain for two or three days, after which comes charring in front of a fire varied by frequent spongings with alcohol. When the plank shows a char half an inch deep, a fish is broiled on it, then another and another until the fish oil penetrates the wood. Lastly the board is dusted with powdered lemon rind and set away to cool and season. Small wonder that a plank thus carefully prepared brings $10 or more, and that relatively few are able to get hold of them.

Do not buy or order a plank without first measuring your oven. The plank should be at least an inch smaller than the oven dimensions, to allow for slipping it in and out readily. The broiling chamber of a gas stove makes the best place for the broiling, after the red coals of a camp fire. The oven should be very hot before fish goes in.

Recipes for cooking planked shad were given a few weeks ago.

Shad Dressing.

If you wish to serve a dressing with your shad, try this. Put into a small saucepan two tablespoonfuls each butter and flour and stir until blended. Then add one cupful cream or milk, with a little salt and mustard, a teaspoonful celery extract, and a half cup of vinegar. Heat and stir to a smooth cream and when at the boiling point, pour over the well beaten yolks of two eggs.

Cucumber Spirals.

Cucumbers go excellently well with shad, and here is a novel way of preparing them. Peel the cucumbers thin and lay in ice water to crisp. Then with a sharp knife cut the cucumber round and round as though you were paring an apple. This makes a long slender spiral that is very pretty. Serve with a French dressing.

One last point about the care of your plank. Do not wash. Simply rub with a dry cloth and when not in use keep in a close muslin bag away from flies and dust.

Fruit Cake.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Will you kindly give recipe for fruit cake and oblige,

YOUNG HOUSEKEEPER.

Whip to a cream one pound of butter and one pound of sugar, using the hands if you prefer, instead of a spoon. This is easier and is the method employed by confectioners. Add the yolks of twelve beaten eggs, then the spices, three tablespoonfuls of cinnamon, two tablespoonfuls each of mace and nutmeg, one tablespoonful each of ginger and allspice and a dessert spoonful of cloves. Next should come a pound of flour that has been lightly browned in the oven, alternating with the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs. When this is well mixed dissolve a teaspoonful of soda in a cup of molasses and beat until it stops purring and add with the fruit, which should be well dredged with flour. The fruit, previously prepared, should consist of two pounds of seeded raisins, two pounds of currants, one pound of citron shredded, a few figs or prunes cut in small bits and a half pound each of lemon and orange peel. Last of all comes a half gill of brandy. Line the cake tin with several layers of buttered paper, letting them come above the edge of the tin. Bake in a very slow oven from three to four hours. If preferred this amount may be baked in two tins instead of one large one. A gas oven is very difficult to keep low enough for a fruit cake. In case you have only the gas stove, steam your cake for two and a half hours, then finish the hour's baking in the oven with only one burner on. Any fruit cake is better if mixed and allowed to stand twenty-four hours in a cold place to "ripen" before baking. This is the regular recipe for a wedding fruit cake. A much plainer cake, yet excellent, is this:

Cheap Fruit Cake.

Beat to a cream one cupful of butter and two of brown sugar. Add four well beaten eggs, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, one grated nutmeg, three-fourths tablespoonful of cloves, one pound seeded raisins, one pound currants, one-quarter pound of citron and a few fine chopped dates or prunes that have been soaked for a day in cold water or minced lemon or orange peel. Fruit cake is like mince pie, everything nice in spices or fruit goes. Next comes one cupful of sour milk or buttermilk and lastly four cupfuls of flour, sifted, with a dessert spoonful of soda three or four times over. Mix all well with the hands, then bake in lined and buttered tins in a very slow oven.

DISFIGURING SKIN HUMOR

Impossible to Get Employment, as Face and Body Were Covered With Itching Sores—Scratched Till Flesh Was Raw—Spent Hundreds of Dollars on Doctors and Hospitals and Grew Worse

CURED BY CUTICURA IN FIVE WEEKS

"Since the year 1894 I have been troubled with a very bad case of eczema which I have spent hundreds of dollars trying to cure, and I went to the hospital, but they failed to cure me and it was getting worse all the time. Five weeks ago my wife bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and I am pleased to say that I am now completely cured and well.

"It was impossible for me to get employment, as my face, head, and body were covered with it. The eczema first appeared on the top of my head, and it had worked all the way around down the back of my neck and around to my throat, down my body and around the hips. It itched so I would be obliged to scratch it, and the flesh was raw.

"I would first wash the affected parts with warm water and Cuticura Soap, and then apply Cuticura Ointment and let it remain on all night, and in the morning I would use Cuticura Soap. I am now all well, which all my friends can testify to, and I will be pleased to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to any and all persons who wish a speedy and permanent cure of skin diseases." TESTIMONY ALL IN IN PATRICK CASE

Recorder Goff Reserves His Decision Until Next Friday.

New York, May 23.—Today ended the testimony and arguments in Albert T. Patrick's hearing for a new trial during which his life has been twice reprieved. Recorder Goff reserved his decision, giving until Friday for the filing of briefs. The hearing closed with a dramatic appeal by Mr. Jerome to the defense and the court for the privilege of permitting Frederick B. House, Patrick's lawyer during the latter's trial on the charge of murdering William Marsh Rice, to unseal his lips from his professional pledge of secrecy and tell the court what had been said in confidence to him by Charles F. Jones, Rice's valet.

William K. Olcott, Patrick's counsel jumped to his feet, exclaiming: "I object to this miserable grand stand play of the district attorney."

Recorder Goff denied a motion of Mr. Jerome to recall Mr. House and said that statements of counsel would have absolutely no effect on the mind of the court, unless borne out by evidence.

A motion by Mr. Olcott to recall a witness for rebuttal testimony on the effects of embalming fluid was denied. Mr. Jerome said on this point: "We will never finish this case at that rate and the defendant will in probability die in the death house of old age."

"Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is the best remedy for that often fatal disease—croup. Has been used with success in our family for eight years."—Mrs. L. Whiteacre, Buffalo, N. Y.

POSTAL CONGRESS TO MEET NEXT AT MADRID.

Rome, May 23.—The international postal congress, at its session today, approved the British proposition to raise the weight of letters to one ounce.

CONDENSED MILK AND REVOLVER

Figured in Disturbance on Michigan Street Near Union Depot.

A can of condensed milk and a revolver figured in a fight on West Michigan street last evening, which resulted in the arrest of Peter Mussi and James Harkins.

Harkins, who is claimed by the police to have served time for larceny, entered the fruit store opposite the Union depot, which was in charge of Mussi. Harkins is said to have been intoxicated at the time, and he and Mussi got into a dispute. Mussi ordered Harkins out of the store, and he came back a moment later and threw a can of condensed milk through the show case.

Mussi then produced a revolver and drove Harkins from the store, and flourished the gun about on the sidewalk in front of the door.

The police placed both men under arrest and this morning Judge Cutting fined Mussi $5 and costs, and Harkins $25 and costs, for disorderly conduct.

ROAD A DISGRACE.

J. D. O'Connell Says Thoroughfare to Pike Lake is Almost Impassable.

"I have driven over nearly every road in the northern part of the state," said J. D. O'Connell, the contractor, this morning, "and with the exception of a stretch of about six miles on the Miller trunk road, I believe that the road between the city and Pike lake is in worse shape than any of them.

"The road is a disgrace to the city and to the county, and something should be done to put it in passable condition. It is a much traveled road, and it needs repairs worse than any road I know of."

JUDGE LANDIS TO SETTLE DISPUTES OF ZION CITY.

Chicago, May 23.—The attorneys in the Dowie litigation have agreed to allow Judge Landis of the United States district court to settle all the points in controversy between Voliva and Dowie, and a stipulation to that effect will be presented to the court tomorrow. A formal order, declaring that Dowie is an individual bankrupt, was entered today in Judge Landis court.

POLES WILL ALL BECOME FARMERS

If Plans of a New York Pole Be Carried Out.

New York, May 23.—The Poles who emigrate to America will all be farmers by and by if the plans of Czeslaw Raganowicz, president of the Polish National home at 404 East Fifteenth street ,turn out as well as he expects. His mission work, which was started on a small scale two years ago, is already showing results, and a half dozen colonies of Polish farmers have been established in the South, and the foundations for more are coming into Ellis Island with every boatload of emigrants from Austria and Russian Poland.

Raganowicz, who came to this country as a boy fifteen years ago, and developed into a hard headed New York business man, long ago decided that his country people were bettering their lot little by staying in New York and its vicinity to become day laborers, or going to the various mining fields throughout the country. He concluded that he couldn't use his experience more profitably than by teaching his country people that the farmer in America is the most independent man in the republic.

He first planned a campaign of education on the other side, because nearly every Pole who comes to America knows what he intends to do in this country before he pulls up stakes and leaves the fatherland. He secured the co-operation of J. Stapinski of Cracow, president of the Polish People's party and editor of the leading Polish newspaper.

With the influence of Stapinski behind the project of inducing the Polish farmers who emigrate to America to till the soil in this country, and to make agriculturists out of those who are not, a confederation of more than 300 Polish societies are held every two weeks, and at every session the speakers picture the future of the farmer in America in comparison with that of the miner, day laborer and mill hand. Many of these lectures are illustrated with stereopticon views.

President Raganowicz has made two trips to Poland himself to address these meetings and confer with the leaders of the movement there, and has persuaded many other naturalized American Poles of means to follow his example. On each trip he has traveled in the steerage in order to observe at first hand the treatment accorded Polish immigrants by the steamship companies.

"The tendency of natural born Americans to leave the farms and go to the cities is just what is going to make the problem of securing land for Polish immigrants easier," he said. "I was a farmer boy in Poland, and I know that the Poles make just as good farmers as any race under the sun.

"The rate at which the Poles are immigrating to America has almost doubled since the recent persecutions by the Russian government started. Last year more than 70,000 came to America, and if the increase keeps up for the remaining months of the year more than 150,000 will have landed at Ellis Island between January and December this year.

"The commissioners of agriculture and immigration to Virginia, Tennessee, North and South Carolina and other states further South have taken such a keen interest in the Polish farm colonies that I have been advising my countrymen to go South, and for the further reason that the land there can be secured on easier terms than in the West.

"Nearly every Pole who comes to America has enough money to buy outright a farm of moderate size. Those who haven't saved up enough money to buy can rent. Their thrifty habits will make them owners of the land in a short time, anyhow."

The Polish National Alliance, which has its headquarters in Chicago, and is a confederation of Polish societies in America, with more than 300,000 members, is also pushing the agricultural plan by advising each member to do missionary work with his relatives in Poland by mail.

MATTEUCCI DRIVEN OUT.

Naples, May 23.—That which the recent eruption of Mount Vesuvius could not accomplish, the torrents of mud resulting from the floods of the last few days have brought about. The mud has so surrounded the Royal observatory and obstructed ingress and egress that Director Matteucci, his assistants and the carbineers under him have been compelled to abandon their post and come to Naples.

DROWNED WHILE FISHING.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 23.—Excitement over having caught a big fish was the cause of Barney and Henry Lehman, 18 and 13 years of age, losing their lives in Mahew lake yesterday. The boys were far out from shore and when one of them was unable to pull in his bite, the other came to his aid and the boat was capsized. They clasped each other and went down together.

THE BOOK OF FORMS

Causes Heated Argument Among the Presbyterian Commissioners.

No Action Taken on the Report of Special Committee.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 23.—The much-talked about debate upon the adoption of the "book of forms and services" recommended by a special committee of the Presbyterian general assembly materialized late yesterday afternoon. Not in many years has an assembly been so stirred as it was over this issue and the argument became heated from its very beginning. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, chairman of the committee, maintained his usual demeanor as he made his address in presenting the report, but opposition speakers who followed did not. One of them, the Rev. Dr. Robert Johnston of Montreal, Ont., waved a copy of the book in the air as he spoke and declared that "it smells of priestcraft."

Almost two hours of time was consumed in debate. No conclusion was reached last evening and the resolutions offered on the subject and further discussion is to be made a special order at some later session of the assembly. The most intense feeling was evident in debate at times, bordering on discourtesy despite exhortations of some of the more dignified commissioners that the matter be approached and debated in an attitude of prayer. The request was made by the moderator that all applause be discontinued, but when the dramatic, dark haired Dr. Johnston, the Scotchman from Montreal, stretching himself to his full six feet four, waving his hand frantically, declared it smelled of priestcraft, applause broke out in a tremendous roar.

Dr. Van Dyke opened with a witty allusion to the psalm of David, which he said he had been repeating, "For what we are about to receive, the Lord make us truly thankful."

"There seems to be two extreme opinions," he continued, "some want it put out and strangled under foot; others want it adopted. Your committee stands where the two seas meet."

He said there was just one point on which he would fight and that was against having it called Van Dyke's report, for Dr. Moffatt and Dr. Hill and John Converse and many others were as much a part of it as he. He then took up the book and explained its adaptability to the services. He said the committee had, as best it could, only carried out the instructions of the general assembly. Dr. William F. McCauley of Cincinnatti, was the principal speaker for the opposition. He declared the question to be the most important that will come before the assembly. He based his arguments principally on the belief that its authorization by the general assembly would be interpreted by the churches everywhere that the assembly wished its adoption, although it was not mandatory. He said such an authorization might prevent union with the Cumberland church. Mr. McCauley offered a resolution excusing the committee from further work and thanking it and declaring it inexpedient to make any recommendation of the matter; and in case editions of the book of common worship are hereafter issued they shall omit any statement of authorization by the general assembly. This resolution was referred to the clerk. The Rev. Dr. Edward S. Young of Pittsburg, and Dr. Jesup of the Presbyterian of New York, spoke for the book, and Dr. Johnston and the Rev. Mr. Calloway of Oregon, against it.

Yesterday's sessions were devoted largely to home missions and in adopting the report of the home missions board the assembly voted that $1,000,000 be set aside for the work next year, an increase of $100,000.

The board of home missions for the Presbyterian church closed April 1, with all obligations met and $2,411 in the treasury. For eight successive assemblies the board came before the assembly entirely out of debt. In addition to new work on the field, they expended $40,840 for new churches and school buildings in Porto Rico, Cuba and the West. It was aided in the islands by the board of church erection. The mortgage indebtedness of home and foreign boards on the Presbyterian building in New York city has been cancelled. The new department of church and labor has been in operation for three years. Notable success has been achieved in bringing church and labor into close relation. The board has accomplished much with the problem of bringing the gospel to 14,000,000 of foreigners, who have reached our shores.

The board reports the past year in Porto Rico one of progress. In January they sent the Rev. J. J. Kilpinfletcher to the canal zone to report on the moral condition and the need and opportunity for mission work. He reported a mission field of pathetic urgency. He found total white population to be 3,000 and constantly increasing; the colored population to be about 15,000, also constantly increasing. One half of these are English-speaking negroes. The only Protestant churches there are Episcopal, Methodist and Baptist. Board reports great need for enlargement of work in Alaska. Receipts of the board for the year ending March 31, 1906, were $911,793.73; an increase over the previous year of $44,777.02. The demands for increased work call for large contributions during the coming year.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Francisco Elizado, Tuesday stabbed to death his 15-year-old stepdaughter, Guadaloupe Ramos, at Laredo, Texas, because she wished to marry against his will and then plunged the knife with which he committed the deed into his heart, dying almost instantly. Elizado was a railway employe.

Late Tuesday night Mrs. Anna Stevens was called to the door of her home, 1122 East avenue, Hamilton, Ohio, by a man, supposed to be her husband, Charles Stevens, from whom she was separated. As she opened the door some one fired, the bullet entering her right eye and causing instant death. The police later arrested Stevens.

The first move of the Freight Handlers union to enforce a new scale of wages was made Tuesday at the Kensington sheds of the Michigan Central railroad, at Chicago, when 110 men walked out after the company had refused to sign an agreement with the union.

Several horses owned by Thomas W. Lawson were sold at public auction Tuesday. Dreamer O'Dreamworld, 2:11¼, was bought by W. R. Janvier of New York city, for $2,025. John R. Graham of East Corinth, Maine, purchased the well known trotter Ponce De Leon, 2:13, for which Mr. Lawson paid $6,500 several years ago, for $475.

The Missouri supreme court Tuesday upheld the lower court's decision in imposing death sentence on Edward Boteman, negro, convicted of having criminally assaulted Myrtle Digby, a white waitress at a hotel in Aurora, June 29 is the date set for the execution.

By falling off a pile of lumber in a lumber yard, Edwin Carlson was killed and his twin brother, Emil, fatally injured Tuesday at Des Moines, Iowa. The boys 9 years of age, are sons of Gus Carlson.

Tom Jackson, a negro, who had been arrested for holding up and robbing Hassell Barnes, a white boy, of $1, was lynched at Blanchard, La., Tuesday.

Five persons were injured by a collision between two automobiles west of Springfield ,Ohio, Tuesday night, one of the machines being thrown down a 10-foot embankment. Jerry Williams sustained a fracture of the right shoulder, Harry Philipps had an arm broken and Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Alberta Schaefer and Mrs. Philippe were badly bruised and cut. Mrs. Philipps was hurled against a barbed wire fence.

WILL DREDGE FOR PISTOL.

Penn Mutual Claims That Joshua Burdette Shot Himself.

Guthrie, O. T., May 23.—A prominent life insurance man here says that the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company will soon have machinery on the ground at Eufaula, I. T., to dredge the well in which the representatives of the company expect to find the pistol with which they claim Joshua Burdette took his own life. The company has adhered to the suicide theory ever since Burdette's death, and has made one examination of the well, but without results. The one for which they are now preparing will be still more thorough.

Burdette's body was found lying beside the well on the night of April 3 last, with a bullet wound in the right side of the head. The body had fallen toward the well when the fatal shot was fired, spattering blood on the well curb, and after striking the ground rolled down away from the well a little. The general belief at Eufaula seems to be that Burdette was killed by his enemies. In his long business career he had incurred the bitter enmity of several people with whom he had had dealings, and had remarked that he feared assassination. His place of business at Eufaula had been burned twice, and his enemies were charged with setting that on fire.

At the time of his death Burdette carried $270,000 in life insurance, most of it in old line companies. Within two months before his death he had taken out a $10,00 policy in the Penn Mutual, the policy containing a clause which made it void in case of suicide. It is understood that all of the other companies will pay their policies without contest.

INTERESTING RECORDS.

Remarkable Preservation of Sound in Phonographs in Austria.

Vienna, May 23.—Some remarkable records are treasured in the phonographic archives of the Imperial Academy of Sciences at Vienna. One of the most striking is that of the Memnumbo war songs, with tom-tom accompaniment. Others have been obtained illustrating the series of drum signals used by the natives for communication between villages.

Dr. Exner supplied from India a number of records of old Sanskrit songs. This spring a party is going to Greenland to make further records. The archives also contain records of the voices of living prominent men in the dual monarchy, and it is intended to keep the collection as far up to date as possible.

TRYING TO SETTLE WAGES.

A CLEAN CITY CLUB.

Chicago has a "clean city club" that has been organized among its school children, and in the way of education along the lines of individual civic duties, and actual accomplishments in the way of cleaner and better conditions, it looks very promising. Duluth might follow this example with good effect.

A thing about this Chicago clean city club that will appeal to childish pride and serve to keep alive interest in the organization and its objects, is the club button, which each member is to wear. The constitution of the club is simple, and consists practically of only four simple rules:

Pick up at least one piece of paper from the street every day.
Clean your own back yard and porches and try to interest the girls and boys next door.
Keep at least one flower in the window.
Be smiling and clean yourself.

The idea has proved so popular that the club had a membership of 1,000 by the end of its first week. A friendly contest for membership was held between different groups of organizers, each with its own captain, and the amiable rivalry that this produced resulted in quick acquisitions of members.

The value of such an organization needs no explanation to make it clear. The promotion of civic responsibility is best and most permanently done by proper training of the children. A child belonging to such an organization, wearing its button and familiar with its rules, is likely to observe them to a considerable extent at least, and it will be, therefore, on the road to good citizenship. A child that remembers to pick a piece of paper out of the street every day is not likely to throw one there. Through the children this education along the line of good municipal housekeeping would spread to the parents, and again "a little child shall lead them."

Careless parents who found their children setting an example of cleanliness and respect for the health and convenience of others could hardly continue in their carelessness. Not to be outdone by their children, they would have to stop throwing paper in the street and keep their yards and homes neat and presentable.

Duluth should certainly have a "clean city club" for the school children.

"PLEASE OMIT FLOWERS."

Under that caption a minister, in a communication to the New York Globe, makes a plea for simplicity in funerals based on very practical arguments.

He states that he was impelled to his writing by the spectacle of a funeral wending its way to the cemetery, the hearse preceded by three open carriages filled with flowers. The wreaths were of the most expensive kind, and a florist whose store was close by said that they must have cost at least $300.

"And this extravagance," says the indignant minister, "in days when people suffer from hunger! In eastern lands large trays of food are carried before a funeral and distributed to the poor. But of what earthly use are those costly wreathes of flowers to everybody except the florist and the undertaker?"

The parson is right. The custom of associating flowers with funerals is a pretty thing, and somehow it seems to be a source of comfort to be able to pay the last respects in such a beautiful form. But practically speaking, it is a waste of money and a mistaken idea of duty. The same money, put into relief of the poor in the name of the departed, would grow the infinitely more flowers of sympathy and benevolence in the hearts of men, and would bring joy and happiness where gloom and ostentation is the only result today.

The minister rightly adds that nothing could be more poetic and touching than the placing of a single blossom on the coffin of a loved one, but that these carriages of flowers paraded through the streets are mere ostentatious vulgarity, to be discouraged by people of refined tastes.

Then the minister told of a recent funeral at which he officiated, where a man had died in very straitened circumstances, and the firm for which he worked placed on his casket a wreath of flowers that cost $25. He added to this story no comment, and none is necessary. That sum, put into an increase in wages, would have soothed and made easier the last days of that workman; it might have even prolonged his life by relieving him of worry and by giving him small luxuries his stricken system craved. But put into a garish wreath it brought no comfort to his departed spirit, nor aid to his bereaved family.

The giving of flowers at funerals is prompted by the most kindly spirit, and it is a pretty custom until one analyzes it and sees that it is useless waste and often in bad taste.

LETTER-WRITING.

The publication of the world's postal statistics by the Universal Postal Union at Berne furnished some interesting comparative statistics regarding the activities of various countries in letter-writing. Curiously enough, the figures are not at all valuable as an index to commercial or industrial activities. Following is the arrangement in the order of number of letters and postal cards per capita passing through the postoffice in 1905, of all countries having more than twenty per head: Great Britain, 78.3 per head of population; United States, 67.6 per head; New Zealand, 66.3; Switzerland, 59.7; Germany, 55.9; Denmark, 41.6; Austria, 38.2; Argentine, 37.2; Luxembourg, 34.6; Holland, 31.1; Belgium, 29.4; Sweden, 26.4; France, 26.2; Norway, 20.5.

Upon finding the Anglo-Saxon nations at the head of the list, with Germany a little behind, one would be pardoned for presuming that prolixity of correspondence was a good index to progress and commercial activity. But when France, Sweden, Norway and Holland are found far down in the list, below Argentine and Luxembourg, the conclusion that the first view is an error is irresistible. Countries having compulsory education, like France, Denmark and Norway, hold a mediocre place, while countries noted for their high percentage of illiteracy are well to the front.

United States Consul McNally of Liege, commenting upon these figures, says that temperament may figure, because it is said on the continent that an Englishman will write to a friend fifteen minutes away from his home, but a Frenchman will walk that far and communicate what he has to say verbally.

"Wise Frenchman," will doubtless be the comment of those who have noticed recent local developments in political correspondence and contract-writing.

Facilities for correspondence do not seem to increase it, either, for some of the countries with the fewest postoffices stand highest in the list of letter-writing countries. For instance, Great Britain, which leads in letter-writing, has one postoffice for every 1,859 people, while Switzerland, which stands fourth in letter-writing, has one for every 896 of population.

THE CALEB POWERS CASE.

Kentucky is to have another chance to redeem herself in the eyes of the country by doing justice in the famous case of the state against Caleb Powers, charged with the murder of Governor Goebel, and three times convictd of that offense.

The action of the federal court in remanding the case back to the state authorities for a fourth trial gives the state a chance to do long-delayed justice, and there are signs that this time justice will really be done.

The conviction of Powers in three trials has been, in the eyes of the country, due to purely political influences. Nobody can be found who is willing to go on record as saying that Powers has yet had anything like a fair trial. The state supreme court, in setting aside the three convictions already had, makes a practical admission of this obvious fact. Those who have studied the evidence produced against Powers are unanimously of the opinion that no clearer case of injustice was ever perpetrated, and that it would be a sad travesty on justice to hang a man on the sort of evidence that has been introduced against him.

And yet there are some mitigating circumstances, strange as it may seem, that explain, though they cannot justify, the miscarriage of justice that has resulted in the previous convictions. Nowhere in the country has politics ever developed into such bitterness as it has in Kentucky. Practically, a state of civil war existed. The barrier of partisanship divided men as widely as the bitterness of the Civil war divided that generation. They had fallen into the habit of stealing elections if they saw the chance and if they could not get them fairly, and it was not such a long step as it might seem from this to stealing conviction, even for a capital offense, when a political enemy was on trial.

So, Powers being a Republican, they packed his juries with Democrats, and had no trouble in convicting him on the scantiest of evidence. It shows what partisanship gone mad will do with otherwise decent men. In other states partisanship has not, so far, gone extensively into murder and assassination and the corruption of the courts, but it has delayed and defeated and defrauded the people, and balked them in their efforts to attain their rights.

Fortunately, however, that purblind form of partisanship which can acknowledge nothing good in the opposite party or in any of its members is rapidly fading away, and common sense is taking its place. This means that parties, in order to get success, must merit it, and that no longer can corrupt practices and pilfering of the public be cloaked under the guise of partisanship.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"While there is a big demand for laborers in San Francisco at the present time, there will not be a great deal of work for the more skilled workmen for some little time to come," said T. B. Roberts of Oakland, Cal., at the Spalding. "The prospect of work for draughtsmen, for instance, will be poor for three or four months. Building operations of a permanent character will not begin for several weeks, possibly months. At the present time there is not enough work to keep the resident draughtsmen busy, and yet a lot of this class has flocked in from the outside, expecting to get plenty of work at good wages.

"A good many men who have always worked as clerks, bookkeepers, stenographers, etc., and who have never done hard manual labor in their lives, have been forced by circumstances to accept the commonest kind of work, if they want to live. A large number, of course, have left the city altogether, and gone elsewhere in search of work, but there is always a certain number of young fellows who do not have any money ahead, and who are therefore unable to lie around idle long enough to get work such as they desire. The experience in this case will be a good one, for it never does a person harm to have to get down and work for all there is in him. When he finds better employment later on in life he appreciates his position and surroundings all the more because of it. I was up against it myself once, and know how it is."

"At $2,000 a night, Sarah Bernhardt could well afford to play in a tent in Duluth, even if she did shiver while she was going through with the performance," said Alfred Meyer of Boston at the St. Louis. "According to the evidence submitted in a court case in Boston, that is the salary the Divine one was getting, although out of that I guess she paid the salaries of her company. Even at that a very comfortable margin was left, enough to keep the old lady in comfortable circumstances for a good deal longer time than she has any hope of living, I imagine.

"A fellow brought suit against her in Boston, when she was playing there, for $25,000, but before the thing came to a show down the matter was settled up to the satisfaction of all concerned. Probably it was only an advertising scheme. The plaintiff in the case claimed that he had entered into a contract with Sarah under which he was to secure her an engagement in this country, for which he was to receive as compensation 5 per cent of her salary.

"He procured an engagement for her with Shubert & Company of New York, at a salary said to have been $2,000 a week for ten weeks, making a total of $120,000 for her appearance in this country. He claimed $6,000, which he said she had not paid him according to the terms of their contract."

"The lake park region of Minnesota has been known and sung as a beautiful lake region since early days," said F. C. Thompson of Detroit, Minn., at the Lenox. "Not far north of Detroit the Mississippi has its source in Lake Itasca. The region is one of rolling prairie, with lakes set down in every hollow, large and small, of its vast area. A great glacier formerly covered it and its peculiar topography is said to be the work of the ice sheet. Now it is covered with farm houses and prosperous cities, towns and hamlets, and railways penetrate it in all directions.

"The general elevation of the lake park region is about 1,000 feet above the sea level. With its thousands of lakes and fine fishing and small game hunting, it is an ideal locality for a summer's rest and recreation. It is becoming increasingly popular as a summer resort. The trouble with most of the Minnesota resorts is that they are not advertised widely enough, or else it is because they are too far from big centers of population. Some of the Detroit lakes nearer Chicago or Milwaukee, for instance, would mean fortunes to anyone owning hotels on their shores. Again, there are so many pretty lakes in Northern Minnesota that the summer visitors are scattered over a wide area."

As poets have a license, so does genius. One often hears of the eccentricities of genius. John L. Sullivan is, or was a genius in his particular line, and so it is allowable that he should have eccentricities. A few of them crop out around the Spalding hotel, where he is a guest this week. Whether intended to or not, they attract attention.

In the cafe the other day John was smoking a big, black cigar. In front of him was a large cup of coffee, from which he took occasional sips. Every now and then he took the cigar from his mouth, slowly swirled the unlit end about in his coffee, and then put the weed back in his mouth with an evident relish. Coffee and nicotine appeared to be a combination that especially appealed to his palate.

Everybody has seen a big bulldog lying in the sun on somebody's lawn, seemingly supremely contented. Part of the time his eyes would be closed, and part of the time half open. Other dogs might pass him by, or stop and stare at him, but they received not the slightest attention. Perhaps he had finished a bountiful dinner, and his paws were resting on a bone. But there he would drowse for an hour at a stretch, seeing nothing, hearing nothing, just simply resting and enjoying life in his own way.

That is John L. Sullivan as he appears seated in one of the big chairs in the lobby of the Spalding. In looking at him, one cannot help thinking of a bulldog sunning himself on somebody's lawn. John stares right before him, with eyes half closed most of the time, and entirely closed part of the time. At irregular intervals he slowly turns his head, and his impassive countenance is offered to the view of another portion of the lobby. Then his head swings back again, and the dozing is resumed. Once in a while some admirer will come up and shake John by the hand, and then will go away again. John looks up at the intruder without the slightest flicker of interest, and extends his big hand. Everything about John is big. When he appears dressed for the street his breadth of shoulder is something remarkable, and his is a figure that will attract attention anywhere.

THE WEATHER.

A fresh northeast wind and a bright sun competed today to create conditions, and between them they made it rather fine, though the wind had slightly the better of the contest, and succeeded in keeping it cooler than most people would like to see it. Last night's fog was thick, but in the night it faded away, and this morning was brilliant. Last night's lowest temperature was 40 degs., and yesterday's highest was 56 degs. Nothing better is looked for by the weather man, who predicts cool weather and prossibly showers, with brisk and moderately high northeast winds, tonight and tomorrow.

A year ago today was much like today clear and bright, but made chilly by an east wind.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The New Mexico disturbance remained about stationary but caused some rain over Eastern Minnesota, Northern Michigan, the eastern slopes of the Rockies and the far Northwest. A storm area has appeared off the South Atlantic coast attended by rains there; Jacksonville repuorting the unusual fall if 6.09 inches in the past twenty-four hours. The barometer is high over north Atlantic states and north of Minnesota. Conditions favor moderately strong northenst winds, cool temperature and partly cloudy weather in this locality tonight and Thursday with possibly llglit showers.

"However Far We Roam."

However far we roam
Our hearts are filled with longing for the home
Where all our old associations center—
The tiny village by the placid river,
The weather beaten farmhouse on the hill
Which we can never enter
Without a joyous thrill,
Or think of now without an eyelid's quiver.

How dear those ne'er forgotten places;
The room where first we saw the light,
The fireplace where each bitter winter's night,
The great logs, blazing, brightened the fond faces
Of loved ones now forever vanished—
The cheerful father who all trouble banished.
The brave, unselfish mother, crowned with holy graces,
Whose hand and thought ne'er rested
From care of those that 'neath her roof-tree nested
The sisters and the brothers full of life
In eager emulation free from strife.

Baseball English.

Kansas City Journal: The baseball season is now in full swing, and the Kansas City team inaugurated its campaign by winning from Columbus. This was not a glittering triumph, measured by post records of the opponents, but it was enough to stir the ancient and honorable order of "fans" to a wild pitch of enthusiasm. From now on we shall be regaled with that unique brand of literature which flashes from the trenchant pens of the sporting writers, and which is unparalleled for richness of color, originality and picturesqueness. In order to tempt the timid reader who thinks he is anchored to classic erudition, attention is called to this paragraph from the report of the first Columbus game:

"Columbus, Ohio, April 18.—(Special.)—Kansas City stormed into Columbus today and copped the candy. Before a crowd of almost 11,000 people, the rejuvenated Blues played the Senators off the boards and won 6 to 2. * * * Kansas City was able to gather but one scattering hit in four innings and got but one man, Hill, to third. Hill reached that corner with but one out, dying after Whitney popped to Ryan and Burke fanned. Now this pair of Blues, who couldn't hit in early, started things in the fifth. Whitney drove safely to right and took third when Burke made good with the club in a hit and run play. Wrigley's dribble on Sullivan let Whitney score and left two Blues on the sacks. Burke and Sullivan worked a double steal, the manager scoring. This bundle of two put Columbus one behind, as Friel had scored in the opening inning. Swann passed the third baseman and Klinn put him over when he tripled past Hill to the left-center fence. Phyle, with one out in the seventh, walked. Hill followed him with his third safety of the game. Whitney lifted to short right. Ryan and Elston went for the ball. Neither took it. So the bases filled. Burke's long fly to Coulter let Phyle in."

What is more virile or throbbing with greater elemental energy? "Whitney popped to Ryan and Burke fanned." Could Kipling beat that? No, he couldn't, for Kipling lacks the lurid imagination of the sporting writer and is hampered by certain scholastic restrictions unknown to the wild free life of the press box. For style and howling rhetorical abandonment give us the baseball chronicler every time.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

At a meeting of the county commissioners held some time last year, an appropriation of $4,000 was made for the purpose of building additions to the courthouse and otherwise improving the building. The matter has rested quietly since that time, but some of the commissioners are anxious to see the work commenced, and at the next meeting they propose advertising for bids according to plans already drawn. The Herald publishes a large number of interviews with leading citizens in which they oppose any further expenditure on the present courthouse, and urge that the location should be changed to a downtown site, and the money now set aside for improvements be used to purchase a site in the business section.

Byron Segog is moving into his new cottage on the hill at the West end. It is a neat little house, and no doubt "By" and his bride will think there is no place like it.

Capt. Lutes has rented his new Jingo block to Judd Kitchen for one year.

Ed Vosburg, an old steamboat man of Bay City, Mich., is mate of the Dove this season. He has brought his family to Duluth.

About 10 o'clock last night, while coupling on a trestle in the St. Paul & Duluth yards, William Johnson, a switchman, slipped and fell beneath the moving train, receiving injuries from which he died this morning. The deceased came from Fairfield, Minn., where his parents reside.

P. J. Richwine and wife of Tower are at the Merchants.

Louis Loeb is in the city again on one of his periodical commercial visits.

Mrs. J. W. Martindale presented her husband with a 10½ pound boy baby on the evening of May 20.

Capt. Henri Dewitt and bride arrived in Duluth yesterday afternoon and was on hand at the regular drill of the company at the armory last night. After the drill, Sergt. Will Larry stepped forward and on behalf of the company presented the captain with a handsome silver water set, inscribed as follows: Compliments of Company K, Second Regiment, M. N. G., to Capt. and Mrs. H. Dewitt."

Too Truthful.

Buffalo Enquirer: Norman Hapgood, the journalist and essayist, was discussing American newspapers. "It is not enough that our papers shall tell the truth," he said. "Trush telling in itself is not particularly wise nor praiseworthy. Indeed, it is sometimes the reverse.

"Thus a young man called on a young lady one spring morning very early. He had his big automobile along. He wanted to give the young lady a morning spin through the country.

"A little girl, the young lady's niece, answered the bell.

"'Is your auntie in?' said the young man.

"'Yes, sir,' said the little girl.

"'That's good. Where is she?' he went on.

"'She's upstairs,' said the little girl, 'in her nighty, looking over the balustrade.'"

Of Myself.

This only grant me—that my means may
Too low for envy, for contempt too high.
Some honor I would have,
Not from great deeds, but good alone;
The unknown are better than ill known—
Rumor can open the grave.
Acquaintance I would have, but when 't depends
Not on the number, but the choice of friends.

Books should, not business, entertain the light,
And sleep, as undisturbed as death, the night.
My house a cottage more
Than palace, and should fitting be
For all my use, no luxury.
My garden painted o'er
With Nature's hands, not Art's, and pleasures yield,
Horace might envy in his Sabine field.

Thus would I double my life's fading space,
For he that runs it well twice runs his race;
And in this true delight,
These unbought sports, this happy state,
I would not fear, nor wish, my fate;
But boldly say each night,
Tomorrow let my sun his beams display,
Or in clouds hide them; I have lived today.

IT IS NOW DOLLARS

Frederick Warde's Scathing Comment on Dramatic Standard.

Splendid Lecture Recital on "Hamlet" Heard by Small Audience.

It is not the theatrical trust or syndicate that degrade the stage as so many like to believe, but the people themselves, according to Frederick Warde. In his lecture recital last evening at the Lyceum after reciting Shakespeare's advice to the players he declared that every player and every orator could learn from that all there is in his art.

"That was the standard of dramatic art in 1603 when this play of 'Hamlet' was first produced. And what is the standard today? Dollars! The drama which should represent the achievements of the past, the glory of the present and the hope of the future has descended to that state when the more degrading the performance the greater number of dollars it seems to bring in. Men who mouth their words and rant and tear passion to tatters are those whom the public showers with its adulation.

"And who is responsible for this? It is not we behind the footlights, it is you in front who fill the coffers of the people that supply you with the stuff. It is not the syndicate or trust—call it what you will—they simply give you what you will give up your money for. It is the dollars they want."

Mr. Warde thinks the hope of the future is in the establishment of a national theater and thinks that it rests with some of the wealthy men of the country to establish and endow it, the government to then nationalize it. The influence of such an institution would be toward encouraging and preserving the best and would unquestionably tend toward the elevation of the stage and drama in the nation.

Mr. Warde remarked with reference to the speech of Hamlet which brought forth this comment, that he would have it placed in the dressing room of every theater, just as he had previously said that he would have the speech of Polonious to his son, Laertes, hung on the walls of every schoolroom.

The lecture recital was a rare treat and it is lamentable that so small an audience heard it. It was a most illuminating discussion of the character of Hamlet by one who has thoroughly studied the part. His splendid stage training and fine elocutionary ability make his reading magnificent. Taken all in all, from the standpoint of entertainment, instructiveness and the artistic sense, it was one of the most delightful evening Duluth people have been offered in a long time.

Mr. Warde advises the person who starts out to read Shakespeare to throw away the commentaries. Shakespeare is plain and direct, he says, and his meaning is never hidden. The keynote of every character is found in the first soliloquy of that character, not the first speech but the first passage in which the individual speaks his inmost thoughts. Thus with Hamlet it is the speech beginning with the lines, "O that this too solid flesh would melt." Do not look for hidden meanings, says Mr. Warde, accept the text for just what it says and you will understand Shakespeare.

Mr. Warde believes that Hamlet was as sane as any man and that the oath which he required of Horatio and his companions after the revelation by the ghost clearly proves that he had it in his mind to feign insanity. Every act that followed, he believes, was in line with a clear and set purpose and was that of a perfectly sane man.

Mr. Warde also finds Shakespeare speaking many of his own thoughts and convictions through his players. In Hamlet he speaks plainly his belief in a future life and the immortality of the soul.

This afternoon Mr. Warde spoke of "Shakespeare and His Plays" and this evening will discuss "Julius Caesar." Duluth people will remember very keenly Mr. Warde's first appearance here in this play some years ago, and the splendid manner in which he played the character of Mark Antony is sufficient that his reading this evening will be a delight in every sense.

METROPOLITAN—John L. Sullivan and company.

FINE BILL AT BIJOU.

Headed by little Rosie Doble, one of those child wonders, but one assuredly worth while, the bill at the Bijou this week is very good and its merit has not gone without recognition from the large crowds which have filled the theater at every performance.

Little Rose really is a clever violinist and the tot's skill provokes all sorts of enthusiasm. The ladies fairly go into spasms over the child. Another act of merit is that contributed by Adele Purvis Onri and Harry Tsudo. Despite the handicap of such names, they make good with their clever electrical dancing.

The moving pictures are a special feature this week, showing the San Francisco fire and scenes incidental thereto. They are very good. The other acts on the bill are the Green Brothers, bat jugglers; Frank Milton and the De Long sisters, who have a skit called "The Constable;" Clark and Temple, "The Bell Boy and the Maid;" and Morey Long, who sings, "Will You Love Me in December as You Did in May?"

JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

John L. Sullivan and his company of vaudevillians will give another matinee at the Metropolitan tomorrow. There will be another Saturday and John L. will conclude his engagement with two performances Sunday. A number of athletic features have been added to the vaudeville bill, but the latter is strong enough itself to stand alone in any city in the country, according to those who have seen it. The Exposition Four, Hall and Thorndyke, Hodge, Le Mar and Lancaster, the San Francisco disaster pictures, Kid Cutler and John L. himself are all coming in for lots of applause at every performance.

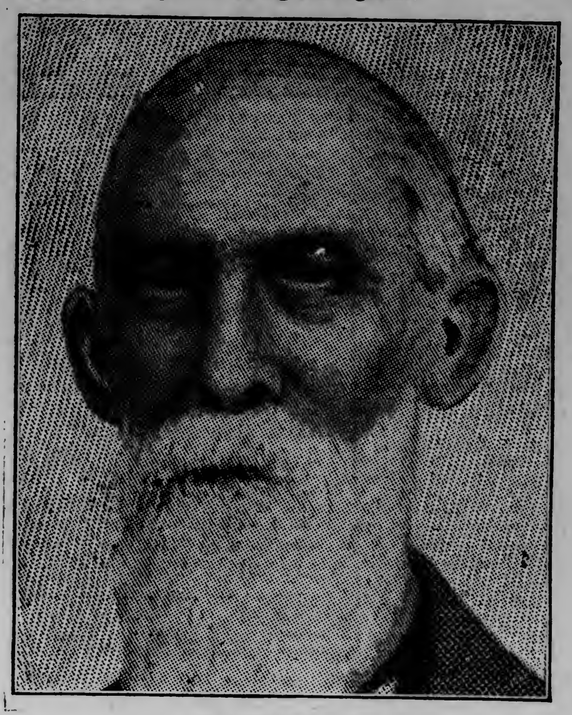
WOMAN DROWNED

While Milking a Cow in the Basement of a Barn.

St. Paul, May 23.—While milking a cow in the basement of a barn on her farm, ten miles east of Cannon Falls, Mrs. John Hedin, wife of a prominent farmer, was drowned. While she was busy milking the cow there was a cloudburst which almost filled the basement with water. From every window in the basement the water poured in swirling rapids, and before she could make an outcry or escape, she found herself foundering about the cellar up to her neck. She made several desperate efforts to reach the stairway leading to the first floor, but the force of the water bore her back and finally, faint with fear and exhaustion, she fell back and was drowned. No rescue party was able to reach her or the imprisoned animals because of the depth of the water. The family was frantic with grief, but helpless to save the mother lying at the bottom of the inundated basement.

Healthy on His 50th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. J. Bryant Miller, of Ingram, Pa., was enabled to celebrate his 50th wedding anniversary in good health. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has kept him strong and vigorous.



MR. J. BRYANT MILLER.

Before I had used Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, over two years ago, I was in very feeble health, hardly able to be about, let alone attend to any business. We looked forward with great anticipation to our golden anniversary of fifty years of wedded life. My family realized by feeble condition.

I had used many tonics and so-called remedies all to no purpose. My daughter purchased six bottles of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I commenced to use it as directed, and improvement in my condition began at once. I continued to use the medicine and will do so as long as I can get it. I am in better health and stronger than I have been for five years.—J. Bryant Miller, Ingram, Pa., Oct. 9, 1905.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic, builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles and richness to the blood. It brings into action all the vital forces, it makes digestion perfect and enables you to get from the food you eat all the nourishment it contains. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children. It strengthens and sustains the system, is a promoter of good health and longevity, makes the old young and keeps the young strong.

CAUTION—When you ask for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. Sold in sealed bottles only, never in bulk. Look for the "Old Chemist" trade-mark on the label. Imitations are positively dangerous to the health. Duffy's is sold by all reliable druggists and grocers, or direct, $1 a bottle. Be sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

JOHN KELLEY FOUND GUILTY

Convicted of Bringing Stolen Watch Into This State.

John E. Kelley, who was indicted for grand larceny in the second degree, was convicted yesterday afternoon, the jury returning a verdict after deliberating a few minutes. His offense is punishable by a county jail term, five years in the penitentiary, the reformatory or a fine of $1,000.

Kelley was indicted under a law passed some years ago, which makes it an offense to bring stolen goods into Minnesota from another state, and provides that the person bringing such goods may be prosecuted for the same degree of theft that he might be accused of in the state where the stealing occurred.

R. C. McLean, the complaining witness, claimed Kelley took his watch while they were drinking in a Superior, Wis., saloon, April 15 last. Kelley claimed that McLean, in a burst of generosity, gave him the watch, a timepiece, valued at about $40. He produced four witnesses to support his claim. The state produced four witnesses, besides McLean, to prove its case.

DULUTH MAN STABS WOMAN IN THE BACK

the sight of a woman rushing toward him, evidently in the utmost terror.

"Tell me a place where I can hide," she pleaded. "There is a man after me and he wants to kill me, he has threatened to do so many times."

According to the officer, he pointed out to her a house where she might feel safe, and thought no more of the affair. Women in distress are not so uncommon in that part of the state as to attract undue attention.

But the woman did not stay long in International Falls. She appears to have suspected that the man she feared knew of her whereabouts, and so crossing the river to Fort Frances, under cover of darkness, took the train for Baudette. She arrived in the latter village some time Saturday morning.

But in some way London learned of her flight, and followed. He arrived in Baudette soon after Mrs. Flett, and at once set out to find her.

Where they first met is not known, but one of the hotel keepers tells of putting the couple out of his place early in the day because they were quarreling and making too much noise.

The next scene is the one in another hotel at supper time. Mrs. Flett was eating at one of the tables. At the same board were two or three men.

Suddenly London burst into the room. He held a large pocket knife in his right hand and without saying a word walked up close to the woman. She had not seen him approaching and when he seized her roughly by the shoulder, she half sprang from her chair.

But just then the knife blade descended and buried itself in her back directly under the left shoulder blade. With a cry and a groan the victim fell from her seat and lay bleeding on the floor.

At the first sign of violence the men at the table had jumped up and they had the man last before he could have done further violence, had he so intended. The woman was carried to a room in the hotel.

The sheriff was not called until Tuesday, and when he returned to Bemidji brought the man and three witnesses. Mrs. Flett was too badly wounded to be moved.

It is not known what London's defense will be, but it is being prepared by John F. Gibbons, who has been retained to defend him.

WEDDING KEPT A SECRET.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, May 23.—After keeping their wedding a profound secret for four months, Rachael E. Prosser and J. Howard Newell, popular young people of this city, yesterday confessed and were forgiven by the parents of the bride. The young man has charge of the advertising department of the United States Gypsum company's general offices in this city, and has at no time intimated that he had been married. According to the account given by them, the young couple left one evening for Webster City, and, returning the same night on a late train, pretended that they had merely been out spending the evening. The marriage license issued at Webster City shows that they were married by Rev. Ginn of the Methodist church, on Jan. 27.

ENGINEERS BALLOT FOR GRAND OFFICERS.

Memphis, Tenn., May 23.—Almost the entire day's session of the convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers was devoted to the balloting for grand officers, but when adjournment was taken the count had not been concluded, but an authoritative announcement was made that the following will in all probability be the officers who will serve during the ensuing term:

Grand chief engineer, W. S. Stone, term unexpired; assistant grand chief engineers, E. W. Hurley, M. W. Cadle and E. A. Burgess; first grand engineer, W. B. Prenter; second grand engineer, C. H. Salmons; third grand engineer, Deloss Everett; first grand assistant engineer, H. Boutelle, second grand assistant engineer, J. C. Currie; grand guide, A. C. Phipps; grand chaplain, George R. Dority.

FRESH SEARCH FOR IRON.

Renewed Interest Taken in Prospecting Around Pine River.

Pine River, Minn., May 23.—A drill is at work again ten miles west of town and the interest in iron lands, which has been lax for a few months, is reviving. The iron craze, however, is not bothering the farmers much and all open land has been cropped while the work of clearing the timbered portions is progressing rapidly. Crops are up and the indications are for a good yield.

Dr. E. E. Holman has purchased six acres within the town limits on the bank of the river and will erect a sanitarium and hospital buildings. The nearest institutions of this kind are at Brainerd and Walker, each thirty miles distant.

DROWNED BEFORE EYES OF FAMILIES.

South Haven, Mich., May 23.—Scott Shepperd of Chicago, aged 19, and Clarence Coleman of Kalamazoo, Mich., 20, were drowned yesterday before the eyes of the Shepperd and Coleman families, who were having a family picnic at the lake. The young men slipped into the water from a raft and, clutching hold of each other in the water, sank before aid could reach them.

PEEPING PASTOR IS ASKED TO RESIGN.

Utica, Ohio, May 23.—The Rev. Boyd Gay, a Presbyterian minister, has been asked by a committee to resign his pastorate. The committee says it has evidence that he was seen peeping in a window at night.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

It would seem that after the years of popularity which John L. Sullivan has enjoyed, the American people would allow the love and respect they once had for him as a fighting man, die out, now that he is retired and practically out of the game. This is not true, however, as the large audiences at the Metropolitan attest. Last evening the play house was crowded and the advance sale of seats for this evening's performances is large.

Who, at some time or another in his life, has not wished that he were a fighter. That the American public likes the game is evidenced by the support accorded it. John L. the greatest type of the American fighter, the conqueror of the pugilistic world, certainly has the respect of the people and especially of those who have attempted to best him in the squared circle.

When John L. announced to his audience on Monday evening that he had a wrestler with him who could throw any man in the house in fifteen minutes, friends went to him and said, that in as much as a number of fake wrestling matches had been pulled off in Duluth last winter they believed it would be advisable to cut that number from the program.

"There'll be no fake wrestling matches in connection with anything that I am concerned in," said the big fellow, very promptly, "and if any of the men that go on here attempt to fake I will take them out and fan the bluffs with them. Nothing but good clean sport goes with me. That's all."

In the wrestling matches last evening, Carl Mattson, the well known local mat artist, who has been engaged by the Sullivan company for the week, had all the best of it with the three men that went onto the stage with the idea of being able to stay fifteen minutes. Frank Bonsell, a cousin to Herrera, the fighter who meets Battling Nelson, Friday evening in Los Angeles, was the first victim and it took Mattson just one minute and twenty-seven seconds to dispose of him. Jimmy Theriam of Winnipeg lasted one minute and four seconds and Curley Ulrich, the Superior boxer, broke all records by staying three minutes and twenty-seven seconds.

This evening Mattson will take on Charles Knowles, Hans Peterson, Edward Lang, Charles Fisher and Walter Noble. Mattson agrees to throw the five in fifteen minutes or forfeit $25.

"I will give $500 to any man who will discover anything fake about any of the wrestling matches pulled off under our management," said Mr. Frank Hall, manager of the Sullivan company last evening. "The big fellow will not stand for any of that kind of 'sport.'"

UNIONISTS WIN CASE

Decision Rendered in the Legal Contest of Presbyterians.

Decatur, Ill., May 23.—The legal contest instituted to prevent the union of the Cumberland Presbyterian church with the Presbyterian has been decided in favor of the unionists. Judge Johns last night made public his decision in which he refused to grant the injunction prayed for by the anti-unionists and dismissed the bill on demurrer. A written opinion will be handed down today.

The decision was not unexpected by the leaders of the anti-unionists. Their attorneys announce that they will appeal the case probably to the supreme court of Illinois.

CHILDREN'S SERVICES.

Ascension Day to be Obsverved in Holy Trinity Church.

Special Ascension day services will be held in Holy Trinity chapel, Twentieth avenue east and Superior street, tomorrow. At 10 a. m. there will be holy communion, and Bishop Morrison will probably make an address.

At 4:30 p. m. there will be a children's floral service, to be participated in by all the children of the Sunday school. They will bring wild flowers, and during the singing of one of the hymns will gather their flowers into a floral crown. After the service, the flowers will be sent to the children in the hospitals.

This service for the children is very picturesque, and usually well attended. Members of Holy Trinity parish have received special invitations to attend one or both services.

BUYS HANDSOME HOME.

Pentecost Mitchell Purchases George Cheseborough's Residence for $25,000.

Pentecost Mitchell, general manager of the Oliver Mining company, has purchased the Cheseborough residence, at 2220 East Superior street, for $25,000, and will take possession of the property July 1. The sale was made through the office of J. A. Stephenson. The residence was built three years ago. It is of brick and stucco construction, comprising twelve rooms. The real estate consists of four lots fronting Superior street on the south side.

C. C. Cokefair and family, who have been occupying the house will take Bishop Morrison's house at 2131 East Superior street for the summer.

ROW OVER SCHIFF.

London, May 23.—The correspondent at Tokio of the Daily Telegraph says that consequent to a petty dispute over the reception of Jacob Schiff, the American banker, the Japanese government has issued a regulation forbidding the Korean imperial household to entertain foreign guests without first consulting the Japanese resident general.

BIG RECEIPTS OF GOLD.

San Francisco, May 23.—Sixty-two boxes of English sovereigns valued at $1,500,000 were brought to this city from Australia by the Oceanic company's steamship Sierra. The gold is consigned to local banks and is the largest single shipment of its kind in years.

vania railroad are said to be perfecting plans to bring about a more thorough probing through the state legislature. Such an investigation would include an inquiry into all the details surrounding the contracts for steel rails, engines and other equipment made in the last five or six years. The present investigation is limited by the Tillman-Gillespie resolution to the relations of the railroads to the coal and oil companies.

The entire commission sat for today's hearings. The first witness called was W. A. Patton, assistant to President Cassatt at Philadelphia. He was asked to tell what interest he had in coal companies. Taking a list from his pocket he enumerated the various companies in which he held stock. Concerning the Keystone Coal company shares, of which 2,500 were in his name, he said he got the stock by purchase and through the merging with the Keystone company of smaller companies in which he was interested. Five hundred of the shares, he said, belonged to his brother, J. Howard Patton, who is interested in coal properties in Western Pennsylvania. Mr. Patton explained that he held stock in five companies which were consolidated with the Keystone and through that transaction secured his holdings in the Keystone company.

Mr. Patton proved an unwilling witness when he was questioned about his holdings in the Atlantic Crushed Coke company. The examination resulted in a tilt between the witness and Attorney Glasgow for the commission and caused impatient comment by Commissioner Cockrell. Mr. Patton accused the lawyer of forming opinions as to his business dealings, which Mr. Glasgow denied.

"I am only asking you the questions, Mr. Patton," he said, "I don't know anything about your business."

The controversy occurred after repeated efforts had been made by Mr. Glasgow to draw from the witness a positive statement as to whether he had paid any actual cash for his four hundred shares in the company. Mr. Patton made an explanation to the effect that he became interested in the land purchasing company through J. Howard Patton, who represented the interests of Col. Geo. E. Huff. When the land was purchased, he said, the investors were obligated to pay their pro rata share, but as there had been no losses it was not necessary to pay in cash.

"You got that obligation back, did you not?"

"I did in stock."

Were you required to pay anything toward the purchase of the land?"

"I stood to lose, and had it been necessary, would have paid my share."

Senator Cockrell here interrupted, saying:

"It seems to me to be an easy matter for you to say you went into a speculative deal; that none of you paid any cash and that the corporation was responsible for the purchase price. I don't see the necessity of beating about the bush."

"As a matter of fact," said Chairman Knapp, "you took the risk but did not lose anything."

"I was an investor," replied the witness, "and was treated the same as other investors."

Mr. Patton was asked if he ever had stock in the Columbia Coal company. He said he had at its organization, but it became a selling company instead of an operating company, and he sold his stock to a Greenburg, Pa., banking house.

"What bank took it?"

"The Cassatt bank."

In the Greenwich company Mr. Patton said he had 1,000 shares. He said he was obligated by note to the amount of $20,000 for the purchase of the land. The money was guaranteed by Mr. Huff's bank at Greensburg. Witness said he got the money back through the sales of the bonds.

Concerning the Cochran Coal company, Mr. Patton said there were three or four thousand acres of undeveloped coal land and "some of our people" suggested to Cochran the desirability of developing it. Asked what he meant by "some of our people," witness said bankers and brokers and others who might be interested in the land.

Mr. Patton said he was obligated to the amount of $15,000 in the organization of the company, Thomas Cochran going on his note. He acquired 500 shares of the company, but paid no interest on the note.

MANY BIDDEN TO INDIAN WEDDING

Society on Oneida Reservation Was All in a Flutter.

Appleton, Wis., May 23.—No Indian wedding in Wisconsin in recent years, perhaps ever, has caused the talk among the redskins of the Oneida reservation as did the one Monday night, when Miss Josephine Hill, daughter of the chief of the tribe, and Isaac Webster, a graduate of Carlisle and a man of Independent wealth, became man and wife. Eight hundred invitations were sent out. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Merrill, while the couple was blessed in their native tongue by the Rev. Mr. Hill, father of the bride.

Preparations for the wedding had been going on for weeks. Forty young Indians had been drilling as a vested choir and as the bridal couple entered the church they were escorted by the singers down the aisle to the altar. For a month previous to the wedding the Indians have been visiting this city in large numbers. While the men were going to clothing stores, the squaws have been visiting dressmakers.

This evening there will be a reception at the home of the bride's father in honor of the event. It is believed that fully half of the 2,200 Indians on the reservation will be present.

A FAMOUS SCULPTOR SMASHES MASTERPIECE.

New York, May 23.—With his wife lying cold as marble, a suicide by poison, Robert T. Paine, the noted protege of Augustus St. Gaudens, mallet in hand, quietly entered the studio in his home, which is built upon the brow of the Palisades, and with a giant's strength, urged on by supreme grief and halted ambition, shattered into fragments his masterpiece and life work—a heroic model in clay of Neptune and his mermaids.

Yesterday the sculptor, broken in spirit, with his four little girls, followed his dead wife to their former home in Valparaiso, Ind., with the announced intention of forsaking his art and starting life anew in some other occupation.

The self-inflicted death of Mrs. Beatrice Paine proved the tragic culmination of ten years of unrequited effort and endeavor by her sculptor husband in this city.

Lake Linden at Houghton.

Grand Forks, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Artie O'Dea's bunch of ball tossers pulled themselves together yesterday afternoon and had all kinds of fun with the Tigers.

It was a ragged game on the part of the home team which showed poor stick work and poor field work. The White Sox played a splendid game and fielders covered their ground fast, but a single error being charged against them.

Bushelman was all in the air. He issued no less than seven signed passes, and allowed twelve hits. In the fourth inning the White Sox pounded him all over the field taking five hits. Then to help out, the fielders were all slow, and whenever there was half a chance to make an error, the Tigers did so.

The bleachers were well filled, which shows that the Tigers will play anywhere near what might be called good ball, they will be well supported.

The Tigers scored in the second and in the fourth inning. In the second Leighty drew a base on balls, and Wilson sacrificed him to second. McCarter drew a base, and Bushelman struck out. Then Glencke landed out the first hit of the game and scored Leighty. McCarter was caught trying to come home. In the fourth, Harris, for the Tigers, led with a single, and Leighty took a base on balls, and then Wilson touched up Krick for a two bagger, which scored Harris and Leighty. Bushelman ended the inning by striking out.

The visitors scored in the first, fourth, fifth, sixth and eighth innings. In the first Gruebner scored on an error by Glencke. A three bagger by Livingstone, and singles by Gruebner, Lovett, Adams and Krick and an error by Kelly, gave the White Sox four more scores. In the fifth singles by Lovett and Adams sent home Barto and McCormick, one of whom reached first on an error and the other by being hit by a pitched ball. In the sixth inning Bushelman passed Gruibner, and Barto and they scored on Kelley's error. In the eighth singles by O'Dea and Lovett sent home Gruebner and Barto.

EASY FOR FARGO.

Winnipeg Given Dose of Its Own Medicine in Second Game.

Winnipeg, Man., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Fargo team turned the tables on the Maroons yesterday afternoon and won out by the one-sided score of 13 to 2. Pitcher Stout was touched up for fifteen safe hits, Dolan getting a home run, a two-bagger and two long singles. Finnegan had the Maroons at his mercy, but let up a little toward the end of the game. The Maroons played a fast game in the field, and most of Fargo's runs were earned. The score:

THE ROW AT HANCOCK

Manager Wreath Does Not Propose to Stand Insubordination.

National Agreement Behind Him and Players Will be Outlawed.

Houghton, Mich., May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The disagreement between the Hancock players and manager has been partially settled by the reinstatement of Stevens and games will be played as usual today.

There has been some friction between some of the players and the manager since the opening of the season. One of the players went out on a tout the day after the first game and was promptly fined $10. Although Manager Wreath was acting within his rights and with all justice, the players resented the action. Monday night the climax came, due, it is said, to the players' asking that their board for last week be paid, as the games were scheduled at Houghton.

There were some words between Left Fielder Joe Stevens and Mr. Wreath and Stevens was suspended. Stevens has been hitting the best on the team and the manager admitted he was losing by it, but he refused to submit to subordination. The players promptly refused to play yesterday. They formed up a protest, signed by every member, demanding the reinstatement of Stevens, remittance of all fines and that their board be paid when they played in near-by towns. Wreath refused to honor the protest and there the matter stands.

The five successive defeats suffered by the team has turned some of the Hancock fans against it and it would not take a great deal more to turn the remainder sour on the team and kill the game in the town for all time. There are a few troublemakers on the team, who will have to go anyway and the remainder, with a good captain, will be able to play good ball and keep their standing in the league.

Hancock has been particularly unfortunate in baseball. Three years ago, the citizens of the town, inclined to healthful sport, went into professional baseball after a lapse of a number of years. The team was unfortunate and finished last in the race. The next year, Houghton and Hancock went into the game with a team, which suffered the same fate. Last year, determined to do something, which would give the town a position in the baseball world, some of the leading citizens got together, subscribed a goodly amount of money and secured what they expected to be a first class team. The hoodoo followed the aggregation throughout the season, friction between the players resulted, many games were lost and the dropping of the Soo out of the league left Hancock at the tail again and the backers of the team were money out.

This year, the local men decided that an outside manager would have better luck with a team and accordingly, Paul B. Wreath came from Olean, N. Y., to provide the town with a team. But three of the players of last year were secured and the remainder were likely looking fellows. But the old hoodoo was still working overtime and Houghton, Hancock's old-time rival, triumphed in every game of the first series. Calumet won the first of the series with that team and things look mighty black.

Manager Wreath seems to have the stamina necessary for a manager of a baseball team, though some say he is lacking in knowledge of the game.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR BANQUET

Winners in Recent Field Meet Will Receive Their Prizes.

The interscholastic field meet committee held its last business meeting at the boys' department yesterday afternoon and arranged for the social which will mark the disbanding of the committee.

It was decided that instead of giving a banquet to the committee alone, which has been the custom, an entertainment and social would be given to all the contestants, officials and principals of the schools. Sidney Morterud and Stanley Lamb were appointed a committee to arrange the musical end of the program, which will include six numbers.

The feature of the evening will be the presentation of the pennant to the Jefferson school, the champions in the meet. The pennant becomes the permanent property of the school winning it each year. It is made of red and green silk, suitably worded in gold lettering. Arthur Helmer, the champion schoolboy athlete of the city, will be presented with the gold medal, and Sidney Morterud of the Lincoln, who secured second place, will receive the silver medal, the special prize offered by the Kelley Hardware company.

The winners of first and second places will also receive their silk badges. Phil Bevis will act as toastmaster and will give the address of welcome. Sidney Morterud, the president of the committee, will respond to the toast, "The Field Meet." Mike Wagner, secretary, will respond to the toast, "The Officials and the Press;" Mr. Cole, "The Baseball League," and N. D. McLeod, "The Boys' Department."

The program will conclude with the singing of the national anthem, after which refreshments will be served. A flashlight will be taken of all the contestants in their running suits.

SCHOOL BALL LEAGUE.

Six Games Will be Played During Latter Part of Week.

In the Interscholastic Baseball league the Irving school was defeated by the Lincoln by the score of 5 to 4. The teams were well matched and the game was closely contested. The following games in the series will be played this week:

Friday—
Lincoln vs. Franklin, Lincoln grounds.
Madison vs. Irving, Irving grounds.
Washington vs. Adams, Washington grounds.

Saturday—
Madison vs. Franklin, Madison grounds.
Jefferson vs. Lincoln, Lincoln grounds.
Washington vs Irving, Irving grounds.

WIFE MURDER AT EVELETH

John Stewart Shoots His Wife Who Had Left Him.

Eveleth, Minn., May 23.—As the result of jealousy, John Stewart, a painter, last night shot and killed his wife after luring her into his room, Grant avenue near Jones street. Three shots took effect, two in the right shoulder. The fatal bullet entered the woman's face and passed down through the neck. The victim left her husband three months ago.

"I'm glad I did it," said Stewart when he was arrested beside his victim by Chief of Police Dolan. The evidence of his guilt is complete. Stewart is in jail, and will be arraigned before Judge Prince today.

Stewart is 35 years old and has lived in Eveleth for some years. After trouble at home, his wife went to Duluth She returned three weeks ago to become a waitress in the McNeil hotel.

The estranged couple met last Sunday. They attended church, and parted until last night. They first entered the candy store on the ground floor of the building in which Stewart rooms. Then he induced her to enter the room

It is said that Stewart accused his wife of wrong doing. However, the couple talked for fifteen minutes quite naturally. Their voices were heard by others on the floor. Then the shots rang out in quick succession. The dazed slayer stood over his victim when the police burst into the room.

HEAVY RAIN AT HIBBING

Swept Tons of Earth Into the Open Pit Mines.

Hibbing, Minn., May 23.—Following several days of gloomy, drizzling weather, a rainstorm, torrential for violence, swept down on Hibbing and vicinity Monday night and immersed the town as it never had before. The storm lasted but half an hour, and in that time swept hundreds of tons of earth into the open-pit mines, swamped the streets and wrought havoc where building operations were in progress.

A concrete wall 90 feet long and 35 feet wide, resting on a solid foundation, was wrecked as completely as though an earthquake had shaken it. Water pouring from the eaves of a frame building on the side washed earth against the wall with such force that it was unable to withstand the pressure. The building is being erected by the Hibbing Pressed Stone company for Gourin Bros.

An excavation made for a building being erected by M. Rogalsky was completely filled with water, retarding building operations several days.

Though operation of the Burt-Pool and Morris mines was not completely stopped, the work at these properties was greatly retarded by the pools which formed in the pits.

HILL DENIES STATEMENTS

Made by Eastern Canadians Regarding New Northwest Line.

St. Paul, May 23.—Although persistent efforts are being made to create a wrong impression in Eastern Canada as to James J. Hill's object in building the Canadian trans-continental line, Mr. Hill said yesterday that his plans do not comprehend a diverting of the trade from Canada to the United States and that he has no intention to build up American ports at the expense of Canadian ones. At a banquet at Montreal, Saturday, Minister of Justice Fitzpatrick and President Shaughnessy of the Canadian-Pacific were quoted as saying that Mr. Hill's Canadian projects are to divert traffic across the line to American ports. Mr. Hill says regarding this:

"If it were our intention to haul Canadian products to America would it be necessary to construct a new east and west line? We would be able to do that with our present lines, and we would not have to spend $3,000 for terminals at Winnipeg. Whatever other people may say about the new line, the people of the Northwest do not look upon it in that way. When the time comes, the records will show what we are doing. Who does the business of Canada belong to? It belongs, of course, to the people of Canada. If the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk Pacific want the business east of Winnipeg, they can have it, but we do not propose to put all our eggs in one basket."

URGE HEBREWS TO GET TOGETHER

Lodge Meeting Speakers Impress Hearers With Need of Unity.

Several speakers at the mass meeting of Hebrews held at the Flaaten auditorium last evening under the auspices of the Independent Order of B'Nai 'Brith and to further the interests of that order, laid particular stress on the need of the Hebrews in all the world standing together.

They urged that the Hebrews, no matter what nationality, stand by each other, and recalled, as instances of the need of unity, the atrocities in Russia. All of the speakers talked along the same lines and those present were much impressed.

The speakers mentioned the need of looking after the thousands of Hebrew emigrants who come to the United States every year, more closely. They would have some means of directing them to a start in the new world and declared that as it is now, many of them gather in congested districts and crime is often a consequence.

Dr. Julius H. Meyers of Milwaukee, A. B. Seelenfreund and Arnold Wolf were the principal speakers and all of them are officers of the grand lodge, which has just concluded its sessions at Minneapolis. Dr. Meyers is president and the subject of his address last evening was "Organization."

Mr. Seelenfreund is secretary and Mr. Wolf a member of the executive committee of the grand lodge.

Judge Stein and Jonas Weil were to have been present but were forced to send their regrets. Dr. Mendel Silber acted as master of ceremonies.

Hugo Kohn gave a violin solo and Mrs. H. Y. Joseph and E. Eva sang. Miss Belle Jacques was the accompanist.

POOR MILLIONAIRES WEARING $5 WATCHES.

Cleveland, May 23.—In Bratenahl, a suburb where only sixty-three persons, all millionaires, own property, the assessor found only $48,360 worth of personal property to tax. There is not a resident worth less than $1,500,000, and every one is interested in Cleveland's largest concerns.

Among the collection of articles in the village is a $5 watch, owned by Abraham Garfield; a $5 carriage, $5 watch and a $10 piano, owned by A. S. Ingals; three $5 watches, owned by P. P. Sanford, and three $25 horses, owned by Charles H. Colt. Only four persons in the village have money invested in stocks or otherwise, so they say. Millionaire L. E. Holden was found to have personal property worth $3,900. He owns a newspaper, and silver mines valued at $2,000,000.

Grading Government Grounds.

Grading has begun on the government reservation around the engineers' building at the ship canal. Sand and gravel are being used to fill up to the grade when a top dressing of earth will be put on and the grounds sodded. Close to the building the ground will be terraced. By the time the improvement is completed the government will have the grounds nicely parked and will have concrete walks leading to and around the building. The holes next to the pier wall caused by sand leakage are being filled with coarse gravel for a depth of several feet.

HUMORS IN THE BLOOD

Coming of Warm Weather Forces Them Out, Causing Itching, Burning Skin Eruptions.

The blood and skin are so closely connected that whatever affects the one has a corresponding effect on the other. When the blood is pure and healthy the skin will be soft, smooth, and free from all eruptions; but when the blood becomes infected with some unhealthy humor the effect is shown by rashes, eruptions, boils and pimples, or other disfiguring and annoying skin disease.

The skin is provided with countless pores and glands which act as a drainage system to rid the body of impurities through the perspiration that is constantly passing through these little tubes. There are other glands that pour out on the skin an oily substance to keep it soft and pliable, otherwise it would become hard and dry from constant exposure to wind and sun. When the blood becomes filled with humors and acids these are thrown off through the pores and glands, burning and irritating the skin and drying up the natural oils so that we have not only Acne, Eczema, Salt Rheum, etc., but such dry scaly skin eruptions as Tetter, Psoriasis and kindred troubles.

These humors find their way into the blood through a disordered or deranged condition of the system. There is a certain amount of waste or refuse matter collected in the body every day. This is useless in nourishing or keeping the system in health, and nature intends that it shall find an outlet through the channels of bodily waste. As long as these members perform their duties properly the blood remains pure and free from infection; but when from any cause they become dull and sluggish, this refuse matter is left to sour and be taken into the blood in the form of humors and poisons. The skin is a perfect index to the blood; when we see one afflicted with a skin disease, or pimples, rashes, eruptions, blotches, etc., constantly appearing, we know that down deep in the blood a humor has taken root, and instead of supplying nourishment and strength to the fine, delicate tissues of the skin, it is pouring out its acid and unhealthy accumulations.

The skin is not only affected by the humors generated within the system, but poisons from without, such as Poison Oak and Ivy, Nettle Rash, etc., as well as poisons from metals, acids, etc., enter through the open pores and glands, and so thoroughly do they take root in the blood that they are ever present, or return from year to year to annoy the sufferer.

The treatment of skin diseases with salves, washes, lotions, etc., is along the wrong line. True such treatment relieves some of the itching and discomfort, and aids in keeping the skin clean, but it does not reach the real cause of the trouble, and at best such things are only palliative and soothing.

S.S.S. PURELY VEGETABLE

A thorough cleansing of the blood is the only cure for humors in the blood. S. S. S., a gentle acting, safe blood purifier, made entirely of vegetable ingredients from nature's forests and fields, is the proper treatment. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation and neutralizes the acids and humors, thoroughly cleansing and purifying the blood, and curing skin diseases and affections of every kind. It supplies to the blood the fresh, nutritive qualities necessary to sustain the skin and all other parts of the body, and rids the blood of any and all poisons. S. S. S. cures Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum, Poison Oak and Ivy, Nettle Rash and all troubles of the skin. Special book on skin diseases and any medical advice desired furnished by our physicians without charge to all who write.

S. S. S. DROVE THE HUMOR OUT.

Gentlemen: Some two years ago I suffered a great deal, caused on account of a humor in the blood; small rash or pimples broke out over my body and kept getting worse day by day for over a year. Seeing S. S. S. advertised in the paper and having also heard it had cured several people in this city, concluded to try it. After using the medicine I was entirely cured, and am very glad to recommend it. 1020 Clay St., Paducah, Ky. EDW. W. LONG.

FOUND A CURE FOR POISON OAK.

Gentlemen: After having tried for six years to find a cure for Poison Oak, from which I was a great sufferer, I was told by a friend to try S. S. S. It entirely cured me and gave me excellent health. There is no remedy for a bad condition of the blood like S. S. S., and you have in S. S. S. a positive cure for Poison Oak.

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey of 3322 Clinton street, Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism, why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm, and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. For sale by all the leading druggists.

STARTS PAVING WORK.

Sang and Preston Begin Operations on Seventeenth Avenue East.

Sang & Preston, who have the contract to lay a tar macadam pavement on Seventeenth avenue east from Superior street to London road, began operations this morning. The first work will be the removal of some of the rock that underlies the upper end of the highway for several rods. This will be blasted out. Below the rock cut there will be comparatively little excavating as the street is below grade for a greater part of the distance in the three blocks. The work will cost about $7,000.

The old board sidewalk on Seventeenth avenue between Superior street and Jefferson street will have to be removed. It is in bad condition and the owners of the abutting property will probably be called on to replace it with concrete walks. Below Jefferson street the board walk is said to have been laid a few years ago to conform with the grade.

RETURNS TO OLD HOME; TAKES POISON POTION.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 23.—Coroner Haugen received a telephone message from Dopelius yesterday announcing the suicide of William R. Roberts.

Mr. Roberts had had trouble with his wife, and they had separated; the wife taking a large farm while he converted his personal property into cash and left for Canada to live with relatives.

He returned unexpectedly on an early morning train, and going to his home, was admitted, and laid down on the sofa. He offered his wife a little book, but she declined to accept any favors.

An early breakfast was prepared and his daughter asked him to come to the table, but he declined, saying he had taken poison and had only an hour to live.

A doctor was sent for, but he died before his arrival, having drank whisky mixed with strychnine.

After his death the book he had wished to give his wife was examined and found to be a bankbook with a deposit of $1,800 to his credit in the Standard Bank of Ontario.

EX-CONVICT WAS FETED

Reception and Banquet Tendered Monte Ballard in Oklahoma.

Convicted of Complicity in Burning to Death of Indians.

Maud, O. T., May 23.—Monte Ballard, a citizen of Maud, was tendered a reception and banquet by the leading business and professional men of the town, when he returned home, during the past week, from the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, where he was sentenced in 1898 to serve ten years for participating in the burning to death of the young Seminole Indians, who had criminally assaulted a white woman. The home coming of Ballard and the events given in his honor formed one of the most remarkable occurrences ever recorded in the history of the Southwest. The leading citizens, headed by a brass band, marched to the train to meet Ballard and escort him up town. Ballard served his sentence, counting time off for good behavior.

As soon as it was learned in Maud that Ballard was released from prison and would return home, preparations to give him a monster ovation were commenced. Money was liberally donated by the townspeople with which to provide a banquet, a program of exercises was hastily arranged and soon ample provisions were on hands for a genuine thanksgiving feast. The banquet was served and the speches made at the public school building.

By 8 o'clock in the evening the building was crowded to its utmost capacity. Some of the spectators came from miles distant to join in the jubilee and participate in the general feast. Ballard was made the center of attraction, and the band played "Home, Sweet Home" and "America" in his honor. Speeches, reciting the scenes following the assault on the white woman and the burning of the Indians, were made by Rev. Hodges, the Methodist minister; Messrs. Riddle, Bolinger and other prominent citizens. Every reference, made by the speakers to the acts of Ballard and his companions in bringing to justice the perpetrators of the crime, was received with applause by the crowd.

During all the time of speechmaking and banqueting, Ballard's wife sat by his side, quiet and happy. For eight years she has been working, night and day, to secure his release, believing him innocent. When President Roosevelt made his Southern hunting trip, in the spring of 1905, she visited Muskogee, and in company with Judge John R. Thomas, called on the president to plead for her husband. She enlisted Senator Long of Kansas, Representative Stephens of Texas, and other prominent men in her behalf, and spent a fortune in trying to get her husband out of prison.

About eight years ago, in the Seminole Indian country, and just across the line from Pottawatomie county, O. T., occurred a most revolting crime. A white woman was outraged and murdered by two young Seminole Indians, and her body left to be partly devoured by the hogs. Two other lives were sacrificed, as a small child of the woman was left in the house and died of neglect before help arrived, and an unborn babe died with its mother.

The people of the community, on both sides of the territory line, were greatly incensed and it was demanded that the perpetrators be lynched. Fifty men formed the mob that searched the Indian country for the Indians, but the three leaders were supposed to be Monte Ballard, Matthews and Jones. The two Indians were captured and burned at the stake, just across the line in Indian Territory.

The arrest of Ballard, Jones and Matthews soon followed. For weeks United States officers scoured the country for evidence, for it was difficult to obtain. Sentiment was with the men who had burned the Indians. The officers' lives were in danger and only the bravest of them ventured on the mission. The prisoners were convicted, however, in the federal court at Wewoka, I. T., and sentenced to the penitentiary—Jones for twenty-one years, and Ballard and Matthews for ten years each. After their conviction and sentence three other men surrendered voluntarily to the officers and pleaded guilty to being the actual mob leaders. They received a three-year sentence each and were released from prison several years ago.

Ballard has always maintained his innocence, and it was on his statements that his wife based her unceasing work in his behalf. She has made three trips to Washington. She has a petition, signed by every man of prominence in Pottawatomie county who knew anything whatever about the case, but her efforts were fruitless.

At the time of the conviction of Ballard and his companions, Horace Speed was United States attorney for Oklahoma and he was commanded by the department of justice to search the entire country for the men who burned the Indians. He was accompanied by "Bill" Fossett, then a deputy United States marshal and known then as now as the most fearless officer in the territory. Fossett's reputation as a fearless officer had much to do with protecting both his life and Speed's while they were hunting the evidence, which the department commanded them to secure.

For a Good Complexion

FOR Clear Eyes
—Sweet Breath
—Clean Tongue
—Calm Nerves
—Good Temper and —Poise

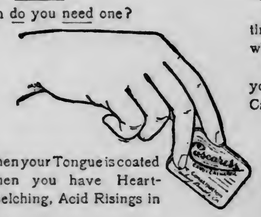
Eat a Cascaret whenever you suspect you need it. Carry a little 10c Emergency box constantly with you, in your Purse or Pocket.

When do you need one?



—When your Tongue is coated
—When you have Heartburn, Belching, Acid Risings in Throat.
—When Pimples begin to peep out.
—When your stomach Gnaws and Burns.

That's the time to check coming Constipation, Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

That's the time to take a Cascaret.

One candy tablet night and morning, taken regularly for a short time, is warranted to cure the worst case of Constipation or Indigestion that walks the earth.

One tablet taken whenever you suspect you need it will insure you against 90 per cent of all other ills likely to attack you.

Because 90 per cent of these ills begin in the Bowels, or exist through poor Nutrition.

Cascarets don't purge, don't weaken, don't irritate, nor upset your stomach.

They don't act like "Physic" that flush out the Bowels with a waste of precious Digestive Juice needed for tomorrow's Bowel-work.

No,—they act like Exercise, on the Bowels, instead.

They stimulate the Bowel Muscles to contract and propel the Food naturally past the little valves that mix Digestive Juices with Food.

They strengthen these Bowel-Muscles by exercising them.

This stronger action, producing greater nutrition from food, brings back to the Bowel-Muscles greater strength for self-operation.

The Bowel-Muscles can thus,in a short time, dispense with any Drug assistance whatever.

Cascarets are safe to take as often as you need them, while pleasant to eat as Candy.

Then carry the little ten-cent box constantly with you in your purse, and take a Cascaret whenever you suspect you need it.

One Cascaret at a time will promptly cleanse a foul Breath, or Coated Tongue.

All druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year, for six years past.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

POLES ARE NUISANCE

City Officials and Companies Will Try to Reach Agreement.

Aldermen Trying to Clear Alleys of Poles Wherever Possible.

The meeting which has been called for tomorrow afternoon by Alderman Moore, chairman of the committee on streets, alleys and sidewalks, is a most important one.

The members of the committee, Aldermen Moore, Getchell and Burgess, the members of the board of public works, and representatives of the telephone and telegraph companies and the Duluth Edison Electric company, will meet for the purpose of discussing the pole nuisance in the alleys, and the arriving, if possible, at some agreement which will be acceptable to all parties concerned.

Any citizens who are interested in the question are invited to attend the meeting, and make their wishes in the matter known.

It is the desire of the city officials and the members of the council to decrease the number of poles in the alleys to a minimum. In the narrow alleys a double line of poles makes it difficult for teams to pass, and the tangle of wires is becoming very unsightly and in many instances, unsafe.

The aldermen want to have as many of the wires as possible placed underground, and in no case to have more than one set of poles, except where two sets are absolutely required for the sake of safety. An effort will be made to have the rival telephone and telegraph companies come to some agreement by which they will use the same poles. The light and power wires might have to have a separate set of poles to prevent danger from having them come into contact with the telephone wires, put this matter will be taken up at the meeting.

The companies will also be urged to adopt the modern cable system as much as possible, and do away with the maze of wires which are stretched through some of the alleys.

The meeting will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the council chamber at the city hall, and anyone who is interested is invited to attend.

A good complexion is impossible with the stomach out of order. If pasty sallow people would pay more attention to their stomachs and less to the skin on their faces, they would have better complexions. KODOL FOR DYSPEPSIA will digest what you eat and put your stomach back in right shape to do its own work. Kodol relieves palpitation of the heart, flatulence, sour stomach, heart burn, etc. Sold by all druggists.

NIM HAS BEEN SIGHTED AGAIN

Comet of Uncertain Orbit Grazes a Pretzel Constellation.

New York, May 23.—Nim has been sighted again on Park row. Nim is a comet of uncertain orbit, without any collar, blest, however, with an aggressive brindle mustache, and wearing a tail that looks as if it were the sequel of some tin can tragedy.

Nim when sighted was heading in a mildly curving course from the Milky Way of Printers' Alley to the constellation of the Peanut Venders. His appearance at this time is connected with the prevalence of the pretzel peddler in these parts.

Nim's course, as far as visible to the naked eye, is erratic. Shooting stars, emanating from the quarter Newsboys, have been known to signal his disappearance for long and varying periods. The best observers have calculated that the course must end somewhere in the region of Coenties Slip, and that he probably rests about the docks between trips.

One observer pretends to have discovered Nim's resting pulace. A kindly municipal government has suffered a bit of planking to rot through, up by the stringpiece of one of the older wharves. It is not best to say which, as there is danger that the board might be straightway mended and Nim put to inconvenience.

In the little chamber thus formed Nim finds seclusion from others of his kind; rest and protection from the larger raindrops when the weather is wet. Here he retires like Diogenes, less the lantern, and having a good appetite, sleeps soundly.

He dreams of chasing rats—great sleek rats that fly from him in terror up and down unnaturally splendid wharves, and never succeed in finding a hole to dodge into. Then often, just as he is about to close his fangs on the rat, he is awakened by a twinge in his tail, that member about which he is sensitive, spiritually as well as bodily, and comes to the humble realization that a big wharf rat is biting the unfortunate ornament.

"Never mind," he thinks to himself, "nobler the rat's bite than the flea's," and kicks the rat away.

Nim is imbued with the unrest of his backdoor neighbor, the sea. He watches the putting out of mighty brick barges, the entry of mud scows inward bound from the Far Away. Nim beholds the floating of the deadwood as the water bears it past, and the contagion of these things fall upon Nim.

He hangs his tongue out of his mouth as a preliminary and lopes off into the world. He has a ragged sort of step and a half gait of his own invention, and with every few steps he looks back over his shoulder, as if asking, "Who said mutt?"

His latest coming included a visit to the pretzel peddler.

Yohan stands his basket on the curb. On it an upright stick holds the visible supply of pretzels. There is a reserve wrapped up.

Nim sighted the ravishing stick, but made believe to sniff the odor of a neglected cigar butt, and bided his time. When Yohan finally gazed after something that interested him in the passing crowd and confidingly turned his back on his stock in trade, Nim drew near the pretzel stick.

He took a deep whiff of the south end of the top pretzel and inhaled it. Then he sniffed the north end, which seemed to suit him even better—his whiskers fairly quivered. He made as if to grab the pretzel, but that was only to fool himself. He knew that Yohan would yell and then he would never have the nerve to run on without dropping the booty.

His quick eye caught signs that Yohan was going to look around again pretty soon, and he loped away in his funny way, without waiting to be told.

TO RECRUIT AT DULUTH

United States Engineering Corps Will Enlist Men for Service.

Government Wants Men With Trades for Three Year Term.

Duluth is to be made a recruiting station for the regular government engineer corps as well as a recruiting station for the infantry and the navy.

Major Charles L. Potter, United States engineer in charge of the Lake Superior district, has received a request from Major Thomas H. Rees, commanding officer of the Third Battalion of engineers at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., to get men for the battalion.

The engineering officers engaged in river and harbor work and on fortifications are said to be in a position to materially assist the department in getting recruits. There have been many applications for positions with the engineering troops at various points where the government has work in progress and the officers in charge usually know of men skilled in some trade, who might be induced to enlist.

The government, it is said, has experienced much difficulty in securing suitable men for the engineering service among the regular army enlistments.

Major Potter is informed that the battalion at Fort Leavenworth lacks about thirty-two men of having its full quota at this point.

The plan for recruiting at Duluth has been submitted to the chief engineers of the United States and he has given it his approval.

The recruiting will be done at the army recruiting office already established in Duluth, and the men accepted will be sent to Fort Leavenworth. The accepted men must be of good character, able-bodied, unmarried, and between 18 and 35 years of age. Men with technical training, such as transit men, level men, draftsmen, foremen, overseers, enginemen, riggers, carpenters, masons, blacksmiths, mechanics, machinists, electricians and cooks are especially desired by the government.

To men who may qualify and enlist, the engineering service is said to offer superior stations, higher pay than any other branch of the army, good opportunity for promotion and excellent facilities for study and technical training.

Men who enlist in the engineer service are furnished quarters, rations, clothing, bedding, medicines, and medical attendance, without cost, by the government. In addition to this they draw pay according to the length of service as follows: Seargeant major, $36 to $41; sergeant, $24 to $39; corporal, $20 to $25; cook, $20 to $25; first class private, $17 to $22, and second class private, $13 to $18 per month.

The period of enlistment is three years. Pay begins with the date of the enlistment and, at the expiration of the term, transportation is furnished back to the place where the applicant enlisted.

"Had dyspepsia or indigestion for years. No appetite, and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me."—J. H. Walker, Sunbury, Ohio.

NANTUCKET HEARS NEWS.

Earthquake Letters From Her Sons and Daughters in California.

Nantucket, Mass., May 23.—Nantucket, with a population of less than 4,000, has so many of her natives, mostly forty-niners, and the children of natives in California that the fire and earthquake letters sent to relatives at home were numerous enough to fill a whole page of the Inquirer and Mirror, the ancient newspaper published on this island each week. In the last Mirror there is a list of fifty Nantucketers in California who have been heard from since the disaster, and there are fifty-two names under the heading "Nantucketers Unheard From."

The exodus of '49 was one of the things that hurt Nantucket by taking away nearly all of her able-bodied men. They sailed around the Horn in their whaling vessels, and on the Pacific coast quit the sea for the mines.

One of them, Capt. Sylvester Hodges, an old whaling commander and shipbuilder, made a record on the trip round the Horn by building a small steamboat with timbers of Nantucket oak on the deck of the sailing vessel on which he made the voyage. It was ready for launching when the ship reached the Golden Gate, and it was in the freight and passenger service on San Francisco bay for many years.

This skipper's son, Albert Hodges, is one of the writers to the Mirror. He tells about living in tents in his back yard with many less fortunate refugees.

A letter from Alexander Starbuck's sister included this:

"The Methodist church is gone, with its fine organ, which stood back of the pulpit in a large old-fashioned choir gallery. The organ was found badly twisted and thrown into the middle of the church. This will give some idea of the force of the earthquake."

Mrs. Charles Ray Allen received this note from her grand-daughter:

"Our pride, our beautiful city, simply wiped off the map. Oh, the terror of it is beyond human power to tell. It came at 5:12 a. m. (not slight and then hard, but full force at the very first), and for 48 seconds the crashing, snapping of wood in the house, plastering tearing from the walls, and making it like dense smoke, all the gas globes flying through the air, falling to the floor and breaking into a millions of tiny pieces, furniture as heavy as a bureau wheeled right out into the middle of my room; every single picture, even the huge heavy ones, didn't only crash down, but flew across the rooms in all directions and hit the walls on the opposite sides.

"All this, with the huge brick chimneys of the houses falling through the roofs into rooms, is what we all (thousands of us) rushed through to get out into the streets, hoping for a little safety. We have not been to bed since, and it was a week ago today."

MAY PRAY IF YOU CARE.

Queer Request of a Politician on His Death Bed.

London, May 23.—H. F. Nash, agent in the Colchester election to Sir Woetman Pearsen, M. P., died a few days ago at a Manchester hotel the result of pneumonia. On his deathbed he telegraphed to the Colchester newspaper which he edited: "If there's any one who cares he can say a few prayers." The deceased has been considered to be one of the best political organizers in England, and was a great authority on registration and was a great joker, as the grim humor of the message from his deathbed demonstrates.

EXCUSES FOR ABSENCE.

Queer Compilation Has Been Made by a Capetown Employer.

Capetown, May 23.—The manager of a large industrial establishment at Capetown who kept a record of the excuses made by employes when they were late or absent during the past year, makes the following report: Sickness, 10 per cent; headache, 10 per cent; toothache, 5 per cent; missed car or tram car, 12 per cent; sudden illness of wife, 5 per cent; failure of alarm clock, 5 per cent; breakfast not ready in time, 6 per cent; illness in family, 8 per cent. One man pleaded that he had been left a fortune.

DEFENDS THE CIGARETTE.

Writer in Prominent Medical Journal of London is Emphatic.

London, May 23.—The much abused cigarette finds a strong defender in the "Practitioner," one of the principal organs of the medical profession, which protests against the threatened "grandmotherly legislation" about cigarette smoking in lines which have already proved ineffective in the United States.

There the prohibition of the cigarette has led boys who smoke to exchange their mild indulgence in paper flavored with tobacco for the fiercer joys of cigar and the pipe. Probably the "Practitioner" states, Dr. Macnamara's bill, if it becomes law, will have the same effect here.

"It is not easy for those who know anything of the action of tobacco on the human frame to understand the horror with which so many worthy persons regard the cigarette," declares the expert journal.

"That smoking in excess is not good for boy or man or woman is a matter as to which all are agreed. As has often been pointed out, the cigarette is more injurious than the cigar or the pipe because it is more insidious.

"But to ban the cigarette utterly because it may be abused is simply foolish. An amazing amount of rubbish is talked about the matter by intemperate enthusiasts.

"The anti-tobacco agitation, like some latter day propaganda, has its origin in the mistaken notion that the rule of healthy life must in everything be adapted, not to the average man, but to the weaker vessels."

SENSATION IN A DIVORCE.

English Theatrical Disagreement in Which America is Interested.

London, May 23.—A remarkable theatrical divorce case in which many Americans are interested has just been heard in the divorce court. Charles James Cooper, an actor, sued for divorce from his wife, Mrs. May Cooper, on the ground of her misconduct with Arthur Franklin Higgs.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper were married in 1895, and after their marriage they toured together for a long time. In 1902, when Mr. Cooper was touring with a "Florodora" company, and his wife was playing in "The White Heather," he received a letter from her, saying that she was going to America. He then learned that she had formed an attachment for M. Higgs, who had offered to marry her. She joined Mr. Higgs in Toronto, it was stated, and subsequently they lived together in New York.

It was announced that Mr. Higgs was willing to give evidence for Mr. Cooper, and that a claim for damage which Mr. Cooper had made had been withdrawn. Mr. Justice Deane declared that there was no record of the withdrawal of a claim for damages.

Mr. Higgs went into the witness box and admitted misconduct with Mrs. Cooper.

"How is it that you are willing to come here and give evidence against yourself?" he was asked.

"Because I wish the whole matter to be settled up," he said.

"Are you willing to marry Mrs. Cooper?"

"That is my absolute wish."

"What is there to satisfy me that this is not a plan from beginning to end?" said Justice Deane. "This case ought never to have been on the undefended list."

BREAKS UP ABRUPTLY.

The Sensational End to a Revival Meeting in Wales.

London, May 23.—A revival meeting at Llanelly, which was conducted by "Pastor" Houghton, was broken up the other night in something approaching a riot.

Mr. Houghton was advertised throughout the town as a faith healer, and he was met by a large and hostile audience. He began by saying that the second coming of Christ was at hand, declaring that recent earthquakes and volcanic outbreaks were the signs foretold in the Scriptures.

He then declared that he had recently cast out a devil from a patient at a lunatic asylum. At this statement, Dr. Williams, a local medical man, rose in the audience and demanded to know the name of the asylum.

"I will give it to you privately," the revivalist replied, "and the patient's name as well."

"I don't care a fig for the patient's name," said the doctor, "but I do ask for the name of the asylum. If the people of Llanelly are expected to believe stories like this without proof, we shall have all sorts of humbugs coming here."

"The Lancet and many medical men are coming to believe in demoniacal possession and a personal devil," said "Pastor" Houghton.

"Yes, and a good many medical men are coming to believe that the earth is flat," said the doctor. "You say that the Bible gives earthquakes as signs of Christ's second coming. It also says that false prophets shall arise in the land. Are you a false prophet?"

"I am neither a prophet nor the son of one," was the reply.

Mr. Houghton then said that he would answer no more questions, and there was an uproar among the audience, who refused to leave the hall. Finally someone turned off the gas, and the meeting dispersed.

To spend 30 minutes a day in reading Herald want ads. may prove to be the most profitable "side-line" of business you ever undertook.

REMARKABLE EXPERIMENTS AND STUDIES ON THE STOMACH.

How To Eat Properly.

BY DR. VALENTINE.

Not long ago Horace Fletcher published a book called "The A. B. Z. of Our Own Nutrition," in which he advocated, "Do right the feeding of your body; Nature will do all the rest for you aright." After a dozen years of uninterrupted experiments upon himself and upon dogs, cats and other animals, Mr. Horace Fletcher concludes that the average human being eats three times as much as is good for him; that by eating only one-third as much and masticating it even more thoroughly than by Gladstone's famous thirty-two bites of each mouthful, a person is assured of unfailing health, strength, contentment and longevity. In a word, he will have annihilated the chief cause of all disease—indigestion. Mr. Fletcher conducted experiments at Yale and Cambridge Universities, and made tests under the auspices of the United States Army. As a result of his experiments he advocates that people should ignore false appetite and wait for a return of normal appetite, which is indicated by a desire for some particular simple food, accompanied by a watering of the mouth—all of which is good advice, but a great many Americans, both men and women, are thin, pale and puny, with poor circulation, because they have already ill-treated their stomachs by hasty eating or too much eating, by consuming alcoholic beverages, or by too close confinement to home, office or factory, and in consequence the stomach must be treated in a natural way before they can rectify their earlier mistakes. The muscles in many such people, in every weary, thin and thin-blooded person, do their work with great difficulty. As a result fatigue comes early, is extreme and lasts long. The demand for nutritive aid is ahead of the supply. To insure perfect health every tissue, bone, nerve, tendon or muscle should take from the blood certain materials and return to it certain others. It is necessary to prepare the stomach for the work of taking up from the food what is necessary to make good, rich, red blood. We must go to Nature for the remedy, which shall be simple but effective. There were certain roots known to the Indians of this country before the advent of the whites which later came to the knowledge of the settlers and which are now growing rapidly in professional favor for the cure of obstinate stomach and liver troubles. These are found to be safe and yet certain in their cleansing and invigorating effect upon the stomach and blood. These are: Golden Seal root, Queen's root, Stone root, Bloodroot, Mandrake root. Then there is Black Cherrybark. The medicinal principles residing in those native roots when extracted with glycerine as a solvent makes the most reliable and efficient stomach tonic and liver invigorator. Where there is bankrupt vitality—such as exhaustion, bad nutrition—and thin blood the body acquires vigor and the nerves, blood and all the tissues feel the favorable effect.

Although some physicians were aware of the high medicinal value of the above mentioned plants, yet few have used pure glycerine in combination, or as a solvent, and usually the doctors' prescriptions called for the ingredients in varying amounts, with alcohol.

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. Pierce found that chemically pure glycerine, of proper strength, was best for extracting the medicinal properties from these roots and that it gave added value to a tonic compound in restoring tone and vigor to the entire system without the detrimental effect which alcohol would give. So Dr. Pierce put up what he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, one of the principal ingredients, Golden Seal root, suggesting the name. This preparation is of pleasant taste, agrees perfectly with rebellious and sensitive stomachs, and has sold more largely in the past third of a century than any other medicine put up for like purposes. The test of the merit of a compound is its lasting qualities. Medicines that depend upon the alcohol contained in them for their popularity have never remained long in favor.

Dr. Roberts Bartholow, Professor in Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, a recognized authority on Materia Medica and Therapeutics, says of Hydrastis (Golden Seal root): "Very useful as a stomachic tonic (stomach tonic) and in atonic dyspepsia. Cures gastric catarrh (catarrh of stomach) and headaches accompanying same. Constipation, dependent upon different deficient secretions, with hard and dry stools, may be overcome by the remedy. Chronic catarrh of the intestines, even if it has proceeded to ulceration, is remarkably benefited by Hydrastis. It may be given as a remedy for intermittent, chronic and malarial poisoning, and enlarged spleen of malarial origin. It diminishes mucous in catarrh of the bladder."

From "Organic Medicines," by Grover Coe, M. D., of New York, we extract the following: "Hydrastis (Golden Seal root) exercises an especial influence over mucous surfaces. Upon the liver it acts with equal certainty and efficacy. As a cholagogue (liver invigorator), it has few equals. In affections of the spleen, and abdominal viscera generally, it is an efficient and reliable remedy. Also in scrofula, glandular diseases generally, cutaneous eruptions, indigestion, debility, diarrhœa and dysentery, constipation, piles and all morbid and critical discharges."

The "Golden Medical Discovery" not only produces all the good effects to be obtained from the use of Golden Seal root, in all stomach, liver and bowel troubles, as in dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, ulceration of stomach and bowels and kindred ailments, but the Golden Seal root used in its compounding is greatly enhanced in its curative action by the other ingredients mentioned above. Each of its ingredients has the endorsement of those medical writers and teachers most eminent in their profession.

A little book of extracts treating of all the several ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines, being extracts from standard medical works, of the different schools of practice, will be mailed free to any one asking (by postal card or letter), for the same, addressed to Doctor R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and giving the writer's full post-office address, plainly written.

In cases of chronic ailments, attended by marked, or persistent, constipation, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be taken conjointly with the use of the "Golden Medical Discovery," to regulate the bowels. They act in harmony with the "Discovery," and will be found to be a most valuable laxative, or, in fuller doses a cleansing cathartic.

Podophyllin, the active medicinal principle of Mandrake root, enters largely into the composition of the little sugar-coated "Pellets," in fact is one of their chief ingredients. They regulate the liver, stomach and bowels.

HOLDS A MEETING.

People's Sovereignty League Will Extend Its Membership.

The second meeting of the Peoples' Sovereignty League of America was held last evening at the Public library with Frederick L. Ryan presiding in the absence of J. A. Keyes, the chairman.

A committee comprised of F. L. Ryan and W. G. Joerns was appointed to wait on Chairman Keyes and learn what progress has been made by the ward committees that he selected to interest the citizens and voters in the league. Mr. Keyes will also be asked to give an address on the aims of the league, the laws of initiative, referendum and municipal ownership, at the next meeting.

CITY BRIEFS.

"The Witch's Secret," a drama in four acts, was presented before a large audience last evening at St. Clement's hall for the benfit of St. Clement's church. The play was well presented and the evening was much enjoyed.

The newly elected officers of Company C, Third regiment, M. N. G., have been notifid that they were successful in the examinations in military tactics which they took about two weeks ago, in St. Paul. They are now full fledged officers of the national guard.

The Oliver Iron Mining company has received four new Pittsburg engines. Two of them will be used at the Higgins mine and two at the Norman, for stripping.

Charles Nolan was brought to the county jail from Hibbing yesterday to await the action of the grand jury next September on the charge of breaking into Adam Schneider's house. He was bound over by Municipal Judge Brady and his bail has been set at $1,000.

Tomorrow is Ascension day and will be observed at St. Paul's Episcopal church with holy communion service at 10 a. m. This festival ends that part of the church's calendar which deals with the events in the earthly career of the Lord. From this time on, after Whitsunday and Trinity, the attention is directed to the morals and teaching of the scriptures rather than to the course of life of Jesus.

Court Pride of Duluth, I. O. F., will give a dancing party this evening at Rowley hall, for Foresters and their friends.

Tomorrow will be Ascension day, and special services will be held in St. Luke's and Holy Apostles churches, by Rev. R. J. Mooney. The services will be held at Holy Apostles church at 10 a. m. and at 7:30 p. m. A special ascension service will be given by the full vested choir at St. Luke's.

T. Yatsui and S. Awaya, two Japanese representing the Nippon Yusem Kaisha Steamship company, are expected to arrive in the city today or tomorrow to study the methods employed in loading and unloading freight from the trains and boats at the Head of the Lakes.

GUARANTEED LIQUOR CURE

We would not under any circumstances endorse a remedy for the cure of the drink habit until we had absolutely satisfied ourselves that it did all it claimed. Orrine is the only cure for the drink habit that we know of, and the only one that we ever knew of that had enough merit to be sold under a positive guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure. It has stood the test of years of use and we know of many whom it has cured of the drink habit.

The guarantee given with each package thoroughly protects the buyer. Orrine is in two forms; No. 1 for secret use and No. 2 for those who wish to be cured, $1.00 a box. Mail orders filled. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., or F. W. Kugler, 108 West Superior street, Duluth.

BUTTON IS HONORED

Emblem Saves Old Soldier From Burial in Potter's Field.

Charles Perish Buried at Soldier's Rest With Ceremonies.

A little bronze button in the lapel of his coat saved Charles Perish, an old soldier, from a burial in the Potter's field today. Instead of being given a pauper burial at the poor farm, his remains were laid away at Soldiers' Rest in Forest Hill cemetery, with appropriate ceremonies, under the auspices of Willis A. Gormon Post, G. A. R.

Perish was sent to Duluth from Virginia some days ago to seek aid of the county poor authorities. He was suffering from appendicitis, and Secretary Cook of the poor commission directed that he be cared for at St. Luke's hospital. The disease had made such progress, however, that Perish died within a few days and his remains were sent to Durkan & Crawford's undertaking room for preparation for burial at the county's expense.

Mr. Crawford noticed the G. A. R. button on the dead man's coat and notified Capt. Asa Dally of Willis A. Gorman Post. Capt. Dalley at once took the matter in charge and arrangements were made to give Perish an old soldier's burial in Forest Hill cemetery instead of the pauper graveyard at the poor farm.

Nothing could be learned of Perish except that he is supposed to have a married daughter residing at Bemidji. The grand army men have communicated with Bemidji, but have not been able to locate any relatives. No papers of any sort were found that would show where the dead man came from or to what regiment or company he belonged during the Civil war, but the old soldiers claim that the button is a mark of identification enough to warrant them in giving him a soldier's burial.

There are now about 53 old soldiers buried in the plat at Forest Hill reserved for the purpose, and fully twenty of these were laid away under circumstances more or less similar to the case of Perish. Like him some of the old soldiers had left their relatives, or lost them through death, and had been wandering over the country until overtaken by death, homeless, penniless, and probably friendless. As a rule, papers of some kind establishing identity and giving information as to their war record have been found on aged waifs, but there have been instances where their past was unknown. Captain Dalley, who has taken a great deal of interest in tracing the history of the old soldiers who have died here homeless and friendless, says that in one case he worked over two years before he found out that an old soldier had formerly resided in a little town in Iowa. There have been other cases where he has worked for months before finding out their descendants, but in no case has there been an old soldier buried at Soldier's Rest of whose past history and his war record something has not been learned.

ITALIAN ANARCHISTS TO BE ARRESTED SOON.

Washington, May 23.—As a result of the investigation which for some time has been conducted by the immigration authorities of Baltimore and other places, several leaders of Italian anarchists will be shortly taken into custody. It was stated at the bureau of immigration today that since it became known that many Italian anarchists had arrived in this country, the most diligent efforts had been put forth to apprehend them. Commissioner General of Immigration Sargent was in Baltimore yesterday, conferring with the local inspector, and it was said today that several of the men wanted are now under surveillance, and that warrants for their arrest will soon be issued.

THE SUNDAY CLOSING LAW WILL BE PUT IN EFFECT.

Louisville, May 23.—Following last night's announcement by Governor Beckham and Mayor Barth of their intention to put the Sunday closing law into effect, the board of public safety today issued a sweeping order calling on the chief of police to see that the law be strictly enforced beginning at midnight Saturday next. The order includes in its inhibition, saloons, theaters, selling liquor in drug stores, barber shops, billiard halls, bowling alleys, skating rinks and all contract work.

It also prohibits the playing of professional baseball. This will, it is said, be made the reason for calling off next Sunday's game between Louisville and Toledo.

Wheat declined with heavy trading in the Duluth market. May wheat opened ⅝c lower at 83⅝c and closed ¼c lower at 83¾c. July wheat opened ½c lower at 83⅜c, declined to 83¼c at 9:30, rallied at 9:57, fell off to 83c at 10, rallied to 83⅛-¼ at 10:10, fell off to 82¾-⅞c at 11, rallied to 83c at 11:20, declined to 82¾c at 11:40, rallied to 83c at 11:50, fell off to 82½-⅝c at 12:28, rallied to 83⅛c at 12:50 and closed at that price, a loss of 1⅛c from yesterday. September wheat opened ⅜c lower at 80¾c, declined to 80⅛c, rallied to 80¼c, fell off to 80c and closed at 80⅛c, a loss of 1c from yesterday. Durum wheat was ½c lower.

Flax was only fairly active and prices were a little off. May flax closed ½c lower at $1.15½. July flax opened ¼c lower at $1.17, advanced to $1.17⅛, declined to $1.17, rallied to $1.17⅛ and declined steadily to the close, which was $1.16¾, a loss of ½c from yesterday. September flax opened unchanged at $1.17 and declined at the close to $1.16½, a loss of ½c from yesterday. October flax opened unchanged at $1.15½ and declined at the close to $1.15¼, a loss of ¼c from yesterday.

May oats and oats to arrive and on track were ¼c higher and the other coarse grains unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Rains in Kansas and Nebraska Cause General Weakness in Wheat.

Chicago, May 23.—Rains in Kansas and Nebraska, with the prediction of wet weather still to come, caused a weak wheat market at the opening today. Selling was general and shorts were about the only buyers. July wheat opened ⅝@½c to ⅝@⅞c lower at 82¼c to 82⅜c, and sold down to 82c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 134 cars against 116 cars last week and 158 cars one year ago.

The market was weak all day. The low point for July was 81⅞c. The close was weak with July off 1c at 81⅞@82c.

Wet weather also depressed the corn market, conditions there being similar to those affecting wheat. July opened ¼@½c lower at 47⅛c to 47⅜c and for a time held within the opening range. Local receipts were 392 cars with 277 of contract grade.

Corn like wheat was weak throughout the day and the low point of the day was at 47c. The close was weak with July off ⅜c at 47¼c.

The oats market was weak, partly in sympathy with other grain and partly because of more favorable weather for the growing crop. July opened ¼@½c to ⅝@⅞c lower at 31¼@⅜c and declined to 31⅛c. Local receipts were 150 cars.

There was very little doing in provisions at the opening, and prices were easy because of a 5c decline in the price of live hogs. July pork opened 2½c lower at $15.62½. Lard was a shade lower at $8.87½. Ribs were a shade lower at $9.—Close: Wheat—May, 83¾c; July, 81⅞@82c. Corn—May, 48⅛c; July, 47¼c. Oats—May, 33½c; July, 33c. Pork—May, $15.57½c; July, $15.67½. Lard—May, $8.52½; July, $8.60. Ribs—May, $8.97½; July, $9.02½@9.05; Rye—Cash, 62@66c; July, 62½@63½c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.15; southwestern, $1.09; May, $1.09. Timothy—September, $3.75. Clover—Cash, $11. Barley—Cash, 41@54c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, 91c; No. 3 red, 86@88c; 2 hard, 83@86c; 3 hard, 78@85c; 1 northern, 85@86c; 2 northern, 84@85c; 3 spring, 80@84c. Corn—No. 2, 32½@33c; 3, 32½c.

Liverpool Grain.

Liverpool, May 23.—Wheat—Spot, nominal; futures, easy; July, 6s 6¾d; September, 6s 7d; December, 6s 7d. Corn—Spot, firm; American mixed, new, 4s 7d; American mixed, old, 4s 9½d; futures, quiet; July, 4s 5d; September, 4s 4½d.

Duluth Car Inspection.

Wheat—No. 1 hard, 1; No. 1 northern, 4; No. 2 northern, 5; No. 3 spring, 3; rejected, 1; No. 1 durum, 1; No. 2 durum, 4; No. 3 durum, 2; total of durum, 7; mixed, 2; total of all wheat, 25; last year, 4.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The weather map this morning, showing more moisture than we have had for some time and assuring at least a partial breaking of the drouth, took quite a little edge off the market right at the start, with prices showing 1c decline. There were several feeble rallies, the market subsequently making another dip, only to rally again, with prices showing a loss of ⅞@1c for the day. Considering the amount of wheat poured into the pit around the opening, the previous selling waves that swept over the market on reports of rain scattered throughout the West and prediction of showers most general, the wonder is the market did not decline further. The outside markets all had an easier feeling, declining fully as much as our market. The action of the market suggests there is a growing belief in the reports from the Southwest that in many sections moisture has been too long delayed and comes too late to save damage over quite an area. It is a typical weather market, and will be influenced altogether by the weather map. Continuous rains would naturally take the edge completely off the bull side, It is believed local bulls sold considerable wheat today. To this extent their position has been strengthened, leaving them to reinstate their lines should the weather conditions warrant.

Corn—Considering the sharp break in wheat, this market showed surprising strength, futures closing at a net loss of ⅜c for the day. Receipts, it is true, are larger than they have been, but are falling short of the large predictions made by the trade generally. Stocks everywhere are light and the cash demand is practically urgent as ever. We do not see how any decline of importance can take place until stocks begin to accumulate. The movement from first hands must show up in greater volume than we are getting now to bring about increasing stocks.

Wisconsin Grain & Stock Company: Wheat—The bulls' air castles were punctured plenty today. At one time July wheat was 1¾c lower than last night's close. As we predicted the weakness in the market has brought forth the best kind of crop reports today. Official reports of drenching rains throughout Kansas and Nebraska, harvest returns from Texas showing the crop there to be as good if not better than last year's, estimates of bumper crop for the Southwest by erstwhile bulls who were proclaiming that the crop would be only one-half of normal. Everything points to continued downward trend of prices and on any little upturns would sell wheat.

C. H. SWANNELL DEAD.

Well Known Tailor Victim of Asthma in London, Ont.

Cabel H. Swannell, who for years was a tailor in Duluth, died two weeks ago in London, Ont. The funeral and burial took place there. Asthma, from which he had suffered for a long time, was the cause of death. He had been sick in St. Luke's hospital here for five weeks, and nine weeks ago went to London to stay with a sister there.

Mr. Swannell kept a tailor shop for some years at 23 Fifth avenue west, and sold out last January. He was 54 years of age, and married, but he and his wife did not live together. By a former marriage he had a son, who is now about 25 years old,, and who lives with his grandparents somewhere in Canada. Mr. Swannell was born in England, where some of his relatives still reside. He was a member of the Maccabees in Duluth.

ANKLE IS BROKEN.

Herman Moeller Victim of Runaway Accident on East Superior Street.

Herman W. Moeller, the city milk inspector, sustained a fracture of his ankle bone in a runaway this afternoon.

Mr. Moeller was driving on Superior street, near Twenty-first avenue east, when his horse became frightened and ran away, throwing Mr. Moeller from the buggy and breaking his ankle. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital.

ALPENA COMPANY WINS.

Government Awards Contract for 600 Barrels of Cement.

Major Charles L. Potter opened bids for 600 barrels of cement, today, to be used in the reconstruction of some of the park walls that were damaged at the ship canal by the storm of last November. The lowest bid was $2.35, submitted by the Alpena Cement company of Alpena, Mich., which concern will be awarded the contract. The other two bids were $2.40 and $2.53 per barrel, submitted respectively by the D. G. Cutler company of Duluth and the Universal Portland Cement company of Chicago.

Besides repairing the concrete walls the cement will be used in walks and for other general purposes about the park.

STRENGTH EXHIBITED

By Stock Market in Afternoon After a Weak Morning.

Late Rallies Were Not Equal to the Earlier Declines.

New York, May 23.—Opening prices in the stock market today were irregularly changed from last night within a narrow range and in the majority of cases opened at last night's prices. The amount of business done was insignificant. A rise of ⅝ in Reading and a decline of ¾ in American Smelting were the only notable changes.

There was little doing that the course of the market was readily swayed by the concentration of orders in one or two stocks Active selling of Brooklyn Transit which depressed it to 80¾ carried the general list down with it, but when Reading was pushed up 1⅛ the market immediately strengthened. Tennessee Coal and Colorado Fuel gained 1, while New York Central, Canada Southern and Northern Pacific yielded 1 and Great Northern preferred 1½. Prices were receding again at 11 o'clock

The tone of the market was heavy, but the general market was narrow with intervals of semi-stagnation in the trading Northern Pacific and Great Northern preferred fell 8, Anaconda 3¼; Illinois Central 1½, Brooklyn Transit 1¼ and American Ice and American Car preferred 1. Metropolitan Street Railway sold at a decline of 5 and Lake Erie & Western preferred 4. Tennessee Coal and International Pump rose 2. Bonds were steady at noon.

An extended list of losses reaching a point or more resulted from the sharp selling movement that began shortly after 12 o'clock. Business increased considerable while the pressure was on but had lapsed to about normal proportions at 1 o'clock when the market was steadying. The Pacifics, Hill stocks, New York Central, Southern railroad, Brooklyn Transit and the coppers were all conspicuous in the break. Anaconda dropped 6, Northern Pacific 5¼, Great Northern preferred 5, D. & H. 3½, Illinois Central 2½, Brooklyn Transit 2⅜, New York Central 2, Amalgamated Copper, Locomotive and Smelting 1⅝ and Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, St. Paul, L. & N., Southern Pacific and Sugar 1 to 1¼.

In connection with the afternoon rally, Pennsylvania sold ⅝ above yesterday's close. Reading also rebounded to a good fraction above last night and Consolidated Gas gained 1¾. Recoveries elsewhere were of a fairly uniform fraction. Pressed Steel Car declined 1¼ and Corn Products preferred 2½. Prices receded again before the end of the hour.

After selling down to the lowest there was a rally again in which St. Paul sold a fraction over last night. Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. gained 1½. There were declines in Wisconsin Central preferred of 2¾, Lackawanna 2, Gas 2 and Virginia-Carolina Chemical 1½. American Exjress sold at a decline of 14 points. The close was dull and fairly steady.

Stock Gossip.

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: Showing increased activity but retaining its professional character, the stock market showed further weakness this morning and turned strong in the afternoon. The late rallies were not equal to the earlier declines but wiped out the greater part of the losses. Further disclosures at the interstate commerce investigation of Pennsylvania affairs, and practical confirmation of the Pennsylvania Paris loan prevented a rally in Pennsylvania stock. A rumor that United States Steel is about to issue a large amount of bonds was influential for a while, but later denied. The market closed quiet but firm, for the first time in several days.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed irregular. The volume of business broadened out, but in the main was at the expense of values. Quite a selling movement set in about noon, but prices rallied easily, regaining the greater portion of the loss. The opening of the banks at San Francisco was attended without any serious results so far as the street could learn. The market is a slow affair and likely to continue a scalping one for the immediate future.

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was almost entirely professional today and after a steady opening became weak. The whole market sagged off, and while there was no great pressure some long stock came out. There was a good deal of short selling. Before the close prices male up some of the losses, but there was no snap to the market and the buying was mostly by shorts.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Company: The increased dividend on California & Arizona was favorably received and the stock advanced three points. Mass. Gas was the other specialty which showed pronounced strength. The bulge of the list was dull and sagged a little in sympathy with the New York market. Osceola and Mohawk were well bought and will be the next to declare increased dividends and should sell higher.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 23.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 2 to 5 points under realizing by some of yesterday's buyers. For the first few minutes prices held a round opening figures but the market soon eased off under a renewal of bear pressure, and during the middle of the morning was about 5 to 9 points lower with May relatively easy. Trading was only moderately active.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 11.90; do gulf, 12.25. Sales, 700 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady: May, 11.34; June, 11.10; July, 11.06; Aug., 11.03; Sept., 10.63; Oct., 10.51; Nov., 10.56; Dec., 10.57; Jan., 10.62; Feb. 10.62; March, 10.69.

METROPOLITAN GOLF TOURNAMENT BEGINS.

New York, May 23.—The eighth annual championship of the Metropolitan Golf association was begun on the links of the St. Andrew's Golf club, at Chauncey today. There were no withdrawals from the original entry list of seventy-eight players, and weather could hardly be finer for good golfing.

Charles H. Seely of the Weeburn club, Stamford, Conn., present holder of the title; Walter J. Travis of Garden City and Findlay S. Douglas of Nassau, L. I., both former holders of national amateur championship honors, were among the contestants. There were also several players from distant points entered and playing as members of the St. Andrews' club. Two of these were E. A. Byers, Pittsburg, and F. O. Horstman of Washington, D. C.

TAKING OF TESTIMONY

Begins in First of the Rebate Cases at Kansas City.

Kansas City, May 23.—The taking of testimony in the first of the rebate cases to come to trial here was begun today in the United States district court.

George H. Crosby, former traffic manager of the Burlington railroad, is charged with having conspired with George L. Thomas, freight broker of New York city, and L. B. Taggart, his chief clerk, to pay rebates to shippers or receivers of freight in Kansas City on shipments from New York, New Jersey, and other Eastern points in 1904 and 1905.

Thomas and Taggart are charged with having conspired to violate the interstate commerce laws of 1887 by procuring rebates from railroads on shipments from New York and other Eastern points to Kansas City.

The cases against these three men have been combined for convenience.

SITUATION A PUZZLER

Granville S. Pease Refuses to Make Political Predictions.

Republicans Not Reckoning Enough on the Strength of Johnson.

Granville S. Pease, editor of the Anoka Union, is in the city, a guest at the St. Louis. Mr. Pease, who is the oldest editor in the state in point of service, says he is in Duluth in connection with the issuing of a memorial edition of his paper, which will come off the press Saturday, June 2. The Anoka editor has always played a part in politics in Minnesota, and is generally pretty well posted, but asserts that the present campaign is the greatest puzzler of any that has occurred during his forty years in the harness in this state.

"The people at large don't seem to get at all interested in the contest," said Mr. Pease today. "I don't remember ever having seen it so quiet in the Republican ranks three weeks before the holding of the state convention. No matter what the leaders and candidates do, the general run of voters refuse to manifest an active interest in things political. They don't seem to care. I am of the opinion that Governor Johnson and his unquestioned popularity has something to do with this. The Republicans are not reckoning on the strength of Johnson so much as they should.

"Everybody is at sea when it comes to predicting who will be the choice of the convention for governor. Senator A. L. Cole of Walker, is developing a remarkable strength in all parts of the state, south as well as north. I do not say he will be nominated, however. Even his friends are surprised at the showing he is making. He has established headquarters in St. Paul, and is conducting a vigorous campaign.

"Uninstructed delegations will be the common thing at the convention. More independence will be displayed among the delegates than at any convention in the past, if present indications count for anything. Usually it is disgusting the way a few men are able to handle a state convention, but I believe it will be different this year. Let us hope so, at least. If 'Resolution' Grimshaw starts in to run things his own way, as he has a habit of trying to do, he is liable to be kept interested for a time.

"The gathering may be a very tame affair, and again it is liable to be just the opposite. There are apt to be some very warm situations. The followers of Dunn and the followers of Collins have not entirely forgotten the sore spots of two years ago, and a microscope would probably disclose blood in the eyes of some of them.

"Just now I am more interested in my anniversary edition than in anything else. I have been working hard on it since late in March, and am proud of the result. It will be the most unique thing of its kind ever issued in the state, differing widely from the usual anniversary editions, and I intend to make it a work of art from the printer's standpoint. It will be printed on the finest enamel book paper, and will not contain a single display advertisement."

ORDER FOR HEARING PROOF OF FOREIGN WILL.—
State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis —ss.
In Probate Court, Special Term, May 22nd, 1906.
In the Matter of the Estate of Roderick Perry, Deceased
Whereas, Certain writings purporting to be duly authenticated copies of the Last Will and Testament of Roderick Perry, late of Logan County, Kentucky, deceased, and the probate thereof in Logan County, Kentucky, have been delivered to this Court;
And Whereas, M. V. Perry has filed therewith her petition, representing, among other things, that said Roderick Perry lately died in said County of Logan, Kentucky, testate, possessed of certain real estate, situated in said County of St. Louis, and that said petitioner is the executrix named in said will, and praying that the said instrument may be admitted to probate, and that letters testamentary be to her issued thereon;
It Is Ordered, That the proofs of said instrument, and the said petition, be heard before this Court, at the Probate Office in said County, on Monday, the 25th day of June, A. D. 1906, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, when all persons interested may appear for or contest the probate of said instrument;
And It is Further Ordered, That notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County, and that a copy of this order be served on the county treasurer of said St. Louis County at least ten days before said hearing.
Dated at Duluth, the 22nd day of May, A. D. 1906.
By the Court,
DAVID H. LAWRENCE,
Judge of Probate of Lake County, Acting Judge of Probate of St. Louis Co., Minn.
(Seal Probate Court, St. Louis Co., Minn.)
Duluth Evening Herald—May 23-30, June 6, '06.

THE CHEAPEST LOTS ON THE MARKET

We have for sale lots in London Addition—Lakeside—that can be purchased for less money than asked for any lots equally as good. Every lot 50x140 feet—don't forget that—and many lots on graded streets, and at terms to suit the purchaser. Take your time in paying for them. Now is the time to make a start towards a home, or to hold for an advance. See us at once.

Some Good Deals!

$8000 50 feet on West First St., adjoining fire hall. There is a large frame house on the lot renting for $15 per month and large barn in rear, partially destroyed by fire which can be repaired and rented at good price. Can sell all for less than value of lot alone. (340)

$2600 6-room house, upper side First St., between Sixth and Seventh avenues east; 25-foot lot, open plumbing, hardwood floors in three rooms, electric light. (3178)

$3700 8-room house on east Fourth street, west of Fourteenth avenue, stone foundation, furnace heat, mantel and grate, gas and electric light, hardwood finish and floors, 1st floor, open plumbing, laundry. The best bargain we know of for the money. (1228)

$3000 1404 East Fourth street, 8-rooms, stone foundation, furnace, mantel and grate, good plumbing. House alone cost more than the price. Can sell on easy payments. (58)

$5500 1905 West Superior street, store room and two flats. rents $90 per month. A fine bargain. A few good houses to rent, also two stores at West end.

5 per cent Money on hand to loan.

On easy terms buys a double, two-story and basement, brick building, at 329 and 331 East Seventh street. Each house has six rooms, and the basements were intended originally to be made into flats, but were left unfinished. Lot 50 by 140 ft. This we regard as an exceptionally good bargain, as the income from rents will pay extremely good interest on the investment.

WILL WEAR NEW UNIFORMS.

Guardsmen of the Third Regiment to Have Battalion Drill.

This evening at the Armory the members of Companies A and C of the Third regiment will appear at battalion drill in their new dress uniforms. These were but recently received, so that the soldiers will practically make their first appearance in them tonight. They are of blue, with light blue trimmings, and are similar to the new ones adopted by the war department for the regular army.

Maj. Resche will review the troops, and it is understood that the regimental band has received instructions to be on hand. The troops should present a pretty sight. There was some talk of following the example of the naval reserves and have dancing after the drill, and this plan may yet be carried out.

WEST DULUTH

WORK BEING HURRIED ON

Walls of New Brass Works Building Growing Fast.

Ore Dock Being Constructed Rapidly Also —Many Houses.

The walls of the new cement block building being erected for the Duluth Brass works at Fiftieth avenue west and Ramsey street are well under way. On all four sides they are up about eight feet and rapidly growing. The work is being rushed and it is expected that before very long the plant will be moving in. As yet no move has been made for the proposed addition to the National Iron works, but this work will be started soon.

The work on the new ore dock and approach at Thirty-fourth avenue west is also going ahead rapidly. One can fairly see the dock grow, and the approach is rapidly nearing completion.

There is considerable building going on west of the present ore docks. On almost all sides one can see new buildings going up. The houses being erected for the most part are quite pretentious and will make good homes. Considerable property is being disposed of ever day west of the Point of Rocks, including the West end and West Duluth for residence property.

Will Contest Game.

The baseball teams of the Lincoln and Irving schools played a game yesterday afternoon and the final score was 5 to 4 in favor of the Lincoln school team. However, the Irving school team changed its order of batting during the game. The members of the Irving team believe they have good grounds for having the game cancelled.

Observe Ascension Day.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Swedish Mission church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Highmark on Fifty-third avenue west and will observe the occasion, which is Ascension day, appropriately with a program. In the evening the Young Ladies' Aid society of the church will meet at the same place and a fitting program will take place after which refreshments and a social time will be enjoyed.

Saved by Her Daughter.

Mrs. Andrew Bergland of Grand avenue was almost fatally burned a few evenings ago by the explosion of a lamp which she accidentally dropped on the floor in her home. Her clothes caught fire, but she was saved by her 14-year-old daughter, who hearing her mother's cry for help, rushed in and wrapped a rug around the flames, smothering them.

West Duluth Briefs.

W. J. Milsop has purchased two lots on Fifty-fourth avenue west, and is preparing to build a fine residence thereon. Mr. Milsop is engineer at the blast furnace.

Fred Bruce, who is ill with pneumonia at Glover's residence on Fifty-fourth avenue west, is very low.

Mrs. William Le Mier of Fifty-second avenue west, has been taken to the Duluth hospital for treatment.

J. Lessard of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., has moved his family into the house at 519 Gosnold street. W. M. Cook has moved his family from Grand avenue to the same place.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Clark of 5711 Huntington avenue, will entertain the grown folks who took part in the Masonic entertainment and dance of last week, tomorrow night.

M. J. McGinn of the National Iron works has been called to Alpena, Mich., to attend the funeral of his brother who died in Detroit yesterday. He will leave tonight. They met for the first time in thirty-five years at a family reunion in Alpena last Christmas. This is the first death in the family.

T. E. Gilligan has moved his family into the house at 208 Fifty-fourth avenue west. Mr. Gilligan is a railroad man.

David Carson of Marinette, is in the city on business.

Leon Larson is able to be at work again after an illness of several weeks.

Miss Fanny Ryan of Minneapolis, who has been visiting friends here for some time, has returned to her home.

Alfred Burkholder, a lumberman of Calumet, was in the city yesterday.

D. D. Matheny of La Crosse, was here yesterday visiting friends.

The remains of J. C. Buchanan, who was drowned Sunday were shipped last evening to Hancock, Mich., for burial.

Miss Agnes Olson of Fifty-eighth avenue west, has gone to Madison, Wis., to visit for a week.

Dr. A. L. Robertson of Fergus Falls, was here yesterday calling on old friends.

The funeral of E. H. Dibbell will be held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mankins, corner of Cody street, Fifty-Sixth avenue west, Thursday, at 2:30 p. m.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Alleged "Blind Pigger" Fatally Shot During Raid on Place.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—Leonard K. Burton, charged with running a blind pig at Flaxton, was probably fatally shot late Sunday night in a raid upon his place. Deputy Sheriff Towne and several men entered the place and it is said Burton fired four shots at them. They returned his fire, one bullet passing through his breast. The door was forced upon and the inmates taken into custody. One man besides Burton was slightly injured. Deputy Towne arrived in Minot Tuesday with Frank Gehrke and E. W. Hinds, who were in Burton's place at the time of the raid.

Mandan.—Paul Canoyler was killed by lightning Sunday near the farm school on the Standing Rock reservation. He was on his way to Pollock, S. D., where his wife has been ill.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Belle Fourche.—Mrs. Frank B. Parks is offering a reward of $200 for the body of her husband, who was drowned early this month in the Little Missouri.

Aberdeen.—The new Episcopal church at Selby was dedicated Sunday, completing an arduous task assumed by Rev. George McKay of Redfield, rector of the church over a year ago. Determined to have a church building, Rev. Mr. McKay himself hauled the boulders used in the foundation several miles across the prairies to Selby, and assisted largely in the actual work of constructing the church.

Yankton.—For the first time in its history South Dakota has turned back an emigrant toward his own old home because of insanity. United States Immigrant Inspector A. H. Mansfield started for New York from here with Ole Skattam of Norway, who has been in Marshall county for two years, and eventually drifted to the state hospital for insane here. Investigation proved that Skattam was insane when he arrived in the states, and as this is only one of several such cases the authorities were appealed to and Mr. Mansfield was ordered to take him in charge. He will be returned to Norway at once.

Yankton's high school graduation class of 1906 consists of the following: Arthur Max, John Balmat, Richard Hobson, Paul Brecht, Hattie Orvis, Maud Fitzgerald, Josephine Tripp, Marjorie Ray, Florence Burgt, Allee Dahl, May and Irene Kelly, Clara Russell, Amy Ellerman, Clarissa Max, Julia and Gladys Smith, Helen Dudley, Lulu Edgerton and Elsie Binder.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Authorities Investigating the Death of a Camp Watchman.

Menominee—Peter Voline, employed as a camp watchman at camp 6 near Bandville, was found dead Monday night on the floor of the camp. The cause of his death is unknown, but the authorities are making an investigation.

Marquette—Their demands for increased wages refused, the men employed at the Michigan Iron company's furnace at Newberry went on a strike, resulting in the suspension of operations. Laborers are being brought in from the company's cordwood camps to take the strikers' places.

St. Ignace—D. Bradford of St. Ignace has been selected by the Englewood Land & Lumber company, Englewood, Louisiana, as the man to take full charge of its big mill at Englewood. This mill has two band saws and one band resaw. It is one of the largest in the country, and one of the most modern.

Mayor Hotchkiss of St. Ignace has reappointed Frank Grondin city marshal; J. J. Brown, city attorney; C. M. Whiteside, city surveyor; Dr. J. F. Darby, city physician; O. C. Boynton, city poor commissioner, and P. Mulerone, member if board of public works. These appointments have been confirmed by the council.

Pickford—A very sad accident happened at Pickford, Chippewa county, when Harry Garbe, aged 28, fell on a hot stove while in an epileptic fit. He was alone in the room at the time, and being unable to help himself he lay on the stove face downward until help came about two minutes later. His face and hands were very badly burned and the clothes were burned to the flesh on the body and arms. He was horribly injured, but is expected to recover.

Iron Mountain—Frederick Carlson, a miner employed at the new Ludington shaft at Iron Mountain, met almost instantaneous death by falling a distance of one hundred feet. The young man was working on the fourteenth level in company with his brother. He went up the ladder a short distance to lower an empty bucket. When he reached for the rope he missed it, and becoming over-balanced fell to the bottom of the mine. He was aged 23.

Dr. Chase Dies.

Word has been received in Duluth of the death last evening of Dr. Henry H. Chase of Rock Island, Ill., formerly of Duluth. Dr. Chase had been ill with blood poisoning for three weeks, and the end came at 10 o'clock last evening. He was well known in Duluth, where he was engaged in the practice of medicine with the late Dr. Pillsbury of this city. He has many friends here who will be grieved to learn of his death.

NEW RURAL ROUTE.

Washington, May 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rural route No. 3 has been ordered established on July 2 at Foley, Benton county, Minn., serving 500 people and 100 houses.

BOY ACCIDENTALLY SHOOTS HIS BROTHER.

Bemidji, Minn., May 23.—Arnold Jenson, a 16-year-old boy residing near Leon township, Clearwater county, accidently shot his brother, Glibert, aged 14, in the leg, yesterday morning, with a rifle, while the two were out hunting wolves.

The injured boy was taken to Bagley for medical attendance. After probing, the doctors located the bullet just below the left knee. They do not expect any bad results, unless blood poisoning sets in.

POLAR HONEYMOON FOR A CINCINNATI COUPLE.

Cincinnati, May 23.—Max Fleischman, a young millionaire, and his bride, who was Miss Sara Sherlock, have started on the first stage of their voyage to the Arctic regions. They will go to London to meet friends who are to accompany them. A vessel has been chartered for the trip, which will set out from some Norway coast town. It is the intention of the party to penetrate into the polar regions as far as possible. It will return in October.

O'MEARA GETS THE POSITION.

Boston, May 23.—Stephen O'Meara, formerly editor of the Boston Journal, today was appointed police commissioner of this city by Governor Guild. The office has been newly created.

Cooper's New Discovery

Which Restores These Important Organs of the Body to Their Normal Condition, Regulating the Urine and Strengthening the Back.

This Letter Tells You How To Be Cured.

THE COOPER MEDICINE COMPANY:

Gentlemen: For years I have been a great sufferer from Kidney and Urinary Trouble. I had a severe pain in the lower part of my back and my urine was cloudy and contained a sediment. I had only used one bottle of Cooper's New Discovery when the pain had entirely disappeared and my urine became perfectly natural with no sediment. My kidneys are in fine condition and my general health is greatly improved. Cooper's New Discovery is a remarkable medicine and I can heartily recommend it to everyone suffering from Kidney and Urinary Trouble. Signed: JACOB WEBER, 716 W. 10th St., Indianapolis, Ind.

If so, you need Cooper's New Discovery. A few bottles of this New Discovery in Medicine will restore them to their normal condition and prevent the formation of Uric Acid.

UNION OF PRESBYTERIAN CHURCHES ACCOMPLISHED AFTER YEARS OF EFFORT

The Cumberlands and General Presbyterians Are Now One.

Great Rejoicing at the General Assembly at Des Moines.

But Two Commissioners Record Their Vote Against Union.

Des Moines, May 24.—"I do solemnly declare and here publicly announce that the basis of reunion and union is now in full force and effect and that the Cumberland Presbyterian church is now reunited with the Presbyterian church in the United States of America as one church."

With these words uttered before the general assembly today, Moderator Hunter Corbett officially established the union of the Cumberland church with the Presbyterian church in the United States of America. The big assemblage broke into a storm of rejoicing. Handclapping, cheering, and waving of handkerchiefs gave expression to unalloyed pleasure. The consummation devoutly wished and worked for through many years despite many obstacles, had become a reality.

Yesterday a telegram was received from Decatur announcing the adoption of the joint resolution by the Cumberland church. At the opening session of the Des Moines assembly, similar action was taken and messages to that effect dispatched to Decatur. The most intensely dramatic scene of the ceremonies attending the formal union of the churches was the vote against union by two commissioners. Moderator Hunter Corbett put the question, which was in the form of a resolution and called for the affirmative vote to be expressed by the commissioners rising to their feet. Instantly the assembly hall was converted into a stamping, cheering crowd. As the handclapping and cheering died down and the commissioners took their seats, the moderator said:

"All who are of the opinion that the motion should not prevail, please rise."

A laugh went around the hall, for it was believed the request was a mere formality and would meet with no response. To the astonishment of all present, two commissioners arose to their feet. Pandemonium broke loose and it was feared for an instant that indignity would be offered the lonely men who opposed the union. One of the men was Dr. William Laurie of Bellefonte, Pa., and the other was Rev. Roger F. Cressey of Jacksonville, Ill. Dr. Laurie is a stalwart Scotchman, and his personality dominated the convention.

"Greatly as I dislike to record my vote against this union, and deeply as I feel the pain of being forced to disagree with my fathers and brothers, yet I cannot conscientiously vote for this union. It is purely a question between me and my God. I have to oppose it."

Rev. Mr. Cressey said: "This is a matter of conscience with me. I can not honestly vote for the union."

A motion was made that the negative votes be recorded. Cries of "No" were raised. Dr. Laurie was on his feet immediately, and said: "I desire that the negative vote be recorded. I never was yet ashamed to stand by my convictions."

The record was duly made.

PRESERVATION OF ANTIQUITIES

Will be Advanced by Measure Ordered Reported to Senate.

Washington, May 24.—A measure for the preservation of American antiquities, which has the endorsement of a score or more of societies in this country, has been ordered reported favorably by the senate committee on public lands. The proposition has been before congress in various forms for several years, but always some objections were urged against it, until the present congress, when Senator Patterson introduced a measure, previously endorsed by the Archaeological and Anthropological societies interested.

Under the bill ordered reported, any person who shall appropriate, excavate, injure or destroy any historic or prehistoric ruin or monument, or any object of antiquity, situated on lands owned or controlled by the United States, upon conviction shall be subject to a fine, not exceeding $500, or imprisonment for not more than ninety days, or both.

It is intended that the president, by proclamation, shall declare historic landmarks, historic and prehistoric structures, and other objects of historic or scientific interest, that are situated on federal government lands, to be national monuments. Permits may be issued by the heads of the executive departments for examination of ruins, the excavation of archaeological sites, and the gathering of antiquities upon the lands under their respective jurisdiction. It is provided, however, that such examinations shall be undertaken for the benefit of reputable museums, universities, colleges or other recognized scientific or education institutions, with a view to increasing the knowledge of such objects, and that the material gathered shall be for permanent preservation in public museums.

WALLACE TO TAFT

Says Secretary Would Not Attack Veracity to His Face.

Charges Governor Magoon With Betrayal of His Confidence.

Washington, May 24.—Former Chief Engineer John Wallace of the Isthmian canal, yesterday addressed a letter to Senator Millard, chairman of the committee on interoceanic canals, in reply to Secretary Taft's recent testimony before that committee, in which he charges Secretary Taft with having abused his official position in order to make a second assault upon him and to place in public record statements "calculated and apparently intended to affect my reputation for veracity, such as he would not make to me as one man to another, face to face." He also imputes to Governor Magoon a breach of confidence in having advised him to take a certain course of action and then anticipating it by secretly writing to Secretary Taft. While expressly stating that he bears no ill will toward William Nelson Cromwell, Mr. Wallace speaks of the bias of Secretary Taft in favor of that gentleman and says that Secretary Taft was aware that Mr. Cromwell, among other things, was trying to secure the payment by the United States of an improper claim which, however, was afterwards disallowed by the president.

The letter, in part, is as follows:

"In view of the fact that Secretary Taft has seen fit to submit to your committee certain correspondence orlginally of a personal and confidential nature which passed between Governor Magoon, Mr. Cromwell, Chairman Shonts and himself, all relating to the supposed reasons for my retirement as chief engineer of the Isthmian canal

MADE HORSES OF HIS CHILDREN

A Wisconsin Farmer Hitched Four to a Heavy Plow.

Oshkosh, Wis., May 24.—Complaint has been made against a farmer living about five miles southwest of Neenah on the line of the Oshkosh & Neenah interurban, that he has been hitching four of his seven children to a plow and compelling them to drag the implement through a ten-acre truck garden, while he guided the plow and drove them as he would drive horses.

This sensational complaint is founded upon facts, as farmers in the vicinity and persons from Oshkosh riding along the highway in carriages and automobiles, have witnessed the cruel practice.

The attention of the authorities has been called to the matter and after securing substantiation of the facts of the case, Dr. Wilkie of this city, agent of the Fox River Valley Humane society went to the farmer and compelled him to send five of the children to school. Of the seven children, five are of school age, whom the farmer, it is alleged, was rearing in ignorance. None of them is able to read or write. The majority are girls. The oldest one and one who was hitched to the plow is not over 14 years of age.

Dr. Wilkie states that the plow is a heavy affair with harnesses attached to it which were put about the shoulders of the children. The farmer says the plow is a corn plow.

PENNSYLVANIA PROHIBITIONISTS

Name Mixed Ticket for State Officers at Their Convention.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 24.—The Prohibition state convention today nominated a mixed ticket for the state officers to be voted for at the next general election. William H. Berry, Democrat, who was elected state treasurer as a Fusionist last November, was named for governor; Homer L. Castle, Prohibitionist, of Pittsburg, was nominated for lieutenant governor; Representative William T. Creary, Democrat, of Catawissa, for auditor general, and ex-Representative E. A. Coray, Jr., Republican, of Wilkesbarre, for secretary of internal affairs.

Castle's nomination for governor was regarded as a certainty until a conference of the party leaders was called last night to outline the work for the convention. After remaining in session until 1 o'clock this morning, the conference decided on Berry. This was satisfactory to Castle and his friends and the remainder of the ticket was framed up by the leaders with little trouble. It is their hope that this ticket will be endorsed by the Democratic state convention, which assembles here on June 27.

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT IS HESITATING ON GRANTING EVEN PARTIAL AMNESTY

Resolution Taken a Week Ago Has Not Been Executed.

Proposition for Local Pardon Raises Storm of Protest.

Many People Favor Dictatorship to Crush Any Revolution.

St. Petersburg, May 24.—The government seems to be hesitating about executing the resolution taken a week ago to grant partial amnesty. The official statement, issued last night, justifying the government in not granting plenary amnesty, seems designed to pave the way for a refusal, on the ground that in the present circumstances, the release of the political prisoners deserving freedom can be left to the local authorities. Nothing could be more irritating to the Liberals than for the emperor to delegate the discretion of granting pardon to the very men responsible for the wholesale arrests which occurred during the winter, and such a decision is sure to arouse a storm in the lower house and increase the danger of a conflict. The hand of Gen. Trepoff, who engineered the protests of the branches of the league of the Russian people (Black hundred) in the interior, which are cited in the official statement as evidence that the Russian masses are opposed to amnesty, is seen in this new shift in the government's position, and again raises the spectre of a counter revolution.

The Twentieth Century, formerly the Russ, today prints in parallel columns, the text of identical telegrams sent to the emperor from widely different places, protesting against the demand of the lower house for amnesty, proving them to have been inspired from a common source. The dispatch most used is as follows:

"If parliament desires to assist you, allow it to do so, but if the members attempt to play the role of rulers, disperse them and trust to the whole of the Russian people to support you."

At Kieff yesterday the local branch of the League of the Russian People decided to organize for the coming war against parliament, and pronounced itself in favor of the creation of a dictatorship to crush the revolution.

Officers of the guard regiments in St. Petersburg, at a meeting just held, openly advocated the dispersal of parliament.

Such facts serve to strengthen the campaign which the Social Democrats and Social Revolutionists continue to wage against the "illusions" of a parliamentary regime.

It is announced that Premier Goremykin will reply tomorrow afternoon to the address of the lower house to the throne. The impression is growing that if the peaceful issue is to be possible the Goremykin cabinet must give way to another ministry, without previous bureaucratic connections. M. Shipoff of Moscow is considered the most prominent candidate for premier. Michael Stakovich, Count Heyden and Prof. Kusmin-Karavieff, all members of the lower house, are also mentioned, but no leaders of the Constitutional Democrats are referred to in this connection.

The Rech today prints an intimation that Count Solsky's retirement from the presidency of the upper house is intended to make way for Count Witte.

Former Interior Minister Durnovo has gone abroad. The car in which he traveled to the frontier was guarded by gendarmes and members of the secret police.

ADVISES VIOLENCE

Woman Suffragist Tells Followers to Break Asquith's Windows.

Mrs. Montefiore Engaged in Defending Home From Collectors.

London, May 24.—Mrs. Dora Montefiore, one of the leading woman suffragists, under whose lead many women have pledged themselves not to pay their taxes on the ground that taxation without representation is tyranny, harangued a great crowd of women suffragists from the second story of her house near London today. She roundly denounced Chancellor of the Exchequer Asquith as an assassin because he stood in the way of the advance of the woman's movement and Chief Secretary for Ireland Brice and Capt. John Sinclair, secretary for Scotland, were also bitterly assailed. Mrs. Montefiore informed her hearers that the women who were refusing to pay taxes were taking this course in order to advance the education of the cabinet ministers and warned the latter of the determination of those who were conducting the campaign to obtain their indisputable rights. She asserted that the cabinet ministers who opposed the movement were marked men, and suggested that her hearers break the windows of Mr. Asquith's house. She would do so herself, she declared, were it not for the fact that she was engaged in defending her residence against tax collectors and others.

The house of Mrs. Montefiore, which is situated near the Thames, not far from Hammersmith, is barricaded and surrounded by tax collectors and bailiffs who hope to starve her out to effect an entrance. Friends of Mrs. Montefiore, however, are supplying her with food.

CONFERENCE FAILS.

Effort to Bring About Settlement With Miners Proves Futile.

Columbus, O., May 24.—An effort to bring about a settlement of the mining controversy in Ohio at a conference between John Winder, president of the Sunday Creek Coal company, William H. Green, president Ohio miners, and Rev. Roderick MacLachen, a Catholic priest of Belmont county, last night failed and the two mines in Jefferson county, Ohio, resumed operations with non-union men, early today. Mr. Winder, who is chairman of the standpat operators of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, had received no report early today of any disorder in the mines started. The mines are defended by stockades and a Maxim gun, and a company of armed Pinkertons.

KING OF SPAIN STARTS FOR THE FRONTIER TO WELCOME HIS BRIDE

KING ALFONSO.

PRINCESS ENA.

Madrid, May 24.—King Alfonso, accompanied by Premier Moret, the minister of war, Lieut.-Gen. De Luque and a brilliant suite of officials and court dignitaries left Madrid this afternoon for the frontier where he will meet the future queen of Spain. Vast crowds witnessed the king's departure, which inaugurated auspiciously the events attending the royal marriage. The king will arrive at Irun at daylight tomorrow morning and the bride will reach there an hour later. The station at Irun is elaborately festooned and decorated with Spanish and British flags. Spanish peasants playing flutes and tambourines, and dressed in their quaint, local costumes, will welcome the bride, the municipality will offer her homage and a regiment of the Castilian guard will act as military escort. The royal train will return to Madrid at 5 o'clock Friday morning, arriving at the Pardo palace at 6:30 Friday night. A special railroad station hung with tapestries and displaying the royal arms has been erected near the palace. Thence the royal halberdiers will conduct the princess to the Pardo palace where she will await the marriage ceremony.

London, May 24.—Princess Ena and her mother, Princess Henry of Battenberg left London today for Spain at the frontier of which King Alfonso will await his future bride.

The departure of the princess from Victoria station was the occasion for an enthusiastic demonstration on the part of the Spanish colony here, while the platform also was crowded with English friends who gave the future queen of Spain a hearty sendoff. King Edward, Queen Alexandra, the prince and princess of Wales, the duke and duchess of Connaught and other members of the royal family and the staff of the Spanish embassy were those present. The king con Princess Ena to the royal sal which was filled with flowers.

Loud cries of "Long live the qu Spain" were raised as the train l station.

PLUM RUN MINES UNEXPECTEDLY OPENED, NON-UNION MINERS GOING TO WORK AMID SHOWER OF BULLETS

Constant Firing Kept Up All Night in the Bushes.

Attempt Made to Dynamite House Containing Strike Breakers.

All Preparations Are Made for Active Hostilities.

Springfield, Ohio, May 24.—After a night of almost constant firing in the hills, the Plum Run mine was opened this morning for the first time in seven weeks. The nonunion miners, 125 strong, marched down the hill toward the pits under heavy guard. They were greeted by a fusillade from the bushes. The bullets whizzed among the trees and the strikebreakers hurried to cover. The union men, worried by the unexpected opening of the mine, hurried from the settlement and gathered on the slopes above the mine. Their women folk who were picking up coal about the pit entrances, were ordered away. After the women had gone, here and there, from among the bushes sounded the crack of revolvers. The men behind were invisible.

A correspondent of the Cleveland News driving into camp was fired upon outside the "dead line" of the settlement. The bullets went high.

The fact that the hollow in which the mine is located is heavily overgrown with underbrush saved the guards and nonunion men from harm as they were almost totally concealed.

All preparations are being made for active hostilities. Two great navy searchlights have been put in place, one at the guard tent and the other at the tipple in the hollow. They will ... vanished before the searchers found their trail. The guards declare they were warned that an attempt would be made to dynamite the cottages. The four guards were discharged this morning.

"We gave orders that there should be no shooting until an actual attack is made," said Superintendent Cox. "We are straining every nerve to preserve peace."

Two mysterious strangers have joined the guard at the company's quarters. Unusual conduct on their part has convinced the company that they are spies and they are under surveillance. Charges and counter-charges of spying are being constantly interchanged.

SENATOR BURTON'S UP AGAINST IT.

BEATEN ON ALL POINTS

Government Shipyard is Sadly Behind on Building Battleships.

Washington, May 24.—The delivery Tuesday at Norfolk to the government of the completed battleship Louisiana of 16,000 tons, built by the Newport News Shipbuilding company, ended in favor of a private corporation the great struggle that has been going on for nearly three and a half years to determine whether the government could build at a navy yard a warship as quickly as it could be constructed in a private yard. The keel of the Louisiana was laid down Feb. 7, 1903, at Newport News and the keel of the Connecticut, which was to be built in competition, was laid down at the Brooklyn navy yard March 7 of the same year.

The Louisiana was launched Aug. 27, 1904, and the Connecticut followed her into the water a month later, Sept. 29. So far the race has been close, but soon the private workmen forged ahead, and the result was that the Louisiana was delivered ready for service probably some months in advance of the Connecticut.

Another point against the government was the fact that the Louisiana cost the navy department $3,992,000, while the Connecticut has already consumed all of the total appropriation of $4,212,000, and her builders have asked congress for $380,000 more.

WAGES INCREASED.

Cotton Mill Employes Get an Advance of 10 Per Cent.

Danielson, Conn., May 24.—A voluntary wage increase of 10 per cent has been granted all cotton mill employes in this district, notices to that effect having been posted today in the mills in this town, Moosup, Jewett City, Wauregan and many other places in Windham and New London counties. The action of the mill owners affects 20,000 persons. It is due, it is said, to the present excellent condition of the cotton milling industry in the state.

CASSATT CONTINUES HIS EUROPEAN TRIP.

London, May 24.—A. J. Cassatt, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, early in the week asked the White Star line to reserve accommodations for him on their steamer sailing May 26, as it was possible he would have to cut his holiday short. Yesterday, however, Mr. Cassatt cancelled this booking and retained his original accommodations for two months hence. His leaving for Paris yesterday was in conformity with his intentions when he arrived in London.

EARLY MORNING FIRE AT WALKER

Buildings in the Center of the Village Are Destroyed.

Walker, Minn., May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fire early this morning totally destroyed the buildings occupied by M. J. Foley's saloon, and Miss Bertrand's dress making parlors and residence, in the very center of the village. The Farmers' Place saloon was about half consumed and the building of William Dearing was also scorched. The fire started in the Foley building and was first discovered at about 12:30. The origin is unknown. It is a total loss to most of the parties.

A light wind from any direction would undoubtedly have caused the entire business section to be destroyed.

MICHIGAN MILITIAMEN

Are Fraternizing With Canadian Troops Across the Border.

Detroit, May 24.—The Michigan Nationau guard battalion located in this city and the Michigan naval reserve brigade are participating today in the celebration of empire day in Windsor, Ont., just across the river from Detroit and are fraternizing, parading and drilling with the Royal Canadian dragoons, from Toronto, the Ninety-first Highlanders regiment from Hamilton, Ont., who have come to Windsor for the celebration, and the Twenty-first Essex fusiliers, located in Windsor. The feature of the celebration was the unveiling of a memorial fountain erected in memory of the Windsor men who served in South Africa with the Canadian contingent during the Boer war. Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia of the dominion, and Hon. R. F. Sutherland, speaker of the house, were among the speakers at the unveiling ceremonies.

RAILROADS

JAPANESE IN DULUTH

Are Studying Methods Employed Here in Handling Freight.

T. Yatsui and S. Awaya Talk of Their Native Country.

T. Yatsui and S. Awaya, two Japanese gentlemen representing the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Steamship company, with a line of boats plying between American and Chinese and Japanese waters, are in the city today, guests of W. J. Power, local general agent of the Great Northern road. They are here to make a study of methods employed at the Head of the Lakes in loading and unloading freight boats, and otherwise handling freight.

"Our main purpose in coming to America," said Mr. Yatsui this morning, "was to renew certain contracts with the Great Northern. These contracts were for a period of ten years, and they expired recently. During the war our line of boats was not in operation, but service has been resumed, and a good business is being enjoyed. Business between Japan and other countries is increasing right along, and all the big boat companies with vessels reaching my country are experiencing a period of prosperity, which will probably continue indefinitely.

"While in the United States Mr. Awaya and myself decided to take advantage of the opportunity to investigate methods employed in this country by the railroad and steamship companies. We are visiting other cities besides Duluth. While here we will look over your big docks. Our stay here is brief, for we return to St. Paul this afternoon. Duluth seems to be a nice city, but I don't like the weather. It is very disagreeable.

"The United States is a fine country. I like America and Americans. Your people are so kind and hospitable it is a pleasure to travel here. Japan entertains the friendliest relations with this nation, and we hope to see a further increase in the business between the two countries. We look upon the United States as being the leading nation of the world in point of progressiveness, and much of the progress made by Japan in a commercial and industrial way is copied from America.

"We believe in imitating when benefit comes from so doing. If, on this trip, we find improved methods employed in the handling of freight about the boats and docks, and think that the same methods could be used to advantage by our own company in Japan, we will recommend that such methods be adopted. We believe in seeing how things are done in other parts of the world, and to do them the same way in our own country if it is to our advantage to do so. Japan is fast recovering from the effects of the war, and she will become of more and more importance commercially and otherwise as time advances."

In appearance Messrs. Yatsui and Awaya are typical Japanese. While their English is somewhat broken, it is easily understood.

CLUB SIX MONTHS OLD.

To Hold Monthly Meeting Friday Evening at Commercial Club.

The Northern Railway club will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the Commercial club rooms. "Shop Drives," dealing with the power used in running railroad shops, is the title of a paper to be read by T. Julian McGill of Minneapolis. A member of the organization will read a paper on "The Progress of the Club." There will be an excellent program of singing and vaudeville stunts in addition to this.

Tomorrow the club will be six months old. Its success so far has been remarkable, and the indications are that this success will be continued in the future. It is hoped to raise the present membership of 335 to 500 within the next few months. All the meetings so far have been well attended.

The publication giving the proceedings of the April meeting of the club, just off the press, is the best yet issued. It contains a full account of the last meeting, including the papers which were read, and contains a liberal amount of advertising. Four pages are given to illustrations of new electrical types of railroad locomotives.

New Oregon Line.

San Francisco, May 24.—The Examiner says: E. H. Harriman gave orders by wire yesterday, to officials in Portland and San Francisco to construct immediately a new road eighty miles in length from Drain on the Mt. Shasta route in Oregon southwesterly to Marshfield on Coos bay in the same state. This road will form the northern portion of a new coast line between San Francisco and Portland, thus connecting those cities by two steel highways.

Western Railroad Election.

Boise, Idaho, May 24.—The San Francisco, Idaho & Montana Railroad company, which proposes to build a line from Butte, Mont., to Winnemucca, Nev., was re-organized here yesterday at a meeting of stockholders. Donald Grant of Chicago was elected president and Henry Myer, cashier of the Hamilton National bank, Chicago, was elected treasurer. The directors are Eastern capitalists. It is said that the construction of the Western section of the line will begin within thirty days. It is believed here to be a Gould or Hill project.

South Shore Excursions.

The Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road has announced four annual spring excursions to Eastern points for June. The route will be over the South Shore to St. Ignace, and thence by steamer the remainder of the way. The dates of the excursion will be June 8, 12, 15 and 19. The return limit will be three weeks. Round trip rates will be practically one fare. The St. Anne de Beaupre excursion will be run July 22, with August 31 as the return limits. Stopovers will be permissable on the return. The feast of St. Anne will be held on July 26.

Restore New York Rates.

It is understood that all the roads running eastward will have re-established the regular passenger rates of the tariff sheet on and after June 1. The principal change will be the abolition of the $18 second-class rate to Montreal, Boston and New York.

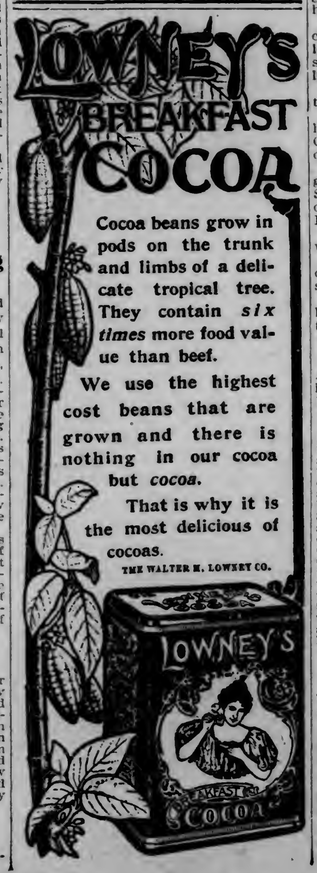
A SOCIAL DANCE

Will be given by the SISTER LODGE, North Star, No. 15, SONS OF HERMAN, at Eagles' or Folz's hall, Saturday, May 26. Flaaten's orchestra will furnish music. Ed Fischer, caller. Tickets, 50 cents per couple. Extra ladies, 25 cents.

PARIS SALON HAS MANY FINE WORKS ON VIEW.

London, May 24.—The first portion of the Paris salon opened its doors a fortnight ago. The second portion is now open. The collection of posthumous works by the late M. Carriero in one saloon is a very interesting feature of the exhibition, although the somber tones of his paintings and the absence of rich color are scarcely atoned for by the great interest the portraits possess from the expression of the eyes of his sitters, in which he seems to concentrate all his power. Individually, each is very fascinating; as a collection they become fantastic and somewhat monotonous.

M. Lavy Dhurmer's "Le Juge" is an allegorical composition destined to replace the "Momling" at the palais de justice. Aston Knight has a large picture in three compartments, labeled "Paris, London and New York." The murky atmosphere round Tower bridge, the glittering waters of the Seine, with Notre Dame in the distance, and the skyscrapers of the American metropolis tell their own tale.



WEST DULUTH

HAS FAITH IN FUTURE

C. E. Clark of Kansas City Buying West Duluth Property.

Paying Cash for Good Things—Expects Industrial Center.

L. A. Barnes' office has probably made the record sale this spring with one piece of property. It is the seven-room house and 25-foot lot at 613 Fifty-seventh avenue west. It has been sold three times since Jan. 1, and each time has seen an advance in the purchase price secured. The first advance was $75, and the last was $50 over that. The deal for the latest sale of the property was closed yesterday, and Mrs. Mary Herton of Duluth is the present owner.

C. S. Clark of Kansas City is in the city and is buying up a considerable amount of West Duluth property, paying cash for it. He has just closed a deal with L. A. Barnes for lots 9 and 10, in block 18, First division, Mr. Barnes acting as agent for H. W. James.

Mr. Clark has purchased a number of other pieces of property, both improved and unimproved, from different agents, and is looking for other good things. He has keen faith in West Duluth property going up, and believes this is going to become an industrial center, so he wants to get in on the ground floor.

IMPROVES THE CHURCH.

Holy Apostles Congregation Has Renewed Place of Worship.

I. Deatherage of West Duluth has been awarded the contract to paint Holy Apostles Episcopal church, at the corner of Fifty-seventh avenue west and Elinor street. The church will be painted centennial brown, pure drab and light lilac, and will present a very pretty appearance when finished.

A good deal of work has been done on the church this spring. The piles beneath it have been renewed, giving the edifice proper plumb; all the woodwork below the weather board has been replaced, and new doors have had to be put in because of the settling of the church. A new porch has also been put on.

FISHERMEN'S LUCK.

Party Catches Four and Imagination Does the Rest.

A party of fishermen, including Father Fechely of West Duluth, Father Walsh of Proctor, M. J. Filiatrault, W. H. Wells and G. L. Lynch, went up the river yesterday prepared to get a big string of fish. The stories of the members of the party as regards the size of the catch vary, but what is generally accepted as the truth is the confession of one of them that they caught just three pike and a pickerel, generally known as a snake.

They ate all four of them, and, coming back empty handed, claimed that the bag of fish fell out of the boat.

West Duluth Briefs.

Old Hickory camp, M. W. A., West Duluth, will give a card social and smoker to members only at Great Eastern hall this evening.

The funeral of E. W. Dibbell took place this afternoon at 2:30. Interment was in Oneota cemetery.

The West Duluth Athletic association will give another athletic entertainment in the very near future, their former one being such a success.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Clark of 5711 Huntington, will entertain the adults who took part in the kirmess recently given in Great Eastern hall, at their home this evening.

Miss Bowen of West Duluth, and Archie Ferguson will soon be married and have already engaged a house on Fifty-sixth avenue west, in which they will live.

Henry Hewitt has returned from a trip to Winnipeg.

J. Vanderhelt, formerly of West Duluth and now running a drug store at Oslo, Minn., is in the city renewing acquaintances.

S. J. Nygren, the well known druggist of Central avenue, was married at Stillwater last night to Mrs. Murphy of that place. They will arrive in West Duluth tomorrow.

William Treynor of Sioux City, Iowa, was in West Duluth yesterday.

Peter Haglund has gone to the Pacific coast where he will be engaged in sawmill work.

Albert Dye, who has been visiting here, has returned to his home in Detroit, Mich.

WATCH REPAIRING—HURST, 301 CENtral avenue.

Ascension day was observed in Holy Apostles Episcopal church this morning with services conducted by Rev. R. J. Mooney, the rector.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure, with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

WILL FIND ONLY RUINS

C. S. Sargent's Store at Fairbanks is Probably Burned.

When C. S. Sargent, who left Duluth day before yesterday for Fairbanks, Alaska, reaches that Northland metropolis he will probably find nothing left of his retail clothing establishment but ashes and other debris. Dispatches from the place state that the entire business district has been destroyed by fire, and Mr. Sargents place of business was undoubtedly among those burned.

He is on his way home now, and when he left this city, said that he expected to reach Fairbanks in about a month. He is going by way of San Francisco. He had just completed the buying of new stocks in the East and the news of the fire may cause him to change his plans. He will probably buy more goods and make arrangements for rebuilding his store at once, although he cannot reach the scene of the conflagration for a month.

When he was in Duluth on his way East about two months ago, Mr. Sargent gave The Herald a very interesting interview on Fairbanks. It is a town of 7,000 people and is growing fast. Every year the gold output of the district is increasing, and at the time of the fire the city was very prosperous. In speaking of the fire protection there, Mr. Sargent said that during the winter months it was necessary to keep a large amount of hot water on hand all of the time. Cold water would freeze in the hose before it reached the nozzle, and would be altogether unpractical.

Reports from the partially burned city are very meagre, but there is said to be enough food on hand to prevent suffering, and the summer season is at hand.

During his stay in Duluth, Mr. Sargent was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McGonagle. He is a brother of Mrs. McGonagle.

FREDERICK WARDE.

Masterly Lecture Recital on "Julius Caesar"---Poor Patronage.

Another very small audience greeted Frederick Warde last evening at the Lyceum and his masterly lecture-recital on "Julius Caesar" fell largely upon empty chairs. Those who were there, however, enjoyed it to the full for it was as delightful a treat as was his "Hamlet" of the previous evening. These lectures of Mr. Warde's are an education and even the Shakespearean scholar can find in them much of suggestion and illumination and the manner in which he makes clear the plot of the play and the purposes and characters of its actors, gives to him who has not been a student, a grasp and understanding that it would take many evenings of study to acquire. Particularly brilliant in last evening's discussion was his dissection of the famous speech of Mark Antony at the funeral of Caesar. The meaning of every line and every passage was set forth clearly, and illustrated as it was with Mr. Warde's effective delivery and acting, the full subtlety and cleverness of Antony's effort could not but befully appreciated.

In the afternoon Mr. Warde spoke on Shakespeare and His Plays," and the audience was the smallest of the three. It is unfortunate that entertainments so educating and so artistic should be so poorly supported.

Great Artists Heard.

Caruso, tenor; Melba, soprano; Pol Plancon, bass, and Mme. Emmes, soprano, were the assisting artists at a special concert which was given yesterday afternoon at French & Bassett's music room. That they were presented to the large and interested audience through the medium of machinery, no one of the auditors will have remembered by today, so wonderful was the clearness and beauty of tones of these world-famous singers. The encores were numerous and satisfying, as was the entire program, which was as follows:

Titles Serenade.....Lyons & Lufsty
Orchestra.
"Dearest Name" (Caro Norme)....
.....Verdi's Rigoletto
Mme. A. Michallowa, soprano.
"Celeste Alda" .....Verdi's Alda
Sig. Enrico Caruso, tenor.
"Hear the Gentle Lark".....Bishop
Mme. Melba, soprano.
Violin and flute duet, "Call Me Thine Own" .. .. ..

GOOD BEER

Is good for you. It is the national beverage where vigor and health are the rule, and nervousness the rare exception.

Malt is a food, half digested. Hops are a tonic. A little alcohol—there is but a trifle in beer—is an aid to digestion.

But insist on a pure beer—a beer that's well aged. Get a beer that is clean, filtered and sterilized. That always means Schlitz.

Ask for the Brewery Bottling.
Common beer is sometimes substituted for Schlitz.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Furnaceman Killed by Gas Inhaled at Top of Furnace.

Sault Ste. Marie—James McBurney, a horseman at the blast furnace of the Algoma Steel company, died Wednesday from the effect of gas inhaled while working at the top of the furnace. The wind blew the gas toward him, and he fell from the top unconscious. He leaves a wife and four children. He was 54.

Menominee — Rudolph Setterston, 15 years old, son of Assessor Herman Setterston, was operated on Tuesday afternoon for the glanders. This disease commonly affects horses and cattle and it is very rare indeed that is attacks a human being. It is believed the boy caught the disease while working on the farm where several horses had glanders.

Workmen made a gruesome find while engaged in setting out a lot of new shade trees on the Menominee high school campus. While they were digging a tree hole at the southeastern center of the grounds, part of a much decayed casket was turned up. One corner of the rough box was found and later two heavy handles were unearthed. The workmen were said to be a trifle superstitious and did not dig very deeply lest human bones might be disclosed. The coffin seemed to have been tilted and it is not known whether the grave had ever been opened or not. It is said that an old cemetery once existed on the present side of the high school.

Crystal Falls—Frank Palarico, an Italian miner, was killed by a fall of ground while at work in the Dunn mine at Crystal Falls. He had just started work for the day and was barring down loose ground from the roof of the room. He leaves a wife and seven children.

St. Ignace—A novel sight witnessed the other day at St. Ignace was that of Hector McLeod's little 12-horse-power gasoline boat towing the three-masted schooner Pine Lake, laden with posts, out of the M. L. company's slip. The relative size of the tug and vessel were as if a dog were pulling a box car.

Ironwood—Lamp Bros.' bakery, located on west Birch street, Norrie location, Ironwood, was destroyed by fire shortly before midnight. The structure was all in flames before the alarm was turned in, and the best the firemen could do was to keep the fire from spreading to adjoining buildings. The fire started in the oven room. The loss is estimated at $1,600, with insurance amounting to $1,200.

HIS OWN NEGLIGENCE.

Northern Pacific Answers in Personal Damage Suit.

The Northern Pacific Railway company has filed an answer in United States court in a personal damage suit started by Andrew J. Haberkorn, administrator of the estate of William D. Wilkinson, deceased, late of Stearns county. It seems that Wilkinson was killed by a Northern Pacific train which was running over the tracks of the Great Northern road at Como station, St. Paul, on May 20, 1905, and the administrator of the estate seeks to recover. He charges that Wilkinson was given no warning, the locomotive of the train not having whistled as it approached the crossing where Wilkinson was.

In its answer, filed yesterday, the Northern Pacific road admits that the whistle of its locomotive was not blown, as the engine approached the place Wilkinson was standing. However, it declares that the reason the whistle was not blown was because an ordinance is in force in the city of St. Paul prohibiting the blowing of locomotive whistles inside the city limits. The road claims, however, that its bell was rung sufficiently as it approached the place where Wilkinson was killed; and the road charges that Wilkinson lost his life solely through his own carelessness and neglect. It therefore asks a verdict in its favor.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Settler Moving West Thinks Gypsies Have Kidnaped Child.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Valley City—A. McMillan is visiting various localities throughout the state in search of a band of gypsies which he believes has kidnaped his daughter and is holding her in captivity.

McMillan and his family were moving overland from Fargo to the northern part of the state, where he expected to file on a homestead. When they reached a point near here they fell in with a band of gypsies who appeared to be going in the same direction as themselves. The parties camped close together for the night.

Just before retiring McMillan discovered that one of his daughters, a girl of about 15 years, was missing. Inquiry was made at the gypsy camp, where the girl's mother was told that the girl had gone to the store with a girl belonging to the band. The mother's suspicions were aroused, however, and she commenced a search of the wagons. She found the girl with whom her daughter was said to have gone to the store, but no trace of her daughter.

She immediately informed the rest of her family, but it was too dark to do anything that night. In the morning one of the gypsy wagons was missing and no trace of it yet has been found.

Fargo—Was pretty Gladys Olney kidnaped? Her parents believe she was, but the police are inclined to think that it was an elopement. The father is a healer, who recently arrived here for a short stay, accompanied by his wife and daughter. The girl is exceptionally beautiful and attracted much attention. She mysteriously disappeared and the police have been asked to assist in unraveling the mystery. They believe that someone whom the girl had met in another town came to Fargo and an elopment followed.

The Dakota Threshing Machine Men's association is the name given a recent organization here in which the membership is limited to the general managers of the big threshing concerns doing business in Fargo. J. L. Angel is president and F. O. Hellstrom secretary. The members deny that there will be an effort to control prices or divide territory.

M. G. Rogers, who operated a cigar and candy store, was arrested on the charge of conducting a gambling joint. A dozen men were in the back rooms of the place when the police raided it. Rogers had been warned the lid was on, but declined to take the matter seriously. He may plead guilty to avoid the necessity of bringing the men caught in the place as witnesses.

Lisbon—Wells Johnson, who resides three miles northwest of Lisbon, captured nine wolf cubs. As bounty he receives $4.50 each.

Bismarck—J. B. Lang and Charles Klein were sentenced to the penitentiary for a year and three months each for forgery. They passed bad checks on local people and were caught with more in their possession.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—Recently a steer belonging to Lyman Turner, a prominent farmer living near Columbia, became affected with some ailment. Mr. Turner, thinking the animal had lost its cud, shoved his arm down its throat in an attempt to remedy the trouble. In withdrawing his hand it was slightly abrased by the animal's mouth. Later a veterinary and he pronounced the disease hydrophobia and the steer was killed. Turner came to Aberdeen and his physician advised his immediate departure for Chicago to take treatment at the Pasteur institute. He left for there.

A number of animals near Columbia have been afflicted with the disease and efforts are being made to stamp it out.

Elk Point—Word was received here that Julius Schaetzel, one of Elk Point's most prominent business men, died in Mexico Tuesday. He went from here with his wife and son on a recreation trip, but took sick with typhoid fever some time ago. His death was a sudden shock to the community, inasmuch as he was getting along nicely and recovering. He leaves a wife and son. The body will probably be shipped home for burial.

WATER NOT PURE.

Health Officer Orchard Warns the Citizens of Superior.

Health Officer Dr. Orchard of Superior claims that the city water is not safe to drink and urges all concerned to be governed by his opinion. Dr. Orchard made this announcement following the report of the water company that the city water was all right for drinking purposes. He had received reports of the water recently analyzed by the state chemist of Wisconsin which show that the samples contained gas organisims, and colon bacteria were present. Dr. Orchard claims that the filter in Superior is too small to remove any of the germs that might get in the intake pipe, while it is being lowered across the bay.

Dr. Russell, the state chemist, is expected in Superior within a few days to conduct an investigation of the water supply.

IOWA CASE DRAMATIC

Daughter Fights Her Mother in Court Over Father's Estate.

Were Estranged by the Former's Marriage to an Adventurer.

Algona, Iowa, May 24.—A story which rivals in sensationalism the contents of a yellow-backed novel has been revealed in the district court in this city this week. It is a story of a mother's love and grit pitted against the schemes and hypnotic power of a Russian Jew—bogus count, fake doctor and profligate—whom she is forced to acknowledge as her son-in-law.

Nine years ago the father of Mrs. Michael Chirurg, then Mabel Ames, died at his home in Rutland, Ill. He left a will bequeathing three-fourths of his estate to his daughter and one-fourth to his widow, Mrs. Abbe S. Ames. The estate amounted to $12,000. Mother and daughter came soon after to Algona and invested in farm lands.

Mabel had an ambition for a finished education and the mother moved to Boston and settled in modest quarters, for the promise of giving her daughter the education she craved. She was sent to Wellesley, where she was graduated. She was then graduated from Radcliffe college and was given a degree of A. M. She planned to finish her education in Athens, Greece, but being unable financially at the time, she began tutoring scholars for Yale and Harvard. This was in 1905.

It was while tutoring students that she chanced to meet Dr. Michael Chirurg, who gave it out that he was a practicing physician of Boston. He was a Russian count and boasted of royal blood. He was the owner of vast estates in his native land, but was practicing in Boston through choice and not because of circumstances, for while a resident of his native land his every want was attended by his servants in livery. His story of wealth and position fell upon willing ears and soon his attention to Miss Mabel became marked, much to the discomfort of her mother, who could not tolerate his dissipated appearance and repulsive features.

Seeing that her daughter was becoming fond of his company, the mother wrote to Russia as to his claims. Her source of information was reliable and revealed that he was a profligate Jew and did not own a dollar and was not related to anyone of consequence. She next looked up his record in the United States and learned that he had obtained his diploma to practice medicine from an alleged college of surgery and midwifery which could not be located.

She further learned that he had been previously married and his wife had sued him for separate maintenance, upon which charge he was convicted, notwithstanding he had filed a counter charge of assault and battery which was dismissed by the court. Confining her inquiries to Boston, she learned that his practice there was of a very questionable character.

But notwithstanding that he was confronted with all this, the couple eloped last October and were married. Up to this time there had existed the greatest affection between mother and daughter. The elopement was the turning point.

Before they had returned to Boston Mrs. Ames received a note from them demanding that the pretentious home she had occupied in the fashionable quarter would be wanted by the couple for their exclusive use upon their return. Mrs. Ames "stood pat," and upon their return an attorney was secured to draft papers in which the home then claimed by the daughter was sold to a Jew friend of her husband for a nominal sum and a mortgage executed payable to the doctor for practically the full value of the property. The mother was then served with a notice to vacate.

Failing in their attempt to oust the mother from her home, the daughter then alleged that she had not received a fair settlement of hr father's estate, and demanded an accounting. She then sought to set aside the equity in a Palo Alto, Iowa, farm which she had given her mother, and the case was brought to Algona for trial.

All of this happened two months after her marriage and the suit brought for an accounting was for $16,000 for alleged misappropriation of funds. It was the latter suit that brought out the sensational testimony. For three days the mother endured the ordeal in the witness chair in the district court. Worked to a high tension, her poor nerves finally gave way, and following the collapse she was tenderly cared for outside the court room. Twice was this scene enacted in the week occupied by the case.

On the other side of the case the daughter was the main witness, her husband being present but taking refuge behind a large newspaper. Both sides had prepayed for a battle royal.

Two firms of attorneys appeared for the plaintiffs, while one firm guarded the interests of the defense with Judge W. S. Kenyon of Fort Dodge as special counsel. Under the fierce cross-examination and keen questioning of Judge Kenyon, Mrs. Chirug was greatly agitated and burst into tears repeatedly, finally ending her tragic scene by going into hysterics while her husband sat unmoved.

"Oh, if I could only release my daughter from the influence of that man," was the wail of her mother, as the tears welled up into her eyes and she glanched with pitying look toward her. Any reference to the bogus count was always alluded to as "Dr. Chirurg, the Jew."

Judge Quarton notified the attorneys that he will decide the case this week. The verdict, however, will not end the litigation, as the mother is determined to secure her daughter's release if a way can be found.

GETS IMPERIAL FAVOR.

End of the Career of Herr Von Holstein in Affairs.

Berlin, May 23.—The career of Herr Von Holstein, vortragender rath in the German ministry of foreign affairs, has come to an end. His departure from the Wilhelmstrasse has been lightened for him by the presentation of the Order of the Red Eagle in brilliants as a mark of imperial favor. But though he has left with all the honors of war, he has had to leave. With him disappears one of the most curious and interesting figures of European diplomacy. Some people are inclined to judge him harshly, but there is no doubt that he has served his country well. He was a German first, last and all the time. His only foreign appointment was that of secretary of embassy in Paris, when Count Harry Von Arnim was ambassador. He it was who discovered that that ambassador was disobeying the instructions of Prince Bismarck and "playing for his own hand in Paris." The spectacle of the secretary of the embassy making secret reports on his chief is not exactly a pleasant one, but it is comprehensible that in certain circumstances a man might deem this to be his duty. But the person practicing such tactics can never hope to be given more than the grudging benefit of the doubt.

Herr Von Holstein, after the fall, arrest and trial of Count Von Arnim, was called to the foreign office, which he never again left.

There is no doubt that a powerful court clique intrigued against him. The most active conspirators were Herr Von Kiderlon-Wachter, the under secretary of state for foreign affairs (he is now German minister at Bucharest), Count Philip Von Eulenberg and Baron Von Holstein. They used to hold their conclaves at Borchard's restaurant, in the Franzosische strasse, in Berlin, an establishment famous for the excellence of its oysters. This led to the chief comic paper of Berlin, the Kladderadatsch, publishing a series of mysterious references to the meeting of the "friends of oysters," which excited much interest in Berlin, but which were written in such cryptic fashion that only the inner circles of court and diplomatic society could pretend to understand them. All that Berlin ever knew was that Herr Von Kiderlen-Wachter sent his seconds to the editor of the Kladderadatsch, had him out in the Tiergarten and shot him in the chest. He spent six weeks in bed, but as neither he nor his adversary ever revealed the real inwardness of the whole affair, no one knows the truth to this day. Shortly afterward Herr Von Kiderlen-Wachter was sent as Prussian minister to Hamburg (after doing three months' imprisonment in a fortress for fighting a duel), while Count Philip Von Eulenberg left Vienna and retired into private life, his dismissal being mitigated by his receiving the title of prince. The only member of the trio who survived was Herr Von Holstein. He continued his duties (and evil tongues say his intrigues) at the foreign office till he "struck a snag" in the Morocco affair.

JUDGE SHARPLY SCORES RAILROAD PRESIDENT.

New York, May 24.—Sharp criticism of W. H. Truesdale, president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western road for breaking a contract to carry milk on that road, was contained in a decision of the United States circuit court of appeals which was handed down yesterday. Damages amounting to $137,833, were awarded to Robert E. Westcott, an executor of the estate of John H. Paul, who had a contract under which he bought great quantities of milk from farmers and shipped it over the Lackawanna.

Judge Wallace in his decision said that President Truesdale's repudiation of the contract was inspired by sordid motives, and committed with an "arrogance born of a scorn of the consequences;" that the appropriation of Westcott's percentages of the money which the defendant had collected for him was "morally no better than larceny" and that "conduct like Truesdale's by those who manage the affairs of great corporations has aroused the spirit of resentment in the public mind which is so intense today and which is not unlikely to result in litigation and in municipal interference which will bring serious loss upon the stockholders."

TRIAL AT DILLON, MONT., THAT WAS SENSATIONAL.

Dillon, Mont., May 24.—J. H. Clayton has secured a verdict for $7,000 in district court against Frederick Schuler for alienation of his wife's affections.

The case was one of the most sensational tried in the local courts for a long time. Both men are among the wealthiest and most widely known residents of Beaverhead county. Mr. Clayton also secured a divorce from his wife. Mrs. Clayton did not appear to defend the suit and the decree was by default.

Clayton asked damages of $10,000, alleging in his complaint that one evening when he returned home unexpectedly from the city he found Schuler and his wife in a compromising position.

CONCERNING WOMEN

The Minnesota State badges for the club women of Minnesota to wear during the biennial meeting at St. Paul next week have arrived in the city and may be secured by the women contemplating attending the federation meeting, from Miss Poirier at the library.

The Duluth women who will probably attend the convention of the general federation meeting are Mrs. F. L. Barrows, Mrs. R. E. Denfeld, Mrs. H. S. Ely, Mrs. Julia M. Barnes, Mrs. John Miller, and Mrs. J. L. Washburn, president of the Minnesota State Federation. Many other of the local club women had planned to attend the biennial, but other matters are to prevent. Much interest is being shown in the meetings, which are to be held from May 30 to June 7, and the programs as arranged are most attractive.

"The Reformation."

"Martin Luther," or "The Story of the Reformation," which will be presented at the Lyceum this evening and tomorrow evening by local talent has attracted much attention, and large audiences are assured. Miss Heiler, who has been in charge of the rehearsals during the past two weeks, is greatly pleased with the support and enthusiasm of the caste, which includes Duluth's prominent readers and vocalists. The lecture connecting the dramatic portions of the entertainment will be delivered by Mrs. Della Mayers, who arrived in the city yesterday from Minneapolis. Much interest is being shown in the entertainment, which promises to be a most instructive and delightful affair. The entertainments are for the benefit of St. John's English Lutheran church.

Y. W. C. A. Reception.

An informal reception will be held tomorrow evening at the Young Women's Christian association in honor of the young women of the English classes. The work of the educational classes of the association has been completed for the year, and tomorrow evening an informal social evening will be enjoyed by the members.

What Retail Markets Offer.

Wall eyed pike, 15 cents a lb.
Roe shad, $1.25 each.
Radishes, 3 bunches for 10 cents.
Spanish onions, 3 lbs for 25 cents.
Tomatoes, 35 cents a small basket.

Tomorrow is fish day, and if you desire you may eat wall eyed pike, knowing yourself, and proclaiming if you wish to the whole world that they are wall eyed pike. Now is the time when you don't have to pull wall eyed pike out of the water, and then eat cod or halibut, or some other sort of piebian and all the year around, legal fish. The season has arrived, dozens of the white meated and delicate fish are in the market, pulled fresh and recently from Lake Superior, and they are better, says the market man than the fish from the inland lakes. Pickerel and shad and other fish is presented for your choice also, and a delicious dinner of fish ought to be presented every fish-hungry family tomorrow evening.

If you take to that sort of thing, you may carve sweet little pink and white radishes into a white flower, with pink petals, and they will take a lot of time and not taste a bit better than the nice little round things without artistic treatment. But if your housekeeping has not yet grown into an age of teen months, you will probably think that he can't eat radishes unless they are carved into fanciful shapes.

Spanish onions are in the market, and tomatoes are getting cheaper, the sun and wind and spring warmth and the gardeners be praised.

Linen is Smartest for Street or Afternoon Wear

Linen dresses of every description are now offered everywhere, among the bargain sales at the department stores, as well as the most fashionable modistes. Linen gowns simple enough for morning or sufficiently elaborate for afternoon are alike smart, and linen is to be used on pretty nearly all occasions this year. Dark colors and light, new, unsual shades and soft, pale tones that look cool, with the thermometer at its highest point; all these are already on the market.

Linen suits, that is, coat and skirt costumes, are designed for traveling, for wear in the city and for general morning wear, when a light wrap is desired. There are a number of models with long jackets; some are very long, some medium, and a few the average length. The long coats are made with little or no attempt at fit; they are simply long, loose driving coats. The so-called three-quarter length jackets are some inches shorter this spring than last. These are fitted double breasted in front. If a bolero or Eton coat is not becoming, this is the best length. All short jackets are, however, very much in vogue.

The coats are most of them full and quite short. The dark shades are relieved by white lace or lingerie collars and cuffs. The long coats, too, are frequently enlined by deep white embroidered collars. If the sleeves are short there is a little white cuff at the elbow just the same, but while all the short jackets have sleeves of elbow length, the long coats are made with three-quarter or full length sleeves. The long sleeves are full to the elbow and then caught into a deep tucket cuff which is finished off at the wrist with a flat band of embroidery or lace.

Hips No Longer Fashionable

Hips are out of fashion this year, according to an expert corsetiere. Women are affecting a well-rounded youthful figure, and no matter how large or matronly-looking they are, they insist upon having corsets that will give them a slender waist, high, rounded bust, and the graceful lines of a young girl. To acquire such a figure, according to the corsetiere, women not otherwise extravagant will often spend anywhere from $25 to $45 for one garment, where formerly $1.50 sufficed. They have an aversion to large hips, and though they were once considered necessary to an average shapely woman, the smaller and rounder they are now, the better the form is considered to be.

Those who are stout and far past 50 are today seen on the streets with as youthful appearing figures, despite a little more than the average avoirdupois, as young girls can boast. This remarkable effect is secured, so a well-known maker of corsets says, by the lines on which these garments are made.

"Corsets are entirely different in shape this spring," she says. "In the first place, they are at least three inches higher in the bust than they were last year, and with the addition of a braisiere top, that gives another three inches to the bust, they are about as high as any the American women have ever used. This well-rounded high bust does undoubtedly give to the figure a plumpness and compactness that suggest youth and takes away the matronly effect that the low bust garment gives.

"Then the long graceful lines that make a slender waist, with the well-covered strongly made hips that hold even large ones down and produce a small effect, complete a garment that is, at once, the most popular and one of the most artistic that women have worn in years. Furthermore, it is becoming to all, for the stout woman seen in one looks much smaller and better proportioned, while the small, thin individual has a becoming roundness that, in other corsets, she lacked.

"I have found with the models this season that the slight, small woman should wear, as a rule, a high bust corset with the short box hips, while the average well-developed one needs the high bust, too, but instead of similar shaped hips she should have the long, close-fitting kind. With both these patterns the waists are long and slender, and the whole effect is rounded and pleasant to look upon."

Gowns for the Wedding Trousseau

By A. T. ASHMORE.

The selecting of a wedding trousseau is always a delightful pastime, and is a particularly pleasurable task at this season, when of necessity the gowns are all of such fascinatingly light and attractive materials. While dinner and ball gowns must be provided, the majority of dresses will be suitable for morning and afternoon wear. Handsomely embroidered linens and pretty frocks of plain and flowered lawns and mousellaines are all important in the bride's summer outfit.

Satin is essentially the conventional material for a wedding gown, and any number of brides declare that they would as soon leave out the Lohengrin march as to have the gown of any texture but white satin. Unquestionably satin makes the most effective costume, but for a summer wedding some softer material, as chiffon, point d'esprit or even satin finished silk will be found infinitely cooler. The wedding gown illustrated shows an exquisite dress of white chiffon trimmed with bands of liberty satin. The yoke and bertha are of point applique lace, with satin bands stitched on the bodice, so as to give rather the effect of a bolero. The full sleeves are finished at the elbow with a wide lace cuff. A tulle veil, falling to the end of the long train, is fastened beneath a festoon of orange blossoms on the hair.

In Fig. 1 is shown an attractive summer frock of white batiste trimmed with medallions of Valenciennes lace and with "motifs" of embroidery upon the material. The dress is made princess with bolero effect, a style that is much in fashion at the moment. The vest is of lingerie and Valenciennes. As this new costume should really be tucked by hand the model is elaborate and most effective.

Exceptionally pretty also is the batiste gown shown in figure. This is of pale pink elaborately tucked and trimmed with narrow Valenciennes insertion and edging. The guimpe or yoke is of Valenciennes trimmed with narrow batiste bands. In this model is given a suggestion of the empire, for the satin girdle, though brought down nearly to the waist line in front, is sloped up toward the center of the back, the skirt hanging loose and full from there down. This skirt is an extraordinary pretty model, for it has long lines to accentuate height, while the ruffles laid about the end of the skirt give also the round effect which is once more returning to fashion.

At least one dark silk or chiffon frock is obligatory in every trousseau, and a black dress is particularly serviceable. A black gown, however, must be very smart to be correct, and it must be so trimmed that it could not possibly be mistaken for a mourning costume. Black and white is also useful and is sure to be effective. In the fourth illustration is shown a dress of black point d'esprit, laid over white silk and trimmed with black cluny lace. The guimpe and sleeves are of white point d'Alencon. Beneath the lace ruffles of the sleeves are full puffs of point d'esprit.

Most attractive is the last model illustrated. This is of white flowered mousellaine, trimmed with both Valenciennes and Irish lace. The wide belt is of white satin sloped and fitted so as to give the becoming long-waist effect.

These dresses are all models from L'Art et la Mode.

The EVENING STORY.

AN INSPIRED MOMENT

By Mauchline Muir.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowels.)

She looked away across the water at Mount Rainier's sun-painted slope, a puzzled frown of self-contempt on her forehead.

Hendricks, waiting for his answer, rested on his oars and looked at her.

"I'm ashamed of myself, Tom," she said at last. "I have always flattered myself that I knew what I wanted, but now I don't seem to know my own mind."

His steady blue eyes met hers fairly.

"Does that mean there is a chance for me, Edie?"

"I don't know. Of course I like you immensely. There isn't any need to tell you that."

He smiled ruefully. "It might be better for me if you didn't like me so well."

She hesitated, then raised her honest eyes and told him the truth. "I can't seem to care the way—the way you want me to—about a man I have known always. There's nothing left to the imagination."

Hendricks was the type of man that breeds faith in human nature. Edith Vance could not conceive of his telling a lie any more than she could think of him as disloyal to a friend. It was not in him to be anything but steadfast. She wished at times that he would lose control of himself, capture her imagination and take her heart by storm.

As fingers along the strings of a harp, a sudden summer shower swept across the lake. Big drops began to fall out of a darkening sky. After them came a slant of rain in a rising wind.

"Fraid we're in for it, Edie. Wrap my coat around you," said the young man, and he put his great flat back into rhythmic strokes.

The white spray went spurling from the boat's bow as it leaped forward.

"For where are you making?" she asked presently.

"There's a deserted loggers' hut below Moorland where we used to camp when we went fishing. I don't think we'd better try for Seattle just now," he answered.

The rain was falling steadily by the time they reached the shore. The girl was flushed and radiant with the excitement of their battle with the rising waves.

The uphill climb against the wind had beaten the blood into her face and left it rich with color when she pushed open the door of the shack. The gloom within the hut was at first impenetrable to her eyes, fresh from the light, so that she stood for a moment uncertain in the doorway.

To the dishevcled young savage who scrambled to his feet, rifle in hand, from the bed of ferns, she seemed a very goddess of the forest storm. In his alert attitude was an ominous stealth that sent a deadly paralysis of fear over the girl. She wanted to cry out, but something clutched at her throat and stifled the scream.

"Come in, miss, and shut the door."

The voice was low and gentle, but not the less it compelled her to a fearful obedience. His glistening eyes had for her the rattlesnake's baleful fascination.

"Are you alone?"

He had to ask the question twice before she found a voice with which to answer.

"No—a friend—the storm caught us—he stopped to tie the boat," she faltered.

His eyes narrowed. Frowning, he considered for a moment, then ordered the girl to a wooden stool by the fireplace. The man leaned against the table, facing the door watchfully, with his rifle held easily in both hands. Minutes passed silently, and the girl's hurrying heart beat the leaden moments for her like the tick of a clock.

Her pounding heart stood still as the door opened. Hendricks, burdened with an armful of wood, hesitated in the dim light as she had done.

"Where away, Edie?" he called cheerfully.

"If you drop that wood or move a hand, you're a dead man," came crisply from the outlaw.

The eyes of the two men met and fastened like the grip of steel. Recognition leaped to both their minds. Hendrick's face was a snuffed candle, but though the light was extinguished, not a shadow of flinching crossed the blue eyes. His first thought was of the girl.

"Are you here, Edie?" he asked, evenly.

"Yes, Tom."

"Good. Don't be afraid."

Nor was she any longer. Somehow a weight had lifted from her breast.

The half-breed took the trouble to make sure Hendricks had no weapon before he let him unburden himself.

"You may sit down," he commanded, and Edith observed a curious note of triumphant hostility in his voice.

"Thank you," answered the young lawyer, smiling whimsically, and he moved over to a seat beside the girl.

Something in the ease with which Hendricks had accepted the situation, perhaps his lazy indifference of manner, stirred the outlaw's vanity and resentment.

"Do you know who I am?" he demanded sullenly.

Hendricks looked quietly at him.

"Oh, yes, I know you. You are Spence Sharkey."

The desperado swore a vile oath. "You'll know me better before long. I haven't forgotten you either. Mr. Prosecuting Attorney Hendricks. I swore I'd remember you, and I have.

I'm in great luck to get a chance to get even so soon."

"Well, you had better make the most of it. I rather think they'll hang you when they take you."

The half-breed moistened his dry lips. The eyes in the furtive face narrowed to little slits where vanity and cowardice struggled together.

"They won't take me," he boasted, though a snarling whine ran through his braggadocio. "I'll get away to the head of the lake in your boat. Three posses have been after me a week and they haven't caught me. I seen a chance and doubled on them twice right after I broke prison."

"I read the account of your escape," said Hendricks.

He did not go into particulars. He had no desire that the girl beside him should know that this man had treasherously killed a guard and a fellow convict in his break for liberty, and he was content that she should remain in ignorance of the fact that through his efforts Sharkey had been sent up as a "lifer" three years before. For Hendricks was afraid to the marrow of his bones. The murderer's evil record rose to his mind, and worse than his criminal career was that racial mixture of bad white and mongrel negro and cruel Indian blood. The young lawyer read purposed murder and worse in his face. Fear alone had hitherto held him from his intent.

The leaden hours dragged down the deeper dusk, and at length Sharkey made his move. He forced them to lead the way to the boat while he followed through the dripping ferns. In his imagination Tom Hendricks felt, every step of the way to the shore, a leaden bullet pinging into his spine, but not once did he turn his head. It was his cue to appear confident, for he knew that under the edge of Mercer island the outlaw expected to murder him, if he could restrain himself till they reached that point. The dead body in the deep water under the shadow of the overhanging brush would tell no tales, and if by chance some logger heard a shot in the night, what was to connect the escaped convict with it?

Under the persuasion of Sharkey's rifle the Seattle lawyer shoved off the boat and pulled to the end of the wharf. Here the convict stepped cautiously down, and at the same moment Hendricks pushed the boat from the landing with an oar and rose to his feet. The girl on the wharf gave a cry, for Tom was swaying violently from side to side.

"Sit down or I'll shoot," screamed the half-breed, trying to balance in the rocking boat.

"Shoot and be damned!" cried Hendricks, a fierce light shining in his eyes.

He leaped across the seat toward his enemy, a wild shot rang out skyward, and the next moment the impact of his charge had flung both men from the overturning boat into the water. The lawyer came to the surface first. The boat was drifting far out into the lake, bottom up, clearly beyond the reach of immediate rescue. He swam a few strokes toward the shore, then turned, waiting, for the convict was in difficulties. Apparently he could not swim. Tom reached him as he came up the second time, but as the man flung out his arms wildly for his neck, he caught him by the hair and soused him down once again. He had the convict unconscious before they reached the shore, and when the fellow came to himself he found his hands and legs bound securely with a bit of rope Edith had found on the wharf.

Hendricks ran up the fisherman's flag to attract the Bellevue boat, and twenty minutes later he had the pleasure of handing over his captive to the sheriff of King county, who was on it, returning to Seattle after an unsuccessful hunt for Sharkey.

Tom called on Edith Vance next evening to inquire whether she had suffered any ill effects from their adventure. He would probably have called anyway, he explained, but it served as a very reasonable excuse.

"Do you need excuses?" Edith asked.

"Well, no, I don't. But I thought perhaps you might think I did. This happens to be the third time I have been here this week, you know."

"It is very generous of you to come so often—you who are the hero of the hour. Are all heroes that way?"

"Can't say; never met one."

Under her dark lashes she looked at her clean-limbed lover so long that he was fain at length to break the silence fatuously.

"You'll know me next time you see me."

"Yes, I'll know you better than I did before."

She nodded, in a meditative comprehension.

"I have been a conceited little prig. You see, Tom, I had never seen you in an inspired moment, and I supposed you didn't have them."

"You guessed right. I don't have them," he told her promptly.

"Oh, yes you do. I have seen them."

"Was that when I played see-saw with the boat?"

"It was when you saved both our lives through a long afternoon of strain. If you had shown the least fear—"

Hendricks flushed. "Oh, you are exaggerating. It was you that kept your head, Edie. I never saw finer nerve. You were splendid, dear."

"Mr. Hendricks!"

His flush deepened. "Oh, well. It slipped out, Edie."

"You must not le tauch things slip out," she told him, severely.

"A fellow can't help it sometimes."

A fellow will have to help it, unless"—very softly and demurely—"a fellow justifies himself by explaining whether he really means it."

"Edie!"

Hendricks stood amazed for just one second, then he strode across the room to her.

Flowered Muslins Are Practical as They Need Little Trimming

By A. T. ASHMORE.

No sooner is one outfit complete before a second, equally if not more elaborate, must be commenced—in midwinter a Southern trousseau must be thought of, in the spring a summer wardrobe must be thought of, and so on indefinitely, so there is practically no week in the entire year without at the very least one tailor's or dressmaker's appointment to be met. Just now it is the summer costumes that are to be procured, and while, because of the number of gowns necessary, this is perhaps the most difficult outfit to provide, it is also the most delightful to select. There can never be the same charm in ordering a severe cloth gown as there is in selecting a model for a dainty lawn or muslin dress. At this time of the year, when winter is just past and there is promise of summer everywhere, it is a distinct pleasure to invest in fascinating flowered materials, in sheer lingerie frocks, and then, while waiting for the modiste to finish her work, to have constantly before one's eyes the dream of summer pleasures, always so acceptable after the formalities of winter gayety.

It seems each spring as though the materials must certainly be more attractive than ever before, but, granted that they look so pretty from contrast with the sombre hued winter garments, nevertheless all the summer textures are extraordinarily pretty this year. Even the least expensive wash materials are so dainty that it is hard indeed to restrain one's self from selecting many more dress patterns than can ever be made up. The material costs so ridiculously little that there is always the danger of forgetting that it costs nearly as much to have this gown made up as it does a silk or cloth gown. The modistes in winter say that it is the lining and fitting that is so difficult, while with a summer frock it is the countless yards of lace inserted and arduous hand tucking that makes the price of the gown mount up. For this reason flowered mousselines are always a good investment as with figured materials not anything like so much trimming is needed as on a plain ground. An all white frock may be as simple or ornate as desired. A handsome white gown will do service on all occasions, and can frequently serve, with slight alteration of the sleeves, for two and even three summers. On the other hand, a simple white gown always looks fresh, and with different ribbons will serve a variety of purposes.

Those who intend to travel about considerably during the summer, with no real headquarters, will find the guimpe dresses most useful. There are many country places where handsome evening gowns must be worn constantly, and again in a hotel in the mountains, for example, only the simplest style of dress is worn during the day, but at night quite elaborate high gowns are obligatory. Here a well fitted guimpe serves the purpose admirably, for many of the newest models are made with deep transparent net or lace yokes, and as all elaborate gowns are made with short sleeves, the guimpe is even easier than usual to fit, so that the gown will look as though made all in one.

Knowlton Danderine Co.
DEAR SIRS:—Some years ago my hair commenced to come out and in a short time I got so bald that I was obliged to wear a wig; my druggist here advised me to use Danderine. I purchased a bottle on his guarantee and after using it one week my hair stopped falling out. I am now on my fourth bottle and my hair at the present time is over five inches long, glossy and curly, where it was dead looking and straight before. It has also cured me of dandruff, which greatly annoyed me. I cannot speak too highly of your Danderine, wishing you unlimited success, I remain, yours very respectfully,
FRED MCADAMS.

FREE You can go to your druggist and get a bottle for 25c. which will be enough to satisfy you that it will produce hair, and do it quickly, or send this ADVERTISEMENT to us with ten cents in stamps or silver to pay postage, and we will send you a large sample by return mail. The samples we give are large enough to produce beneficial results, in many cases being enough to stop bad cases of hair falling and start the hair to growing again. NOW on sale at all druggists, three sizes, 25c., 50c., $1.00 per bottle. KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., Chicago.

MOORHEAD MAY BE FORGIVEN

The Pretty French Girl May be of Good Family.

Pittsburg, May 24.—The latest gossip in connection with the sensational elopement of John Alston Moorhead, son of John Moorhead, Jr., and the heir to one of the oldest family names and largest fortunes in Pittsburg, with Frances, the pretty French maid of Mrs. Moorhead, is to the effect that the family has hurried a representative to Paris for the purpose of inquiring into the past history of the pretty and dimpled Frances. Just what this representative expects to achieve by his mission is not quite clear.

One report is to the effect that he will try to find out all the damaging things possible, in the hope that the family may be able to annul the marriage.

Another rumor is that he goes for the purpose of inquiring into the family of Frances, and if possible, bring back a family tree that will form sufficient shelter for the young woman to rest under.

If the representative can succeed in accomplishing this purpose, then, it is said, the Moorhead family will be reconciled to the young couple, and make the best of what they call a bad bargain.

Mrs. Moorhead was completely wrapped up in her eldest son, and the young French maid also won her affection—that is, as a maid. Friends of the Moorhead family believe that a reconciliation will be effected on this account.

SOLDIERS DRILL AND DANCE.

Members of Third Regiment Appear in Their New Uniforms.

Members of Companies A and C, Third regiment, M. N. G., drilled their best and looked their smartest last evening and a large crowd of admirers followed their every movement from the galleries in the Armory.

The occasion was the regular battalion drill and practically the first appearance of the guardsmen in their handsome new dress uniforms.

Maj. Resche was in command and the Third Regiment band dispensed music. After the drill, the band dispensed dance music and the soldiers invited their friends to come down from the loft and dance.

Carl Mattson Downs Five Men---Cowles Family in Earthquake.

Carl Mattson, the wrestler, had no difficulty in throwing five men at the Metropolitan last evening and tonight he will throw six men in fifteen minutes or forfeit a purse. Mattson has become a regular member of John L.'s company now, and will travel on the road with it. The men whom he will meet tonight are Charles Foster, 186 pounds; Ed Buhl, 172 pounds; Hans Peterson, 194 pounds; Joe Miller, 182 pounds; Chris Nellson, 168 pounds and Pete Donnelly, 178 pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Cowles and their daughter, who have a very clever gymnastic turn on John L. Sullivan's bill at the Metropolitan this week, were in San Francisco when the terrible earthquake and fire visited that great Bohemian city, and remained there for a week after the conflagration. They had been appearing in different vaudeville houses on the coast and had just arrived in San Francisco from Sacramento the day before the earthquake. They lost their apparatus and practically everything they owned in the world.

A large house greeted the Sullivan company last evening and it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand to see Mattson throw six men and the other excellent features of the entertainment.

MAN CRUSHED BY LOG.

Accident Near Bemidji May Result Fatally for James McKay.

Bemidji, Minn., May 24.—While helping in the hoisting of logs onto a car at Lake Julia yesterday, James McKay, a working man, was injured, perhaps fatally. A heavy log slipped from the hoist and knocking the man down, fell onto his stomach. He is now lying in the hospital in this city in a critical condition.

McKay was on the hoist helping in the work. The log was being lifted from the lake to a car and had been elevated a number of feet when one of the hooks slipped. As it did so McKay fell to the ground and the log landed squarely on his body, then rolled off.

DENOUNCED AS SPURIOUS

Is Supposed Velasquez Painting In Boston Fine Arts Museum.

Cambridge, May 24.—The Velasquez painting of Philip IV, now in possession of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, at a cost of $40,000, is attacked again as bogus by a critic very near home. Prof. Charles H. Moore, Harvard's fine arts instructor, said to his class at Harvard:

"The so-called Velasquez, which is in our oston Museum of Fine Arts is not by any means, in my opinion, the genuine work of Velasquez. Furthermore, the picture is not even one of Philip IV. The shape of the head in the authentic pictures of Philip IV is entirely different."

LACEY AGAIN

Congressman is Renominated and Secretary Shaw is Indorsed.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 24.—The sixth district congressional convention yesterday afternoon indorsed Secretary Shaw in strong resolutions and pledged support for him for president. The standpat delegation from Wapello was seated instead of the Cummins delegates. Maj. Lacey was unanimously nominated for congress. The Shaw resolution is taken as a direct slap at Cummings.

THREE KILLED AND ONE INJURED BY LIGHTNING.

Hammond, Ind., May 24.—Three people were killed and one fatally injured by lightning during a storm this afternoon. The dead:

JOHN MUSHOW, West Hammond.
LOUIS STEINBACH, Hammond.
MRS. LUDKE, Whiting.

The injured: Roy Witter, paralyzed. Farmers report great damage to crops by the heavy rain.

GAIN SOME KNOWLEDGE

City Unable to Make Much Headway Against Pole Nuisance.

Telephone Companies Object to Using Same Line of Poles.

Aside from gaining some information regarding methods of stringing wires and placing poles, the council committee on streets, alleys and sidewalks, and the board of public works, made but little progress in their efforts to decrease the number of poles in the alleys, at the meeting held yesterday afternoon.

Aldermen Moore, Staples, Getchell and Burgess were present to represent the council, and the three members of the board of public works also attended. Manager Van Bergen and Superintendent Marks represented the Duluth Edison Electric company, while L. R. Mendenhall was present in the interests of the street railway company, and Superintendent French as a representative of the Duluth Telephone company.

The meeting developed in a round table discussion of the best methods for decreasing the number of telephone poles in the alleys.

Superintendent French declared his willingness to use the same poles as were used by the Duluth Edison Electric company, but said that it had never been the policy of the Bell company to use the same poles as were used by an opposition exchange.

"Such an arrangement," he said, "would be very unsatisfactory. The workmen for the opposition line could do us a great deal of damage. It would be the work of only a moment to cut our wires with a pair of nippers, and no one would be the wiser. We are now at work on a plan of placing all our wires underground, a certain amount of the work to be done each year for five years."

City Electrician Hough said that it might prove a very dangerous experiment to place the light and telephone wires on the same poles.

Manager Van Bergen of the electric company, when questioned regarding the wires on Michigan street, said that it was the intention of the company to place them underground as soon as the Great Northern Power company begins operations.

Alderman Moore asked whether it would not be possible for all three companies to use the same set of poles, but Superintendent Marks stated that the poles would not be strong enough.

The city attorney gave it as his opinion that all three companies might be compelled to use one line of poles, if the city cared to go that far in legislating against the telephone pole nuisance.

It was finally decided to adjourn the meeting until Friday, when Superintendent French will be asked to outline more fully the telephone company's plan of placing its wires underground.

WALLACE TO TAFT

commission to which I have not heretofore had access and which has been used by him in a second assault upon my reputation, I have the honor to respectfully request that the following statement be made a part of the record of your honorable committee:

"I first desire to call attention to the fact that under date of June 11, 1905, Governor Magoon (in the letter quoted by Secretary Taft), advised Secretary Taft that he (Magoon) could 'not escape the conviction that Wallace is trying to pull off a carefully contrived coup d'etat.'

"Two days later, under date of June 13, Governor Magoon again advised Secretary Taft that he (Magoon) was inclined to think he judged Wallace too harshly in concluding that he was attempting to 'squeeze you' and he seems to be fully prepared to quit, but willing to remain upon terms that seem to him justifiable as compensation for the sacrifice he feels he would make in continuing in the public service. And nine days later, under date of June 22, in response to the cable of Mr. Cromwell, although all cable codes were no doubt available to Secretary Taft at Washington, Governor Magoon furnished another version of his impressions, stating 'that Wallace is not attempting a squeeze,' but honestly thinks he is entitled to supreme place and power, and added 'he asked me to telegraph the secretary advising his retention on the commission as one of the four engineer members. I will comply, believing retention advisable.'"

Mr. Wallace then refers to the Manhattan hotel interview with Secretary Taft, which was given out to the press with a statement by Secretary Taft at the time that it "was not the result of a hasty outburst of anger, but a deliberate opinion, formed after receiving Governor Magoon's letter and telegram" and expresses the opinion that Secretary Taft prejudiced his motive and that the secretary's actions and remarks were prearranged. The presence of Mr. Cromwell at that interview. Mr. Wallace says prevented a free presentation of his views, because he had hoped to talk with the secretary alone, and he adds that he believes a stenographer was concealed in the room where the interview was held or the adjoining one in order to take notes of the conversation. Mr. Wallace next refers to a conversation on the isthmus with Governor Magoon in which he says that Governor Magoon himself "suggested to me that I should request Secretary Taft to appoint me chairman of the commission, adding that Secretary Taft, when selected as a member of the Philippine commission had refused to serve unless placed at the head of the commission, necessitating the withdrawal of the name of another as chairman, and that he, Magoon, believed under the circumstances such a proposition would appeal to him. I replied that I would make no demands upon Secretary Taft, that Mr. Shonts was my personal friend and that I much preferred, as Governor Magoon admits, going to Mr. Shonts and 'putting it to him straight.' I also requested Governor Magoon to make no suggestions to Secretary Taft, but I note from his cablegram to Mr. Cromwell that he was under the impression that I desired him to recommend my retention as an engineer member of the commission and this, despite the fact that Governor Magoon assured me he would regard the subject as confidential and give me an opportunity of first presenting the matter to Secretary Taft in a personal interview. The breach of confidence upon the part of Governor Magoon in advising me to take a certain line of action and then, presuming that such advice would be followed, secretly writing to Secretary Taft as to what he thought I would probably do, speaks for itself.

Mr. Wallace concludes with a quotation from President Roosevelt's "muck rake" speech, in which he spoke of gross and reckless assaults on character, and adds:

"Despite the labored and sustained effort upon the part of Secretary Taft to impugn my motives, simply because he felt it necessary to sustain and support his ill advised outburst of temper and abusive treatment of me at the time I had hoped for a calm and dispassionate consideration of the questions involved, and which could have been amicably settled and adjusted without irritation and without embarrassment to the administration or injury to the work, he has been unable to refute any statement of fact made by me before your committee. On the contrary, his attempt to discredit my veracity has been confined to calling untrue certain statements that were merely questions of personal opinion.

BOOK OF FORMS NOT AUTHORIZED

By Presbyterian Assembly But Will be Published and Used.

Des Moines, May 24.—The famous controversy and debate over the proposed Presbyterian book of forms ended in the general assembly, late yesterday afternoon, in a compromise, in which all the words that might indicate that the book is authorized were stricken from the resolutions and the text and title pages of the book itself, in which the resolution of the opposition was also incorporated, declaring specifically that the assembly made no recommendations with reference to it. With these limitations, the report of Dr. Henry Van Dyke's committee was adopted, and all bitterness between the factions avoided. The book of forms will continue to be published, but nowhere on its title pages will be found anything to indicate that it bears any authority from the Presbyterian general assembly, all such words and phrases having been stricken out. It will be published merely "for the purpose contemplated by the general assembly of 1905," and "for voluntary use."

An effort was made by the opposition to have the names of the committee who have prepared it stricken from the book, but this was defeated. By its action today the assembly virtually rescinded the action of three preceding assemblies of 1903, 1904 and 1905, in which progressive steps were taken for an authorized book of forms, but compromise avoided the bitterness that would have come with the fight to a finish, and good nature now reigns between opposing sides. The compromise was agreed upon yesterday, after numerous conferences between Dr. Van Dyke, Dr. Moffatt and Dr. McCauley of Cincinnati. The latter is leader of the opposition. The resolutions offered were in accord with the understanding reached by them, and the vote thereupon was unanimous.

The report of the committee on publication and Sabbath school work was presented.

The year just closed has been a year of progress. The circulation of our lesson helps and papers has increased; the contributions to our missionary work have been greater, and more missionaries and colporteurs have been employed than in any previous year.

Our aim has been to advance steadily along the lines of effort laid down in previous years, while we have, at the same time, undertaken new lines of work. Among these, the more prominent are the publication of religious literature in fourteen languages; the holding of missionary conferences and Sabbath school institutes, and the delivery of courses of lectures on Sabbath school work in our theological seminaries.

Our board has experienced considerable difficulty in securing men possessing the peculiar qualifications necessary for successfully performing the work of a Sabbath school missionary. It seems evident that the board must secure a larger income, and increase its force of missionaries. These missionaries will have to be obtained, for the most part, from the ranks of our earnest and consecrated laymen. During the year the board has printed for the permanent committee on temperance literature to the value of $1,000, for free distribution among our churches and Sabbath schools. This work will be continued.

The Sabbath school missionaries of this board labored during the year in Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Colorado, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Texas, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida, and for seven months in the Island of Cuba.

The board has had at work 127 Sabbath school missionaries, and twenty-four colporteurs, laboring within the bounds of thirty synods and 113 presbyteries. They have organized 715 new Sabbath schools and revived 317, a total of 1,032, into which have been gathered 3,461 officers and teachers, and 33,022 scholars, making a total membership of 36,483.

Our missionaries have also cared for and nurtured 2,581 Sabbath schools which they had organized in previous years. The membership of these schools is 99,-315.

These missionaries have made 116,352 visits upon families, and have held 5,622 evangelistic services, in which 2,881 conversions came under their observation. Sabbath school institutes and conventions to the number of 582 have been held.

The number of churches developed by our missionaries from the schools during the past year is eighty-two, of which seventy-four are Presbyterian and eight of other denominations. The number of Presbyterian buildings erected last year as the outgrowth of the labors of Sabbath school missionaries is seventy-five. The value of these buildings is $127,310.

A plan for the organization of a Presbyterian Sabbath school association has been prepared, and already a number of presbyteries have adopted it.

During the year we have had twenty-four colporteurs laboring among Italians, Hungarians, (Magyars), Bohemians, Slovaks, Crotians, Ruthenians, Lithuanians, Russians, Poles, French, Spanish and other foreigners, in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, West Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, Illinois, Ohio, Texas, Nebraska, and California.

In the performance of their labors they visited 31,727 families, distributing 14,617 religious books and 497,123 pages of tracts, besides 4,800 Bibles, Testaments and gospels in many different languages.

The total sales of Bibles, Testaments, books, tracts, etc., by our colporteurs among foreigners amounted to $1,873.

During the past year four contributions from churches, Sabbath schools and individuals showed an increase of $4,968 over the contributions of the previous year.

There have been publishd during the year 2,199,695 copies of books and tracts, and 48,406,227 copies of periodicals, which, together with 8,400 copies of the annual report for the year ending March 31, 1905, make an aggregate of 50,515,292 publications for the year.

The sales for the year in books and tracts, including our own publications and those of other houses, were $292,025; and of periodicals, $373,906.

The capital at the beginning of the year, according to the balance sheet of the last report, was $268,400. The net profits of the year were $23,992.

LAND FOR CEMETERIES.

Washington, May 24.—The senate committee on public lands has recommended the passage by congress of a general bill authorizing the secretary of the interior to sell parcels of land not exceeding forty acres for cemetery purposes. Under the present law it is necessary to pass a separate bill for every cemetery so authorized.

STATEHOOD AGAIN.

Not much has been heard of the statehood matter lately, but now comes a report from Washington that the conference committee is likely to reach an agreement very shortly.

While details of the agreement are lacking, surmises are to the effect that it is going to be a very fair one, and that it is likely to meet with the approval of both houses and to go into effect.

Briefly, the plan reported to have been agreed upon is that Oklahoma and Indian Territory shall be admitted as one state at once, and that Arizona and New Mexico shall vote separately upon the question of joint statehood, the vote to be cast at a regular territorial election when officers of the territories are voted for.

This is the only fair thing to do.

There are two plans, both of which have many supporters in congress, either of which would be rankest injustice and densest stupidity. One is to refuse Oklahoma and Indian Territory joint statehood unless Arizona and New Mexico can be forced into joint statehood; and the other is to force joint statehood upon the latter territories regardless of their wishes.

Oklahoma and Indian Territory deserve statehood, and as their people have no objection to joint statehood, there is no excuse for delaying it.

But neither New Mexico nor Arizona is willing to receive statehood together, apparently, and unless the people of these territories are willing it would be high-handed injustice to force it upon them. It is doubtless true that neither territory is ready for single statehood, and perhaps nothing will be lost by allowing them to grow until they are ready for statehood, either jointly by common consent, or singly because each territory is entitled to statehood.

The issue of statehood has been complicated and delayed, as so many other vital interests have been complicated and delayed, by political partisanship, which should have no place in the deliberations. It is not a question of whether one or more of the resulting states would be Republican, or whether one or more would be Democratic, but of whether they are fitted for statehood and are willing to receive it through either or both of the proposed coalitions.

It's pretty hard to get business done or to procure fair play, when there are "statesmen" so prejudiced by politics that they prefer to see business left undone or injustice perpetrated rather than let the opposite party gain an advantage.

STATE GAME PRESERVES.

The game fish, birds and animals of this country have dwindled much after the fashion of the forests. They have been consumed by a heedless generation with little thought beyond the fact that there was an ample supply for present uses, with small consideration for future generations. Had strict game laws been adopted earlier, before the supplies ran so low, there might yet have been ample quantities of all forms of food fish and game. As it is, there are plentiful supplies only in a few out-of-the-way places, and in the well-settled states only by an elaborate system of game protection are the species preserved from complete extinction.

Minnesota spends a considerable sum yearly in game propagation and preservation. She plants fish fry in her lakes and streams, and even breeds some game birds and lets them loose. Most states do something along this line, though a few do nothing, and even make no pretense of protecting their remaining game.

There is opposition to even the comparatively small amount that is spent. Game is not a necessity, by any means, except that its pursuit gets out into the fresh air a lot of men who would not get exercise enough to keep them alive otherwise. But it is certainly a nice thing to have, and so long as expenditures to propagate and preserve it do not encroach on the more vital functions of government, like road-building, they are perfectly proper. In the past, however, Minnesota as a state has spent more on her fish and game than she has on her roads, which is manifestly unfair.

Illinois will soon have the most extensive game preserve in the country, which shows what one state thinks of game preservation. A farm of 150 acres has been leased, and it will be added to until it amounts to several thousands of acres, all to be surrounded with a woven wire fence. In this enclosure thousands of quail, prairie chickens and wild turkeys will be turned loose to breed and multiply. Their wings will be clipped so they cannot fly out. Game birds are now being secured from Southern states for this purpose. From this preserve birds will be distributed all over the state.

By the proposed plan of restocking each county it is expected that they will be able to bring the wild feathered population up to what it was fifty years ago, before wanton slaughter and lack of care resulted in the almost complete extinction of various species.

THE TIMBER CUT.

Minnesota has had a vivid example, in the past decade, of how rapidly valuable standing timber will disappear in the face of a growing demand for it. The vast forests that once stretched over Northern Michigan, Northern Wisconsin and Northern Minnesota have been shaved away almost as closely as a sharp razor cleans a man's face. What the woodsman's ax has failed to do the forest fire has completed, and it is probably an open question which has worked the greater havoc.

And still, according to figures prepared by the department of agriculture, the yearly cut of timber is immense. In 1905, it appears from figures as yet not quite complete, this country cut 27,738,000,000 feet of lumber. The New York World, in endeavoring to make this imposing total understandable, shows that if all the lumber cut were an inch thick, last year's production would make a board walk 2,000 feet wide running from New York to San Francisco.

Maine, Michigan and New York, which were once the greatest lumber states, no longer lead, but now rank sixteenth, fifth and twenty-first, respectively. The Pacific slope and the Gulf now lead, Washington being the chief lumber state and Louisiana second. Wisconsin and Minnesota are third and fourth. Arkansas, Mississippi, North Carolina, Texas, Alabama, Georgia and Virginia make with Louisiana eight Southern states all of which lead Maine in the amount of lumber cut.

White pine, king of the forest, has dwindled to small proportions in the cut. Only 3.5 per cent of last year's cut comes from the white pine, and hemlock, once despised, furnishes almost three times as much. Elm, poplar and basswood, which the Americans of other days disdained even for firewood, are now cut in larger quantities than white pine.

As the supply diminishes, the cut increases, and unless the experiments along the line of reforestration succeed, the time is advancing very rapidly when there will no longer be any timber at all. Of course that time will not come, because before it does some method of reforestration will be adopted. But there is surely coming a day when, until the new supplies become matured, lumber is going to be very scarce.

In the meantime the American people are thinking as little about it as the spendthrift thinks about the time when, at the pace he is going, his patrimony will be gone and he will face the chill winds of resourceless poverty.

DERELICTS.

When, in those tragedies of the sea that make perilous the lives of those that go down to the sea in ships, vessels are wrecked and lives are lost, it is pathetic and alarming. But often that is not the end. The aftermath of a great ocean storm often includes many floating derelicts, or wrecked vessels, abandoned by their crews and drifting about the ocean wastes. These derelicts, half-submerged and often barely discernable above the water, become serious menaces to navigation.

Sunken rocks and shoals may be charted and easily avoided by the careful mariner, but it is different with derelicts. Seen today in the paths of vessels crossing the Atlantic from America to Europe, they may be far away on other ocean trails when seen again.

So congress has been asked for an appropriation of $250,000 for the building of a special ship to be employed in the removal of derelicts and other floating dangers to navigation. Such an expenditure is justifiable if there is now no ship on the navy list adapted to the purpose. To free the seas from these treacherous menaces is worth any cost, for many a good ship that has sailed forth with flags flying jauntily has met one of these hidden dangers and been sunk in collision with all on board.

There is a curious similiarity between this idea of ocean derelicts, and that of human derelicts. The human derelict is what is left of a man—or woman, sadder still—that has been wrecked in the storms of life, driven upon the rocks of temptation and battered to pieces, abandoned by its crew of noble aims and splendid purposes, leaving nothing but the ignoble hull to drift sluggishly about, the sport of wind and wave, into the paths of activity and out again, up and down wherever the currents and storms impel it.

It is true that the sight of human derelicts is a warning to others not to follow their example, but it is true that when the captain of a staunch ship sights a derelict it is a warning to him to be careful, else his ship may meet a similar fate. And one warning is about as effective as the other.

But as the ocean derelict is a menace to living ships, so is the human derelict a menace to humanity. Its sense of justice and morality and its conscience gone, it slinks about the paths of men seeking whom it may destroy for the gratification of its base appetites.

So the government has to build ships and equip them to destroy ocean derelicts, and to equip law courts and penitentiaries to care for its human derelicts.

Somebody has dug up a letter written by Rockefeller in 1873 in which some very evil spelling occurs, such as beginning "gentleman" with a "j" and putting two "o's" in "whom". Don't know just what that proves unless it is that it is not necessary to be a good speller to get rich.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Business was never better in Bemidji than it has been this spring," said E. A. Schneider, a Bemidji merchant, at the St. Louis. "I think our store has enjoyed a larger patronage than during any spring in the past, and much the same can be said of the other business houses. It looks as if it would be a busy summer all around.

"Bemidji has her quiet spells, like any other town, but she always recovers from them, and generally forges ahead again more rapidly than before at the end of every dull period. She has got the location to become a metropolis second only to Duluth, and her citizens have every confidence that the town will have a rapid and substantial growth. A good deal of building is being done there this year."

"Not much excitement is to be observed floating around in Itasca county political circles," said C. C. McCarthy of Grand Rapids, Minn., at the St. Louis. "Itasca county is for Cole for governor first, last and all the time, and will send an instructed delegation to the state convention in June. Cole is developing marvelous strength. He is a Northern Minnesota man, standing for all that Northern Minnesota stands for, and he should be given the support of this part of the state.

"There seems to be an opinion that few instructed delegations will be sent to the convention, comparatively speaking, and I guess there will be few of them. I agree with my friend Pease of Anoka when he says more independence than is customary will be displayed at the gathering. The leaders will not have a very easy time handling the votes. This is as it should be."

"Have you noticed what a difference there is in the style of the story books and short stories of today and those of ten or a dozen years ago?" said W. E. Lapp of Milwaukee at the Lenox. "Pick up a modern novel and you are well into the story before you have read two pages. The old style was to make the patient reader wade through four or five chapters before he was rewarded with anything of interest.

"The first part of the book was devoted to telling what kind of shoes, stockings, shirts, hats and coats were worn by the hero, who was taken as a boy and followed through life until the final story was reached. A minute description of his sisters, mother, father, cousins, uncles, aunts, other relatives and playmates was given, together with lengthy descriptions of other things of equal bearing on the story.

"Now the book plunges right into the story, and likely as not, when you get through with it, you know no more about the early life of the leading character than you did when you began, and then at the ending there is a sudden chop off, and you are left to wonder whether the girl, advancing with outstretched arms at the close of the last chapter, really married the man or not. In the good old days there was generally a short chapter devoted to the principal characters as they appeared ten or twenty years after.

"Children were shown flocking around the fond mother's knee; the happy old man was pictured as being rich and contented, and others of the book were shown in an advantageous light, unless the book was intended to have a sad ending. In this case the characters were followed through just the same. This is an age of hurry, and the books produced under present conditions have that hurried air about them. To begin with a jump and end with a bump is the style of the times."

"The best day's duck hunting I ever had was about eight years ago, on the St. Louis river," said J. E. Holden of Eau Claire, Wis., at the McKay. "I was in Duluth for a week, with nothing particular to do, and a friend of mine suggested that we go on a duck hunt up the river, in the vicinity of New Duluth. Spring shooting was allowable in those days, and the birds were a good deal more plentiful than they are now.

"We left here on Saturday morning in a row boat, with a man along to do all the heavy work, and rowed all the way to a big bend in the river a little this side of New Duluth. There we made our camp. It was a fine day, and it looked very much as if we wouldn't even need to pitch our tent, but knowing the eccentric weather this part of the country is addicted to, we made every preparation to withstand a storm. It was fortunate indeed that we did, for that very night a typical northeaster got in its work, and we were kept busy piling wood on the fire to keep warm.

"It rained and rained, and then snowed a little. The wind howled through the tree tops, and all sorts of strange noises were mixed with the patter of the rain on the tent. I wished for a while that I was back in my snug hotel room in Duluth. Our tent was a good one, however, and kept off the rain. The storm continued all the next day. It was freezing cold in the morning, and a fine snow was being driven about by the wind. Without gloves one's hands became cold in a very few minutes.

"But the indications for ducks were good that morning. While we were at breakfast, several flocks flew over, but they were too high for us to do any shooting. Immediately after the meal we rowed down the river a quarter of a mile, and then ran our boat ashore, at a point where the birds would cut across the land. And then the ducks began to come. There were literally thousands of them. The weather seemed to have started them all in one direction. I have hunted in the most famous regions of the Dakotas, but never saw more ducks in the same space of time. We killed in the neighborhood of 125 ducks between us, and then quit because we had enough, and not because there were not more birds to shoot."

THE WEATHER.

Last night and today we had, for a change, a little more northeaster. This morning rain pelted unceasingly from leaden clouds, the northeast wind howled dismally across the white-capped waves, and all nature seemed dreary and drenched. What is more, the weather man expects some more of the same tonight and tomorrow. But it can't last forever. Some time the northeast wind will howl itself out of breath, and a switch of the wind to the south will bring summer again. Last night's lowest temperature was 44 degs., and yesterday's highest was 52 degs.

A year ago today a west wind was drinking a breath of summer, and the sun shone genially from unclouded skies.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The New Mexico storm has advanced to Colorado while the Florida coast disturbance remained about stationary, causing quite general rains in the Northwest, Middle West, Eastern Gulf and South Atlantic states. Heavy rains occurred at Lander, Rapid City, Charleston and Jacksonville. The barometer remains high to the northward of Minnesota. The combined influence of this high pressure and the Colorado disturbance favors a continuance of showers, cool temperature and strong northeast winds in this locality tonight and Friday."

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, May 24.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Friday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity—Showers, fog and cool temperature tonight and Friday, with brisk to moderately high northeast winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, May 24.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Friday: Wisconsin—Showers and thunder storms tonight and Friday; rising temperature.

Minnesota—Showers tonight and Friday; thunder storms in south portion.

The Dakotas—Rain tonight and Friday.

Lakes Michigan and Huron—Fresh easterly winds tonight and Friday, with showers and thunder squalls.

Lake Superior—Fresh to brisk east to northeast winds tonight and Friday, with showers.

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Cleveland Leader: "She's the picture of health, isn't she?"

"Yes, indeed. And painted by one who knows the business. She's an artist, that woman."

Washington Star: "I hate a man who thinks he knows it all and wants to run everything."

"Well," answered the placid person, "there is usually one way to get even with him."

"What is that?"

"Put him next to a sailboat."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "What makes you walk so lame, Hiram?"

"My business keeps me on my feet so much of the time."

"Yes, I saw you yesterday—in front of the baseball score board."

Boston Transcript: Old Millions—Oh, my dear Miss Youngthing, if you'd marry me I would die happy.

Miss Youngthing—Yes, but would you die immediately?

Philadelphia Press: "Loeffer tells me that he actually goes out every day now to see if he can find work."

"That isn't exactly true. He goes out every day to see if he can't find work; and he succeeds at that."

Cleveland Leader: Footlites—Hammond is out with one of these rural dramas. They carry two cows, a flock of chickens, a team of horses and three or four pigs with them.

Bootby—Ah, I see. A stock company.

Philadelphia Press: "Pa," said little Willie, looking up from his book, "what does 'the spirit of '76' mean?"

"Well," replied Lushman, "that's usually a fake. I don't believe there is any 30-year-old whisky on the market today."

Washington Star: "I'm kind o' discouraged 'bout that new boarder," said Mrs. Corntossel.

"Cheer up," answered the farmer. "There ain't no use o' tryin' to suit him. He's one o' those fellers that write political articles for the magazines."

Chicago Tribune: "Doctor, can't you give me something to relieve my sleeplessness?"

"Yes; I could prescribe a sedative, but drugs would do you no real good. Instead of that let me recommend a large, fat onion, to be eaten raw just before going to bed."

"Why, doctor, that's exactly what keeps me awake."

"How can it possibly have that effect?"

"My wife eats it."

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: Cupid is a great court favorite.

One can't always tell a woman's age by her store teeth.

Lots of men fall in love with the figure of an heiress.

Many a would-be sport follows the horses—in a patrol wagon.

It sometimes happens that one's past is an ever-present difficulty.

A woman's idea of a picture hat is one that reminds a man of a chromo.

Nobody but the teacher of elocution expects others to have a say in his affairs.

When a woman drives her husband to drink he doesn't stop at a water trough.

Any woman can keep a secret if she wants to—but the trouble is to find a woman who wants to.

Isn't it sad that the average man spends all his life looking for his ideal woman—and then in the meantime gets married?

We often wonder why the man who is always boasting of the splendid positions offered him continues to hold down a cheap job.

Lying.

Alexander Pope: He who tells a lie is not sensible how great a task he undertakes; for he must be forced to invent twenty more to maintain that one.

Ladies First.

New York Evening Mail: At the educational conference at Lexington recently, Rev. Dr. Twitchell began one of his little speeches—"Gentlemen and ladies," and corrected himself—which gave him an opportunity to tell a story of a teacher who asked her class whether this sentence, "The horse and cow is in the lot," was correct, and if not, why not. Most of the class thought the sentence all right as it stood, but one boy found fault.

"Now, listen," said the teacher, briskly, "why is it wrong to say 'The horse and cow is in the lot?'"

"The lady should be mentioned first," replied the boy.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

C. H. Bradley of the firm of Bradley & Co., lumber merchants of Bay City, Mich., reached Duluth this morning on a short business trip.

John Corrigan, the proprietor of the lime kilns, departed last night for his extensive farm near Crookston, to be absent a week.

R. N. Marble, register of the land office, left this afternoon for Brainerd. He is on a fishing trip, and is considered an expert in the piscatorial art.

Joseph Bartlett of Toledo, R. H. Williams of St. Louis, and H. D. Cummings of Duluth, have arrived at Port Arthur on their way to Crown Point mine in which they are interested.

F. W. Farnham, connected with the Duluth Dock, Storage & Forwarding company, left today for Brainerd. Mr. Farnham has decided to take up his residence here and will occupy a house on Sixth avenue, between First and Second streets.

Deputy Recorder Fred Voss was for some time postmaster at Hungerford, Mich., and about two years ago he resigned to emigrate to Duluth. He closed up his accounts with the government and supposed everything was correct. Imagine his surprise yesterday when he received from the postal authorities at Washington a check for $7, with a letter explaining that the amount was found due him by a recent examination of the books. Fred says there is no longer a doubt as to the honesty of the present administration.

B. S. White has returned from a trip to the woods and may be found at the Merchants.

The steamer J. H. Devereaux is boasting over a new round trip from Buffalo to Duluth in ten and a half days without any delays. Capt. Parsons, with the Nebraska, made exactly the same time and was delayed twenty hours at the Sault.

Winston Bros., the Minneapolis contractors, closed a contract this morning with Harrison & Handy for 100 feet on First street extending back 150 feet on Fourth avenue west. The consideration was $150,000, which makes this the highest price ever paid for First street property.

A subscription paper is being circulated among the merchants along Superior street, and the first open air concert will be given on Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded:

John P. Johnson and wife to J. D. Ray, lots 11, 12, 13 and 14, block 45, Portland division, $4,000.

William Ball and wife to David Lewis, lot 393, block 170, Second division, $100.

Peter Johnson to James Boutilica, lot 390, block 153, Second division, $125.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Fairmont Sentinel: It still remains true that nobody is interesting himself in the Republican gubernatorial contest but the politicians and place hunters. Johnson suits all the people all the time.

St. Cloud Times: A daily salutation: "Who will be governor?" Answer, "You tell."—Anoka Union.

John A. Johnson, of course. Give us something hard.

Mankato Free Press: Everybody works but the politicians, and they flim-flam the people.

Appleton Press: In this year of our Lord all candidates for public office must be like Caesar's wife, above suspicion.

Hibbing Tribune: It would seem that the United States congress might hatch up something newer than the free seed graft with which the members might keep the support of their rural voters. Why not distribute J. Adam's joke book?

North Branch Review: Attorneys employed exclusively by the railroads are eligible to receive passes, according to a bill agreed to by the senate. That lets the senators in.

Rochester Post and Record: Speaking of the hollow mockery of the czar's gift of a "parliament" to the Russian people, the Kansas City Journal declares: "Why, the douma has no more power to legislate independently than the lower house of congress has under Speaker Cannon."

International Falls Press: When before the people for re-election this fall, Governor Johnson can simply refer Republicans to President Roosevelt for endorsement of his administration.

Carlton Vidette: The opposition papers are now busily explaining how the president surrendered abjectly on the rate question, and the administration organs how he didn't.

Park Rapids Clipper: Don't live in a town you can't say a good word for. If you haven't enough faith in the future of your home town to speak well of it at every opportunity, don't knock, move.

Roseau Region: Many a man's progress down the stream of life is impeded by his getting stuck on a bar.

Virginia Virginian: If there is anybody who doesn't believe that St. Louis county should have a new courthouse he ought to take a half day off and go through the old ramshackle at Duluth. He would soon change his mind if he did.

Cannon Falls Beacon: As to the compromise arrived at in the senate on the rate bill, we would say: The friends of a square deal in rates want what is right and nothing else; but what is right they will have, if it takes the next ten years, and requires a Democratic congress to get it.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Political leaders should remember that the people do the voting. The surest way to win is to nominate candidates who will command the support of the men who do the voting.

Anoka Herald: Uncle Pease, with the blushing innocence of virgin youth, kicks because the girls wear short sleeves. And this from Uncle Pease!!

C. D. I. in Cass Lake Times: It requires courage to wait.

The kernel of all evil is selfishness.

Hold all lines of endeavor taut, and drive tandem.

There is audible fragrance in the laugh of a little child.

As we limit our prejudices, so do we break down our limitations.

We may uproot thistles, but if we neglect to plant flowers in the same place our work is incomplete.

The boundless enthusiasm of youth constructs a lifeboat out of a straw.

He is Happy Here's His chance!
Imp and Impudent, the boy,
Jupiter's own child of Joy;
Kisses are his Kind, be sure;
Love his Life and his Lure;
Matches he can Make or Mar;
No and yes his Neighbors are;
Old and young, his One brief call
Pleases People, Pranks and all.

Such are the Seductive Sweets
To make Trouble when he Treats.
Useless 'tis to be Unkind;
Venus, his mamma, will find Ways for him to Win or Woo
Xerxes and Xantippe, too.
Youth, immortal since of Yore,
Zealous Zany—nothing more.

A Little Plain Truth.

Breckenridge Gazette: Hundreds of thousands of dollars are wasted by the people of Minnesota every year in the matter of making and repairing roads. It is safe to say that there is not one piece of really good road in the whole western part of the state. The reasons for this condition of affairs are ignorance, carelessness and extravagance on the part of the men who do the road work. The same amount of money expended intelligently and economically would give us roads that could be traveled and over which large loads could be hauled the year round. We don't need more money for road work half as badly as we do more brains.

A Word to the Wise.

From the Boston Transcript: A sign over the door of the editor of a popular magazine reads:

POETS TAKE NOTICE.

Shelley, Chatterton, Raleigh, Marlowe, Tickell, Tannahill and Suckling all died violent deaths. Verb. sap.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Cannon Falls Beacon: The secret is out at last. The St. Cloud Times says the editor of the St. Cloud Journal-Press, who has been talking about Sunday desecration, goes fishing every Sunday during the fishing season. Naughty!—Duluth Herald.

We would not condemn the editor of the Journal-Press, without knowing the brand of "bait" he takes with him.

Ortonville Herald-Star: Even Proctor Knott, in the most palmy days of his liquid eloquence never knew how really bad Duluth was. How fortunate that Proctor made his speech before the Republican state convention was called to meet in the Zenith City.

Stillwater Gazette: There's need of a man with an ax to take a whack or two at winter's back bone at Duluth, says The Herald. Down this way we want a new weather man; the man at the peak has altogether too much damp weather to suit us. When he doesn't produce the rain he does the next thing—predicts it—causing everybody to go loaded with umbrellas and rain coats. We call for assistance, in the name of Duluth and Stillwater.

Princeton Union: A Chicago scientist has predicted that Duluth will experience an upheaval on or about the middle of June. He is obviously a student of political eruptions.

Virginia Enterprise: The Duluth Evening Herald continues to sustain a well-earned reputation as a reliable newspaper. There is a vast difference between a newspaper which publishes the off-scourings of incompetent correspondents and newsmongers and a newspaper which realizes that a reputation for reliability has a value. There is a vast difference in the Duluth dailies.

Minneapolis Telegram: Northern Minnesota won a glorious victory in the selection of Duluth as the meeting place of the Republican state convention.—Ripple Compass.

We don't see any particular victory in it for Northern Minnesota. Most of the people up there have been at Duluth. It's Southern Minnesota that is the gainer.

Anoka Herald: The exchange table would be a dreary task indeed without the sparkling paragraphs from the Stillwater Gazette, The Duluth Herald, the Annandale Advocate, the Princeton Union and a few others.

Appleton Press: The Duluth dailies are more widely read today than any others in the state. They are peaches and cream, too.

North Branch Review: A Des Moines baby that changes color three times a day is exciting the envy of the politicians.—Duluth Herald.

There are lots of grownup women in this part of the country that do the same thing.

Appleton Press: By a ten-minute speech Proctor Knott made those who read congressional literature some score of years ago sit up and search the map for a place called Duluth. Within the last moon Bob Dunn of Princeton has by a slight twist of the wrist made Duluth a household word in every town, hamlet and countryside of the state. The Princeton statesman has a way of getting even that gets even.

A Boyhood Recollection.

High up on a shelf in the pantry it stood—
In fancy I see it again—
A remedy certain to do you much good,
Though fraught with hereditable pain.
There is nothing in all of the various ills
That mortals are called to endure
From a sty or a stone bruise to fever and chills,
That it wasn't expected to cure.

Its flavor was that of some lake down below
That the imps kept eternally hot,
If outwardly used, in two minutes 'twould show
A blister, more likely than not.
And when, like a martyr who yields to despair,
You weakened and uttered a yell,
The folks would approvingly nod and declare:
"That's a sign it is making him well."

Though I long for the moments of innocent glee
That only a child can enjoy,
I always think twice before yearning to be
A careless and frolicsome boy.
Though life's serious cares cause full many an ache,
And hope only leads to dismay,
I'd rather face all such distresses than take
One dose from that bottle today.

RATE BILL TO GO TO CONFERENCE

Will be Sent There Friday Under a Special Rule.

Washington, May 24.—The railroad rate bill will be taken from the speaker's table tomorrow and sent to conference. This action has been decided on by Representative Hepburn, chairman of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce. The delay so far in taking this action has been caused by a desire by Republican leaders to reach an agreement with the minority, whereby the bill might be sent to conference by unanimous vote, making unnecessary the bringing in of a special rule.

Minority Leader Williams, however, has taken the position that if the Republicans will consent to a motion being made to concur in four of the fifty-three amendments, he will consent to a motion to non-concur on the remaining forty-nine, and ask for a conference. This alternative proposition will not be accepted, and the special rule prepared by Mr. Hepburn Tuesday will be acted on by the rules committee tomorrow. It is understood Mr. Williams, who is a member of the rules committee, will endeavor to have this rule amended in committee to comply with his plan.

The amendments which the minority leader wished to concur in are those including express companies within the jurisdiction of the interstate and foreign commerce committee; striking out the words, "fairly remunerative," as applied to the rate to be fixed; specifying the terms of the bill of lading to be used, and leaving the commission as it now exists.

There is no particular objection by the majority to the first three amendments, and they will undoubtedly be accepted by the house conferees. As to that relating to the commission, there will be opposition. The house provision, increasing the size of the commission will be adhered to most tenaciously by the house conferees.

Since the rate bill was received by the house, many conferences have been held between the majority and minority leaders relating to its disposition. The final one took place today, between Chairman Hepburn and Mr. Williams, and resulted in the conclusion that nothing could be done in the way of united action.

IMPROVED FARMS

Don't wear out your life clearing up wild land. Buy where you can step right in and put in your crops. Situated in Wisconsin and Somerset counties, on the eastern shore of Maryland. Climate the best. Good soil, will produce anything. Best markets—New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. Good schools and churches. Railroad and water transportation. Prices are very low, but are advancing. As cheap now as wild lands here.

2 Samples of What I Can Offer:

250 acres, on river abounding in fish, oysters and crabs, 250 acres in cultivation, balance in fine pine and oak timber; over 1,000,000 feet. One mile to railroad station, four miles from county seat. Has brick mansion with hand carvings throughout, and basement. In good state of preservation. Large lawn with large shade trees, sloping to the river; fair outbuildings; very productive soil, a clay loam, will grow anything. Timber will about pay for it. Price, $13,000. One-half cash.

73 acres, three miles from station; 100 acres in cultivation, balance woodland, oak and pine, growing timber, the sandy loam, clay subsoil. Has good 6-room frame house, fair outbuildings, fruit of all kinds. School house or edge of premises, church about one mile. Five miles from Salisbury. Price $2,000. One-half cash. A rare chance for a poor man.

Engineers Visit Duluth.

Two prominent officers connected with the United States engineering corps were visitors in Duluth yesterday and were guests of Maj. Charles L. Potter, engineer in charge of this district, for a ride about the harbor and a boulevard drive. Maj. F. H. French of the general staff for the Northern division, who is connected with the inspector general's department at St. Louis, Mo., was here on a tour of the division, and Capt. Charles Keller, lighthouse engineer for the Great Lakes district, with headquarters at Detroit, Mich., was here with the lighthouse tender Amaranth. Capt. Keller was accompanied by Mrs. Keller.

FINDS FOR COMPANY

John Knutson Loses His $5,000 Personal Injury Case.

Other Civil Suits Ready to Submit to Juries.

After deliberating over the evidence about ten minutes this noon, the jury in the personal injury case of John Knutson against the Duluth Street Railway company returned a verdict in favor of the company. Knutson was struck by a street car while crossing Superior street at First avenue east about five years ago. He claimed that his injuries were due to the negligence of the motorman in running the car at a high rate of speed and not ringing the gong. He asked for a verdict of $5,000. The company claimed that Knutson's accident was due to his own carelessness, and asked that he take nothing by his action.

At noon today it was expected that two cases would reach juries this afternoon. One is a personal injury action brought by Nels Wedan against the Merrill & Ring company to recover damages on account of three fingers he lost on a saw some time ago. He claimed the injury was due to the negligence of the company in not keeping its equipment in proper repair. The company claimed that Wedan was not employed by it, but by David Gibbons, who had a contract for the mill wood. It was alleged that the company was not responsible for injuries Wedan received while in the employ of another. This morning Judge Cant heard the arguments for and against a motion by the mill company for a directed verdict in its favor. Howard T. Abbott represented the mill company and Alexander Marshall and R. R. Briggs represented Mr. Wedan.

In Judge Ensign's room this morning arguments were heard by the court on a motion to instruct the jury relative to a certain feature of the case, but Judge Ensign ruled that it was a matter for the jury to decide without instruction. The case is one in which H. L. Legge seeks to recover something over $1,200 on a contract to do diamond drilling for iron ore for George W. Martin and his associates. He claimed that he performed his contract and had been refused the balance of his pay. Mr. Martin and the others interested in the option with him claimed that Mr. Legge did not live up to the terms of his contract, and that they were not liable to him for any more remuneration. The case was expected to reach the jury sometime this afternoon.

The case of Arthur Grieser against Chisholm Light & Power company to recover money alleged to have been loaned J. H. Crowley, its president, was on call for trial this afternoon or tomorrow. This case will be followed by several others in which the village of Chisholm is sued by the Chisholm Light & Power company, and by the Crowley Electric company.

DIGS UP OUT OF SYMPATHY

Lake Captain Buys Stamps for Delayed Souvenir Postal Cards.

When a certain big, good-natured lake captain presented a bunch of souvenir postal cards at the post office, the other day, he was informed by the man behind the window that he had failed to put 1-cent stamps on them.

"Are stamps necessary on them?" asked the surprised mariner.

"Certainly; see the place on the cards that is left vacant for them?" replied Mr. Considine.

"Sure enough," said the captain. "I haven't sent a postal card for a long time, and I guess those I have sent were the old fashioned kind that you just had to address and send. I paid 5 cents a piece for some of those cards you have there, too."

They were illustrated affairs, most of them showing storm scenes of last November. The vessel captain took back the rejected cards and stamped all of them, and when he again presented them at the window for mailing, Mr. Considine observed:

"Many people forget that these souvenir postal cards are not like the regular ones. They send them without any stamps on, and we have to notify the persons to whom they are addressed to forward stamps. I have got nearly 100 cards here now that are without stamps and which are being held until the addressees send for them."

"How many have you got there?" asked the captain.

Mr. Considine counted about sixty.

"Well, I guess I'll buy some stamps and put them on, so you can send the cards along. I feel as though I ought to help out some people who were mistaken, just as I was."

So he bought 60 cents worth of stamps and placed them on the delayed cards. They have been sent to their destinations.

W. M. JEFFERY IS VERY LOW

Auditor of Oliver Mining Company Critically Ill at Home.

Walter M. Jeffery, auditor of the Oliver Iron Mining and Pittsburg Steamship companies, lies very ill at his home, 23 Twenty-first avenue east. Since yesterday afternoon he has been in a comatose condition, and grave doubts for his recovery are entertained.

Some time ago Mr. Jeffery suffered a partial stroke of paralysis, and on his way East from California recently, he suffered a recurrence of the same complaint, and has been far from well ever since he got back, which was about two weeks ago. Since then he has been gradually sinking, until now the critical stage has been reached.

Here's a striped suit that is recommended by Uncle Sam this spring for bad men in politics and business—for those who used to say: "What are you going to do about it?". Even senators are exchanging their togas for this Sing-Sing style for sinners of all ages.

There is no demand in Duluth for these suits, so we do not carry them.

We recommend to the honest dinner-pail fraternity and to all who work hard for their living one of our new greys. A splendid one is here for $18. If this is too quiet, we have over-plaids that give more life and color to grey. A fine one for $18.

MAN ELECTROCUTED IN TRYING TO SAVE SHOP.

Minneapolis, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Edward Cronin, 942 Central avenue, was electrocuted today while trying to save Victor Nordlund's blacksmith shop from being destroyed by fire. Cronin broke in the doors of the shop and came in contact with a live wire. John Hawley, a neighbor crawled in after him and stumbled on Cronin's body. Hawley was badly shocked by the current. The fire was extinguished by the fire department without doing much damage.

GAVE HIS LIFE TO SAVE THREE BOYS.

Greensburg, Pa., May 24.—Wasail Kicera gave his life last night while trying to save three boys from death in an abandoned mine where black damp is known to escape from the old workings. The boys were playing and soon became senseless under the influence of the deadly gas.

Kicera saw the boys' peril, plunged down into the hole and hurled two of them to the outside. Then Kicera fell, overcome by the gas fumes. A friend went down after him and after throwing the remaining boy out, dragged Kicera up the bank. Kicera died a few minutes later.

COD LIVER OIL.

It almost makes you sick to think of it, but it isn't nearly as bad as it used to be. The improved method of refining it makes it much easier to take, and when made into Scott's Emulsion almost every one can take it. Most children like it and all children that are not robust are benefited by it. When the doctor says "Take cod liver oil," he generally means Scott's Emulsion; ask him if he doesn't. They know it is more easily digested and better than the plain oil.

REVISION IS NOT NEEDED

No Call for the Tariff Changes Except From Democratic Party.

Congressman Dalzell Makes Strong Speech in the House.

Washington, May 24.—Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania delivered an interesting speech today during the consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

Mr. Dalzell spoke on "Tariff Revision." He said in part:

"It is loudly and persistently urged from the other side of this chamber that there is a general and crying demand upon the part of the people of this country for a revision of the tariff; and that the Republican party is false to the pledges of its last national platform in not responding to that demand.

"I deny the truth of both of these assertions. On the contrary I contend that there is nowhere outside the Democratic party any demand for general tariff revision nor even a consensus of opinion in favor of an alteration of any certain schedules, and that the attitude of those who oppose tariff revision at this time is in entire consistency with the declaration of the Republican platform adopted at Chicago in 1904."

Mr. Dalzell said that in the coming congressional campaign there is no issue that the Republicans more warmly welcome than protection. He contended there had been no change calling for a readjustment of the rates of duty in the public interest since the Republican platform of 1904. After referring to what he called the "calamitous conditions" during the last Democratic administration, he declared that during the seven years of Republican administration that had passed when the Chicago convention met, the balance of trade (with foreign countries) in our favor was nearly ten times as great as the aggregate balances of trade during all the years from Washington to McKinley. He declared that the "facilities for education and intellectual progress which find opportunity for development only in a period of general contentment and prosperity such as now exists," do not indicate that the public interest demands an alteration of our tariff now.

He urged that it was not the laboring men, the farmers or the partisans who are clamoring for tariff revision at this time. "Why, then?" he asked, and answering his own question, said:

"The producers of other countries who cast longing eyes to the tempting markets of eighty millions of people. Every manufacturer in England, in France, in Germany, in Belgium, in Canada or elsewhere who has no interest in this country, but is looking out for his own, is for a revision of the tariff. The great body of importers, many of them aliens, are for revision.

"So are men of wealth, with fixed incomes who favor cheap labor and dear money. So is the Democratic party, lean and hungry, weary with its long wandering in the desert, hopeless, thirsty for patronage and power."

He said that to the extent of our surplus production we do sell certain kinds of goods abroad cheaper than at home, the kind of goods the sale of which promises us a foothold in foreign markets. Among other things he declared the practice benefited the country by keeping our mills going and our men from idleness, by maintaining the American wage and by giving us a foothold in and ultimately to some extent, a command of foreign markets.

"The custom," he said, "does not injure us. It does not increase the cost to the American consumer; its extent is not sufficient to do that and a comparison of prices shows that the home product is as cheap, oftentimes cheaper, than a similar product abroad. Even if it were admitted to be an evil, cutting down the tariff would not remedy it except by running our industries to such an extent that we would have no goods to sell in the foreign market and very much less to sell in the home market. The cure would be worse than the disease."

Mr. Dalzell concluded:

"Incidental protection! humbug and pretense! an insult to all reason and logic! if protection be robbery, then the difference between real protection, and protection incidental or accidental is a difference only in degree. Both go down before the same argument. No ingenuity of reasoning can draw a distinction. It is only the difference between highway robbery and petit larceny. Mr. Chairman, we are a great practical people. We are not much given to seek our economics from college professors or the dreamers of other times and obsolete conditions. We read our tariff lessons, not out of books, but in the blazing light of open furnace doors, amid the noise of industrial activity and with the sweat on our brows that we coin into wealth; and God help the man or the party that would put out those fires, silence the music of that noise, and send the workmen home to a foodless and hungry household."

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Winnipeg.
Grand Forks at Fargo.
Lake Linden at Hancock.
Houghton at Calumet.

Grand Forks, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Another slaughter of the innocents took place yesterday afternoon between the hours of four and six. The Tigers had fandom at a high pitch for five innings, during which gleeful lapse of time neither side scored, save one in the second which was presented Duluth by Duggan who was custodian of the right garden.

But with the ushering in of the sixth inning there was a decided change in the atmosphere of the bleachers as each Duluth batter reached out for the little sphere like a hired man would reach for the cold ham, and while the mercury kept going down around the fans, the score of the White Sox kept piling up much to the satisfaction of Mr. Morton.

Barto was first up in the sixth, and he was issued a pass. Then McCormick, anxious to keep a lower birth with the team, lined out a three bagger, and assured himself of several more squares with the White Sox. Lovett trotted to first on a "comp" from the pitcher, and Ludvig, anxious to get some of the glory, met the little sphere square on the nose for two bases.

Adams offered up his life for Ludvig, who went to third, and Morton stepped up in stately dignity and did things just as he used to do when he was with the Tigers. When the pitcher returned to the box Ludvig had scored and Morton was on first by virtue of a safe hit. Livingstone got life on Wilson's error and Gruebner kept the ball sailing and landed on second base scoring Morton. O'Dea sent one high in the air, but not far enough out and Leighty nabbed it for the sake of putting a stop to the already overdone festivities of the visitors. Barto saw that this was as good a way as any to get out, and so he too sent a fly to Leighty, and the fireworks stopped.

Nothing came the way of the Tigers that even looked like a hit until Walter Duggan, a coming national leaguer, and at present attending high school in the city, stepped up and showed the Tigers that Morton was not so dangerous as he looked. The other two hits were taken by Luderus.

Even Capt. Conmy of the North Dakota University team, came down and left his fellow collegians for the afternoon to try and help the Tigers win, but to no avail. Chick did some fast fielding and was robbed out of a hit by Livingstone in the seventh when it looked as if he would send a man home.

The detailed score was as follows:

HOODOO STILL THERE.

Hancock Plays Good Ball But Loses Again to Calumet.

Calumet, Mich., May 24.—(Special to The Herald).—Hancock lost again yesterday, but it was a good defeat, one of the kind, for which the supporters, even of a team which has lost seven straight games, cannot blame the members. It seemed to be a case of the hoodoo pursuing the team relentlessly, for Hancock played great ball all the way through. The trouble was that Calumet played a little bit better and nosed out a victory.

Rogers and Morrison both pitched consistent ball. Both had everything and were remarkably successful in keeping the hits scattered. Both teams fielded well, the few errors which were made, coming at times when they did not count for runs.

The game was the fastest played on the Calumet diamond this year, taking only one hour and fifteen minutes. The members of both teams seemed to have all kinds of ginger and it showed itself at critical moments, when the fielding was all that could be desired.

The Hancock team seems to have struck its gait and it may be expected to assert itself from now on. Capt. Bill Foster is playing the center field and the outfield is considerably strengthed by his addition to it. With a new first baseman, Hancock will have a team which nothing but a hoodoo can prevent rom winning a good percentage of games.

GIANTS ARE WINNERS.

Beecher Scores His Second Shut Out of the Season.

Houghton, Mich., May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Beecher, the smiling youth from Terre Haute, scored his second shut-out of the season yesterday afternoon, when Houghton defeated Lake Linden by a score of 8 to 0. Beecher had the heavy hitting Lake Linden team at his mercy all through the game. Nine times did Lake Linden batters come to the plate, only to be retired by three strikes, and five hits, scattered through four innings, is the sum of the marks in the hit column.

Beecher showed good head work in pulling himself out of holes also. Only twice in the game did Lake Linden runners reach third base, but both times, there was only one man down and the chances for scoring a shut out were slim. Beecher proved equal to the occasion both times. In the fifth inning, Solbraa larded on a nice one and sent it out into right field for three bases. But he went out at the home plate on Wotell's grounder to Sundhim and Beecher was an easy out from Sundhim to Cassiboine.

In the eighth inning, Beecher made a hole for himself by passing Wotell when one man was out. Beecher and Lellvelt both singled and the bases were full. Beecher helped himself out by a good stop of Lynch's grounder and a throw to Smith, putting Wotell out at home. Hasting's catch of Wegman's fly ended Lake Linden's chances of scoring. In no other inning was Lake Linden dangerous and Beecher was given good support throughout.

Newcombe, Lake Linden's mainstay, occupied the box for that team, and, although Houghton scored but seven safe hits, they were so well bunched with errors and bases on balls that they counted for runs. Houghton scored an earned run in the second inning, when Sundhim hit safely, stole second and third and crossed the plate on Hasting's single. The home team registered two in the third, when two errors of Lynch, followed by two well placed hits, sent Brand and Kippert in.

It was in the seventh, however, that Newcombe went all to pieces. He allowed three hits and two bases on balls and when the slaughter was over, five runs had been registered. Beecher, the first man up, hit safely and stole second. Brand landed safely on the first sack on an error by Magnum and Taylor went out by trying to bunt when he had two strikes. Then the home plate began to diminish in size in Newcombe's eyes and he couldn't find it at all. He walked Stevens and Kippert in succession, forcing Beecher in and leaving the bases full. Smith hit safely, scoring Brand and Stevens, and Hasting's two bagger sent Kippert in and put Smith on third. Magnum obligingly fumbled Cassiboine's easy grounder, and Smith scored. Sundhim went out on a fly to Wotell and Beecher went out on a grounder to Newcombe.

While Beecher was the bright and shining light of the Houghton team, Sundhim's base running and all around playing managed to flash out as a feature at times. Wegman couldn't catch the little third baseman at all, and his steal of second and then third in the second inning was a brilliant piece of work.

FARGO WINS AGAIN.

Maroons Play Ragged Game and Sessions is Given Hard Treatment.

Winnipeg, Man., May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo had another pleasant little session at Winnipeg's expense yesterday afternoon, winning a ragged game by the score of 12 to 6.

Perry Sessions, the former St. Paul association pitcher, was given rough treatment, being hit freely when hits were needed, and the numerous errors of the Maroons did the rest.

Winnipeg took a brace when it was too late and knocked Fink out of the box in the seventh, Finnegan finishing the game. The score:

Houghton Makes Trade.

Houghton, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Houghton has made another trade. Foster, who was secured from Lake Linden in return for Donavon, goes to Hancock. Stevens, Hancock's heavy hitting outfielder, comes to Houghton. Stevens is the man who was suspended from the Hancock team and as he could not live in harmony with the management, the trade is considered a good one by the Hancock fans, although Houghton is thought to have secured the better end of the deal. Foster will captain the Hancock team and take Stevens' position in left field.

CIRCUS AND BALL GAME

Will Provide Plenty of Amusement for Duluthians Next Monday.

Fans Will Attend Game and See Circus at Night.

With a circus and the opening ball game all in one day, there seems to be no alternative left Duluthians but to take a half holiday, and attend the ball game in the afternoon and the circus at night.

This will doubtless be the plan followed by hundreds of fans, and it is not believed that the circus will draw very largely from the attendance at the game, if the weather is fine. Those who want to see the game will go, and will see the circus in the evening, while those who go to the circus in the afternoon would not probably attend the ball game anyway.

The White Sox seem to have struck their gait, and are playing pennant winning ball. If they can keep up the pace until Saturday night, they will come home near the top of the league, and the long home series should give them an opportunity to show what they can do.

Today they are in Winnipeg, and if they are fortunate enough to have fine weather, will play to a record breaking crowd. It is Empire day in the Dominion, and the holiday crowds in Winnipeg are something to wonder at. O'Dea's men have always been popular in the Canadian city, and the gate receipts today ought to be good for meal tickets for the rest of the month.

The Sox will leave Winnipeg Saturday night and will open here on Monday afternoon.

The fans are hoping that the supply of northeasters will run out before Monday, and allow the sun an opportunity to dry up the field. All of the other cities have given their teams a royal sendoff, and if the weather only permits, Duluth will do as well as any of them. With a fine, warm afternoon, the attendance record at Athletic park should be broken.

The opening will be celebrated in the usual manner, and Mayor Cullum will pitch the first ball across the plate.

INSANE TRAIN DISPATCHER

Crazy Man at Keyboard Tries Freak Tricks With Trains.

Huntington, Ind., May 24.—An insane telegraph operator blocked the entire Wabash railroad system in this state for half an hour Tuesday afternoon by sending out unintelligible messages to the various train dispatchers. Much confusion was caused, and all trains had to be stopped in order to prevent accidents.

When Chief Operator Beauchamp went out to his luncheon, he left Everett Kellam in charge of the keyboard, which controls all of the wires of the system. Having recently been overcome by the heat, Kellam, unknown to his employers, was in an irresponsible condition, and as soon as the room was vacated he decided that the past methods of train dispatching were all wrong. Smitten with an idea that it would be entertaining to the rural population to run all passenger trains on a freight schedule, and vice versa, with a head-on collision or two in every division, to give the wrecking crews practice, he started to put it into execution.

Kellam sent message after message to the dispatchers, countermanding all standing orders, then countermanding his own orders. He requested all passenger trains to run backward, and to turn to the right at every crossing. He also desired all tracks cleared for a special train of forty cabooses, which was running through the state at 140 miles an hour, carrying the president of the United States and his cabinet.

All attempts to break into his wire were fruitless, but at last one of the dispatchers grounded the line, and then notified all operators to hold the various passenger and freight trains until intelligent orders could be secured. When Beauchamp returned to find Kellam playing checkers on the keyboard, he realized that the man was deranged, and ordered him from the post. Kellam refused, and it required three men to drag him away to jail.

Then all misunderstandings were cleared up and the wheels began to move again. Kellam will be committed to an asylum.

NO SCAR BY THE SCALPEL.

Unnamed London Surgeon Makes a Discovery in Cutting Art.

London, May 24.—Some of the hospitals here are employing for operations an unnamed surgeon, who has perfected a method of incising the skin without leaving a visible scar. His success is mainly attributable to his skill and experience, but his method is based on the practice of cutting the skin slantwise, instead of at right angles to the surface. He uses hollow ground scalpels, made after his own designs. Sometimes massage forms part of the healing treatment. It is said that old scars from operations can be removed by this method, which, it is declared, is one of the most important advances made in surgery in recent years.

INDICTED FOR PERJURY.

New York Policeman Makes Three Attempts to Kill Himself.

New York, May 24.—Henry Morton, a policeman who played a prominent part in the trial of Berthe Claiche for the killing of Emil Gerdron several months ago, made three unsuccessful attempts to commit suicide today after he had been indicted by a grand jury on a charge of having committed perjury at the Claiche trial. While waiting in the office of a deputy police commissioner after his indictment, he placed a revolver to his temple, but was prevented from firing it. When given a glass of water he bit a piece out of the glass and tried to swallow it and then attempted to stab himself with his pocketknife.

Morton is said to have perjured himself when he declared that Gerdron said to her a moment before she shot him: "If you have me arrested, I will kill you when I get out."

It is now stated that Gerdron could not speak English. Another witness at the Claiche trial testified that Morton assured Berthe Claiche when she was arrested that she would soon be free.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The senate in executive session Wednesday confirmed the nomination of Charles C. Houpt, district attorney of Minnesota.

The corpse of Rev. Frank W. Hoover, a Congregational minister of Sherrard, Ill., was found floating in a pond near his home Wednesday. It is supposed that he was drowned while bathing. The coroner, however, is investigating the affair.

The State bank of Luck, Wis., was burglarized early Wednesday and robbed of $2,000.

Hon. H. L. Coffin of Fort Dodge, was nominated for governor by the Prohibitionists of Iowa in convention at Des Moines Wednesday. The platform calls for the immediate repeal of the mulct law and the enforcement of prohibition and favors amendment to the state constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

JURY SAYS SPIERS TOOK HIS OWN LIFE.

New York, May 24.—A verdict of suicide was rendered last night by the jury in the inquest into the death by a pistol shot wound of Charles L. Spier at his home at St. George, Staten Island on the morning of Monday, May 7.

Mrs. Spier told the story of the fatal night coolly and calmly. She was the most important witness except Otto Hanson, Spier's secretary, whose testimony was what made the jury finally decide that his late employer had gone home on Saturday afternoon prepared to kill himself.

COUNTY HAS FIRST DEED

Tennis Lot on First Street Transferred and Paid for.

County Will Secure Warranty Deeds for Remainder of Site.

The first warranty deed giving St. Louis county title to a portion of the courthouse site on First street has been filed with the register of deeds. The deed runs from William H. Tennis and covers lot 69, West First street, Duluth proper, First division. The consideration, $22,500, which was the amount fixed for the property by the appraisers, has been paid to Mr. Tennis out of the county revenue fund.

Other owners of property in the site selected by the county are getting ready to make formal transfer by warranty deeds, and each will be paid the sum that the appraisers set as the value of the various lots. It was expected that another deed would be filed today.

Under the special law for condemnation of land for courthouse and jail purposes, the county is already in possession of the site as fast as the appraised values are paid over to former owners, but Assistant County Attorney W. G. Crosby, who is looking after the legal procedure in the acquisition of the property, is securing the warranty deeds so that there may be no question raised in the future as to the county's title to the land. Although some of the owners protested against the award of the appraisers, none of them took an appeal, and all are understood to be willing to give the deeds asked by the county.

A number of The Herald's readers have been interested to note in the "Twenty Years Ago" columns that the question of a down town site for the courthouse is not a new one, but that 20 years ago yesterday The Herald contained an article in which it was stated the county commissioners were anxious to see work started on the $4,000 improvements on the courthouse and expected to advertise for bids. The Herald published at that time interviews with leading citizens in which they opposed spending any more money on the courthouse and urged that a down town site in the business section be purchased for a new courthouse.

If such purchase had been made twenty years ago, there is no doubt but that a half block in the business section could have been purchased for much less than $136,900, the sum that is being paid for the half block east of the federal building at this time.

It is probable, too, that if a down-town site had been purchased twenty years ago when the matter was first agitated, some other location in the business section would have been selected. There have been some important changes in the building aspect of the city in twenty years, and at that time it is possible that the half block now chosen might not have been regarded as being so centrally located.

PERJURY IS CHARGED.

Young Bridegroom Said to Have Misrepresented Age of Bride.

Albert Lea, Minn., May 24.—Mr. and Mrs. John P. Dezell had a very rude awakening from their honeymoon, for the nuptial knot was hardly tied before the bridegroom was arrested on a charge of perjury, preferred by relatives of the bride.

It seems that when Mr. Dezell went to the clerk of the court to secure a marriage license he took an oath that he was 21 years old and that his prospective bride was 18, but the parents declare their daughter was not 18.

The groom was required to give a bond in the sum of $500 to appear at the next term of the district court of Freeborn county and await the action of the grand jury.

The youthful bride is almost in a state of collapse. The interested individuals live in the township of Carston and their parents are prominent in the community, which is in a state of extreme agitation over the sensational climax of the romance of the young people.

CHILD SEVERELY BURNED.

Bayfield, Wis., May 24.—While playing with matches in the back yard, Mildred, the daughter of B. P. Hill, editor of the Press, was very severely burned. One side of the child and part of her neck was cooked to a crisp. It is doubtful whether or not the child will live.

PILFERED TELEGRAMS

Concerning Independent's Business Furnished Standard Oil Company.

Cleveland, May 24.—The Leader says: That the Standard Oil company is furnished with copies of pilfered telegrams sent or received by its competitors, is one of the startling charges slated for investigation during the interstate commerce commission's hearings in this city.

"While officials and witnesses were gathering in Cleveland preparing for the inquiry which opened yesterday, dispatches came from Lima telling of accusations by independent men against employes of the telegraph department of the Buckeye pipe line company, one of the Standard's subsidiary corporations. In brief, the charges which the commission is asked to investigate, are:

"That ownership, leasing or contractural right in 196,000 miles of track enables the company's employes to transmit to No. 26 Broadway, the quarters of the Standard Oil company, copies of all messages going to or from independent oil men in the territory involved.

"That daily reports of the oil run of the independents are sent to 26 Broadway in ample time for consideration at the daily meetings of the Standard officials.

"That the pilfered telegrams are not only of a business nature, but that in numerous cases secret political information of highest importance has been transferred to headquarters."

Appetite Is Important

It Insures Perfect Digestion and Assimilation of Food—The Best Appetizer.

Eminent doctors agree that food cannot be properly digested and assimilated unless there is a sharp appetite for it. The mere eating of food is not, in itself, of benefit. The nutrition which the food contains must be well digested and assimilated if permanent good is to be gained from it. Therefore the importance of the appetite!

There is no other such safe, sure means for creating a healthy appetite as Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer taken before or with meals, and it is an almost absolute guarantee of perfect digestion.

Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer is more than an appetizer and active aid to digestion. It is a food of highest quality, always strengthening and nutritious, rich in the vitalizing, predigested food elements of Pabst eight-day malt and the tonic properties of choice selected hops.

Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer nourishes the whole body, invigorates the blood and refreshes the brain. Always pure and delicious, brewed in perfect cleanliness; perfect in age, purity and strength.

PHILADELPHIA TO PITTSBURG

What Will Follow Construction of Highway Across Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 24.—The old taverns which were so familiar in stage coach days will be brought back to Pennsylvania by the construction of the proposed state road between Philadelphia and Pittsburg. These inns, many of which are still standing, but have fallen into neglect, will skirt the highway at intervals throughout the 300 miles. The return of the oldtime taverns will be welcomed by those who love the antique as well as those to whom the practical modern comforts appeal most strongly.

A. G. Hetherington, one of the men who met on Saturday night at the Union League and launched the state-road project, said that Pennsylvania will in time become the Mecca for tourists if the proposed highway is pushed through.

"The reason France is so popular is because of her good roads and hospitable inns," said Mr. Hetherington yesterday. "There is scenery in Pennsylvania that rivals the natural beauties of France. Comparatively few Philadelphians have seen the real interior of Pennsylvania, but the great scenery is there. It is kept hidden from the outside world by the absence of good roads.

With the establishment of the road the inns would come as a natural result. Not only will this movement lead to the building of the highway between Philadelphia and Pittsburg, but it will make possible a chain of beautiful highways which will thread the state. These branch roads will all lead into the state road like veins into the main blood chambers of the body. And upon each of these branch roads the inns will soon appear."

Julius F. Sachse, author of a history of roadside inns on the Lancaster turnpike, said, yesterday:

'A state boulevard would surely lead to a revival of the inn business. Such a road would be of great advantage. Every road in the state would lead into the new boulevard just as naturally as creeks into a river. With the advent of the automobile, this new artery, if properly located and built across the state, would open up certain parts of Pennsylvania that are now dormant.

"When I was in Africa I was much impressed with the way the French government had built a hard road for military as well as civil purposes from Oram to Tunic, virtually across the whole of its possessions.

"The Lancaster turnpike was the first hard road made in America. It was for many years the model highway in this country and prior to 1836, when the Philadelphia & Columbia railroad was built, the turnpike was the great throbbing highway of the country."

A Vindication for Dr. Pierce.

Decision by the Supreme Court of New York State, Against the Ladies' Home Journal.

A verdict has been rendered in favor of the plaintiff in the libel suit brought against the Ladies' Home Journal (published by the Curtis Publishing Co.) by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of which Dr. R. V. Pierce is President. The suit was for $200,000 damages, and was brought by Doctor Pierce against the Curtis Publishing Company, for making false statements about one of his standard family medicines known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In the May number of the Ladies' Home Journal (1904), Mr. Edward Bok, the editor, stated that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription contained alcohol and other harmful ingredients, and Dr. Pierce had in the action alleged that the defendant maliciously published this article containing such false and defamatory matter. Dr. Pierce further claimed that no alcohol is, or ever was, contained in his "Favorite Prescription"; that said medicine was a vegetable preparation and contained no deleterious ingredients whatever; that Mr. Bok's statement, pretending to give some of the ingredients of said medicine, was wholly and absolutely false; and that by means of the publication of the article Dr. Pierce was injured in reputation and good name and credit as a manufacturer, to the extent of $200,000, for which amount of damages he brought suit. During the trial, the Vice-President of the World's Dispensary Medical Association stated, that the ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription were extracted from the following native roots: Golden Seal, Blue Cohosh, Lady's Slipper, Black Cohosh and Unicorn, by means of pure glycerine. He was asked how he knew, as a physician and experienced medical man, that the "Favorite Prescription" was a cure for the diseases peculiar to women, such as leucorrhœa, amenorrhœa, dysmenorrhœa, ante-version, retro-version, and he stated that he knew such was the fact because of his professional experience and the many thousands of women whose ills had been cured by this "Prescription." This experience was corroborated by the standard Medical Authorities of the several schools of medicine endorsing the various ingredients in the strongest terms. The Vice-President, being asked to give authorities as to the value of the above roots, read from the standard works, such as the United States Dispensatory; The American Dispensatory; Organic Medicines, by Grover Coe, M. D.; Materia Medica and Therapeutics, by Professor Finley Ellingwood of the Bennett Medical College of Chicago.

From such authorities and his own professional experience he showed how the ingredients of this "Prescription" acted upon the female system, imparting increased power to the heart's action, and tone to the nervous system, and detailed its remedial influence in disorders of the female organs.

The retraction printed by the Curtis Publishing Company two months after the libelous statement appeared stated definitely that analyses had been made at their request and that the "Favorite Prescription" did not contain either alcohol, opium or digitalis. But the business of Dr. Pierce was injured from the effects of the publication of the original libel and the matter was brought before a jury in the Supreme Court of New York State who promptly rendered a verdict in the Doctor's favor.

GOLDEN SEAL ROOT.

Prof. Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. Col., Chicago, says of Golden Seal: "In its therapeutic (remedial) influence its widest range of action is upon the stomach, in functional disorders of that organ, where the entire apparatus, including the liver is stagnant and inoperative. It is an important remedy in disorders peculiar to women. In all catarrhal conditions, especially if there be muscular relaxation and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

BLACK COHOSH ROOT.

Prof. John King, in the American Dispensatory says: "This is a very active, powerful and useful remedy. * * * *

It possesses an undoubted influence over the nervous system. In small doses the appetite and digestion are improved." He continues, "Upon the reproductive organs it exerts a specific influence, promoting the menstrual discharge.

"Its action is slow, but its effects are permanent. It has been used successfully as an antispasmodic in hysteria, epilepsy when due to menstrual fallings, periodical convulsions, nervous excitability, and many other spasmodic affections."

LADY'S SLIPPER ROOT.

Edward M. Hale, M. D., Professor in Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, says: "Useful in hysteria, chorea (St. Vitus's dance), nervous headache, neuralgia and 'fidgetyness.'"

BLUE COHOSH ROOT.

The American Dispensatory says: "Blue Cohosh is used by Indian squaws, they employing a decoction of the root for two or three weeks previous to labor to facilitate childbirth."

Prof. John King, M. D., says: "It has been employed to relieve irritation of the reproductive organs dependent on congestion. It controls chronic inflammatory states of the organs and gives tone in cases of debility. Chronic overvirgin leucorrhœa, amenorrhœa (suppressed menstruation) and dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation), are conditions in which it has been most successfully employed."

UNICORN ROOT.

Dr. John Eyfe, Editor of the Department of Therapeutics in The Eclectic Review says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) one of the chief ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription:

"A remedy which invariable acts as a uterine invigorator and always favors a condition which makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system, cannot fail to be of great usefulness and of the utmost importance to the general practitioner of medicine. In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent."

If the above symptoms, or any considerable number of them, are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading and predominating ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias.

We invite all those who would like to read more extended extracts from eminent medical authorities concerning ingredients of "Favorite Prescription," to send for a booklet recently compiled by Dr. Pierce and published by the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., which will be sent free to any one requesting a copy of the same by postal card or letter.

THE ENDING OF MACKERELVILLE

District That Gave Big Vote for Tammany Split Up.

New York, May 23.—After an existence of forty years the Fourteenth Assembly district is no more. The new apportionment has split Mackerelville, like ancient Gaul, into three parts, and its inhabitants may be expected henceforth to make new alliances. The district lies south of Fourteenth street and north of Tompkins square, between Third avenue and the East river.

The name Mackerelville had a commercial and not a political origin. Many years ago, when the lower part of the Seventeenth ward between Houston and Seventh streets was an almost exclusively German neighborhood, a number of Irish fish dealers settled in the upper part of the Seventeenth ward, between Seventh and Fourteenth streets.

They did not come from the counties of Ireland for which fisheries are a source of revenue—Galway, Mayo, Limerick, Donegal and Clare—but chiefly from Cavan and Fermanagh, two counties noted for their traveling peddlers. These newcomers did not catch fish. They sold at a profit the catch of others.

Their wagons were known all over the East side at a time when fish was bought more generally from wagons than is the case now. On Fridays especially the Mackerelville wagons had plenty of customers, and it came to be recognized that retail dealers in fish were from Mackerelville generally and so the neighborhood got its name, which has adhered to it ever since.

The large Democratic majorities it gave made the Fourteenth or Mackerelville district a force in Tammany Hall, and the determination of its leaders to resist any change in its boundaries kept control of political matters within the leading families. At each successive apportionment it was proposed to cut up the district, which long ago lost its former distinctive character.

The fish dealers moved away, some of them to buy houses uptown. Throughout the western portion of the district Russian newcomers in great numbers found homes, while in the extreme eastern portion, along Avenues B and C, Italians settled in large numbers.

But the leaders were able to prevent any cutting up of the district until this year, when, under the new apportionment, the portion west of Second avenue and south of Fourteenth street is joined to a West side district. The portion between Avenue A and the river north of Tenth street is joined to an uptown district, and the remaining portion, between Tenth and Fourteenth streets, Avenue A and Second avenue, is joined to a downtown district.

Mackerelville has rolled up larger majorities for Tammany Hall and has produced at the same time fewer Tammany leaders than probably any other district of New York. For a great many years the two Reilly brothers, Bernard and John, were recognized as being at the helm of affairs for Tammany in the Fourteenth district, and both gained in time their political reward. Bernard Reilly became sheriff, and John Reilly became register. Each remained in the political harness until he died.

Charles G. Cornell was for a considerable period prominent in the affairs of this district. Other graduates from the old Fourteenth are Supreme Court Justices P. H. Ducro and Henry Bischoff, City Court Justice Conlan, Former Tax Commissioner Thomas J. Creamer, Senator James Daly and Congressman Sulzer.

Changes which have taken place on the East side have altered the character of many neighborhoods. Mackerelville among them. Instead of old-fashioned small houses, with all the residents of them friends as well as neighbors, there are now generally through the greater part of this district new law tenements designed so far as possible to keep families apart, and about the only reminder of Mackerelville now to be seen is the fish market on First avenue.

UNDERGROUND WIRELESS

Messages Sent Beneath the Earth From Wilkesbarre to Scranton.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 24.—Frederick Muckley of Scranton, who is closely identified with Father Joseph Murgas of this city in the perfection of the latter's aerial wireless and an underground wireless telegraph system, is authority for the statement that the latter, on which Father Murgas has been working for some years, is now an assured success, demonstrated by experiments between this city and Scranton.

A bore hole 200 feet deep and six inches in diameter has been sunk in this city and a similar one in Scranton, and messages have been sent by wireless telegraphy from the bottom of each of these holes by the system invented by Father Murgas.

A number of difficulties have been overcome by hard work, chief of them being the effect of the third rail electrical system carrying 22,000 volts and which passes close to the bore hole in Scranton, and so charged the earth with electricity that it affected the experiments.

Father Murgas, saying that similar conditions might arise at any time, refused to sink another bore hole, and continued his experiments until the last few days demonstrated that the system was a success.

AGED WOMAN MADE HAPPY

Her Pocketbook Yields Explanation to Four Day Mystery.

Could Not Remember Where She Was to Meet Daughter.

When Mrs. Anna Smith, 75 years old, crippled with rheumatism and suffering from lapses of memory which come with advanced age sometimes, arrived in Duluth, her daughter was not on hand to meet her and the kind faced old lady could not remember positively whether Duluth was her destination or not. Duluth was strange to her and she really did not remember, so charitably inclined persons installed her at Branch Bethel and tried to clear up the case.

For four days, Mrs. Smith has been at the Bethel trying to remember whether Duluth was the end of her journey or not. She rather thought that she was to take a stage to her daughter's home but she was not quite sure. The Bethel people tried to make her recall it and made inquiry all over the city in an effort to locate the woman's relatives, but were unsuccessful.

Late yesterday afternoon, a reporter for The Herald sought an interview with Mrs. Smith, and to that good lady's great delight, the meeting resulted in the clearing up of the entire affair. Mrs. Smith has gone to Grand Rapids, where she will meet her daughter and drive to the latter's home.

The first thing the reporter did when he met the bewildered old lady was to ask her if she had any tickets in her pocketbook. Mrs. Smith promptly examined the contents of her purse and sure enough, there was a portion of her railroad ticket, inside, which proclaimed her destination to be Grand Rapids, Minn. The time limit had expired, but the railway officials, when informed of the circumstances, gave her another and this morning she was sent on her way very happy in the thought that she was soon to be reunited with her daughter.

Mrs. Smith said she came from the Pine Ridge Indian agency at White Clay, S. D., where she has been living for the past two years with her sister, a Mrs. Katherine Points. She explained that last week, her son-in-law bought her a ticket and placed her on the train with something over $19 in her pocket, to come to Minnesota.

Mrs. Smith said she remembered that the daughter wrote her that she would have to take a stage line for about twenty miles to reach her destination and to be careful which stage she took as there were two lines.

When she got off the train in Duluth, Mrs. Smith was so confused and worried that she could not remember where her daughter told her to go or the name of the town.

The special officer at the depot, unable to gather any definite information from the old lady's rambling talk took her to the Branch Bethel, where several persons interested themselves in her case.

MISSING DOGS AT HOME.

Two Local Canine Lovers Are Back at Work Again.

There is a sequel to the account of the elopement of two dogs, which appeared in The Herald not long ago. The happy pair has returned, and each dog has resumed its former position, one at the St. James hotel and the other at the Esmond, in the West end.

Joker, the blushing bride, has resumed picket duty at the St. James, and Fritz, the happy bridegroom, has taken up the reins again at the Esmond. The owners of both hostelries are glad to get their old employes back again.

Both animals disappeared simultaneously, and the elopement theory quickly presented itself. The police were notified to keep an eye out for the runaway couple. Mr. Campbell of the St. James was put to some expense by the disappearance of Joker. He was obliged to pay $10 for the use of another dog to go on watch at the St. James. The substitute has now been returned to its owner, however.

THE FOREIGN COMMERCE

Of United States in April Greater Than in Former Years.

More Than Quarter of Billion Dollars in a Single Month.

Washington, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The foreign commerce of the United States in April, 1906, was larger than that of the corresponding month of any earlier year, consisting of $107,000,000 imports and $144,000,000 exports; total, $251,000,000 or more than a quarter of a billion dollars in a single month. In only one previous April in the history of our export trade has the total of imports and exports reached as much as $200,000,000. For the ten months ending with April the record is equally striking, being: Imports, $1,021,000,000; exports, $1,488,000,000, or a total of $2,509,000,000. No similar period of any earlier year ever touched the $1,000,000,000 line in imports or reached the $1,500,000,000 line in exports. The total commerce of the United States for the ten months ending with April is thus over $2,500,000,000, and should the monthly average for May and June be as great as that for the ten months for which the record is made, the total of the fiscal year 1906 will exceed $3,000,000,000.

The fiscal year 1906 seems likely to make a new record in the foreign trade in several particulars. The total imports and total exports are in each case likely to be greater than those of any earlier year, and several monthly records have been already broken. For example, imports never exceeded $100,000,000 a month prior to 1905, except in a single instance in which large quantities of merchandise were being rushed into the country to avoid pending tariff changes; but seven out of the ten months ending with April of the present year have shown each an importation of more than $100,000,000, and the month of March showed the highest import record ever made, $113,597,277.

On the export side the high-water mark of earlier years has also been passed, the total for the ten months ending with April being $200,000,000 in excess of the total for the corresponding total of any earlier year, and the total for the single month of December, $169,758,529, being $25,000,000 greater than in any preceding month in the history of our export trade.

The increase in imports occurs in manufacturers' materials and finished manufactures, and the increase in exports occurs in agricultural products and manufactures. The increase in imports for the ten months ending with April amounts to about $86,000,000, and is about equally divided between manufacturers' materials and manufactures, the total figures for the nine months of which the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics has complied the analysis, indicating a gain of about $44,000,000 in manufacturers' materials, and $51,000,000 in the two classes, manufactures and luxuries, while there is a decrease of about $20,000,000 in foodstuffs. The exports there is, for the ten months an increase of $215,000,000, and the nine months' figures, now completed, show a gain of about $156,000,000 in agricultural products and about $50,000,000 in manufactures.

While the full totals of the ten months' period have not yet been received by the bureau of statistics, figures relating to exports of breadstuffs, provisions, live animals, cotton, and mineral oils are in hand for the full ten months. These indicate an increase in breadstuffs alone of about $73,000,000, compared with the corresponding ten months of last year; $54,000,000 in provisions; $35,000,000 in cotton, and about $2,500,000 in mineral oil. The increase in breadstuffs occurs in corn, wheat, flour, and oats. The total value of corn exported in the ten months ending with April is $57,750,000 against $41,000,000 in the same months of last year; the value of the wheat exported is $25,000,000, against a little less than $4,000,000 in the same months of last year; oats, $14,750,000 against a little more than 1,000,000 last year.

Of the $57,500,000 worth of corn exported in the ten months, a little over $12,000,000 went out of the port of New York, about as much from Baltimore, over $9,000,000 from New Orleans, $6,500,000 from Galveston, $6,000,000 from Philadelphia, and a little less than $4,000,000 from Boston. Of the $25,000,000 worth of wheat exported in the ten months, practically $6,000,000 went out of Puget Sound, $5,500,000 from New York, $4,250,000 from the customs district of Wilamette—of which Portland, Or., is the chief port—a little over $3,000,000 from Galveston, and about $1,000,000 each from Baltimore and Philadelphia. Of the $50,000,000 worth of flour, over $12,000,000 went out of New York, $6,000,000 from Puget Sound, nearly $6,000,000 from Puget Sound, nearly $6,000,000 from Baltimore, about $6,000,000 from Philadelphuia, and $4,500,000 from New Orleans.

Of the nearly $15,000,000 worth of oats exported in the ten months, $3,250,000 went from Philadelphia, $3,000,000 from Newport News, a little less than $3,000,000 from New York, $2,250,000 from Baltimore, and a little over $1,000,000 from New Orleans. Of the $159,500,000 worth of breadstuffs of all classes exported in the ten months, $37,500,000 worth went through the port of New York, $22,000,000 from Baltimore, $16,500,000 from New Orleans, $15,000,000 from Philadelphia, $12,000,000 from Puget Sound, $11,000,000 from Galveston, $9,000,000 from Newport News, $8,000,000 from Willamette, $8,000,000 from Boston, and a little over $3,000,000 from San Francisco.

Exports of provisions, by which is meant meats, butter, cheese and oleomargarine, show an increase of $34,000,000 in the ten months, and indicate that the total value of provisions exported in the fiscal year 1906 may, for the first time, pass the $200,000,000 line and will probably exceed the total of any previous year.

Cotton exports for the ten months are $35,000,000 more than in the same months of last year, and seem likely to bring the total of cotton exports for the full fiscal year above the $400,000,000 line for the first time in the history if the cotton export trade, and seem to indicate certainly a larger total value of cotton exports in 1906 than in any preceding year. The value of raw cotton exported never touched the $300,000,000 line until 1901, but seems likely in 1906 to pass the $400,000,000 line; the value of cotton manufactures exported, which never touched the $20,000,0000 line until 1897, exceeded by $30,000,000 in 1902, was $40,000,000 in 1905, and seems likely, in 1906, to be considerably above $50,000,000.

The classes of manufactures which show the largest increases for the first nine months, for which comparative figures are at hand, are iron and steel manufactures, $19,000,000; cotton goods, $7,000,000; cars and carriages, $5,000,000; mineral oils, $3,000,000; leather and manufactures, $2,000,000; agricultural implements, $1,000,000; paraffin, nearly $1,000,000, and numerous other articles in smaller sums. The classes of manufacturers' materials which show the largest growth in imports are: Hides and skins, an increase of $14,000,000; copper, $4,000,000; tin, $4,000,000; tobacco, $9,000,000, and pig iron, $3,500,000.

MR. CARLSON EXPLAINS.

Claims His Prosecution Was Not a Fair Deal.

S. O. Carlson, proprietor of the Lake Superior Employment company, who has been fined for running an office without a license, claims that he filed an application and a bond with the council May 1, at the time the other agents made application, and deposited his $100 fee with the city treasurer. He claims that several of the other agents did not get their licenses until within the last few days, but that none of them were arrested, and he does not think he has been treated fairly.

Mr. Carlson admits that his license is still pending, and says that the council held it up to investigate a complaint by the police. He claims that a policeman has a grudge against him.

Married Women

Every woman covets a shapely, pretty figure, and many of them deplore the loss of their girlish forms after marriage. The bearing of children is often destructive to the mother's shapeliness. All of this can be avoided, however, by the use of Mother's Friend before baby comes, as this great liniment always prepares the body for the strain upon it, and preserves the symmetry of her form. Mother's Friend overcomes all the danger of child-birth, and carries the expectant mother safely through this critical period without pain. It is woman's greatest blessing. Thousands gratefully tell of the benefit and relief derived from the use of this wonderful remedy. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Our little book, telling all about this liniment, will be sent free.

GRAND MAUSOLEUM

Being Prepared for the Remains of Richard Croker.

New York, May 24.—One of the finest mausoleums ever erected in old Calvary cemetery has just been completed for Richard Croker, the former Tammany leader. It has been under construction for six months, and is built of light granite blocks. It is about twenty feet wide and fifty feet deep. It is situated on a hill opposite the old Penny Bridge gate, and stands next to the Johnson mausoleum, which was built years ago by the head of the Broadway dry goods firm of that name.

The body of Frank Croker, who was killed in an automobile accident, a year ago last January, and that of his brother, Herbert, who died a short time later in Kansas, will be taken from their temporary resting places and put in the new mausoleum.

UPHEAVAL EXPECTED

New York, May 24.—Stormy sessions are predicted at the coming biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be held in St. Paul, beginning May 30. Rumors of trouble have already arisen, and a terrific upheaval that may completely overturn the constitution of the federation has been predicted.

Indications of the coming fight first made themselves apparent in a resolution of the industrial advisory committee which, in view of the fact that there are 75,000 wage earning women in the United States, advised that the federation, with the women's clubs affiliated, indorse the principle of equal suffrage for women, and begin a strenuous campaign in securing state laws and in amending municipal charters, so as to give to the working women of the country the needed protection of the ballot.

The industrial advisory committee, in so advising the federation, has overstepped one of its most stringent rules—that prohibiting the introduction of either politics or religion into the sessions of the federation. Trouble is seen in the fact that the president of the federation, Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker of Denver, Colo., is a suffragist. She was elected by a huge majority, and fear is expressed that all her supporters will side with her and introduce politics into the meetings, in spite of the violation of the constitution of the order.

Rheumatism Cured in 24 Hours.

T. J. Blackmore, of Haller & Blackmore, Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "A short time since I procured a bottle of Mystic Cure. It got me out of the house in 24 hours. I took to my bed with Rheumatism nine months ago and the Mystic Cure is the only medicine that did me any good. I had five of the best physicians in the city, but I received very little relief from them. I know the Mystic Cure to be what it is represented and take pleasure in recommending it to other poor sufferers." Sold by all druggists.

CANNOT GET TIMBER.

Building Operations Held Up by Delayed Shipments.

Because of a delay in getting Washington fir timber that is necessary for joists and floor timber, Contractor George H. Lounsberry has been compelled to stop work on the additional stories to the Bayha building at the corner of First street and Second avenue west.

The material was ordered about two months ago, but Mr. Lounsberry has not yet been able to find out whether it was shipped. The floor timber is said to be somewhere on the way, but this cannot be laid until the timber for the joists comes.

This is another instance of the manner in which the building interests are being hampered because of the difficulty in getting coast timber. From three to four weeks is regarded as a reasonable time for the shipments to arrive after being ordered, but there have been delays for two and three months.

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey of 3322 Clinton street, Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism, why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm, and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. For sale by all the leading druggists.

HAVING HIS TROUBLES

Building Inspector Meeting With Protests in Elevator Inspection.

Some Owners Realize Importance and Cheerfully Make Changes.

Hearty co-operation on some sides, and bitter opposition on others, is being met with by Building Inspector Kielley in his efforts to make all the freight elevators in the city comply with the new building ordinance.

It has been found that there are scarcely any of these elevators that will not violate the provisions of the ordinance. Some of them are without the pit at the bottom of the shaft. Others lack locks on the doors to prevent the levator being operated from other stories from the one on which it is standing. Others are not equipped with doors, and but a very few of them have all the safeguards that are required by law.

In one of the wholesale houses on Michigan street recently, one of the employes fell into the shaft, and the elevator descended upon him. It did not go far enough to crush him, but something went wrong with the machinery, and the man had to support the entire weight of the platform on his back until men could be summoned from outside to lift it up and release him. Had there been a three-foot pit at the bottom of the shaft, as the law requires, the man would have been safe.

The owners of this elevator have written Mr. Kielley that they will do anything that he requires to make the elevator perfectly safe. Others have written letters of the same kind, and have consented, without protest, to make the required changes.

On the other hand there are many who are vigorously kicking and making the life of the building inspector a burden. One man gave it as his opinion that a pit one-foot in depth would be sufficient.

"If you were in the bottom of the shaft and the elevator came down on you, would you rather have one foot or three feet of space?" the building inspector asked, and the owner agreed to make the changes.

Another man did not see the necessity of having locks to prevent the elevator being moved from other floors, or of gates.

These safeguards are to prevent employes leaving the elevator to get a load of merchandise, and returning to find it gone. They would, in many cases, thoughtlessly walk into the shaft before they noticed the absence of the lift, and accidents of this kind are by no means infrequent. With the proper kind of gates and locks, an elevator cannot be moved, except from the inside and after the gates have been closed.

Many of the owners realize the necessity of the safeguards, and are making the changes required, with little or no protest, but others who have gone for years without these restrictions are making vigorous and strenuous kicks.

A course, leathery complexion made unbeautiful by eruptions, calls for a general reform in living. The diet should be plenty of Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

W. J. NOLAN IS COMING.

Minneapolis Humorist and Legislator to be Here Friday.

North Star lodge of Perfection of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite has invited its members and other Masonic friends to hear the Lyric Trio at the Scottish Rite auditorium, tomorrow evening. The affair is strictly an invitation one. The program will begin at 8:30 o'clock. The Lyric Trio consists of Miss Edith Pierce of Minneapolis, soprano; Mrs. T. A. Whitworth of Stillwater, pianist, and W. I. Nolan of Minneapolis, humorist.

To Duluthians Mr. Nolan will be the feature. He has been a member of the lower house of the state legislature for several terms, and is recognized as the humorist of the house. He is undoubtedly funny, and among the many friends and acquaintances he has in Duluth will doubtless be at his best. The name of the little company, the Lyric Trio, has led many to believe that it was made of musicians or singers; but there need be no fear that Mr. Nolan will mar the occasion by attempting any vocal flights. He realizes his limits.

RAIL CONTRACTS LEAD BUSINESS

Conditions in Other Finished Lines Show No Eagerness.

New York, May 24.—The Iron Age says: The large rail contracts recently reported for delivery in 1907 contract with conditions in other finished lines where buying, as a rule shows no eagerness. It is estimated that 900,000 tons of rails have now been definitely closed for next year and that nearly 300,000 tons in addition will be carried over from this year. The southern mills are booked to July 1, 1907, having recently sold a round tonnage to the Southern Pacific.

The foundry pig iron market is easy under continued inaction. The machinery founders and molders in the various centers involved in strikes are evidently settling down to a test of endurance. Some scattering buying in the East and New England shows that on close competition 25 cents a ton has come off recent prices. In the central western valleys No. 2 foundry has touched $16 and on malleable business, in which some little inquiry appears, $15.80 has been done. A contract indicating how closely steel making irons are being swept up has been made by a small Shenango valley furnace about to start after long idleness, a Pittsburg steel company having taken its entire output for the second half.

The billet market is working into a freer condition, more steel being available. In sheet bars the situation is more troublesome and sheet mills are falling behind on their deliveries.

Important contracts for structural steel for New York work are practically closed, including 28,000 tons for the Hudson company's tunnel terminal and 12,000 tons for the City Contracting company's Portland street building. The open hearth building of the Gary Indiana plant of the Steel corporation, has been placed and takes 15,000 tons. At Milwaukee a 2,800 ton contract is announced.

Attention is still converging on the bar situation where large contracts are pending, the question being one of terms. The New Orleans cast iron pipe contract for 10,000 tons was divided between two Alabama foundries.

Low Outing Rates.

The Northern Pacific railway will sell week-end tickets each week until Oct. 31st at the rate of one fare for the round trip to Walker, Bemidji, Iron River, Brule, Sturgeon Lake, and Pine City. Deerwood only $2.85 round trip. Children of half fare age, half of the above rates. Return limit on all tickets good to the following Monday. City ticket office, 324 West Superior street, Duluth, Minn.

OPEN FOR BUSINESS TODAY!

The Finest, Cleanest, Most Sanitary, Up-to-date

MEAT MARKET IN AMERICA.

The building in which we will do business beginning today, was built expressly for us, and is equipped with the most modern methods of storing and handling meats and provisions of all kinds.

Every sanitary precaution has been taken to preserve the freshness of meats, vegetables, butter, fish, etc.

Our ice box has a capacity for storing tons of ice and about forty carcasses of beef.

Our sausage making department is equipped with modern machines of all kinds. The floors of this section are of concrete and every precaution tending towards cleanliness has been observed.

The fittings and furnishings of our retail department are the best that money can buy and will prove a revelation to the citizens of Duluth.

In future a complete line of delicatessen goods will be carried.

All of the foregoing coupled with an efficient corps of assistants with which we have always surrounded ourselves enables us to offer the very best service that it is possible for a Twentieth century establishment to offer its patrons and the public generally.

You are earnestly invited to inspect our new store, number 14 East Superior street, just across the street from our old stand.

Yours for modern methods,

N. H. WITT.

SPOILED SPORT OF YOUNGSTERS

Hoodlums Broke Into Club Rooms in Old Fire Hall.

Envious of the good times the members of the Park Point Boys' club have been having in the old fire hall, some older boys living across the canal have been attempting to break up their games, and three evenings in succession the hall has been broken into by a gang of young hoodlums, bent on spoiling the sport of the younger boys.

The hall was loaned to the Bethel society by the fire department, and the society has organized a club for young boys. They have been playing basketball in the hall, and the old building is fitted up in a comfortable manner.

The good times which the youngsters were enjoying excited the envy of the older boys, and on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings they kicked open the doors, and broke up the games.

Last night the boys complained to the police and the interlopers narrowly escaped arrest. The police secured the names of all of the guilty ones, and nothing but the intervention of the members of the club saved them from arrest.

ASK TO HAVE CANPANY DECLARED BANKRUPT.

Milwaukee, May 24.—A petition was filed today in the United States district court to declare the South Arm Lumber company of Milwaukee an involuntary bankrupt. The petitioners are C. W. Lamar of Pensacola, Fla., on two notes, aggregating $3,050; the Hibernia Bank & Trust company of New Orleans, on two notes, aggregating $2,109, and A. S. Hopkins of Chicago, on two notes, aggregating $4,750. It is alleged that the South Arm Lumber company owes $1,000 more than it is able to pay, and that while insolvent, has been disposing of his holdings of lands in Chippewa county, Michigan. The company was organized in Milwaukee twelve years ago.

COPPER STOCKS ARE UNCHANGED

Prices About the Same as Wednesday's at the Close.

The copper stock market was dull today and prices were about unchanged from yesterday, at the close. North Butte opened at $92.50, declined to $92.25, and rallied to $92.75, closing at $92.50 bid and $92.75 asked. The total number of shares traded in was 955. Amalgamated opened at $107 and sold as high as $108.25. The closing price was $108.12½ bid and $108.25 asked.

Anaconda opened at $268.25, declined to $267.50 and rallied to $269.50. The closing price was $269 bid. Butte Coalition closed at $33.50 bid and $33.75 asked. Calumet & Arizona was strong, opening at $115, advancing to $116.75, declining to $115 and closing at $115 50 bid and $116.50 asked.

The Bisbeen had a slightly weaker tone. Calumet & Pittsburg sold at $24.75 and closed at $28 bid and $29 asked. Dunn-Arizona sold at $14 and closed at $14 bid. Junction sold at $24.75 and $24.50 and closed at $24 bid and $24.50 asked. Lake Superior & Pittsburg sold at $30 and $29.50 and closed at $29.50 bid and $30 asked and Pittsburg & Duluth closed at $19 bid and $19.50 asked, after selling at $19.50.

Black Mountain sold at $10 and $10.25 and closed at $10 bid and $10.50 asked. Warren sold at $15.12½ and $15 and closed at $15.25 asked. Keweenaw sold at $11.50 and closed at $11 bid. Copper Queen of Idaho closed at $2.25 asked. Some brokers claimed to have some Ophir Tunnel offered at 15 cents at the close.

HAS THIRD SINKING SPELL.

New York, May 24.—The condition of Mrs. Jefferson Davis, who became worse last night, was not improved today. Members of her family are remaining within easy calling distance of the bedside. Shortly before noon Mrs. Davis rallied, her pulse and temperature returning to normal again. This was the third sinking spell Mrs. Davis has had during her present illness.

MONEY FROM SOMEWHERE

Kept Coming to President of a Big Dry-goods House.

More Sensational Testimony Given in the Rebate Hearing.

Kansas City, May 24.—More sensational testimony was brought out today in the trial in the United States district court, here, of George H. Crosby, traffic manager of the Burlington railroad; George L. Thomas of New York, a freight broker, and L. B. Taggart, his clerk, on a charge of conspiracy.

T. H. McKittrick, president of the Hargedine-McKittrick Dry Goods company of St. Louis, the first witness, who had testified that he had employed Thomas at a salary of $500 a year to look after the interests of his firm in the matter of railroad rates and routing from the East, admitted that he had received various sums of money from "unknown sources." In one instance, Mr. McKittrick testified, a person whom he did not know, entered his (McKittrick's) office in New York city one day, and handed him a package of money, containing between $400 and $500.

Mr. McKittrick declared that he did not know the man who had given him this money; that he had not since seen him; that he did not believe he would be able to identify him, and, further, that he did not know for what purpose the money was given him, nor from what source it came.

At this point, District Attorney Van Valkenburg requested W. B. Kelby and Thomas Clark to stand up, and, pointing to Kelby, asked of the witness: "Is this the man who handed the money to you in your New York office?"

"I do not know; I do not believe I could identify the man," replied Mr. McKittrick.

McKittrick, continuing his testimony, said that he had employed Thomas while he was in New York on May 1, 1902, signing a contract which was renewed again in 1903. Thomas had, he said, solicited employment, claiming that he would be able to ship goods to McKittrick's house from the East in the most economical way, and by the railway giving the best service. Thomas duties also were to include the settlement of all cases of losses in shipment and overcharges, and to obtain from Lowell, Mass., and other mill centers, the usual mill allowances offered buyers who accepted freight on a basis of shipment from New York. Thomas had been employed later on the same condition, but with no new contract.

In reply to a direct question, Mr. McKittrick said he had at various times received money from "unknown sources." Witness then detailed the receipt of the money in his New York office from an unknown man. Continuing, he said that some of the money had been received by express. In this manner, he said, his firm had, within four or five years, received about $10,000, during which time they had paid out $480,000 in freight charges. In one instance, he said, he had received some money personally, and this he had deposited in his brother's bank.

On cross-examination, Mr. McKittrick said that in seeking employment, Thomas had said he would get any legitimate commissions that McKittrick's firm might be entitled to from railroads and from any water lines not subject to the interstate commerce act.

Witness said that he and Thomas had talked over the matter of rebates, and it was agreed that no rebates were to be sought. He did not know that money received in his New York office, or by express, had come from Thomas.

The next witness was Hugh McKittrick, son of T. H. McKittrick, and vice president of the Hargedine-McKittrick Dry Goods company.

FREIGHT RATES WERE INCREASED

To Independent Oil Shippers Without Any Apparent Reason.

Cleveland, May 24.—The continuation of the interstate commerce commission's investigation into the methods of the Standard Oil company was begun here today. Former Attorney General Frank S. Monnett of Ohio was present for the commission as special counsel, and Virgil P. Kline, the Cleveland corporation attorney and close personal friend and adviser of John D. Rockefeller and F. H. Tolles appeared as counsel for the Standard company.

F. B. Westgate of Titusville, Pa., was called as the first witness, he stated that he had been an oil producer for nineteen years, being treasurer and general manager of the American Oil company. The product of his company, he testified, was marketed in England and up to 1886 the company had low rates on railroads to all points in that territory, but after that the rates increased from 25½ to 28½ cents per hundred gallons, to 32 cents, to 35 and 40 cents, and ever since then the rates had been high without any apparent reason. Mr. Westgate produced numerous bills of lading and freight bills to support his testimony. The witness stated that he had in recent years made numerous applications to the Pennsylvania and Lake Shore railroads out of Titusville for through rates to central Vermont points, but had always been unable to get them. He had been obliged to pay a second class rate on carloads, whereas he should have been able to obtain a fifth or sixth class rate.

CITY BRIEFS.

The funeral of Theodore L. Creighton, who was drowned in the Cloquet river at Independence Bridge April 29, and whose body was recovered at Burnett last Sunday, was held at Flood & Horgan's undertaking parlors Wednesday afternoon. Rev. S. F. Sharpless officiated. The burial was at Forest Hill cemetery.

Court Commissioner C. E. Adams, acting in the absence of Probate Judge J. B. Middlecoff, has ordered Mrs. Kaisa Saatela of Chisholm committed to the state asylum at Fergus Falls. She was examined yesterday afternoon and was adjudged to be insane. Mrs. Saatela is 59 years of age and has resided in the county four years. Symptoms of insanity developed a year ago, and her condition has grown worse.

Incorporation papers of Our Savior's Evangelical Lutheran Church of West Duluth were filed with the register of deeds yesterday by Trustees John Strom, C. Frank, J. S. Shalenfeldt, H. P. Johnson, J. C. Johnson, Albert Hanson, J. E. Evjen, Christ Nellsen and Hans Veldo.

The McDonald Land company has changed its name to the McDonald Land & Timber Company of Minneapolis.

State Senator George R. Laybourn, who has taken an active part in state drainage matters, has accepted an invitation to deliver an address at the second annual convention of the Minnesota State Drainage league, which will be held June 28 at Wadena, Minn. His subject will be "Drainage," and his remarks will be confined principally to the need of drainage in St. Louis, Lake and Cook counties.

Zenith chapter, Eastern Star, will not hold their regular meeting tomorrow evening.

NOT TO SUGGEST TYPE OF CANAL

The Sundry Civil Bill Will Merely Appropriate the Money.

Washington, May 24.—The sundry civil bill, when reported from the house committee on appropriations, will not contain anything suggesting the type of canal to be constructed at Panama. It will appropriate for the canal on the basis of the lock system. Chairman Tawney has made an inquiry, and is convinced that a large majority favors a lock canal, and any attempt to amend the bill so as to provide for a sea level canal will fail. A number of senators have inquired of Mr. Tawney what would be the effect of an amendment in the senate to the sundry civil bill providing for a sea level canal, stating that it was quite probable that a majority of the senate favored that type. In reply, Mr. Tawney said that the senate would be obliged to recede, or the house would, by a vote, have to instruct him to accept such an amendment, as he would oppose any proposition of that kind in an appropriation bill.

STABLE COLLAPSES, INJURING MANY MEN.

Pittsburg, May 24.—Morgan S. Simms' livery stable at 5928 Baum street, East end, which was being remodeled into an automobile garage, collapsed this afternoon.

A number of workmen were in the ruins and several have already been taken out, painfully injured. Others are still under the debris and it will take some times before they can be removed.

Mr. Simms himself was caught in the falling timbers and was among the first taken out. His injuries are said to be serious.

Witt's Handsome Market.

Nic Witt has moved his market to the handsome block erected by him on the south side of Superior street between Lake avenue and First avenue east. The new shop is much more commodious than his former quarters, and is fitted in the most modern style, making the most attractive and convenient meat market in Duluth. In style of finishings it is the most expensive and handsome in the West.

ALWAYS OUT FOR MONEY

Railroad Man Says He Got Lots From Coal Companies.

Important Evidence in Hearing on Coal Car Discrimination.

Philadelphia, May 24.—The interstate commerce commission resumed its hearings today in the investigation of alleged discrimination in the distribution of coal cars, and Frederick Vrooman, of Osceola Mills, assistant trainmaster of the Tyrone division of the Pennsylvania road, was called.

"Have you anything to do with the distribution of cars?" asked Attorney Glasgow for the commission.

"I have."

"Did you ever get any money from coal operators on your division?"

"Oh, yes."

At Mr. Glasgow's request Mr. Vrooman named a half dozen coal operators who had paid him money at various times in amounts ranging from $5 to $20.

"Why did they give you this money?"

"I suppose they expected some favors."

"Were the favors granted?"

"Not that I recollect."

"Then why did you take the money?"

"Well, if there was money to be given out I was there to take it."

"Is that your position now?"

"It always has been."

The witness said there was no scarcity of cars during the anthracite strike. He denied furnishing cars to certain companies at $20 and $50 a car.

J. Howard Patton of Greensburg, a brother of W. A. Patton, assistant to President Cassatt at Philadelphia, testified that he occupied the position of agent at the Claridge station of the Pennsylvania road, and he is also superintendent of the Claridge mine of the Keystone Coal company. He said he received no pay from the railroad company, the wages of $50 a month going to his assistant, who performs the actual duties. The pay of each is $25 a month, but he assigns his pay to his assistant. Asked why he continues as agent without remuneration, he said he belonged to the Veterans' association of the Pittsburg division, and held the position for that reason. Mr. Patton admitted, however, that he was responsible to the railroad for the proper performance of the agent's duties at Claridge.

"As superintendent of the Claridge mine," queried Attorney Glasgow, "when you want cars, how do you get them?"

"I telephone to Lloyd Buffs' office."

A. E. Fitler, employed in the coal freight department of the Pennsylvania road was asked if he knew anything of a rate given the Keystone Coal company for export coal.

He replied that a rate has been in effect for about eight years on Greensburg coal from Greenwich piers, Philadelphia. The basis is the Clearfield rate, and the witness said, was made to enable the Pennsylvania railroad to get a contract requiring a certain grade of coal.

"Who filled the contract?" asked Mr. Glasgow.

"It was filled, I believe, by the Alexandria Coal company. The shipment was made to Cuba."

"Now is it not a fact that the Berwind-White company got the contract for that shipment and that they purchased the coal from the Alexandria company?"

"That is true."

"Then the rate was made for the Berwind-White company?"

"It was."

It also developed through Mr. Fitler's testimony that some of the Keystone Coal company's operations are on the division to which the rate applies.

Mr. Fitler was questioned concerning rebates and stated that there had been none since April 1, 1901, and that all concessions at that time were on old contracts.

Counsel for the railroad stated that Robert Pitcairn, assistant to the president at Pittsburg did not care to appear without process. Mr. Glasgow said he was indifferent as to whether Mr. Pitcairn testified. Commissioner Cockrell said that if Mr. Pitcairn was willing to allow the record made up against him by the commission's report to stand without further explanation it would be regarded as a correct statement.

About the American Navy.

Naval men claim that this important lesson was learned from the Russian-Japanese war, namely, that the navy of the United States must be well provided with heavy warships, in order that we may hold the proud position we now occupy among the nations of the world. Thousands of sickly persons long ago learned the lesson that for making people well and keeping them so there was no medicine like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Every bottle is now backed by a 50-years' record of cures, which ought to convince the most skeptical that it contains true merit and is worthy of a fair trial. If the stomach is weak, appetite poor, sleep restless or nerves unstrung, the Bitters is needed at once. It also cures dyspepsia, indigetion, costiveness, heartburn, bloating female ills, dizziness, fainting spells or malaria.

NEW YACHTS ARRIVE.

Two 32-Footers---Five 22-Footers Are Expected Friday.

The two boats from White Bear for members of the Duluth Yacht club, Fred Smith and Harry Pierce, have arrived from White Bear, and been unloaded. These boats are 32 feet over all and 18 feet water line, with a beam of 7 feet 2 inches. They have two bilge boards instead of a center board, and two rudders each. The spars are all hollow and very light.

The sails consist of a main sail, a jib, balloon jib and spinnaker. The main sail and jib area is limited to 350 square feet, and the crew ballast must not be more than 575 pounds. A crew of four persons is required to handle these boats, as they are rigged with what are known as jumper stays, which have to be unbuckled every time the boats are brought about, and this keeps one man busy most of the time when a stiff breeze is blowing.

Commencing July 16 there will be a series of five races with the Superior boats for a cup offered by Joseph B. Cotton. Three races will be sailed in Duluth and two in Superior.

Five 22-foot cat boats are expected to arrive from Shell Lake tomorrow morning.

ALCOHOL BILL GETS THROUGH

Passes the Senate and Had Already Passed the House.

Washington, May 24.—The senate today passed the so-called free alcohol bill as it was reported from the committee on finance. The bill has already passed the house, and the amendments which the senate has adopted do not materially change its scope. It does not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1907. There was some debate on the measure and the necessity for the amendments explained. The bill was passed without division.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 24.—Speaker Cannon with the memory of yesterday's proceedings in his mind, took a new tack today when the house of representatives met by sending word to Mr. Curtis of Kansas, to raise the point of "No quorum" when a division was demanded by Mr. Williams (Miss.) on the vote to resume consideration of the diplomatic and consular bill. Mr. Curtis made the point of "no quorum" taking the wind out of Mr. Williams sails, the "call of the house" preceding under Republican demand instead of on the demand of the leader of the minority. A quorum was present, the vote being yeas 222, nays 21, present 19.

HANGING NEGRO CUT DOWN AND WILL LIVE.

Kansas City, May 24.—At Rosedale, Kan., near here, early today a crowd attempted to lynch Munroe Talvers, a negro, who had been found under the bed of a white woman. Before he was strangled, the negro was cut down by the police and taken to the station. He will recover.

SUMMER HOUSE BURNED.

Brewster, Mass., May 24.—The summer residence of Rolan C. Nickerson, of New York, one of the finest on Cape Cod, was burned today with its valuable interior furnishings, paintings and bric-a-brac. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

Famous Organization of Boy Musicians Here Next Monday.

"Roney's Boys", the famous young musicians known the world over, will appear at the First Methodist church next Monday afternoon and evening. Their trainer and manager, Henry B. Roney, the most skillful director of boys, will be here with them. The boys, five in number, have appeared everywhere. They have given their concert before the president of the White House will be here with them. The boys, five in number, have appeared everywhere. They have given their concert before the President at the White House, have conquered audiences in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, and all of the great cities, and everywhere have been showered with plaudits of delighted thousands. The Washington Post said of the appearance of the boys at the White House.

"The 'Roney Boys', five in number, who came from Chicago on the invitation of Mrs. Roosevelt, wore various fancy costumes—French court, Highland Scottish, patriotic, cardinal college gowns, choir vestments, and uniforms—and the program would have done credit to any stage. During the music the president entered the room, taking an inconspicuous seat near the green room entrance. He entered thoroughly into the spirit of the occasion and enjoyed every minute of the entertainment."

WHEAT IS STRONGER

Prices Go Up in American Market, With Good Buying.

Flax Trading Light But Steady With Prices Slightly Weaker.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 24.—Wheat was stronger in all of the American markets today. Buying was good and there is some fear now that there will be too much rain in the Northwest. This made the market bullish. Liverpool closed ¼d to ⅜d lower.

The May option was 1¼c higher in Duluth and St. Louis, 2¼c in Chicago, 1⅝c in Minneapolis, 1½c in New York and 1-½c in Kansas City. There was no session in Winnipeg, it being a holiday there. The July option was 1⅜c higher in Duluth, 1⅜-1½c in Chicago, 1¼c in Minneapolis, 1⅛c in New York, 1¼-⅜c in St. Louis and ⅞c higher in Kansas City.

Corn was stronger, the July option in Chicago closing ½c up. Corn was ¼d lower in Liverpool. July oats were ⅝c higher in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 35 against none last year, and at Minneapolis 92 against 200 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 127 against 200 last year. Chicago received 7 against 5 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 226,000 bus, last year 294,000 bus. Shipments 324,000 bus, last year 206,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 153,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 602,000 bus, last year 319,000 bus. Shipments 510,000 bus, last year 252,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 30,000 bus.

Wheat was very active in the Duluth market and prices were considerably higher, May wheat closed 1½c higher at 84c. July wheat opened ¼c lower at 82½c, advanced to 83c at 10:06, declined to 82⅜c at 10:15, rallied to 83⅝c at 11:20, declined to 83¼c at 11:48, rallied to 84⅜c at 1, fell to 84c at 1:07 and closed at 84½c, a gain of 1⅝c over yesterday. September wheat opened ¼c higher at 80¼c, advanced to 81c and closed at 81⅝c, a gain of 1½c over yesterday.

Flax trading was light, but fairly steady during the session. Flax cables were quiet and unchanged. May flax closed ½c lower at $1.16. July flax opened unchanged at $1.16¾, declined to $1.16½ and closed at that price, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. September flax opened unchanged at $1.10⅝, fell off to $1.10¼ and closed at that price, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday.

October flax opened unchanged at $1.15¼, fell off to $1.15, rallied to $1.15¼ and ranged between that and $1.14⅜ during the rest of the session, closing at $1.14⅜, a loss of ½c from yesterday.

May oats and oats to arrive and on track closed ⅜c higher and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Firmer on Buying by Commission Houses and Shorts.

Chicago, May 24.—Wheat opened firmer on buying by commission houses and shorts. July opened ⅛@¼c to ⅜@½c lower at 81½c to 81¾c and advanced to 82@82¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 134 cars against 348 cars last week and 205 cars one year ago.

The demand was unusually active all day and the market was exceedingly strong. The July and May options showed the greatest strength. The May delivery after opening at 83½@83¾c sold up to 86½c. The cause of the buying was reports of serious damage in Southern Illinois and Missouri. The high point for July was 85¾c. The close was strong with July up 1⅜@1½c at 85¾c. The close on May was 2¼c higher at 86c.

The corn market was steady after an easy opening, because of a good demand by shorts. Offerings were light. July opened ½c to ⅝c lower at 47c to 47½c and sold up to 47¼c. Local receipts were 311 cars, with 264 of contract grade.

The market was strong in sympathy with wheat. The high point for July was 48c. The close was strong and ½c higher at 47¾c.

The oats market was steady. July opened unchanged at 33c, declined to 32⅞c and advanced to 33¼c. Local receipts were 102 cars.

The provisions market was strong on a good general demand from shorts and commission houses. July pork opened 7½c to 12½c higher at $15.75 to $15.80, and sold up to $15.87½. Lard was up 7½c at $8.67½ to $8.70. Ribs were 5@7½c higher at $9.10@9.15.

Close: Wheat—May, 86c; July 83⅜c. Corn—May, 48¾c; July, 47¾c. Oats—May, 33¾c; July, 33⅝c. Pork—May $16.10; July, $16.20. Lard—May, $8.67½; July, $8.75. Ribs—May, $9.17½; July, $9.25. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The unexpected happened in today's market. After the average trader had looked at the weather map his mind was made up that we were in for further reaction, but the opening price proved to be the low point. It was a case of bears being on the run right from start of market up to close, market advancing 2¼c from the low point, with the close showing 1½c advance for the day. The customary crop of damage reports was received throughout the session, and St. Louis wired that disturbing reports are being received from the American bottoms, accompanied by buying orders in their market. The action of the market indicates trade is inclined to pay heed to these damage reports, notwithstanding it is generally believed the drought has been effectually broken. There is a growing belief that moisture was too long delayed, that it is an old theory in the trade that an open winter is seldom followed by bountiful crops. Surely last winter was an open one, with but little snow and much rain. In conservative circles, fears are expressed that threshing returns will uncover damage done by unseasonable winter weather. The action of the market showed a wonderful amount of strength today. There was a large general commission house trade indicating a growing public interest in the market. We feel tonight would buy wheat on setbacks.

The corn market was strong throughout, losing only a small part of its early strength, but yet closing at ½c advance for the day. The larger receipts make for a slow cash market and somewhat easier prices, but the movement from first hand continues most disappointing. It will avail the shorts but little to know that the acreage is probably larger than a year ago, and that the new crop has got a most favorable start. What most concerns them just now is the small stocks at all primary points.

Wisconsin Grain & Stock Company: Wheat opened off a trifle on the better weather and some pressure from liquidations by longs. The opening prices were the lowest for the day. Later the market turned very firm on short covering and commission house buying and reports that the late rainfall had been distributed very partially and that the southwest district is still suffering from drought. The bulge was unwarranted as far as the news was concerned, but in this market, where weather is the prime mover one must expect radical changes from time to time without any apparent reason. Upturns of a cent or two should be taken advantage by putting out short lines of wheat. Cash demand was reported as good for the choice grades and premium was increased over yesterday. The lower grades cheaper. A number of the large traders, who have been long wheat, let go of their holdings on the advance today. Until something more tangible in the shape of news appear we would advise sales on these bulges.

Chicago Record-Herald: Further reports of a settlement of May contracts between the Watson following of Minneapolis and the local representatives of Eastern holders went around yesterday. Watson was credited by his friends with admitting that he had settled 1,000,000 bus privately on Tuesday. In the trade this confirmation of the Tuesday rumors went with due allowance only. If it were true, there was rather a further outstanding liberal short interest, or else there could be no excuse for the premium of 1¾c that May retained over July, unless, as some believed, the remaining unsettled short interest was larger than had been imagined. There was every reason for the shorts to encourage the belief in large private settlements, as this would result in frightening the longs into unloading. The Wrenn brokers stood in the pit all day trying to buy May wheat, taking it when offered only, but those who watched them closely put their entire day's purchases at 350,000 bus. The time for bringing Kansas wheat down for delivery here is growing short, and the transactions show a larger loss than that developed by recent purchases of May in the pit. There are only eight days left of May, and Duluth may yet attempt there at buying cargoes for lake shipment.

Robert Pringle, Chicago: Longs liquidated pretty thoroughly yesterday and pit conditions are good. I don't believe we can raise as much wheat in winter sections with best conditions from now on as last year and if anything happens up your way dollar will look cheap.

C. E. Lewis, Minneapolis: I am not saying much because I know it is not popular to be a bull but wheat will sell in this market at 95 cents this summer and perhaps $1.10.

Cincinnati Price Current: Recent prevailing dry weather has modified the favorable position of crops in large portion of Central and Western regions. Oats apparently suffering the most. Winter wheat is needing moisture for maturing process. Corn drawbacks being susceptible of remedy by later favorableness. Meadows lessened in product. Pastures temporarily shortened. Spring wheat mainly encouraging.

Chicago: C. T. Neal just left Nebraska last evening and arrived here this morning. He says everything is looking fine in Nebraska; that they have had moderate rains in the last two days and that wheat is looking well. He says corn has gone into the ground this year in the best condition he has known for a number of years. Also reports oats looking well. He says deliveries of corn have been liberal for the past week and that the recent rains will have a tendency to keep them up.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

Continued to the Close Which Was About at Best.

Money Was Easier in Tone and Market Ruled Strong.

New York, May 24.—The listless movement of prices in the opening dealings in stocks today reflected the languid interest in the market. Dealings on a very restricted scale and the narrow gains and losses were very evenly divided. Colorado Fuel and American Ice rose large fractions. Otherwise changes were insignicant.

Large blocks of Reading and moderate purchases of other members of the anthracite group carried them up substantially with Lackawanna, making its usual sensational fluctuations. Many of the industrial specialties and some of the public utilities were in good demand. The general list did not benefit much, though there was a fractional improvement. Lackawanna improved 10½, Delaware & Hudson 4½, Northern Pacific 2½, Great Northern preferred and Reading 2, Louisville & Nashville and Allis-Chalmers preferred 1¾, and Atlantic Coast Line, Central of Jersey, Erist first and second preferred, Brooklyn Transit, the Interborough Metropolitan stocks, Locomotive, Pressed Steel Car, Allis-Chalmers, Distillers' Securities and United States Pipe 1 to 1⅜.

Prices continued to work upwards by successive movements at new points in the list, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, and Amalgamated Copper were prominent with advances of 1 to 1⅜. Northwestern preferred rose 4, the common 1¼, Baltimore & Ohio preferred 1, and Distillers' Securities 1¾, Biscuit 1¼ and Denver & Rio Grande 1. Lackawanna reacted 7. The market was at a standstill at noon. Bonds were steady.

The only significant features of the noon-day trading were a further slight recession in the price of Reading, making its advance 2½ and the wiping out of the rise in Amalgamated Copper.

The heaviness of Amalgamated Copper caused some depression in other metal stocks and a number of them fell a fraction below yesterday's close, including United States Steel and Smelting. Sympathetic recessions in the railroads were checked when St. Paul began to show strength and touched 165. Lackawanna made another spurt to 568½, making its over-night rise 12. Northwestern also hardened 2 points.

Reading's renewed flight to 4½ over last night carried with it Erie and Ontario & Western for 1½ and Erie second preferred for 2 points. Lackawanna sold at 560. International Pump preferred gained 2. The Reading rise induced a moderate movement in the general list in sympathy. Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Norfolk & Western, Southern Railway and Wabash preferred gained 1 or more. Best prices of the day generally resulted from the rally and the closing was strong and quite active.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed strong, with the whole list showing advances over yesterday's close. At one time it seemed as though the advance would unsettle prices, but the small decline that set in was easily overcome after the grain markets adjourned. There was nothing in the day's news aside from general precipitation through the Western grain country to bring about or cause the better feeling in stocks. The reports yesterday of bond issue by the Steel corporations were officially denied, and no other pressure being in evidence this morning, the bears had nothing to do but cover their short lines. As we have said for some days it is a trading market purely, and still seems likely to continue so.

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market showed material improvement today although continued highly professional. Erie and the other coalers advanced in sympathy. Sentiment was made bullish by indications that considerable French capital is coming to this country. Money was easier in tone. The closing strength promised better things tomorrow.

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was strong and the feeling much better. The heavy buying in Reading was supposed to be a fight with the bear operators. The general advance continued until the close and prices were at about the best. We look for an active and better market tomorrow.

F. P. Frazier to Baker: I believe these stocks from now on should be bought on the breaks. There are lots of people selling them short believing there will be some kind of a calamity, but the wise men will buy them and have them on hand to sell to some of these shorts.

Waldorf to Paine, Webber & Co.: There is little change in the situation. It is pointed out that, notwithstanding bullish feeling that has so generally prevailed, prices reached today, as a rule, the lowest levels touched in several weeks. The inference is that important interests sold more stocks on the advance that followed the San Francisco panic than is generally believed. The question arises and some brokers are disposed to believe that liquidation has been completed. It is stated on excellent authority that the investigation of the oil industry has so incensed Standard Oil men that the latter are not inclined to take an aggressive stand on the bull side at this time. H. H. Rogers is a firm believer in stability of copper trade conditions and the intrinsic merits of Amalgamated Copper and Anaconda.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The copper market is very quiet today and continued absolutely no interest for the average trader. Fluctuations were so small that there was very little chance for any one to make a profit on either the long or short side of the market. The situation is still strong, however, and prices of the good dividend paying coppers are holding well. Don't forget to buy Osceola, Range and Utah whenever they are weak.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 24.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 to 4 points, in response to better cables and good spot sales in the Liverpool market, but trading here was very quiet. Selling for local account caused prices to ease off during the middle morning, and at one time they were about 2@3 net lower. Later there was a rally to the closing figures of yesterday on covering, but trading continued very quiet.

Cotton spot closed quiet; mid ups 11.90; do gulf, 12.15. Sales, 31,000 bales. Futures closed steady. Closing bids: May 11.38; June, 10.15; July, 11.14; Aug. 10.86; Sept. 10.68. Oct. 10.63; Nov. 10.65; Dec. 10.64; Jan. 10.68; Feb. 10.69; March, 10.76.

New York Money.

New York, May 24.—Money on call steady, 3@4½ per cent; ruling rate, 3½; closing bid, 3½; offered at 4. Time loans firm; sixty days, 4¼@4½ per cent; ninety days, 4½; six months, 4¾@5. Prime mercantile paper, 4¾@5¼ per cent. Sterling exchange steady at $4.85.20@25 for demand and at $4.82.05@10 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.83 and $4.86½; commercial bills, $4.81¾. Bar silver, 67¾c; Mexican dollars, 52½c. Government bonds weak; railroad bonds irregular.

St. Paul Live Stock.

St. Paul, May 24.—Cattle receipts, 250; quiet, steady. Grain fed steers, $3.50@5.50; cows and heifers, $2.50@4.50; calves, $1.50@4.25. Stock steers, $2.25@2.35; feeders, $2.75@4.25. Hogs receipts, 2,800; strong; range, $6.15@6.25; bulk, $6.15@6.20. Sheep receopts, 100; steady. Sheep, $4@$5.75; lambs, $4@6.50; spring lambs, $4.50@5.10.

Treasury Balances.

Washington, May 24.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $158,097,717; gold, $73,563,149; silver, $43,437,980.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

Best Method Board Has of Learning Sentiment of Taxpayers.

In an effort to gain some idea of the wishes of the taxpayers of the city regarding the men they wish to represent them on the school board, petitions are being circulated by the board of education.

The terms of three of the members of the board expire next month, and three new members must be elected to take their places. The members whose terms expire this year are Directors Powell, Codding and Stevens.

The board has adopted the plan of circulating petitions asking for nominations. If only a few names are asked for, they will be all placed on the ballots, but if a large number of petitions are received, six or eight of those which have the largest number of signatures, will be placed on the ballots.

Following is a copy of the resolution passed by the board, which calls for the nominations in this manner:

"Resolved, that this board hereby invites the qualified electors of this school district to present to it by petition on or before June 1, 1906, an expression of their preferences for candidates for election to fill the vacancies which will be caused this year by the expiration of the term of Directors Codding, Powell and Stevens, to be voted for at the next annual school election, to the end that this board may cause such tickets to be printed and distributed as will fairly give the voters an opportunity to express their choice at the polls."

If any taxpayer or any number of taxpayers have a preference for any special representative on the board, this gives them an opportunity to have his name placed upon the ballot at the approaching school election. The petitions must be in the hands of the clerk of the board not later than June 1, in order that they may be presented to the board at the regular meeting that evening.

An effort will be made to have all three of the retiring members accept a nomination for another term.

THREATENING LETTERS

Received by Young Farmer and He is Also Assaulted.

Comfrey, Minn., May 23.—E. P. Beckius, a young farmer residing west of town, has been the object of assault and threats for several weeks.

When late on Saturday evening he went to his barn to do his chores, he received a blow from a fist on the side of his head and also on his right cheek, the blows bringing him to the ground. On recovering from the shock he hastened to the house, secured his gun and fired a few shots at his assailant, whom he could see, but did not recognize.

The same day, when in town, he received a threatening letter through the mails, geting it himself from the postoffice. The letter was brief and written by an uneducated person, and conveyed the information that he must leave the neighborhood at once or suffer death.

Pinned to this letter was a sensational picture of the killing of the Italians recently in Minneapolis. Across this picture were the initials of Mr. Beckius' name in large letters, "E. P. B."

Beckius is naturally much wrought up over the affair. He says he is at peace with all his neighbors, and has no enemies. He has warned citizens to stay away from his place at night, as he is prepared to defend himself with his shotgun.

DROVE AUTO RECKLESSLY

Dr. Hoppman Arrested and Fined for Exceeding Speed Limit.

The first arrest under the revised speed ordinance was made last evening by Chief Troyer, when he took Dr. C. W. Hoppman into custody for reckless and careless driving of his automobile, near the corner of Second avenue west and Superior street.

Dr. Hoppman failed to recognize the chief when the latter stopped the machine and told him to drive more carefully, and thought the chief was some private citizen interfering where he had no right to do so. He told the chief in no polite tones that it was none of his business, but later, when he found that the officer was merely performing his duty, he apologized, and this morning entered a plea of guilty.

He was fined $5 and costs by Judge Windom.

VILE DRINK TOOK THE LIVES OF SIX INDIANS.

Duck Lake, Sask., May 24.—That the six Indians who died at the Duck Lake agency came to their death from drinking a poison improperly labeled "Florida Water;" that the compound was manufacturer by the Daily company of Hamilton, Ont., and contained wood alcohol instead of the rectified spirit; that in the opinion of the jury all bottles of the same poison should be condemned and destroyed; that a brand manufacturer in Winnipeg has been found also to contain poison and should be similarly destroyed; that no patent medicine or liquor containing more than 10 per cent of alcohol should be sold to Indians without the order of a physician.

This is the verdict before Coroner Stewart of Rosthern by a jury which sat yesterday in an inquest into the death of the Indians on the reservation recently.

Mounted police have been probing the case and the finding today was the result of a thorough investigation on the part of Coroner Stewart, Inspector Generoius and Sergt. St. Denis. For twenty years Florida water has been sold on the reserve in place of whisky. The practice has been investigated again and again, but appeals to the department of justice have been fruitless.

ALL AGREE TO HAVE JUDGE LANDIS ACT.

Chicago, May 24.—All factions engaged in the struggle for possession of Zion City and its industries have agreed that Judge Landis of the United States district court shall settle all of the points in dispute. A written stipulation to this effect, signed by both Dowie and Volliva and their attorneys was presented to Judge Landis today. It is probable that the first testimony in the case will be taken within the next fortnight.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, ss.—

In Probate Court, Special Term, May 23, 1906.

In the Matter of the Estate of Walter A. Scott, Deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of George W. Buck, Administrator of the estate of Walter A. Scott, deceased, representing, among other things, that he has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of his administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It is Ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by this Court on Monday the 18th day of June A. D. 1906, at ten o'clock A. M., at the Probate Office in the Court House in the City of Duluth in said County, and that said administrator and his sureties be discharged.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Duluth Evening Herald a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., the 23rd day of May A. D. 1906.

By the Court,
DAVID H. LAWRENCE,
Judge of Probate of Lake County.
Acting Judge of Probate of St. Louis Co., Minn.
(Seal Probate Court, St. Louis Co., Minn.)
Duluth Evening Herald, May 24-31 June 7-06.

WILL CROWD THE LIMIT

New 645-Foot Freighter to be Started Soon.

American Ship Building Company Has Contract —Owner Unknown.

J. C. Wallace of the American Shipbuilding company, announced at the banquet following the launching of the steamer Sir Thomas O'Shaugnessy, that in the course of three or four months his company would contract to build a steamer which will be 645 feet long over all. She will carry 14,000 tons on a draft of 19 feet and will probably carry 16,000 or 17,000 of ore. Mr. Wallace did not say for whom she would be built.

This explodes the idea which has been quite current that the 600-footers of the Pittsburg fleet and the Cambria Steamship company would be the largest of this year and that the 605-footers of the Weston Steamship company proposed for next year would be the largest on the lakes for quite a while.

It has been figured out that the new steamer will be 35 feet longer than the ocean steamers Campania and Lucania of the Cunard line, and will be nearly 100 feet longer than the steamers St. Louis and St. Paul of the American line. She will also be larger than any steamer of the French ocean line and will be of greater tonnage capacity than, though not as long, as the famous ocean steamer Deutschland. The ocean monsters Amerika, Oceanic, Celtic and Cedric will be but 60 feet longer and will have only 4,000 tons capacity greater than the promised new lake freighter.

It is likely that the new steamer will be constructed at the Lorain yards, as two new slips for the accommodation of 700-foot boats are being put in there this year.

VOTE FOR STRIKE

Claimed That is Result of Firemen's Referendum Just Taken.

It is claimed at lower lake ports to be known that the union of firemen, oilers and water-tenders, who have voted on the proposition of accepting last year's scale or striking, has voted in favor of the latter. Every effort is being made by President Keefe of the Longshoremen to avert a strike for it will mean another tie-up of the marine interests.

It is claimed that the members at large did not vote, those on freighters having had but little chance to do so, and they are largely in the majority in the union. It is, therefore, claimed that it will be a case of the minority ruling the roost if the referendum vote is acted upon.

NEW MONTREAL LINE.

One is to be Established for the Fort William Route.

A dispatch from Montreal says that the establishment of a new inland St. Lawrence line from Montreal to Fort William has been decided on by Montreal shipping interests, and two steamers have been secured with which the service will be established.

The line will take the place of the Great Lakes & St. Lawrence Company's steamers, which have been withdrawn to run to Buffalo and other American ports.

HER MAIDEN TRIP.

New Steamer James Laughlin Takes Her First Ore Cargo.

The brand new steamer James Laughlin of the Interstate Steamship company, arrived here last night for the first time, this being her maiden trip, and returned today, taking her first cargo of ore, which she loaded at the Albouez ore docks on the other side of the bay.

The Laughlin is a fine type of the modern freighter and will doubtless make a record for herself. She is a duplicate of the steamer B. F. Jones, belonging to the same company. She is a 10,000-ton boat and is 550 feet long over all, 530 feet on the keel, 56 feet beam and 31 feet deep. She was launched on April 7 from the Ecorse yards, Detroit. W. H. Becker of Cleveland, is the managing owner

Wisconsin and Duncan Collide.

Detroit, May 24.—In a collision between the steamers Wisconsin and John Duncan last night near Amherstburg, the bow of the latter boat was so badly smashed that she sunk in shallow water at Bois Blanc Island. The Wisconsin was uninjured and proceeded on her voyage. The Wisconsin was bound up the river and the Duncan down. Both were loaded.

Trying to Release the Briton.

Marine City, May 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dredging to float the steamer Briton is now under way. The steamer is lying for 200 feet in 3 feet of water, and has settled 4 feet into the sand. It is hoped that the steamer can be released within 24 hours. So far the vessel has not been damaged.

DREDGE NOT NECESSARY

Captain Reid Thinks Mataafa Can be Released Without One.

Says Sandbar Formations Are Not Serious Menace to Work.

Capt. James Reid, who holds a contract for wrecking the Mataafa, is confident that such sandbar formations as are to be found between that wrecked steamer and deep water will not seriously interfere with the releasing of the boat.

It was reported that considerable dredging would have to be done before the craft could be moved from the position alongside the canal it has occupied since the big storm, and taken inside the harbor. Capt. Reid stated today that only such dredging would be necessary as could be done with the wheels of his boat, and that the sand is not considered a serious menace to work.

"There is no more of a sandbar in front of the Mataafa than there is anywhere in that vicinity," said Capt. Reid today. "No work was done on the boat yesterday afternoon or today because the weather was too rough. As soon as the lake becomes quieter, work will be resumed, and I do not think that any dredging will be necessary."

TIEUP THREATENED.

Mayor of Amherstburg, Ont. Says Americans Must Pay Tax.

Mayor J. W. Stokes of Amherstburg, Ont., a sleepy hamlet on the banks of the Detroit river, threatens to hold up American lake commerce at the Lime Kiln crossing if the American engineers residing in his town do not pay the income tax imposed in King Edward's dominion. He has had seized the goods of the American engineers who live on the Canadian side as a matter of convenience in their work in connection with the government channels, etc., and has posted notices for their sale tomorrow. To a newspaper Mayor Stokes said:

"I have been made mayor of this town to see that the laws are enforced, and the Americans will see I am a man of force. If it becomes necessary, I will stop the dredging and hold all boats passing through Canadian waters. It won't matter if they are men-of-war, they will not be allowed to pass in our waters.

"My family has been known for generations for being true to its convictions, and when a Stokes once takes a stand he never retreats.

"I have started this enforcement of the income tax, and no matter if the entire population moves out, that law will be enforced, and if any of the people remain they will pay that tax.

"The American engineers who have been assessed have lived here for the past ten years, and none of my predecessors had courage enough to make them pay an income tax. I have ordered notices posted stating that the sale of the seized goods would take place May 25, and I will be on hand on that date to see that it is done."

A. Y. Dixon, chief engineer in charge of the American force working on the channel, says:

"I consider it an insult to the American people, and if that law is enforced, Amherstburg will be the loser to the tune of about $12,000 a month.

"I have permission to move over to the American shore, and I will discharge every Canadian working for me, and will refuse to even allow supplies purchased in the town.

"In regard to Mr. Stokes stopping the work and holding up American commerce if I remove, all I can say is, I think that he will be powerless in this matter, as the British government has something to say about that itself."

Marine Notes.

The steamers Duluth and Milwaukee had an exciting race down the lakes on the last trip. They passed Detroit with the Duluth only about three boats' lengths ahead. They would not stop for their mail from the marine mail carrier there but hustled on.

Capt. Thomas J. Brady, who sailed steamers of the Corrigan fleet for years, being in the Progress last, has quit the lakes and is running a real estate office in Detroit.

Harry Raynolds, formerly chief engineer of the Corrigan fleet has pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy and has been sentenced to three years in the Ohio penitentiary.

E. S. Wheeler, chief assistant United States engineer at Detroit has swept over the spot in Lake St. Clair where the tug Tuthill went down. He finds a depth of only nineteen feet and Capt. Reid who contracted to remove the wreck will be requested to finish the job.

A LONDON ARTIST IS KILLED BY BURGLARS.

London, May 24.—Archibald Wakeley, an artist and a regular exhibitor at the royal academy was found murdered in his rooms at Bays Water today. The police theory is that the murderers entered the premises with the object of gaining the basement and thence digging an entrance into the vaults of a bank, situated next door, when they were intercepted by Wakeley.

Another banking institution was robbed in a similar manner last week, the burglars escaping.

NOT GETTING LICENSES.

Dog Owners Are Slow in Paying Up Their Taxes.

Dog licenses have been coming in rather slowly, and not more than half of the owners in the city have paid up.

At noon today only 836 licenses had been issued by the city treasurer, whereas nearly 2,000 were issued last year.

All dog owners who have not secured their licenses by June 1 will be in danger of arrest, as an officer has been detailed to the work of enforcing the collection of the dog tax.

PREMIER RESIGNS

Goremykin Out, According to Rumors About Parliament.

Said That He Has Been Succeeded by M. Shipoff.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—It was rumored in the lobbies of parliament this afternoon that Premier Goremykin had resigned and had been succeeded by M. Shipoff, of Moscow.

It was also reported that Prince Urusoff, the former assistant of the ministry of the interior, who resigned when the old council of the empire declined to accept his project to remove the race and religion limitations from the schools and who since has been elected to the lower house of parliament as a Constitutional Democrat from Kaluga, had been appointed minister of the interior.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—Premier Goremykin went to Peterhof today to secure the emperor's final approval of the general statement of the government's policy which the cabinet has prepared in answer to the speech from the throne. As the statement will probably have to run the gauntlet of the court camarilla the premier, it is believed, is not likely to be able to return here in time to deliver it this afternoon. The plan advocated by the majority of the Constitutional Democrats is that if the premier's speech is found unsatisfactory a vote of lack of confidence in the ministry will be passed, thus forcing upon the government the issue of supplanting the cabinet with one more in harmony with the party of the lower house. If this course is followed, unless the emperor is prepared to yield immediately, it is sure to hasten a conflict.

In spite of the moderate counsels of the leaders, the Constitutional Democrats are being pressed on by the denunciations of the Radical elements towards an open rupture. Revolutionary activity is increasing throughout the country, and the papers representing the Radical groups, which were suddenly allowed to resume publication, are taking advantage of the license granted them to indulge in the bitterest attacks, not only on the government, but on parliament, and there is evidence that revolutionary emissaries are traveling through the country stirring up hatred against the nobles and landlords, and encouraging the peasants to strike for the ostensible purpose of forcing parliament to hasten the distribution of lands. On the other hand, the agents of reaction are adopting the same tactics in favor of a dispersal of parliament, and a return to autocracy. As a result of this propaganda, threatening letters have been received by many members of parliament, and dispatches from the interior report daily conflicts between the followers of the two extreme parties. During a meeting of black hundreds on Archangel square, St. Petersburg, last night, under the presidency of Barbara Nikolaievna, workmen began a counter demonstration by singing the "Marseillaise." A collision followed, and resulted in fifty revolver shots being fired by the black hundred. One man was killed, three were seriously wounded, and dozens sustained broken heads.

Observing Liberals trace the revival of the old, bureaucratic expedient, divide et impera to General Trepoff's inspiration.

The Slovo says that instead of being released, as announced, M. Krustaleff, president of the executive committee of the workmen's council, who was arrested in St. Petersburg, December last, during the general strike, has been transported to Sveaborg fortress, Finland.

HOUSER IS READY TO STRIKE BACK

Intimates That Host Was Paid for a Good Report.

Madison, Wis., May 25.—Secretary of State Houser has permitted it to be known that if he is arrested on a bribery charge, expected to be made by Insurance Commissioner Host, for the alleged offer of $2,000 to the campaign fund if Host made a favorable decision to the Equitable company in a contest which was pending in 1905, that he will have a sensation to spring himself.

He will charge that about a year ago, just after Mr. Host had completed a thorough examination of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company of Milwaukee, he (Host) took out insurance in the Northwestern Mutual for $10,000. The report of Mr. Host, which immediately preceded the issuance of this policy, was an exceedingly commendatory statement of the Milwaukee company.

Commissioner Host's friends, however, say that Houser will be able to throw no discredit upon Mr. Host by such a charge, for Mr. Host has papers proving conclusively that he paid for his two $5,000 policies, as any private citizen would have been forced to do. These documents, they say, are sufficient evidence of the falsity of any charge of the nature Mr. Houser's friends may try to make. Mr. Host himself is in the south.

District Attorney Glotfelter has taken no definite step toward the issuance of papers in the Host-Houser case. He has not yet received the transcript of the evidence given by Mr. Host at Milwaukee a week ago, when Host accused Houser of offering the $2,000 subscription.

PIKE'S PEAK HAS A HEAVY MANTLE OF SNOW.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 25.—The storms of the past three days in the mountains west of this city have left Pike's Peak with a heavier mantle of snow than has covered this mountain before at this period in the year for a score of seasons. As the foothills are entirely bare of snow and covered with the spring foliage, the effect is striking.

ALL OFFICES ARE CLOSED

Mutual Reserve Life Company Gives Up English Business.

New Law Makes it Unprofitable to Seek New Business.

London, May 25.—The head office of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company in London, and all the country agencies, did not open for business today.

New York, May 25.—Vice President George D. Eldredge of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company of this city said today that the company discontinued all efforts to secure new business in England. The company will, however, continue to carry on the insurance it has already in force there. The restrictions to the amount of commission which the company is permitted to pay to agents for new business, imposed by the new laws of this state, Mr. Eldredge said, made it unprofitable to the company to seek new business in England.

This was due in part, he said, to the fact that the company's present business in England is not large. The company has been gradually lessening its efforts to get new business for two years.

PEOPLE AT SOO ARE IMPATIENT

Over Delay in Development of the Water Power.

St. Ignace, Mich., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The constitutionality of the law under which the Michigan-Lake Superior Power company of the Lake Superior corporation has been paying a specific tax of $5,000 annually to the state and no local taxes to the city of Sault Ste. Marie, is now in a fair way to be tested in the courts, for the board of review at the Soo has put the company's properties on the local tax roll at $2,000,000, which is something under one-half the actual value of the plant. The first value fixed by the board was $3,500,000, but $1,500,000 was taken off because it is alleged that the mortgage bonds of the company are worth but 60 or 70 cents on the dollar, their value having declined greatly because of the difficulties that have embarrassed the corporation. In case the specific tax law is declared unconstitutional, the city will receive about $40,000 in taxes, on the basis of the $2,000,000 valuation. If the law should be upheld the company will continue to pay $5,000 annually to the state, meanwhile escaping local taxation, until the legislature repeals the existing statute.

The feeling of the people of the Soo with reference to the company can hardly be called one of conciliation. The growing impatience shown is due to the fact that the development of the water power is practically at a standstill. For the past two or three years the Lake Superior corporation has done nothing to improve the situation on the American side of the St. Mary's river, while in the industries in the Canadian Soo hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended, and the work is still going on, contracts having only recently been awarded for the construction of open hearth furnaces, at a cost of $250,000. The carbide works, to which the Lake Superior corporation sells power for the operation of its plant, is the only one of the numerous industries promised the American Soo that has materialized, and it is an open secret that no more power can be developed until the dam and power house are strengthened at heavy expenditure. Many taxpayers, who have been content to let things remain as they are, relying on promises that something in the nature of improvements and industries were speedily in store, are now clamoring that the company be compelled to pay its share of the local taxation, and it is the understanding that a fund has been raised to aid in testing the validity of the specific tax act. The city has issued bonds for over $100,000, for the construction of bridges across the water power canal, and while the people are paying heavy taxes on the bond issue, they are getting practically nothing in return from the canal itself.

IBSEN TO HAVE STATE FUNERAL

The Norwegian Parliament Votes to Honor Illustrious Citizen.

Christiania, May 25.—Henrik Ibsen, who died here May 23, will be given a state funeral, a motion to that effect having been unanimously approved at today's sitting of parliament. The president in introducing the motion, feelingly referred to the country's loss as follows:

"Since the last sitting of the house our country has suffered a grievous loss in the death of one of her best sons, Henrik Ibsen. The people of Norway will ever feel deeply grateful to him for all he has given and taught us, and for the world-wide honor which through him has descended on our fatherland.

"In agreement with the premier, I move that Henrik Ibsen be buried at the expense of the state."

The whole house rose in silent aequiescence.

KING MEETS HIS BRIDE

Alfonso Welcomes Ena as She Enters Borders of Spain.

After a Royal Reception the Party Starts for Madrid.

Irun, Spain, May 25.—King Alfonso greeted his bride, Princess Ena of Battenburg, as she entered Spain in the early hours of the morning amidst an enthusiastic popular welcome. The special train bearing the princess reached the frontier shortly after sunrise. The morning mists still hung over the river Bidassoa separating France from Spain as the train reached the center of the bridge and the Spanish fortresses belched a welcoming salute of twenty-one guns from the heights of Pena de Aya, commanding the frontier. At the same time regiments of carbineers and ancient Sicilian guards were massed on the footways of the pier and with trumpets and banners saluted the bride's entrance into the kingdom, while the bands played alternately the British and Spanish national hymns.

In the meantime, King Alfonso in the uniform of a field marshal and surrounded by the ministers of the crown, the court chamberlains and the military and civil authorities, awaited the princess at the railroad station which was sumptuously decorated.

The meeting of the king and princess, although a ceremonious state function, was none the less marked by the unaffected joy and cordiality of the young monarch. The king presented his ministers, who officially welcomed the bride to Spanish soil and she graciously acknowledged the official salutation.

But the spontaneous enthusiasm of the people seemed to give greater satisfaction to the king who conducted the party to the royal train where the princess was installed in a luxurious coach. At 5:15 a. m. amid salvos from the fort and cheers of the people, the train left Irun for Madrid.

DEATH COMES IN EDMONTON

Robert H. Newell, Formerly of Duluth, Dead---No Particulars.

C. H. Shaver of Carlton today received a telegram from Edmonton announcing the death of Robert H. Newell, who was once a resident of Duluth, being a member of the firm of Newell & Newell which had an office in the Manhattan building. The family of Mr. Newell is stopping at Mr. Shaver's home and they are sadly stricken, for when Mr. Newell was heard from very recently he was in the finest of health. The telegram contained no information as to the manner of death and his relatives fear that his death must have been a violent one, either accidental or due to foul play.

TO INQUIRE INTO SANITY.

New York, May 25.—At the request of District Attorney Jerome, Justice Scott today suspended the trial of Josephine Terranova for the murder of her aunt in order to inquire into her sanity.

WOULD ADJUST ALL DISPUTES

Root Trying to Perfect Plan to Settle With England.

Washington, May 25.—Secretary Root is having made a careful study of the respective claims of England against America, and America against England, with a view to a mutual adjustment, if that is possible. As he told the senate committee on foreign relations last Wednesday, he believes that without resorting to the cumbersome machinery of a high joint commission, or even framing a treaty which would have to be urged through the senate, the matter might be arranged by direct negotiation, and a balance struck and paid in cash by the party he found to have the best of the claims. Because the executive has no constitutional power to bind the legislative branch of our government, which alone can appropriate the money necessary to meet and pay off an adverse balance, it is probable that the agreement between the negotiators must provide that the judgments reached shall be subject to the approval of the congress here and of parliament in England. The obstacle in the way of a comparatively easy agreement upon a program of negotiation of these claims is the famous Frederick Gearing case. This American fishing vessel was seized a number of years ago in a Canadian port for alleged violation of the fishing laws, and in spite of a vigorous protest by this government, was condemned and sold, and no restitution was made to the owners. The New England senators still keenly feel what they declare to have been the injustice of this procedure, and are firm in their contention that no agreement shall be made for the settlement of claims of Americans against Great Britain that does no provide first of all for the adjustment of this claim. The British government, however, asserts that the matter is res adjudicata; that the case was tried thoroughly in the Canadian courts and that no negotiations can succeed if they are to revert to what they term dead issues of that kind.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Rock Island, Ill., May 25.—Gustave Englin, today, after a futile attempt to effect a reconciliation with his wife, broke into her home and shot her dead. He also fired at his 12-year-old daughter, but missed. Englin then put a bullet through his own heart.

WISCONSIN CENTRAL'S PLANS ARE DISCLOSED

TO TUNNEL THE STREET

Superior Street Depot Between Sixth and Eighth Avenues West.

Tunnel Under Michigan Street From Twelfth Avenue West.

The Wisconsin Central Railway company's new depot in Duluth will be on West Superior street, between Sixth and Eighth avenues west, and the property acquired by it will extend from Superior to Michigan streets.

Condemnation proceedings filed this afternoon by the railway company settle that point, and discloses a plan on the part of the company that involves an enormous expense, and indicates not only the difficulty that it is for a railway company to get a new inlet into Duluth today, but also that the interests behind this road are determined to get in and, are willing to pay the enormous cost.

If there ever has been suspicion in the mind of any Duluthian as to the intentions of the Lake Superior & Southeastern company, as it has heretofore been known, and as to whether it was prepared to carry out its project on the large scale that had been intimated, an examination of the condemnation proceedings filed today will dispel it.

To reach the depot site a tunnel under Piedmont avenue west, or Michigan street, will be constructed. It will enter the street at Twelfth avenue west, and will pass through the solid rock to Eighth avenue west, and will there pass into the grounds of the railroad company's depot.

The tracks in the depot will be about thirty feet below the level of Superior street. This will necessitate quite a climb to get to the depot proper, and yet no more than it is to get on to the main floor of the depot at Minneapolis from the tracks below.

All of the property on West Superior street bought during the past weeks by

ANARCHISTS ATTACK BANK

A Brief But Bloody Encounter Occurs at Warsaw.

Two Customers Are Killed and Eight Persons Wounded.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, May 25.—A brief but bloody encounter took place here this afternoon at the Industrial Savings bank, which was attacked by a band of anarchists. The latter, with revolvers in their hands, ordered the clerks and customers present to hold up their hands. The chief clerk promptly drew a revolver and fired at the intruders. This was the signal for a brisk fusillade during which two of the customers were killed and two customers, five clerks and one of the anarchists were wounded. The anarchists then escaped, carrying off their wounded.

LOVERS' QUARREL CAUSES TRAGEDY

Waiter Shoots Girl and Turns Revolver Upon Himself.

New York, May 25.—Because she had threatened to leave him and had shown him a photograph of her new lover, John Kindrovics today shot and wounded Cecilia McGarry, a handsome woman, in their apartment in West Forty-fourth street. When the police broke into his apartment Kindrovics killed himself by a shot in the brain. Kindrovics who was a Hungarian waiter, had a quarrel with Miss McGarry early this morning in which she showed the picture to him. The waiter drew a revolver. Miss McGarry in her nightgown ran into the hallway with Kindrovics in pursuit. At the head of the stairs he shot her in the shoulder and she plunged down stairs narrowly missing another bullet. Kindrovics locked himself in his rooms and threatened to shoot three policemen, who broke down the door, but as they did so he shot and instantly killed himself. Miss McGarry will recover.

REMOVAL OF SMOOT

From the U. S. Senate is Earnestly Requested by Presbyterians.

Strong Resolutions to Congress Are Unanimously Adopted.

Des Moines, May 25.—At the opening session of the Presbyterian general assembly today, Commissioner Samuel Wishard, D. D., of Utah, presented a memorial to the United States senate praying the removal of Reed Smoot as senator from Utah. Amid scenes of greatest excitement and demonstration, and without a dissenting vote, the resolutions were adopted and ordered immediately dispatched to Washington.

The resolutions are as follows:

Whereas, the Mormon hierarchy claims the right and authority to make constitutions, presidents and kings, also asserts that there is no lawful or authorized government but the government of the Mormon priesthood; and,

Whereas, its teachers claiming inspiration, declare that the government of the United States, and all other governments, must be uprooted; and,

Whereas, Reed Smoot, claiming to be an apostle of Jesus Christ, with all authority is living in harmony with this teaching, and in harmony with prophet, seer and revelator, Joseph F. Smith and other apostles, and who have sworn that they were violating the law of God and of the state of Utah, and,

Whereas, these violators of the law are a treasonable organization; therefore,

Resolved, that as citizens of this government, we earnestly petition the senate of the United States to declare his seat vacant, and thus help remove this treasonable menace to our free institutions.

Resolved, that we urge all of our ministers to inform themselves of the treasonable teachings of the Mormon hierarchy in reference to civil governments and citizen rights.

Resolved, that a copy of this action of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, in session at Des Moines, Iowa, be transmitted to the senate and to the president of the United States.

GREAT ATHLETIC MEET AT BOSTON

Eight Hundred Students to Compete in the Harvard Stadium.

Boston, May 25.—What is expected to prove the largest athletic meet ever held in this country will begin this afternoon in the Stadium at Harvard, with the trial events in the thirtieth annual championship games of the Intercollegiate association of amateur athletes of America. Nearly 800 students from almost all the universities and colleges in the East will compete in the thirteen events which constitute the meeting. The finals will be held tomorrow.

Speculation as to what institution would this year carry off the honor occupied the time of the most of the contestants today as they gathered in the corridors of many of the hotels. That the chances of Pennsylvania, Cornell, Harvard and Yale were better than any of the other colleges, seemed to be generally acknowledged.

The varsity rowing crews of Harvard and Cornell will meet for a second time this afternoon on the Charles river. Preceding the chief event there will be a race between the crews of the Cascadillac school of Ithaca and the Stone school of this city, and a single scull race for the Carroll cup.

The coachers of both varsity crews reported this morning that their men were in good condition and confident of victory.

NO TROUBLE AT PLUM RUN MINE

Non-Union Men Enter Pits Before Strikers Are Astir.

Smithfield, Ohio, May 25.—Work at the Plum Run mine was resumed this morning without mishap. The non-union men entered the pits early before the strikers were astir. A squad of thirty or so new miners and an equal number of guards were put to work. The force of guards will be rapidly increased and it is announced that the full working force of the mine will be recruited as rapidly as possible among non-union men.

DEMURRER SUSTAINED

One Alleged Rate Rebater Discharged by the Court.

Judge Holds Evidence Against Crosby Not Sufficient.

Kansas City, May 25.—Judge Smith McPherson, in the United States district court here, this morning, sustained the demurrer to the indictment against George H. Crosby, former freight traffic manager of the Burlington road, charged with alleged conspiracy to grant rebates on freight shipments from the East to Missouri points. Judge McPherson sustained the claim that the government, in the present trial, had failed to present sufficient evidence to show a conspiracy, and discharged the defendant.

The cases against Crosby, Thomas and Taggart were combined for convenience. The case against Crosby is distinct from that against the Burlington railway which is charged with granting rebates to packers on freight rates. A demurrer to this indictment was denied by Judge McPherson here on May 22 and the trial of the Burlington was set for May 31 in Kansas City.

MUCH SUFFERING AMONG REFUGEES

Cold Weather and Very Heavy Rain at San Francisco.

San Francisco, May 25.—A heavy rain and wind storm, which began last night at 5 o'clock, continued throughout the night. It caused much suffering among the thousands of refugees living in tents and improvised shelters in the public parks, Presidio and vacant lots. The majority of these unfortunates are provided with good tents, but hundreds are poorly protected against the inclement weather. In addition to the rain and wind the night was very cold.

MAKES ITS DECISION

Water Board Will Install Electric Pump at Lakewood.

Sliding Scale Provided for Cost of Water Pumped.

The board of water and light commissioners decided yesterday to install an electric pump at the Lakewood station and pump water by electric instead of steam power. The bid of the General Electric company for furnishing and installing an electrically driven pump at a cost of $16,000 was accepted and the contract will be carried out as soon as the money can be had from the sale of the bonds.

The consideration of steam pumps as against electric pumps was very careful. The report of the expert engineer was examined and the commissioners considered that the electric pump will be the most economical.

President C. A. Duncan and Alexander McDougall of the Great Northern Power company held a consultation with the commissioners and offered a rate based on the number of million of gallons pumped rather than the voltage consumed and this proposition was considered very advantageous for the city.

Under the terms agreed to for electric power the Great Northern Power company will be paid $6.50 for every million gallons of water pumped, up to and including 6,000,000 gallons a day. If the daily consumption is over 6,000,000 gallons and less than 7,000,000 gallons the city will pay a rate of $6.40 per million gallons. With a daily consumption between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 gallons the rate will be $6.30 per million. The rate will decrease 10 cents for each million gallons consumed up to 15,000,000 gallons daily. At those figures a stationary rate of $5.50 will be maintained.

In order to get the water and gas mains extended to the amusement park grounds on Minnesota Point without further delay, the Interstate Traction company offered to advance $1,000 to cover the cost of the extension with the understanding that the money be paid back when available from the bond sale. The offer was accepted by the board and the mains will be extended at once.

At the request of the property owners along Greysolon street, which is about to be paved, the board has decided to lay a main on the south side of the street where the thoroughfare is parked, and to install the crosslines in the street at once. This will be done to prevent the tearing up of the pavement later on.

Sang & Preston have been awarded the contract for the foundation of the new gasholder on their bid of $4,301.50. McLeod & Smith bid $5,032 and L. D. Campbell bid $5,895.

REGRETS HIS HASTY DEED

John Stewart Who Shot His Wife, is Now in Jail.

John Stewart, who shot and dangerously wounded his wife at Eveleth, Tuesday evening, was brought to Duluth yesterday afternoon and placed in the county jail to await the action of the grand jury, next September. The charge against him will depend on the outcome of the shooting. If Mrs. Stewart dies he will probably be charged with murder in one of the two degrees. If she survives, the charge is likely to be assault in the first degree.

Since he was brought to the county jail Stewart expressed sorrow for his deed, and stated that he is willing to be punished. Beyond that he will say nothing, acting under the advice of his attorney, John H. Norton.

Mrs. Stewart is still in the More hospital, at Eveleth, with three bullet wounds in her shoulder and face. When she recovered consciousness, after the shooting, she is said to have begged the officers not to prosecute Stewart, and even asked to see him before he was brought to Duluth. Her request to see her suhband was denied.

Back of the shooting affray is said to have been a quarrel between the husband and wife, some three months ago, when Mrs. Stewart came to Duluth. Three weeks ago she returned to Eveleth and became a waitress in a hotel. Last Sunday evening they met and went to church together, and the breach was apparently healed. Stewart is claimed to have become jealous, and, after meeting his wife again Tuesday evening, he induced her to go to his room. Another quarrel is said to have followed, during which Stewart shot his wife three times. When arrested by the police, a few minutes after the shots were fired, Stewart was standing over her body with his revolver in his hand. He made no resistance.

It is understod that Stewart has a brother in Michigan, from whom he expects financial assistance in defending himself at the trial.

MOB WANTED TO KILL MOTORMAN

Father Saves Man Who Caused Death of His Child.

New York, May 25.—Led by the mother of John McCormack, 5 years old, a mob overturned a Brooklyn trolley car which had run over and killed the child, and was about to murder the motorman when the boy's father, a teamster, arrived. A year ago the teamster's wagon ran over and killed a child, and the man, moved by the memory of his own agony of regret, went to the rescue of the motorman and saved him from violent death.

In front of their home at 681 Bergen street, the boy and his sisters, Mary, Elizabeth and Josephine, whose ages ranged from 6 to 10 years, were playing at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening, waiting for their father. As his wagon was seen to turn a corner two blocks away, they began to shout, "Here comes father," and ran toward it.

Through Bergen street came a trolley car, in charge of Reuben M. Rowley, motorman. Little John McCormack ran directly in front of the car, and before Rowley could check its speed the boy had been struck and ground to death.

The boys mother ran from her home and in an instant she was plucking at the boy's clothing and begging the spectators to overturn the car and rescue the child. Soon she was surrounded by a crowd of muscular stevedores and porters, who turned the car on its side. Turning from her mangled boy, Mrs. McCormack dashed at Rowley, who stood white-faced and trembling, and the big men, infuriated by Mrs. McCormack's cries, rushed upon their intended victim. Policeman Meegan had gone to summon the reserves and Rowley was very close to death.

McCormack, the child's father, rushed through the crowd and stood in front of Rowley. All of the ringleaders knew him and stopped in amazement. McCormack was very pale and his voice shook as he began to speak.

"Men," he said, "don't hurt this man. He may feel as sorry as you do, I know. I ran over a boy last summer and he was killed. I would have given anything in the world to save him. I was surrounded by a crowd of Italians, who wanted to take my life. It was not my fault. I don't believe this man wanted to kill my little boy. Let the law take its course."

Then Mrs. McCormack covered her face with her apron and, weeping, walked back to the body of the child. When Dr. Alfred White jumped from an ambulance of St. John's hospital and ran to the dead boy, he found Mrs. McCormack kneeling at his side in prayer. McCormack stood like a man dazed. All around were hundreds of rough men, but everyone had his hat in his hand and stood with bowed head.

SEEKS LOST MAN; FEARS FOUL PLAY

Mystery Surrounds the Disappearance of Olaf O'Strom.

Bemidji, Minn., May 25.—What has become of Olaf O'Storm, a young man who was last seen two years ago headed for this city from Northome?

A cousin, E. D. Rogden of Cokato, Wright county, who was in Bemidji yesterday on a search for his missing relative, believes that he may have been murdered for his money.

He has no other explanation to offer for a disappearance complete, unexpected and mystifying. The man had a roll of over $300 on his person, and after traveling about the northern woods for a spell, he intended to go back home to Fessedon, N. D. But he never went, and no word of him has come to his parents and other relatives and friends since the day he started for Bemidji.

Rogden set out from Cokato several days ago and has traveled the north country over throroughly in his search. At various towns he has found traces of the missing man. At Northome he discovered the people with whom he boarded while there, and he learned that O'Strom and several friends had made trips into the woods experimenting with a new powder to be used in blasting stumps.

He also learned that either in the month of March or June, O'Strom left the northern village with Jay Williams of Little Fork and Frank Lugnaw, residence unknown, and took the train for this city. That is the last heard of him.

O'Storm is described as a Swede of light complexion and medium size, about 30 years old. He was something of a traveler and had visited, within the year before reaching this county, various parts of the United States and Norway and Sweden. But he was a good, clean sort of a fellow, declares his cousin, who did not drink or gamble, and who was of the most inoffensive disposition, never provoking a quarrel or getting into trouble.

He was without family, but has parents living near Fessedon, N. D.

Rogden was unable to find any trace of his man in Bemidji, and left the city thoroughly mystified.

HOW TO GET RICH.

Advice is Given by a Banker at Sioux City.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 25.—"Work like the devil and don't spend a cent," was the recipe for acquiring wealth which was given by Hon. W. T. Stelner, a Sibley banker, at the tenth annual meeting of the Northwest Iowa Association of Bankers, which was held at the Garretson hotel last Wednesday.

Mr. Steiner's address was the principal one on the program. He declared that the recipe which he had just enunciated was the only way to become a financier and the 200 bankers who heard his address nodded a hearty approval.

"Modern methods of advertising as applied by some banks," said he, "place those banks on a level with the yellow journals of the country. They should avoid schemes of all kinds and adhere to the old-fashioned, conservative methods if they hope for permanent success."

ALL DRUGGISTS

MANY AMERICANS GO TO OLD CITY OF NUERNBERG.

Berlin, May 25.—More than 600 Americans have invaded the old city of Nuernberg, in Bavaria, where the centennial exposition was opened by Prince Regent Luitpold, and the hundreds of German visitors who have arrived during the week have found the best apartments taken by the Yankees, who are exceedingly popular because of the reckless way in which they spend their money.

It is just one hundred years since Bavaria was made a kingdom and the free city of Nuernberg became part of that state. During the past century the population of the city has increased from 25,000 to 300,000 inhabitants.

The old part of the city, which is one of the most interesting in all Germany, has been preserved intact, and still attracts a great number of tourists every year, but around it has grown a modern business city which is one of the most prosperous in the country.

The exposition, which is located in a park just outside the city, is one of the most characteristic ever seen in this country, and should be visited by every American traveling on the continent this summer.

EXCITEMENT AT GALESVILLE

One Man Was Drowned and Another Hanged Himself.

Galesville, Wis., May 25.—With two dead bodies lying in the jailroom of the city building, both grim reminders of tragedies, Galesville is in a fever of excitement.

Joseph Quackenbush, 92 years of age, fell from a boat while fishing in Lake Marinuska, in the city limits. Although the water was not more than waist deep, the old man was dead when taken out twenty minutes later.

A boy of 5 years was with him at the time. Persons on shore, hearing the boy's cries, hastened to his aid and saw the body in the clear water about twenty feet from the shore.

While the undertaker was caring for the drowned man, the deady body of Chris Lund was found hanging to a limb of a tree over a bank within a few rods of the city building.

Lund was about 69 years old and had been boarding at one of the hotels for several weeks. He was seen at 8 o'clock yesterday morning walking in High Cliff park. Later his hat and coat were found on the creek bank at the edge of the park. It was thought that he had committed suicide by drowning.

However, it appears that he crossed the footbridge and entered a clump of bushes close to the business section. There he tied a small cord about his neck and secured it to a small limb. The body was almost touching the ground when found, the head alone being held up. No motive is known for the deed.

JOHN L. TALKS OF THE FIGHT

Says Nelson-Herrera Battle Will be a Great One.

Tonight the Nelson-Herrera fight is slated to come off in Los Angeles, and John L. Sullivan naturally is much interested in it.

"It is a hard matter to pick a winner," he says. "I know both of the fighters, and am familiar with their individual style of battle. They are both millers. They fight from gong to gong. Both men possess a punch that carries dope, and the man that lands the punch first is the one that will win. I am almost sure, in predicting that the fight will never go the limit. Nelson is selling favorite in the pools, for the reason that he is the champion. The 'Bat' is a game fighter, and is greatly admired by every follower of the game. He has made a large number of first-class battles, and it is no wonder that his friends stick to him in the battle this evening.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

"Herrera is also the kind of a fighter the American public likes. He is a rugged young Greaser, that knows a great deal about the fistic game, and it would not surprise me if he were to best Nelson this evening. From what I read of the dope always given before the pulling of a contest of this kind, I believe that the majority of fight fans pick Nelson to come out on top.

"I have always had a great deal of admiration for both Nelson and Herrera. When they enter the ring to fight they do business all the time. For such small men they have a terrible punch. The first man to land that punch this evening will walk away with the big end of the money. You remember the time Nelson and Herrera met before, when the Mexican put the Dane down for the count. Well, there was some question at that time as to just whether Nelson was not favored a little in the time. Of course, that battle has been decided once, and I believe rightly, too. As I have said before, I am unable to pick a winner, and no matter which way the fight goes, it will not surprise me."

It took Carl Mattson less than six minutes to dispose of six big strong men last evening in the handicap wrestling matches which are being conducted at the Metropolitan this week. None of the men that went onto the stage were able to make any kind of a showing.

After the matches were finished, Manager Frank Hall said:

"You people in the large audience here this evening can now see the difference between real and fake wrestling. Anyone of these men could just as well go along and make a showing, if Mattson would only permit it; and you would say it was good. The vast differences between trained and scienced wrestlers, and the bull strength that is used in the friendly matches, pulled off on the school and college campus between friends, is clearly shown. I think Mattson has as good a chance to come rapidly to the front in the wrestling game as anyone in the country. We will certainly do all we can to boost him along."

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

METROPOLITAN—John L. Sullivan and company.

JOHN L. SULLIAVN.

So successful has John L. Sullivan's engagement been at the Metropolitan that arrangements have already been completed for having him and his clever entertainers remain over a day, and accordingly, they will give two performances Sunday, one in the afternoon and the other in the evening. The house which greeted John L. and his organization last evening was large, and it is expected that a large number of enthusiasts will be on hand this evening. A number of athletic interpolations add zest to the performances. There will be a matinee tomorrow.

WOMAN SHOOTS RED WING MAN WITH SHOTGUN.

Red Wing, Minn., May 25.—A sensational shooting affair occured Wednesday evening at a resort on an island across the river.

Mrs. Charles Cook fired a shotgun at Fred Chapman, a drayman of this city, and he now lies at St. John's hospital with a chance of recovery if blood poisoning does not set in.

Chapman says he was sitting by the roadside when the woman fired at him, but she says he was trying to set fire to a barn. Chapman's former home was Pine Island.

LIMB WASTED WITH ECZEMA

Obliged to Lie With Limbs Higher Than Head — Suffered Untold Agonies and Could Not Walk — Doctor Said It Was the Worst Case he Ever Saw.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE BY CUTICURA

"I received your letter asking for information about using the Cuticura Remedies. I used them for eczema. The doctor said it was the worst case he ever saw. It was on both limbs, from the knees to the ankles. We tried everything the doctors knew of, but the Cuticura Remedies did the most good. I was obliged to lie with my limbs higher than my head, for the pain was so terrible I could not walk. I suffered untold agonies. One limb wasted away a great deal smaller than the other, there was so much discharge from it. I found the Cuticura Remedies very soothing, and I still keep them in the house. I am very thankful to say that I am cured, and you can publish this statement if you wish. I found the Cuticura Remedies all that you say they are. I hope that you may be spared many years to make the Cuticura Remedies for the benefit of persons suffering from the torture of skin diseases, such as I had. I remain, yours respectfully, Mrs. Golding, Box 8, Ayr, Canada, June 6, 1905."

CURED OF CHAPPED HANDS

"I have used the Cuticura Soap for chapped hands, which I had been troubled with for about three years. I suffered intense pain and itching. I used nearly two cakes of the Cuticura Soap, and my hands were completely cured and have never troubled me since. I also took the Cuticura Resolvent for the blood at the same time. I can recommend the Cuticura Remedies to others suffering the same. Chas. Young, Plattsville, Ontario, Canada, Sept. 29, 1905."

STEWART NOT THE MURDERED MAN

Latter Was Escaped Criminal Who Was Wanted in Montana.

Greenbush, Minn., May 25.—Several facts have come to light in the last few days which make the Wannaska murder mystery a more complicated one. Persons in Canada have notified the authorities of Roseau county that the murdered man was not the cattle buyer, John Stewart, but an escaped Montana jailbird who went by the name of John Stuart, but whose right name is Henry Isacks.

John Stewart was seen last week by T. G. Lanegraf, who recently went to Canada. McKenzie, the man in jail at Roseau charged with the crime, says he knew that Stuart was an escaped criminal upon whose head a reward of $1,000 was offered. He knew of the reward, but decided not to say anything about it till fall, when he would need the money.

McKenzie denied killing Stuart and says that John Stephenson, with whom the two stopped, was with Stuart after he (McKenzie) left. He further says that at the time of the arrest he was waiting for Stuart, who, by an agreement made when they separated last fall, was to meet him now. The officials are hunting for Stephenson, and if he is caught it is expected some startling developments will result.

SELL ASHES TO FARMERS

Dr. Boyer Suggests Commercial Value of Ashes From Incinerator.

Let State Chemist Decide as to Fertilizing Qualities.

Dr. S. H. Boyer of Duluth, is out with a suggestion to the city of Duluth with regard to its new incinerator at the foot of Thirteenth avenue west. He suggests that perhaps the ashes of things consumed at the plant have a commercial value and can be disposed of, with advantage to the city.

The right kind of ashes, he points out, form a good fertilizer and it merely remains to be seen whether or not these are the right kind of ashes. So to find this out, Dr. Boyer suggests that a sample had better be sent to the state chemist and let him decide. After that a commercial value can be fixed on the ashes should they prove to be a good fertilizer.

Dr. Boyer believes these ashes will prove a good fertilizer. He points out that alost everything which is burned in the incinerator is of vegetable quality and such should prove excellent fertilizer material.

"Let's find out about it at any rate," said Dr. Boyer, "and there may be some money in it for the city."

CUT ROCKS NOW

Before New Paving Goes In at Base is Suggested.

The paving of West Superior street, has been stopped because of the rain, of course, but up to that time it was getting along rapidly. The paving is being used for about half a block east of Garfield avenue and in fact almost all of the tar has been laid to the east side of Fifteenth avenue. The finishing of this stretch of tar macadam will close the work on the western end of the job. As soon as it is finished work will be started on the two blocks between Fifteenth and Thirteenth avenues which are to be paved with telford macadam in order to overcome in a measure the grade there. East of that point tar macadam will be laid again as far east as Eighth avenue west.

It has been suggested that if the city is going to do anything with the Point of Rocks in the way of tearing it down and sloping off the face of the cliff in order to preserve safety, it should be done before the paving and thus not have heavy rock tearing up the street. But the paving being less than two blocks away now this will probably be impossible unless the telford macadam be left to the very last.

Big Kirmess to Take Place in Lincoln Park Rink.

A large number of children and adults are in practice these days for the kindness which will be given during the second week in June for the benefit of St. Luke's Episcopal church. Prof. Speedy, who trained those who took part in the Kirmess last week in West Duluth with such great success, says that the material on which he is working at the West end is fully as good as that of West Duluth.

He expects to put on many more elaborate movements than at the Kirmess of West Duluth for the reason that where the Kirmess is to be given, in Lincoln Park Roller rink, greater stage accommodations are available and much more extensive and extraordinary dances, marches, etc., can be carried out.

Lecture Schedules.

Rev. Roderick J. Moony, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church at the West end, and Holy Apostles Episcopal church at West Duluth is getting to be in demand as a lecturer. Next Tuesday evening he will give his noted lecture, "A Tour Through Ireland," at Eveleth, and in the week following will go to Two Harbors to deliver the commencement address there. Besides this, Mr. Mooney will give the commencement oration at Chisholm.

Ascension Day Observed.

Ascension day was observed last evening at Holy Apostles Episcopal church, the full vested choir being in attendance. A regular service, arranged by Mrs. J. D. Morrison, and which has been adopted for Ascension day, was conducted. Rev. Roderick J. Mooney delivered a sermon.

West End Shortrails.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Howe, Jr., and daughter, and J. J. Howe, Sr., all of Minneapolis, are at the Esmond hotel, the guests of Robert Stitt, partner of Mr. Howe, Jr., in the lumber and logging business.

Walter Bickley has quit the employ of the Missabe road, and is night clerk at the Esmond hotel.

The Lady Maccabees were guests of Mrs. Stitt at the Esmond yesterday.

A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davis, of 1542 West Michigan street.

Kenny Whitney of 313 Twenty-fourth avenue west, broke his wrist yesterday while at work in the N. P. yards.

James Preston has returned from Two Harbors.

Goldey Markell of 1804 West Michigan street, fell last Sunday and sprained her ankle. She will be laid up for a couple of weeks.

If you are in need of medicine you need the best, go to the Lion Drug store.

Henry Pfordresher of Chicago, who has been spending a few days here with Joseph A. Miller, has returned home. He said that he finds the city greatly advanced since his last visit here, which was two years ago.

Miss Julia Morley of Detroit, Mich., arrived here yesterday to visit her brothers, who reside at 2018 West Superior street.

The Young Ladies' society of Bethany Lutheran church will give a musical and literary entertainment on the evening of the 31st, at the church. A fine program has been prepared, and Mr. Carlson of Augustana college, Rock Island, will give an address.

Uniform Bank, No. 1,555, Modern Woodmen, West Duluth, will open the dancing season at Lincoln Park auditorium next Tuesday night with a dance. It is expected that the attendance will be large.

Your prescriptions are compounded, true to your doctor's formula at the Lion Drug store.

ASKS FOR DAMAGES.

Emil Harkkainen Sues Cass Mining Company for $10,150.

The personal injury case of Emil Harkkainen against the Cass Mining company is being tried before a jury in Judge Dibell's room. Harkkainen is suing for $10,150 damages for injuries he received while employed in a 60-foot shaft of a mine operated by the company at Biwabik. He claims that a large piece of ore fell from an open pit into the cross-cut of the shaft and bounded against his right leg breaking it above the ankle. Harkkainen alleges that the company was negligent in that it did not provide a safe place for him to work.

The company contends that Harkkainen was aware of the dangers attendant on work in the shaft and that it is in no way liable for inpuries he received.

Theodore Hollister represents Emil Harkkainen and C. S. Wilson represents the Cass Mining company.

ENDLESS CHAIN SYSTEM AGAIN

Religious Crank Frightens Many People With Mysterious Letter.

Another of the endless chain system of letters has reached Duluth this week.

Letters have been received by a number of Duluth people from mysterious sources, warning them to say a certain prayer nine times, and send nine copies of the letter to nine of their friends.

The letter was evidently started by some religious crank, who has played upon the superstitions of the people and in many instances frightened them into complying with his request, by the wild language used in the letter. The letter is condemned by clergymen of all denominations, as being sacrilegious in its tone. It is worded as follows:

"This prayer has been sent by the bishop of Illinois, recommending it to be sent to nine persons. He who will not say his prayer will be afflicted with great misfortune. One person who paid no attention to it met with a bad accident. He who will recite the prayer for nine days and will distribute it to nine persons beginning with the day received and one each day thereafter, will have great joy after nine days. At Jerusalem a voice was heard to say: 'He who will say this prayer will be delivered from all calamity.'"

The prayer, on the reverse side of the letter sheet, is as follows:

"O, Lord, we implore you; O, eternal God, have mercy on us and all mankind. Purify us from all sins by your precious blood and take us to be with you eternally in eternal homes. Amen. Have mercy on all mankind. Pardon an offense and deliver us from all trials by your precious blood. Amen."

WORLD'S FAIR ROMANCE; GOPHER MAN WINS BRIDE.

Cincinnati, May 25.—Mrs. Flora E. Sells, a widow living in Logansport, Ind., has left for Big Lake, Minn., to be married to J. E. Jameson, a wealthy farmer, whom she first saw when she fell into a lagoon at the St. Louis fair.

Mrs. Sells became dizzy while waiting on a pier for an electric launch, and fell into the shallow water. Jameson, also waiting for a launch, leaped into the lagoon and helped her to land.

Then began an acquaintance which was followed by correspondence that will result in a marriage. Jameson has three sons, and Mrs. Sells a daughter.

"RUN, YOU DEVIL!"

He Said to Beautiful Girl After Dousing Her With Acid.

Fostoria, Ohio, May 25.—Emma Donlinger, a 19-year-old girl, with a beautiful face and figure, while walking with a friend, met an unknown man, who grabbed her and threw carbolic acid in her face. Releasing her he said: "Run, you devil, run." She jerked her head to one side, saving her eyes, but the stuff burned one side of her face, neck and chest. She is prostrated.

ADRIFT ON THE OCEAN

Derelicts of the Deep Cruise for Thousands of Miles.

Hundreds of Them in North Atlantic Imperil Ocean Liners.

St. Johns, N. F., May 24.—The quest by British warships and the Newfaundland sealer Adventure for the derelict freighter Dunmore, adrift in the ocean shipping track since January, emphasizes the necessity for some concerted measures by the great marine powers for ridding the North Atlantic of these dangers to traffic.

When we recall how the Elbe was sunk in collision with the collier Crathie after leaving Southampton on a snowy winter morning in January, 1895 and when we remember how the Bourgogne went down after striking the bark Cromartyshire on the Grand banks in a summer fog in 1898, it requires little effrt of the imagination to conceive of similar, if not worse, disasters due to derelicts which roam at will over the waters of the Western ocean.

It is not unreasonable to conclude that through such a cause the Naronoc vanished in February, 1893, with twenty-two souls; the Georgia passed from human ken in March, 1897, with fifty-four; the Huronian was blotted off the ocean in February, 1903, with forty-nine, or that a score of tramp freighters were sent to the bottom in the past fifteen years.

Special interest attaches to the Dunmore because hers is one of the comparatively rare instances where a metal derelict has remained above water any length of time after being abandoned, and because, moreover, she lies in the liner track and is thereby a more serious danger to trans-Atlantic shipping than any other tenantless shell of modern times. Usually when a steel or iron craft is abandoned she is on the point of sinking. The Dunmore left Cardiff on Dec. 20 for Newport News, was buffeted by tempests the whole way, had her shaft broken and her hull so strained that the leaks threatened speedy submersion. Her crew was taken off and she was left adrift, remaining above water for three months, being sighted by more than twenty passing steamers thus far.

The complaints of owners of other ships spurred the British admiralty to action and they ordered the Adventure sent out from this port on a similar quest, to tow her to port. The Adventure failed to locate her, not possessing wireless telegraphy, and therefore being unable to learn where the wreck wast last seen, and the two cruisers scoured the ocean for a long while in the endeavor to bring her aimless voyage to an end.

The most common derelicts are lumber-carrying vessels of wooden build and moderate size which meet bad weather, become dismasted, and having no steam power, are helpless waifs in the Atlantic fairway, sometimes drifting about for months, if not for years, because their buoyant cargoes will not let them sink.

One of these, the Alma Cummings, an American schooner from Boston, made a record voyage of fifty-four days, during which she covered 5,000 miles, and was sighted over fifty times. She was caught in a blizzard off Cape May in February, 1896, and her masts and rigging were carried overboard, the jagged stumps of the spars battering her sides apart. The seas swept everything overboard, flooded her hull and cabin, drenched her foodstuffs with brine and formed a coating over the deck three feet thick. The wretched crew, the matches being all soaked, could not make a fire to warm themselves until they fired a rifle into a can of kerosene oil that set the hull on fire, and the blaze attracted the steamer Queenemore, which rescued the crew, the idea being that she would burn so that the seas would easily tear her apart.

But the wood of the cargo was too wet, the fire failed, and she started on her long voyage around the Atlantic. At various times she was seen, till she nearly reached England; then she drove south past the French coast; next she was sighted off the Azores; later she appeared near the equator and, finally, after eighteen months, she drifted ashore at San Blas island, near Colon, Panama isthmus. During her amazing cruise at least six ships tried to set fire to her, but without avail, and though she was burned to the water's edge, she remained afloat.

A derelict lumber carrier with an almost equally curious record was the Fannie Wolston, which was afloat for 1,047 days and covered more than 9,000 miles, but her voyage, while apparently much longer than that of the Cummings, was really not so, because she spent much of her time crossing and recrossing her own tracks, moving around in circles about 200 miles off the Atlantic coast, being sighted by no fewer than forty-six ships during her aimless wanderings.

Her range was from off the Delaware capes south to the lonely Sargossa sea, her swinging around this circle occupying about two years. She then went back and forth through this ghostly region, and next started north for Florida, off which coast she was sighted twenty-three times by other vessels. She then made two more circles and then went North, being about 600 miles off Cape Cod when last sighted. It is supposed she went down, probably by being struck by another vessel, as she was never seen again.

The Norwegian barge Nirgitta, of Grimstad, while bound from Mobile to Queenstown with pitch pine, was abandoned, with all sails standing, but her bowsprit gone and her hull leaky. On Feb. 17, 1896, her crew were taken off by the British steamer Snowflake near the Irish coast, and for four months she drifted to and fro across the tracks of the Atlantic passenger liners. She was sighted no less than twenty-two times, and the British admiralty sent out a war ship which found her and towed her to land. This process was also adopted by the French admiralty with regard to the British brig Hyaline, which had traveled 3,500 miles and been adrift 411 days, being sighted nineteen times before she got near enough to the coast of France to enable a warship to secure her. She had been several times set on fire, but refused to burn, and was merely a hulk when secured.

These cases refer to craft which are tenantless on the ocean, but there are as many instances on record of waifs which retain their crews. Perhaps the most remarkable of all these was the sky sail clipper T. F. Oakes, the first American iron square rigger ever launched. She enjoys the distinction of being one of the very few vessels ever posted at Lloyd's as missing and subsequently showing up. She left Hongkong on July 4, 1896, for New York, for which voyage her usual time was 120 days. She was out more than 250 days, and, not reinsurable, her agents having given her up as lost, and the relatives of her master, Capt. E. W. Reed, and his wife, who was on board with him, had gone into mourning. Then, on the 260th day, March 22, 1897, she brought up in New York, having been towed in by the oil tank steamer Kasbek, which came upon her 300 miles east of Sandy Hook, the steamer being outward bound from Philadelphia.

In trying to take her in tow, the hawser caught in the steamer's screw and jammed it, rendering her helpless. The Oakes was equally helpless, her crew being stricken down by scurvey, and the two ships barely escaped a collision, there being only a boat's length between them when the wind drove them apart. The steamer was helpless for eight hours, during which period the Oakes was driven out of sight by a storm. The Kasbek's engineer had to force out her shaft by means of wooden plugs. The hawser was worked clear of the propeller and then the steamer started off in quest of the Oakes, sighting her again some hours later in a worse storm, which lasted for two days, during which time it was impossible to send a boat to her, but the steamer lay by her till the weather abated and then took the effective steps to succor the crew and get the craft under control.

It was found that everybody on board the Oakes was afflicted with scurvey, of which five seamen had died, save the captain's wife, upon whom, through sheer pressure of necessity, much of the labor of working the ship fell. The second and third mates were unable to go aloft. The Chinese steward was also uncapable of sailor tasks. Twelve seamen lay in their berths helpless. The captain had been stricken with paralysis. In the China sea two typhoons drove the ship out of her course, and, though intending to round Cape of Good Hope, she had to make for Cape Horn.

Another remarkable case was that of the steamer Perthshire, off the Australian coast in 1899, which drifted about for forty-five days helplessly, covering 1,400 miles before being rescue. On April 26 she left Sydney for Bluff Head, a four days' voyage. On May 26 a schooner put into Sydney reporting that she had sighted the missing steamer two weeks previously, when the Perthshire had been adrift ten days without sighting a sail, her propeller being broken clean off in the tailshaft and her spread of canvas was too limited to give her even steering way.

As she had nearly seventy persons aboard and was drifting north toward some evil reefs, every available craft was sent in quest of her, including two warships. Eventually the steamer Tolune came upon her before daylight on June 13, some 750 miles off her course, the Perthshire being deserted just an hour before the Tolune's captain had determined to abandon the search. A towline was passed and for thirty-six hours the Tolune got her along. Then a heavy sea tore them apart and to get them coupled again rockets, with lines attached, had to be fired from one ship to the other.

Another almost incredible story of a derelict is that of the wooden bark Siddartha, which left Jacksonville on Jan. 16, 1899, lumber laden, for Liverpool, and became disabled in a gale, a heavy sea then drenching her from stem to stern, destroying all the provisions and carrying away the galley. For twenty days her crew of twelve subsisted on raw potatoes. The captain had his forehead laid open and one eye blinded by a blow from a stanchion; the boatswain had an arm broken; the chief mate and two seamen were stricken with serious illness due to their weakened condition, and as day succeeded day without prospect of rescue, despair settled upon all.

Two steamers passed without sighting her, and then the Norwegian bark Verdande came by and took them off. For nearly five months after this the derelict drifted helplessly about the ocean, covering more than 1,800 miles and being reported no fewer than forty-one times. The captain of the steamer Oakmore set her on fire in hope of ridding the seas of such a menace, but the fire failed to destroy her. Ultimately, after a chorus of complaints from steamship captains as to her obstructing the liner track 300 miles off the Irish coast, H. M. S. Melampus was sent out and secured her, towing her into Bantry bay, where she was subsequently used as a coal hulk.

There are more than 120 derelicts logged by the marine officers as being adrift in the North Atlantic at the present time, two thumber laden craft, the Bronson H, and the Mary Manning, being right in the liner track east of the Dunmore. Along the Atlantic seaboard, from the Florida reefs to Cape Race, is a procession of drifting vessels. At times the American navy sends out a gunboat to destroy some especially objectionable or dangerous hulk. The British admiralty doing the same on the other side. But there is no concerted policy for ridding the ocean lanes of them and no general crusade by these two governments.

FOR CONSTIPATION

MAKING OF PERFUMES IS BIG INDUSTRY IN GERMANY.

New York, May 25.—Vice Consul Fuller writes from Hanover that the German perfume industry is now one of the most important and successful in the world, rivaling that of France or England. He describes it in the following letter:

"Some of the biggest factories are in Leipzig, but Berlin, Carlsruhe and Hamburg are important centers of the trade. There has been a vast increase in the last few years in the diversity of essential oils produced from plants, and forty varieties of those plants are employed in the German factories, which use, as well, such products of foreign lands as nutmeg, cinnamon, camphor, balsams, pepper, musk, ambergris, etc. The production of the essential oil is expensive, ranging from about $27 per pound downward, according to the scarcity of the oil in the plant. With fresh flowers the distillation takes place as near the place of picking as possible, as the fresher the products the better. The stills contain about 3,209 pounds of flowers and the necessary amount of water. Great care is taken as to the amount of heat supplied and to its regularity, the process being thoroughly controlled, an excellent product resulting.

"In the 'fat' process the flowers are carefully sorted and the chlorophyll glands broken. They are then stirred gently for some hours that they may become thoroughly saturated with the slightly warmed fat with which the flowers have been placed. The fat and flower mixture is then separated in centrifugal machines, so that the fat may be used again with fresh flowers till it is thoroughly saturated with the perfume. Then a layer of cold fat is placed on glass plates and covered with flowers; many of these are stacked together in crates and left for about thirty days, during which the flowers are changed every day. After the thirty days the fat is cut into strings and placed on wire-web frames, which are placed alternately with metal sheets covered with flowers in a press, where they are subjected to a single current of air. In this way the utmost amount of perfume element is obtained, but the operations require careful attention, for there should be no trace of any herby scent.

"The essential oils are packed in round iron containers, which are coated with zinc inside and very securely closed. For liquids only the best sort of alcohol is used, and never that obtained from potatoes or corn, etc. For the cheaper class of scent the dilution is often made with vinegar and water, as it is cheap and the scent lasts a long time. Artificial perfumes are made much more easily now than formerly, and can be sucured ready for use with a little admixture to add to their durability. Formerly this was an expensive process, necessitating the lixiviated extract from the French fat being mixed with etheral oils, etc."

THE CHILDREN'S WELFARE,

Comfort and appearance has been one of our chief interests this season—and we've made elaborate and painstaking preparation to care for their every need. For tomorrow we've some splendid news for children—and their mothers. First:

DAINTY WHITE DRESSES

Already made up in the very prettiest and dressiest effects the proudest mother can wish. Saving all the worry and work of selecting, designing and making the dress. A visit here, an inspection and "presto"—the little lady comes forth fresh, clean and stylish in a dress of lawn, linen or pique; possibly plainly tailored, or perhaps one of the elaborate effects with lace and embroidery trimmings and panelings. And the price is easily settled for the range is from $2.00 up to $15.00.

Take this one at $1.25—A beautiful little dress with a Bertha, lace and embroidery trimmed, with a yoke of pin tuck clusters, and very pretty pleated skirt and waist. This for girls of 6 to 14—at $1.25.

SMART DRESSES FOR YOUNGER TOTS.

4 to 6 years—Dresses of white lawns, fancy ginghams, madras, in French and Russian styles, with tuckings and pleatings, embroidered designs and insertions. Almost any price the mother wants to pay for the prices are 98c, $1.25, $1.49 and up.

4 years and less—and this includes the little babe of—say, 6 months, and every age between—long and short dresses of nainsook, little French dresses, tucked hemstitched, French knots, or feather-stitching. Now note the prices—49c, 59c, 75c, 98c and up.

COLORED DRESSES FOR PLAY

And most of them dressy enough for school and outing—for they're the finest of little regulation sailors, suspender, Russian, Buster Brown and surplice models. Ginghams, percales, madras, cheviots and natural linens and showing every new style and trimming detail, at prices from 75c up to $5.00.

"IN TIME OF PEACE PREPARE FOR WAR."

A good sentiment there to govern your decision about a raincoat—one that can be worn in rain or shine. So whether it rains or shines, see these.

RAINCOATS AT $14.98.

One is a plainly tailored collarless, loose coat, the other a semi-fitted style with wide pleats running over the shoulder—both are belted and have finely tailored cuffs and button trimmings. All sizes in either tan or gray—$14.98.

HINTS ON COATS.

Children's Coats—All styles, plain colors or mixtures, $2.98 up.

Misses' and Ladies' Coats of fancy mixtures—either long or short—swellest effects—$5.98 to $18.00.

THE "EVER-READY" SAFETY, 89c.

You'll see it advertised in all magazines at $1.00. It's the American Safety Razor Co.'s leader, with 7 blades—"one for every day in the week," always ready—no honing, no stropping—neatly boxed, 89c.

GET INTO THE GAME?

Are you catching any fish? Well, get hold of some good tackle—we have it—and get after some of those big 4 and 5-pounders that are being landed.

We have the finest line of rods—Orvis, DeVine and Varney, "Bristol," "Rainbow," etc., Shakespeare reels, and all the other finest makes. Then there are baits of all kinds, baskets, pails, tackle boxes, nets, repair kits, fly and bait books, hooks, sinkers, boots, etc., etc.—everything a fisherman needs.

Note: Have you bid for that $15.00 bass rod or the $25.00 fly rod. They're free to him who makes the biggest catch—bass and trout respectively. We've registered a trout weighing over 5 pounds. Bring in your catch.

WARNER'S RUST PROOF 252.

The hose supporters, as attached to the front and sides of the corset, assist in drawing it down on the figure and perform a service that the separate hose supporters do not, as the supporters are placed on the model by the designer for creating the most effective figure results.

It is made of Batiste, of fine French quality, firm and resisting wear, boned with guaranteed Rust-Proof Boning. White 18 to 30 inches.

Price $2.00 per pair.

GAMES TODAY.

Duluth at Winnipeg.

Lake Linden at Hancock.
Houghton at Calumet.

Winnipeg, Man., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Winnipeg and Duluth teams broke even in the Victoria day double-header played here yesterday.

The Maroons scored a shutout in the morning by the score of 7 to 0, while in the afternoon Duluth won by the score of 5 to 3.

Ferguson started in to pitch in the morning, but was driven to the bench in the second inning. Treadway, who took his place, lasted until the seventh, when the Maroons began to find him. Wilson had the White Sox at his mercy all through the game, and Krick and Barto were the only men who found him at all.

The visitors played a very ragged game in the field, the work of Adams being especially poor. The score:

Batteries—Wilson and Voss; Ferguson, Treadway and Adams.

Before a record breaking crowd, Duluth took the afternoon game, by bunching hits on Bond in the fifth inning. The Winnipeg twirler's curves were pounded to the fence, and four runs were scored before he got control of the situation.

Ferguson, who had been forced out of the box in the morning, got his revenge. He pitched superb ball, and had it not been for the miserable support accorded him, would have shut the home team out. He allowed but four scattered hits, and most of these came after the side should have been retired.

The two games were witnessed by more than 7,000 people.

Hancock's First Winning.

Hancock, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hancock broke the chain of bad luck that has followed it and yesterday won from Lake Linden. It was Hancock's first victory of the year and was made in a drizzling rain that made ball playing difficult but not quite impossible. Heavy hitting at the right times won for the Hancock team. The score:

Hancock	0 3 0 0 0 3 0 0 0—6	8	3
Lake Linden	0 0 1 0 0 3 0 0 0—4	8	3

NELSON THE FAVORITE.

Odds of 10 to 7 Being Offered on the Dane.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 25.—Battling Nelson, lightweight champion, and Aurelio Herrera, will meet in a twenty-round contest this evening for a purse of $20,000. They have finished their training and will work only enough to keep at the required weight until weighing-in time, this evening. The conditions of the match call for 131 pounds at six o'clock Friday evening. Both pugilists are at or below this weight today. They are fit as two athletes can be and a hard battle is anticipated.

There is much interest in the fight and the advance sale shows a very large surplus exceeding $20,000. There is heavy betting on the fight, Nelson ruling the favorite at 10 to 7, but with much Herrera money in evidence at these figures.

SASKATOON LOSES FIGHT.

Saskatchewan Legislators Vote to Keep Capital at Regina.

Regina, Sask., May 25.—Notwithstanding the extraordinary caucus vote of Tuesday the Saskatchewan legislature decided almost unanimously in favor of Regina for the capital of the province.

The result, though not altogether unexpected, was a profound surprise as the vote was expected to be close.

After an hour's discussion on the resolution brought down recommending Saskatoon as the proper location for the permanent capital, the legislature decided by a vote of 21 to 2 that Regina remain the capital, and an order in council to that effect will be issued immediately.

At the evening session a bill appropriating $150,000 for the purchase of a site, and the preparation of plans and the commencement of work on new parliament buildings here was introduced.

Batteries—Holstetter and Grady; Lush and Doolin. Umpire—Emslie.

NEW YORK, 6; CHICAGO, 5.

Chicago, Ill., May 25.—New York ousted the locals from first place in the National league yesterday. The visitors were outbatted but had all the luck, Mathewson quit after two runs had been scored in the third. Score:

Chicago	0 0 2 0 3 0 0 0 0—5	11	2
New York	0 5 0 0 0 0 0 1 0—6	8	2

PITTSBURG, 6; BOSTON, 5.

Pittsburg, May 25.—In the second inning Brain hit into the bleachers for a home run, scoring Boston's first tally for the week. Pittsburg won the game in the seventh when four runs were scored and Pfeiffer was taken out. Phillippe was taken out after the fifth inning. Karger finished the game. Score:

SHIPS STILL MAKE RAIDS

For Slaves in the Island of the South Sea.

Natives Are Stolen for the Plantations in Samoa.

Seattle, Wash., May 25.—Capt. F. Wagner, formerly of the big four-masted bark Schiefbeck, but now second mate on the British ship Claverdon, lying at the Oriental dock, was for fourteen months (from 1903 to early last spring) the central figure in the notorious "blackbird" schooner Samoa, and captured 1,200 blacks for use as slaves on the big copra plantations in Samoa. The captain speaks freely of his experience, and tells some exciting tales of what took place during the time he was a "blackbirder." On many occasions pitched battles were fought with the natives, and men on both sides were killed. He was also on the island of New Ireland, in the Solomon group, shortly after the ten missionaries were killed, about two years ago, and fought a fierce and bloody engagement with the savages only ten miles from the spot on which five women and five men were butchered.

Capt. Wagner is a German by birth, but speaks English fluently, also French, Spanish and several other continental languages, besides a number of South sea dialects.

Speaking of his experiences recently, Capt. Wagner said:

"It is generally supposed that slavery no longer exists. That is a mistake. For fourteen months I was first officer on the slave ship Samoa. During that time we captured 1,200 blacks for the South sea plantations. The Samoa is a three-masted auxiliary schooner, owned by the Handles Traffic & Plantation Company of Samoa. This firm is one of the oldest and largest planters in the South seas. They export thousands of pounds of crops every year.

"I went down there in 1903. The first mate of the Samoa was then suffering from a spear wound, got in a battle with the natives, so Capt. Habernick engaged me. We were supposed to be nothing but a small trading schooner. But the government officials know what we were as well as we knew ourselves. When they came on board we would fill them up on champagne and good cigars, and they were satisfied.

"On the first voyage we made for New Britain, in the Solomon group. The schooner was manned by five whites and nineteen blacks, making a total of twenty-four, all told. When we reached New Britain I took the nineteen blacks ashore, and made for the first village we saw. All my boys were armed with the regulation German navy rifle, and could shoot well. At the first village they saw us coming, and the entire population fled to the woods. But we managed to get one woman.

"In some of the villages we would get two or three, never more than four. They are too hard to hold. Occasionally we managed to get one to come with us willingly, but that was seldom. Sometimes we would take a chest of gaudy trinkets ashore and set it down in the village. The savages, attracted by the bright things, would gather around and start helping themselves. That was our opportunity. We would make a rush and grab two or three and then go on to the next village.

"We were to make the round trip in four months. During that time we had to get 200 natives. We got no wages. We were paid by the head. Capt. Habernick got $5 apiece for each native and I, as chief mate, got $1 a head. Everything else was furnished. Clothing, provisions of the best kind, liquor by the case and keg, and everything else. We had plenty of champagne aboard, but that was kept exclusively for the government officials.

"On the first trip which I made we collected the 200 natives without any serious battles. All the Solomon islands were visited. We touched at New Hanover, New Ireland, New Britain and several of the others. The work was easy. The natives were comparatively mild. They were only armed with bows and arrows and spears, and could do little damage to us with our repeating rifles. They are a small, ugly looking lot of people. Although finely formed, they lack the splendid physique of the Samoan natives. Neither are they so brave nor so intelligent. The Samoan natives are a race that have made themselves respected while the Solomon islanders are nothing more nor less than cannibals.

"The natives that we captured were taken to the plantation at Samoa, where they were put to work gathering copra. They are supposed to be hired for a term of three years. They are paid 6 shillings, or, in American money, $1.50 a month, but they have to take it out in trade. The government knows what is going on; the officers know everything about the methods used in obtaining the natives, but they wink at it.

"On the next two trips we had several pitched battles. The natives fought like demons, and we had hard work getting out of a couple of villages. But we got our blacks. When we reached Samoa, after the third round trip, we learned that the missionaries—five women and five men—had been massacred on New Ireland. I went to the scene of the murder on a German gunboat. We went to the house it had been there many times before, and I examined the place. The house itself was a small log affair with a heavy two-inch door. This door had been battered in and bore the marks of the clubs, spears and tomahawks of the savages.

It must have taken some time to batter in this heavy door and I can imagine the feelings of the women as they listened to the frenzied cries of the cannibals outside. Bits of women's apparel littered the place, long strands of hair clung to knives and hatchets that stuk lay on the floor, where they had been dropped, and everything had been chopped and smashed in a blind fury. It was a scene such as never in my life have I seen. It inflamed the blood of all who saw it, and when the large guns on board the ship were trained on the first village and carried death and dismay to the islanders no one on board felt a shred of pity. Several villages were bombarded and men, women and children were shot down for a lesson. I had nothing to do with this promiscuous killing. I was merely a spectator, but I felt no pity for the blacks. They needed a good lesson.

"On returning to my vessel we laid in a new supply of ammunition and started out. All went well till we got to New Ireland. This was the same island on which the massacre had taken place. I took my boys ashore and went after some of the natives as usual. We got three, but had to chase them quite a way inland. The boats were supposed to pull out in the stream as soon as we landed, and then they were to lie by until we appeared.

"On going back to the beach with our capture we came to a small knoll fairly clear of vegetation. On looking out I saw the boats and saw that they had a danger signal flying. Sending two of my black boys ahead to reconnoitre, I waited. In a moment they came running back, saying that several hundred of the islanders were assembled between us and the boats and were ready to attack us as soon as we appeared. They finally surrounded us.

"So quietly did they do it that before we knew what was up, spears were raining like hail and two of my boys lay dead and several were wounded. The savages were concealed in the grass, perched on the top of palm trees or hidden in the thickets. It was a serious position and required instant action. Telling my boys to follow me I started for the boats. It was only a few yards to the beach, but there we met almost 1000 of the islanders. This checked us. Dropping on our faces we started firing.

"Each of my men had ten cartridges, and they were sent into the crowd. For the most part the shots went wild, but many told. Man after man bit the dust, but the savages fought with the courage of desperation. I had only one cartridge left in my revolver, when suddenly I heard a slight noise behind me. Turning I saw a great savage—he was one of the chiefs—with upraised club. It was the work of a moment to throw up my arm and take the blow that way. Then I shot him dead. It was merely self-defense.

"My men were badly demoralized, but as long as I was there to cheer them they kept on fighting. When all the cartridges were gone they seized the spears which had been thrown and returned them. They were better able to handle the spears than the guns, and soon had the native retreating sufficiently to enable us to make a rush for the boats. On the dash down the beach one of the men directly in front of me was pierced by a spear. The weapon went right through him and projected fully a foot. But even that did not stop him. In fact, he ran faster after that than before, and it was not until he assisted in shoving off the boat that he realized that a spear was sticking clear through him. He died next afternoon.

"When we made the rush for the boats the captain on the schooner started to fire at the natives, and came near killing us. When pulling away from the shore after we had gained the boats, two more of my men were killed by the spears. But through it all we had kept one of the prisoners. His hands were tied, and I held to the cord. On reaching the schooner I found that I had lost six of my men killed, and all were wounded.

"We had some difficulty in securing the full number of natives that trip, but finally succeeded. When we got to Samoa the government authorities told us their attention had been called to the battle by missionaries, and they would have to do something about it. I was assured that there would be nothing more than a year in jail at the most, and about two-thirds of that would be cut off. If there had not been so many killed there would never have been anything said about it; but, as it was, the matter had to be investigated. I did not care to spend the time in jail, so I left the ship and the islands. I went to Hambzurg, and from there shipped on the Claverdon as second mate.

"The Solomon natives on the plantation are not treated very severely. They are watched carefully and counted every morning to see that none of them has escaped. But it is practically impossible for one of them to get away. The Samoan natives will track them down like bloodhounds, and capture them and restore them to the plantation. After that they have a pretty hard time. Men and women both are taken; in fact, the women are better workers than the men. Although I never had any hand in it, I know that the native women are captured and sold as slaves. While planters and overseers buy them while they are young and pretty, and later sell them for use in the copra work."

CLIMB MOUNT HAUASCARAN

American Woman to Attempt Dangerous Feat in Peru.

New York, May 25.—A daring mountain climbing exploit is planned by Miss Annie S. Peck, the famous woman Alpinist of Providence, R. I., who sailed from here yesterday for Colon. Alone, except for such natives of Peru as she selects for guides, Miss Peck will attempt to climb Mount Hauascaran, said to be the highest peak in the Andes mountains. She will make the climb equipped with scientific instruments with which to determine whether Hauascaran is of greater altitude than Mount Illampu, which has an estimated height of 21,500 feet. In 1904 Miss Peck made an attempt to ascend Hauascaran but did not succeed, and lays the blame of the failure in part to the presence of two male mountain climbers, who formed a portion of her party and refused to proceed all the way to the top. She is planning on the present climb to equip the native guides with Esquimaux clothing, as a protection against excessive cold, for upon reaching a height of 1,900 feet on her first climb the temperature was 20 deg. below zero. Miss Peck has no fears for her own safety or health, she said yesterday, and feels if she had "determination enough to take me up twenty Hauascarans."

She holds the distinction of having made the highest climb on record upon any mountain in the Western hemisphere, when she ascended Mount Sorata, also an Andean peak. This latter mountain is one of a tremendous chain of peaks, which form the backbone of the Andes, and of which Mount Hauascaran is one of the least known and most imposing. In addition to American mountain climbing exploits, Miss Peck has ascended the Matterhorn, the perilous Five Finger peaks in the Tyrol and several other world-famous mountains.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

An earthquake shock was felt at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon at West Weber, four miles west of Ogden, Utah. Buildings were shaken and much excitement prevailed, but there was no damage.

Minister Rockwell has been instructed to join the British and German representatives at Pekin in protest against the assumption by natives of the control of the customs.

Henry G. Goll, former cashier of the First National Bank of Milwaukee, serving a ten years' sentence in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, has been assigned to work in the identification bureau. Frank G. Bigelow, former president of the bank, works in the same department.

The cruiser Chicago, flagship of the Pacific squadron, with Admiral Goodrich on board, arrived at Portland, Or., Tuesday, to participate in the "made in Oregon" exposition.

San Miguel county, Colo., is covered with eighteen inches of snow. The storm which began Wednesday afternoon has spent its effect. A rock-slide 200 feet long came down on the railroad ten miles above Telluride Thursday evening, and it will probably be several days before trains can get through.

Postmaster Robbed.

G. W. Fouts, postmaster at Riverton, Iowa, nearly lost his life and was robbed of all comfort, according to his letter, which says: "For twenty years I had chronic liver complaint, which led to such a severe case of jaundice that even my finger nails turned yellow; when my doctor prescribed Electric Bitters; which cured me and have kept me well for eleven years." Sure cure for Biliousness, Neuralgia, Weakness and all Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bladder derangements. A wonderful Tonic. At all drug stores. 50 cents.

EARTHQUAKE MADE LAKE IN ALBERTA.

Medicine Hat, Alberta, May 25.—Corporal Bottley of the Royal Northwest mounted police, who has been out on patrol duty for several weeks, turned up at Swift Current yesterday with a strange story. On the first night of the San Francisco earthquake, a band of Indians were encamped at Eagle Quill lake, and they report that during the night all were awakened by a violent shock. That there had been a terrific convulsion of nature there could be no doubt, as in the morning it was found that an artesian well had broken in the bottom of the coulee, nearby, and was throwing water fully thirty feet in the air. The coulee rapidly filled, as did the adjoining depression of land, and a fair-sized lake now exists where there was no water before. The new lake is twenty miles south of Swift Current.

DAN RICE'S CHUM FORCED TO ENTER AN ALMSHOUSE.

Keokuk, Iowa, May 25.—"Old Dad" Moon, at one time world famous circus rider, whose fame equaled that of Old Dan Rice, with whom he was associated, and who for twenty years has lived alone here, was taken to the Lee county home last week, where the remainder of his life will be spent in quietude.

Because of his advanced age and because he felt that he would be better cared for, the one-time star of the arena asked that he be removed to the county institution.

Although more than 80 years of age, until recently Moon had worked for the cooperage plant in this city as an expert mechanic. For some months he has been able to work with regularity, but during all that time has made an enviable reputation for himself as a man who never broke a promise or deserted a friend. He has lived by himself in a shanty on Soap creek, above Tenth street.

"It is more than forty years ago," said he, "that I quit the circus business. Dan Rice and myself were chums in the early days, when there were no such things as railroad shows. I used to do a horseback riding stunt with four horses, and my act was so sensational that I was known all over the country as the most daring performer of that day. It was always my ambition to be at the top when it came to equestrian acts.

"One day I met Yankee Robinson. He said that he was working on an act that would put mins in the shade for all time to come. I laughed at him. Told him I was the king of the arena, and that all others were but imitators. Whenever I came on to do my act, all the spectators were spellbound. Next season Robinson made good his threat, and introduced a horse act with a double somersault climax which I knew was anything better than I ever put on. That settled it with me, and I quit the circus business then and there, and have never seen a 'big top' since."

GAZED INTO REVOLVER

C. H. Dunning Awoke to Find Burglar Pointing Gun at Him.

Robber Grabbed Two Coats and Vest and Made Escape.

When C. H. Dunning of 505 East Second street awoke at 5:30 o'clock this morning, he was gazing down the barrel of a large Colt's revolver, which was held menacingly under his nose, by a tplical looking burglar, who had all the distinguishing characteristics of his profession but the mask.

Mr. Dunning took the rude awakening ccolly as possible under the circumstances, and he obeyed the mandate to lay still, while the burglar hastily grabbed two coats and a vest and made his escape from the house. He seemed about as badly frightened as Mr. Dunning, and had evidently been disturbed in his work by the latter's awakening.

The victim of the robbery arose as soon as he could regain his scattered senses, and going to the telephone, notified the police department of the robbery.

He had a good look at the burglar, and was able to give the police an accurate description of the man. The police have a fairly good clue to the man's identity, and they are working on the case today with good hopes of landing their man.

Mr. Dunning is one of the officers of the North Shore Abrasive company.

WARRANTS FOR MILK DEALERS

State Inspector Claims Milk Was Deficient in Butter Fat.

Warrants have been issued for the arrest of five or six local dairymen, on the charge of selling milk that does not come up to the requirements of the state food laws.

Samples of the milk were taken by Harris Bennett, state food inspector, and Inspector Coughlan of St. Paul. The samples were analyzed and showed a percentage of but 2.8 of butter fat, whereas the law requires that there shall be 3.5 per cent.

The warrants will be served this afternoon, and the men will probably have their hearing in the municipal court tomorrow morning.

CONTRACT FOR CEMENT WALKS

City Secures Lower Price Than Was Quoted Last Year.

The cement sidewalk contract for the season of 1906 was let this morning by the board of public works, at a little better figure than was secured last year.

Sang & Preston were the only bidders for the work, quoting a price of fifteen and one-half cents per square foot, and twenty cents for the corners.

The board estimated that there would be about 6,000 square feet of the cement walks laid during the year, and about 2,000 square feet of corners.

The price quoted for the tile walks was fifteen cents a square foot, and twenty cents for the corners.

COURT RELEASES GEO. W. PERKINS

Was Held to Await Action of the Grand Jury.

New York, May 25.—The appellate division of the supreme court today handed down a decision discharging from custody George W. Perkins, whom the supreme court had held to await action of the grand jury on a technical charge of grand larceny in connection with the campaign contribution of the New York Life Insurance company to the Republican national committee.

The proceedings against Mr. Perkins were instituted by District Attorney Jerome, to secure a ruling upon what charge, if any, those who made such contributions may be indicted. A charge was made against Mr. Perkins, who was formerly vice president of the New York Life Insurance company, and his case was immediately taken before Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum on a writ of habeas corpus.

H. H. HELSTEIN & CO.

Now Established in Old Leithead Building, Fifth Avenue West.

The retail dealers of the Northwest will be pleased to hear that H. H. Helstein & Company, manufacturers of gents' furnishings, have resumed business in their commodious new quarters, the old Leithhead building, Fifth avenue west.

Last Saturday fire destroyed the entire stock of the firm at their former location, First avenue west. Their pluck and enterprise is shown by the promptness with which they have met their misfortunes. As an instance of the H. H. Helstein company's standing among the trade may be stated the fact that since the fire, letters of confidence and condolence have been received from business houses throughout the entire Northwest.

The firm desires to state that they are ready to receive orders, as work in the factory will begin immediately

THE WALSH CASE.

Decision on Line of Action by Government to be Made Later.

Washington, May 25.—For two or three days conferences have been in progress between officials of the department of justice and United States District Attorney Morrison of Chicago, in regard to the prosecution of John R. Walsh, the banker of Chicago, who is charged with misappropriating bank funds. Mr. Morrison called at the White House today to see the president. Speaking of the Walsh bank situation, Mr. Morrison said:

"Examiners are still working on the accounts of the bank and three banks are involved. It is a slow and complicated process to work out the details. When the examiners have completed their work and make their report the details will be examined by the department of justice. Not until then will a definite decision be reached as to the line of action to be pursued by the government."

DIES FROM PLAYING BASEBALL.

Norfolk, Va., May 25.—Jesse Robertson, a United States sailor, died at the naval hospital here yesterday from a fractured skull received while playing baseball.

Don't let the baby suffer from eczema, sores or any itching of the skin. Doan's Ointment gives instant relief, cures quickly. Perfectly safe for children. All druggists sell it.

NON-UNION MINERS ARRIVE.

Bridgeport, Ohio, May 25.—A carload of non-union miners arrived at the mines in Jefferson county today. There was no disorder when the men reached the mines.

AMAZED BY CITY SIGHTS

Is Man Who Was Buried Thirty-Five Years in Prison.

Accomplice in Murder Released to Die a Free Citizen.

New York, May 25.—The great doors of Sing Sing prison clanged behind William Kelly, 50 years old, sturdy of shoulders and limbs, black-haired and black-eyed, a strong man in his prime. He was taken before a clerk. The clerk entered his name in a book, and beside it placed a number.

"You are No. 962, Kelly," said the clerk curtly. That was the last time he was to hear his name spoken for thirty-five years. From that instant they addressed him as No. 962. "This way, 962," they called in directing him to the prison barber shop. "That way, 962," came the command when he had to doff his clothes to put on the striped suit. The clerk wrote a cell number opposite his name, and called a keeper.

"Take No. 962 to Cell 314 in the life tier," said the clerk curtly to a keeper, and the gray prison swallowed Kelly. That happened on a day in November, 1871. The clerk that gave him the number (962) has been dead a long time. The judge that sentenced him in Queens county after he had been convicted of being the accomplice of John Devine in the killing, after a night brawl, of Dwight Nostrent, at Syosset, L. I., is long since dead.

The door of Sing Sing swung back one day last week, and a little, old man, stoop-shouldered, leaning heavily on a thick hickory stick, and peering through thick spectacles, stepped beyond the steel doors and stood with wrinkled face lifted with a sudden, eager movement to face the free, sweeping winds that dashed against it—a little old man, who put out trembling, shrunken hands and smiled to feel the dash of raindrops on them.

William Kelly, after thirty-five years' imprisonment, had been pardoned by Governor Higgins. When he opened his faded, old eyes in the morning he did not know that the day was to be different from any other day he had seen for so many, many years. There was the hospital ward in which he had been for three years and a half. Just beyond the door was the corridor of the life house, in which his cell had been for thirty-two years. Not far beyond that corridor was the brush shop where he had sat on a bench working monotonously, and endlessly weavening and fastening bristles on handles for more than three times ten years.

Outside was the little yard where only the life prisoners walk—the men doomed never to know freedom again in their mortal lives—where they walk between high, gray stone walls, with a patch of sunshine and blue sky over their heads, knowing nothing of the big world beyond, of which they are not more a part than a man in his grave.

Warden Johnson felt very kindly toward the old man. He said he was the best prisoner that ever had been in Sing Sing. In all his three decades of imprisonment he never had a mark against his conduct. Warden Johnson brought the old man to New York—the city where men, brains and hands had reared great buildings, elevated railways, filled the streets with horseless cars and carriages, spanned the rivers with enormous bridges, threaded the earth and the water underground with winding tunnels, since the day that William Kelly, the black-haired sturdy Long Island railroad section boss, convicted of murder, had been locked away in the life house to stay till old age warped and weazened him.

When the train from Sing Sing dashed through the streets bordered by rows on rows of flat-houses, the old man shook his head, saying: "So many people; so many people!"

At the Grand Central station they paused and he looked around, breathing deeply. His eyes glanced upward along the Belmont hotel and then he turned to look at the big Grand Central station, and gazing toward the East raised his voice in an excited cry to see the wing of the Third avenue elevated railway with a train pulling out, up in the air. He shook his head in the absolute wonderment of a surfeit of wonders when he was sitting in a downtown subway express. All the years of hopeless imprisonment had robbed the old man of his power to laugh. He said, smiling quaintly:

"Property's got so valuable now that they're not satisfied with building on the ground, but they go up in the air and under the ground to get the worth of their money."

The old man crossed his hands in his lap, and the electric lights of the train showed his fingers to be dazzling with rings. He had five on each hand—gold bands and gorgeous rhinestones; highly prized trinkets that he wore with pride in the hospital ward. Even a life prisoner has his vanities. He was gallant in his glances toward a handsome, fashionable gowned woman who sat opposite.

"Is she an actress?" he said. "She looks like one I saw forty years ago."

He saw the big skyscrapers and then the Brooklyn bridge. This he was most anxious to see. About the time that he was sent to prison the building of the first big bridge was under contemplation. He rode over it on the way to Brooklyn to his daughter's home.

He sat in trembling wonderment and now and then he wept a little and shaded his eyes with shrunken hands, so queerly adorned by the flashy rings. Whenever he spoke it always was cautiously, as if he were doing a forbidden thing, and once, when he was asked if he ever got a chance to read newspapers while in prison, he nodded his head in assent, but said:

"Sh—sh—the warden might hear us."

The full sense of his freedom that had come so suddenly was not fully in his brain. It was only when on the Brooklyn side of the bridge that he said "Good-bye" to Warden Johnson, and the warden walked away. Staring at the departing prison official, the old man caught his daughter's arm, and said:

"I'm out—I'm out. I never have to go back. He said so."

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Fighting Parson Has Four Crystal Falls Saloon Keepers Arrested.

Menominee—Rev. C. H. Rutledge, the Northern Michigan agent of the Anti-Saloon league, is at Crystal Falls at present. He has just had four saloon keepers arrested for keeping their places open on Sunday and more arrests are to follow.

The town is at a white heat and threats of violence are frequently made. Rutledge is over six fee tand weighs about 250 pounds, and says that he is not afraid of any of them and that he can take care of himself.

Interest in Alaska gold mining is very great in Menominee, the Golden Dawn Mining company of Nome being owned in that city. News has just been received that a great strike has been made within 100 feet of the Golden Dawn claims, three young men having taken out $37,000 in one day, while the ore washes $100 to the bucket. Their claim is estimated to contain over $4,000,000 of the yellow metal. A party of fourteen men will leave this city this week for Nome and others are to follow later. Menominee has over $500,000 in the Nome gold mines.

The heroism of the two Menominee men, Fred Carlstedt and E. J. Hertz, piano agents, saved the town of Iron River from destruction in the recent great fire. Two children playing with matches had set fire to the house of Peter Anderson on the outskirts of the city. The men in passing saw the blaze and in spite of the wind quenched the flames after a heroic fight. The town was untouched by fire.

Sixty Menominee school children unconsciously played a joke on the Northern Pacific railroad.

One pupil discovered that a certain free railroad booklet sent out by the company was useful in his geography work and soon about sixty of his fellows had written and received similar booklets.

The railroad company thought there were scores of prospective immigrants and Western settlers here and sent a special agent to work the territory. He was dumbfounded when he learned the true situation.

Grand Marais—John Gene is dead at Grand Marais, the result of an accident at the Marais Lumber company's mill, in which he was employed as a carriage man. He was struck a terrible blow by the set lever of the carriage as it was suddenly thrown back violently, fracturing one leg above the knee and causing other injuries.

Newberry—John Dolan, a partly demented man, was found lying alongside the tracks in the South Shore yards at Newberry, with his clothes on fire and one leg burned to a crisp from the knee down to the ankle. The men extinguished the fire and notified the officers. Dolan had been about town for several days, but no one seems to know whence he came. The flesh on his leg was burned to the bone and amputation may be necessary to save the limb.

The Michigan Iron company's furnace at Newberry has been shut down within recent days on account of a strike among the employes. The first intimation of any trouble was when the coal forkers, ore handlers, top house fillers and casting house men laid down their tools and made a demand for an increase in wages. Their demands were refused and the men walked out, tying up the furnace. The trouble was expected to be of short duration, Superintendent Johnston making arrangements to bring in a crew of men from the wood camps to fill the places of the strikers.

Manistique—Gilbert Olsen of Schoolcraft county, while plowing a field in which his son was dynamiting stumps, was severely injured by pieces of a stump. He was ten rods from the stump in question and the fragments all went in his direction. He was unable to dodge them all, and was struck on the face, breast and arm. His right arm was broken and the force of the blows on the chest and face were so severe as to render him unconscious for about two hours. He instinctively guarded his face with his arm. Had he not done this, it is believed he would have been killed.

IMMENSE FROG

Caused Queer Noises That Made People Think of Ghosts.

New Orleans, La., May 25.—Mysterious noises have been heard at a house, corner of Toure and Royal streets, for a long time past, until it has been termed the "haunted house."

The owners of houes in that vicinity have received many complaints, and all the families near there have moved out. There have been many attempts to "lay the ghost," but all were unsuccessful, and at last complaint was made to the police.

Several police officers were sent to the house with clubs and lanterns and after several hours' search the cause of the noises were located under the house.

It turned out to be an immense frog, weighing nearly 12 pounds, which had terrorized the people in that vicinity by his deep croakings.

SPELL CAST ON A KENTUCKIAN

His Relatives Allege, by Woman With Different Names.

New York, May 25.—Distant relatives in New York of William N. Watson, a wealthy old man of McLeod's Station, Logan county, Ky., are making a search for him in the supposition that he is being detained here against his will. Jacob N. Banton, a lawyer, has been retained by other relatives in Texas to take legal measures to get possession of the old man, should it be learned that he is in the custody of persons with whom he does not care to remain.

A few days ago Mr. Banton received a letter from A. W. Proctor, a prominent citizen of Grosbeck, Texas, and nephew of Mr. Watson, in which he said that Mr. Watson, who is 90 years old, was taken from the home he loved in New York by a grandniece. Mr. Proctor inclosed a clipping from a Kentucky newspaper, which said that a suit had been entered in Logan county, Ky., to enjoin the sale of any property owned by William N. Watson and the disposition of his valuable securities.

It was also related in the newspaper clipping that the old man, too feeble to care for himself, had been taken away by Mrs. Helen Kockum, known as Mrs. White, and also as Mrs. Browning, who had also taken charge of all his property.

Watson's relatives allege that he is under the woman's spell.

FIREMEN'S TOURNAMENT

Of Upper Peninsula at Houghton From August 22 to 24.

Negaunee, Mich., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Preparations for the twelfth annual tournament of the Upper Peninsula Fremen's association, to be held in Houghton on Aug. 22, 23 and 24, are progressing, and every indication tends to show that the gathering will in many respects outclass all similar tournaments held under the auspices of the upper peninsula organization. Houghton set a pace when it entertained the firemen in 1898, and the citizens of the town, who are with the firemen in the making of arrangements, are giving assurances that this year's event will be even better. It is planned to have a full week of enjoyment. Negotiations are now on for vaudeville and carnival attractions, and there will be plenty of amusement afforded during the six days' duration. The firemen do not assemble until Wednesday, Aug. 22, but there will be thousands of visitors at Houghton the previous Monday, as well as every other day during the week.

Joseph G. Bertrand, the secretary of the Houghton tournament committee, has gone to Chicago and is closing a deal with a big carnival company to come to Houghton for tournament week, and will also engage a number of free street attractions. Accommodations are already being reserved by the various fire companies embraced in the organization, and it is expected visitors from all parts of the upper peninsula will be in attendance.

The following list of towns have signified their intention of entering running teams in the firemen's races. Calumet, Lake Linden, Hancock, Houghton, Bessemer, Painesdale, Ishpeming, Marquette, Negaunee, Escanaba, Ironwood and Baraga. Besides these attractions there will be an illuminated yacht parade on Portage lake which will be a spectacle well worth witnessing.

St. Paul, Minn., & Return $5.75.

May 28 to 31st, inclusive, The North-Western Line will sell Excursion tickets to St. Paul and Minneapolis and return at $5.75. Tickets good for return June 9th. Account Bennial Meeting General Federation Women's Clubs.

City Ticket office, 302 W. Superior St.

Boston and Return $26.00.

Account the American Medical Association convention at Boston, Mass., June 5th to 8th, the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Ry. will have tickets on sale June 2, 3 and 4, to Boston and return, at rate of $26.00. Tickets can be extended for return passage until June 30, 1906. Coronation rail and lake routes available with this excursion. For full particulars and sleeping car accommodation, apply to city ticket office, 430 Spalding hotel block, Duluth, Minn.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed bids will be received by the Board of Education of the City of Duluth, at their office, Central High School Bldg., up to 8 P. M. of Friday, June 1st, 1906, for the heating and ventilating, plumbing and gas-fitting for the Franklin School building located at Fifth Avenue East and Seventh Street, Duluth, Minn., according to plans and specifications prepared by L. A. Larsen, Chief Engineer of Schools.

Each bid must state a separate price for completing the heating and ventilating plant, and for completing the plumbing and gas-piping, and must be accompanied by a certified check for five per cent of the amount bid, said check to be payable to the order of J. J. LeTourneau, Treasurer,, and to be forfeited by the successful bidder in case he fails to enter into contract, and furnish a satisfactory bond in an amount equal to the contract price agreed upon, within five days afterward.

The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

WEST DULUTH

A team belonging to the Virginia Lumber company fell into the bay at the Lesure mill last night but, rather remarkably, were rescued. The driver had left them standing unhitched while he was engaged at something else, and they took fright at something and bolted. They fell into the mill pond, but fortunately fell astride of a boom.

They were kicking frantically, and would probably have soon fallen off into the water, together with the wagon. However, help came quickly, and they were unhitched in time and hoisted to the dock. The wagon was also rescued.

Accidents to Anglers.

Regarding the fishing party in which Fathers Feehely and Walsh, M. J. Fillatrault, G. L. Lynch and W. H. Wells were, further stories are coming out. It seems that for a time great fear was felt over the fate of Father Walsh of Proctor, who utterly disappeared for several hours. He was repeatedly called, but did not answer. The rest of the party became genuinely alarmed, and organized a search. After looking everywhere for some time, they came upon the reverend father about fifty feet above the rapids, sound asleep on the ground, and enjoying himself as much as he would have been were he spending his time fishing. Father Feehely says that Father Walsh might just as well have spent the rest of the day sleeping, for he caught nothing. Father Feehely caught only one pickerel.

Mr. Lynch went away and fished by his lonesome, and caught nothing. Coming back he had to jump out of the boat to wade ashore, and his foot caught in some stones on the bottom of the river, and as a result his heel and sole were left hanging to the uppers of the shoe by only the point of the affair. When he got into town he had to flap up street with Father Feehely a few steps behind, pointing out his kinsman's predicament. Moses Fillatrault and W. H. Wells undertook to get a fine catch in what they considered a good place. In their efforts to cast, Fillatrault fell overboard, tipped the boat and precipitated Wells into the drink. After much spluttering they got out, feeling dippy.

Buys a Farm.

E. J. Zauft of West Duluth has purchased a farm near Barnum, about two miles from the one already owned by H. R. Patterson. Quite a colony of West Duluthians own farms in that vicinity, and all propose working at least portions of them this summer. About a dozen will be making weekly trips to and from Barnum, and it is expected that some fine garden truck at least will be brought in by these men. The farming fever is having a boom in West Duluth.

West Duluth Briefs.

Andrew Miles went to St. Paul this morning.

Under the auspices of West Duluth lodge, No. 145, A. O. U. W., the West Duluth Dramatic club will give in Great Eastern hall on Wednesday evening, the play "David Garrick." It is expected that the affair will be of high character, as the club has some very good talent.

The West Duluth Commercial club will hold another meeting this evening and the road question will likely be brought up for discussion.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Clark of 5711 Huntington street, entertained last evening for the adult members of the recent Kirmess. A most enjoyable evening was spent.

FORTY FEET FROM SHORE.

Stern of Crescent City Has Been Pulled Far Out.

Work on the stranded steamer Crescent City has progressed to such an extent as to permit a fairly probably prediction of its release during the next two weeks. Every day sees the boat nearer deep water.

The stern is now about forty feet out from the shore, where the entire craft was placed high and dry by the big storm of last November. The bow is about ten feet from shore and on sand yet.

The water is shallow at that place and it is necessary to go out quite a distance to get sufficient depth to float a steamer. The workmen at Lakewood wrecking camp have entirely recovered from the stomach trouble which assailed all of them a short time ago.

NO WORK ON MATAAFA.

Cannot be Resumed Until the Weather Shows Some Improvement.

Rough weather kept the tugs of Capt. Reid's wrecking fleet inside the harbor again today. The pumps were kept at work on the Mataafa all the time and have been ever since actual work on the boat was called off on account of the northeaster.

As soon as the weather moderates, pulling on the boat will be resumed and it is expected that she will be released in a short time, despite the obstacles that may have to be overcome.

The Briton Pulled Off.

Marine City, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steel trust steamer Briton was pulled off the sand bar opposite this point at 7:40 o'clock today, after a lot of dredging had been done. The steamer appeared uninjured.

City of Concord Sinks.

Cleveland, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The little steamer City of Concord, laden with coal, went down in twenty feet of water under the breakwater last night. The crew succeeded in getting to the dock without loss of life.

The Duncan Released.

Amherstburg, May 25.—The steamer John Duncan, which was in collision with the steamer Wisconsin, was released at noon yesterday by the tug Brockway after 100 tons of her cargo had been lightered on the Newman. The Duncan was not seriously injured and left at once for Bar Point to reload the lightered cargo.

The Charles Neff Goes Aground.

Detroit, May 25.—The steamer Charles Neff, upbound, with a cargo of railroad iron, ran hard aground on the west bank at the Lime Kiln's crossing late yesterday afternoon through the parting of her wheel chains. The boat is leaking badly. The lighter Newman and tug Brockway have gone to the assistance.

A JOYFUL OCCASION

Commissioners From the Cumberland Conference Visit Assembly.

Greeted by Tumultuous Applause of Long Duration.

Des Moines, May 25.—Church union sentiment reached its highest pitch in the Presbyterian assembly today when a delegation of seventeen commissioners from the Cumberland Presbyterian assembly were received in the assembly of the Northern church, now in session in this city.

As the time set for receiving the visitors arrived, silence fell over the great convention hall, containing the seventy-five commissioners and about 250 visitors. The next instant the air was rent with cheers, as the whole gathering came to its feet, following the appearance of the visiting delegation, at the front doors of the Auditorium.

Half the delegation was led down one aisle and half down the other, by a reception committee of prominent commissioners. The applause that greeted them was deafening. The men climbed into their chairs, women leaned far out over the balconies and box railings and everyone waved a hat or a handkerchief. The applause continued while the visitors were marched to the front of the hall and escorted to the stage, and for five minutes afterward.

The seventeen visitors were drawn up in a crowd, facing the front. Stated Clerk W. H. Roberts announced to the assembly who they were, and introduced them one by one to Moderator Corbett, the Cumberland moderator, Ira Landrith, being first presented. When the moderators of the churches, which were two yesterday and one today, clasped hands exactly in the center, and at the front edge of the stage, the demonstration reached its zenith, commissioners and visitors realizing that actual union had at last come to pass.

As each visitor was formally introduced to Moderator Corbet, he stepped forward, and the two clasped hands, while the great hall swelled with round after round of applause. When the ceremony was concluded there was scarcely a dry eye in the auditorium. The visitors were then presented to the assembly, and each delivered a brief address, expressing joy and gratitude at the consummation of the reunion of the two churches.

THE SAME OLD STORY.

Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania talked on the tariff in congress yesterday, and rehearsed the old, old song he has been so used to singing ever since protection became a word to conjure with when one was going out among the voters hunting votes. In fact Mr. Dalzell's views of the tariff are so well known that nobody needs to read his speeches any more. Like a partisan newspaper that is the organ for special interests, everybody knows just what he is going to say when he announces his intention of touching upon the tariff.

He declared that nobody outside of the Democratic party wants any tariff revision. This is either blindness, stupidity or prevarication, and Mr. Dalzell has never been accused of being blind or stupid. The demand for tariff revision is by no means confined to the Democratic party. In fact, there are rumors from the strongholds of Democracy in the South that the growing manufacturing interests there are casting some doubt upon the ardency of Democratic demands for tariff revision, in some quarters. But in the West and the Middle West, in the Northwest and in the East, there is a rising rumble of popular expression, absolutely nonpartisan, that means nothing more or less than an insistent demand for revision of the tariff that will not be suppressed.

In fact, the Republican party dares not enter upon the coming campaign upon a standpat basis. It will promise revision, as it has promised it in the past, with certain vague promises susceptible of double meanings, but it will not declare that no revision is necessary, as Dalzell and McCleary would have it.

Mr. Dalzell, in accord with the new custom of standpatters, freely admits that some protected goods are sold abroad cheaper than they are at home, and undertakes to defend the practice. Only a little while ago they undertook to deny this, and standpat orators upon the stump and in the halls of congress declared most vehemently that American-made goods were not sold abroad cheaper than they are at home. Now everybody knows that their denials were untrue, so they have abandoned the denial as useless, and now seek to excuse the practice. If they can make the American people think that there is good reason why they should pay more for American goods than Europeans do, they will do well.

And then Mr. Dalzell perorates with an awful picture of smokeless smokestacks, workless workmen and whirlless wheels, which he says will come about if the tariff is revised.

Stuff and nonsense! American mills will run and American workmen will be employed just as fully under real protection as they are under the false protection that exists today. A protection that will foster infant industries, if there are any, and that will protect American labor against the cheaper European labor; a tariff that will cover these two essentials, without putting infamously outragous profits in the pockets of the trusts, will bring more real and abiding prosperity than the present system of oppression under the false guise of protection.

STATE DEVELOPMENT.

For some time the newspapers of Northern Minnesota have been advocating state development with much earnestness, vigor and persistence. This is particularly true of the past year, and in the last few months the cause has spread over the state until newspapers in every part are taking an enlightened interest in the common good, and the early suspicion that state development meant drainage of the state treasury for the benefit of Northern Minnesota has faded away.

And now comes the governorship campaign, and state development has got into politics. This is entirely proper, and since public officials must do the actual work of state development, it had to get into politics to get into the way of accomplishment.

But it is not an unmixed good, by any means. When public business becomes a political issue, there is always danger that it will never be anything else. The tariff has long been a political issue, when it should be purely a business measure to be adjusted, without partisanship or heat, for the best interests of the most people. But the fact that it has been a political issue has been a perpetual bar to its adjustment, and so long as it continues to be in politics it will never be settled.

Let us hope that this fate will not overtake state development. It is now in politics, and citizens who place the good of the commonwealth above the good of their party, whatever or whichever it may be, must watch it closely to see that it does not get so entangled with partisanship that it will be strangled to death. There is that danger unless it is watched. Of course there will be no such division upon it as there apparently is on the tariff between the two great parties. No one party will have a monopoly of the state development plank; neither will any one candidate. All parties and all candidates must, perforce, be staunch advocates of state development.

But there is another point that must not be overlooked, and that is that while candidates for governor, secretary of state, attorney general, etc., may make political capital out of their earnest devotion to the cause of state development, after all it is the senators and representatives that will make up the next lgislature that must really do the work. All a governor can do is to recommend in his message that steps toward state development should be taken, and to use his personal influence to that end.

But the members of the legislature, many of whom are keeping rather quiet on this and other subjects, must do the voting. If they are not firmly pledged to state development there will be none. One strong member ardently and fearlessly active in behalf of state development can do more for it than the entire state ticket.

See that your candidates for senate and house are in line with public thought on this and other matters, and vote for none who will not come out in the open and tell what they stand for.

ABOUT REAL PEOPLE.

Tomorrow The Herald will begin a series of important and interesting features, to be run on each succeeding Saturday for sixteen weeks, entitled "In the Eye of the World." The series is written by Dexter Marshall, and it will include word pictures of men who do things and how they do them, fully illustrated by photographs of men and places.

Tomorrow's subject will be "Who is Samuel Untermeyer?" He is counsel for the International Policyholders' committee, as the writer shows in answering his own question, and he is also dog fancier, chicken fancier, yachtsman and automobilist. He is a modern millionaire lawyer who is concerned as counsel for one side or the other in almost all the great litigations of the day, and is therefore constantly in the news. Yet to most readers he is but a name, and this article will bring them into intimate personal acquaintance with him.

Later the "Rockefeller of Tomorrow" will be discussel, and it will be shown that when John D. Rockefeller shuffles off this mortal coil and the responsibilities of his greatness, a Rockefeller of whom few people have heard will step into his place and power. William G. Rockefeller, a son of William Rockefeller and cousin of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is the man, and he is described as "strong, hard-headed, grasping, competent and 'bound to be a billionaire', as he has often boasted."

The series will be one of the most important The Herald has ever presented, and it will be found to be strong and virile, pulsing with human interest and replete with human nature. There will be interviews with scientists and inventors, giving fresh views on things of worldwide interest and importance; there will be descriptions of the labors and amusements of famous people, giving intimate insights into that portion of their lives that does not come into the daily news; there will be an absorbing story on the sons of great men that have made names for themselves; there will be a thrilling article on "Spendthrifts and Plungers", showing how some famous fortunes have disappeared. In short, there will be for sixteen weeks a kaleidoscopic review of human life of today, brilliantly written and abundantly illustrated.

There will not be a dull article in the list. It will be a notable contribution to the history of today, and The Herald is well pleased to be able to present it to its readers.

SAILING VESSELS.

The other day a new five-masted German barque, the Rickmers, arrived in New York, and it led the New York World to reflect that apparently the kaiser's practical subjects agree with the equally practical Maine Yankees that the sail is not yet played out on the wide sea.

The Yankees, added the World, give their craft a schooner rig for greater ease of handle, distribute the eighth of an acre of canvas over seven or eight masts and employ one-third as many men, "but that is a detail."

To this the New York Commercial says that while it is true in the main, these big schooners are employed in the "wide sea" carrying trade only rarely. "Probably 95 per cent of this tonnage is employed in the coastwise, river and Great Lakes traffic, where the United States government accords it the highest form of protection known—the absolute prohibition of foreign bottoms from this trade," says the Commercial.

The Great Lakes will have to plead not guilty to the share of this traffic in big schooners credited to them. While the lake marine directories classify something like 670 vessels as "sailing vessels", only 175 of these are of more than 500 tons, and most of the rest are small pleasure craft. Of the cargo-carriers classed as sail, none of them are anything like the big seven-masted vessels referred to by the New York papers. Only a few of them depend wholly upon their sails for power, and these are confined to a small carrying traffic on single lakes. Most of the big carriers are absolutely bare of sails, and are simply towed up and down the lakes by steamers. Some of these vessels carry sails and upon occasion, when the wind is fair, help out the steamers by spreading their sails to catch the breeze, but in the aggregate the traffic carried by sail vessels on the Great Lakes is infinitesimal compared with that carried by steamers or by tow-barges that never dreamed of sails.

While sailing vessels, by giving up the room taken by the engines and coal bunkers to cargo capacity, can be made to carry large freights, there is no danger of their crowding out steam vessels, with their quick dispatch and ease of handling. The romance of the sea, as laid down in the story books, passed away in a large measure with the coming of steam vessels, but in cheapened freight rates, quickness of transportation and increase of comfort for passengers, the world was paid a handsome price for its loss in romance.

The romance still exists, between the covers of books penned by Dana, Russell, Maryatt, Bullen and other masters of sea narrative, and that is where it belongs.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"As a general rule a man of average intelligence could do better than accept a civil service appointment at the hands of the government," said R. E. Fogarty of Philadelphia, Pa., at the Spalding. "but there are some civil service jobs that pay well, and offer a comfortable berth to the qualified person. The best are, of course, those for which they are likely to be the fewest applicants.

"Next month, for example, examinations will be held to get a list of eligibles for the position of agriculturist in dry land agriculture. This pays $7,250 a year. The standing of the applicant will be based on education, training and experience in publications which he has prepared, bearing on dry land agriculture, and a statement, not exceeding 2,000 words, of the present problems of dry land culture.

"Applicants must indicate in their applications that they have had practical and experimental experience in the semi-arid or arid belt of the United States. You can see from all this that there are not likely to be many applicants, for, while the salary is good, not many persons would be qualified to do the work.

"Anyone wanting to go to Manila will have a chance to be examined for the place of mechanical superintendent in the bureau of prisons, at $2,500 a year. The standing of the applicant will be based on age, physical condition and experience. The person appointed will be required to take charge of all the mechanical work at the prison in Manila. I have forgotten the name of it. This work will include the direction of large working parties employed at various trades.

Most of the government jobs don't pay enough for a man to bother with them, unless he has none other than clerical ability, in which case he is assured a fairly comfortable living for practically all his life if he gets into the government service. Not many civil service jobs pay as much as the two I have mentioned, considering the large number of men there are in the service."

"There is greater need of a law to regulate railway management than to regulate railway rates," said W. I. Holmes of Indianapolis, Ind., at the St. Louis. "It has always seemed to me that, with the proper management, there would be fewer railroad wrecks on American lines. Something is wrong somewhere.

"Some day, I suppose, railroads will be so arranged that a perfect system of protection will be adopted. About the only way I can see to lessen the number of railroad wrecks is the automatic stopping of the train. As long as signals and the watchfulness of employes are depended upon entirely for safety there will be wrecks. What we want is a device that will automatically stop the train should a signal be disregarded. Such a device is the connecting link between the automatic signal and the automatic air brake, and the adoption of it would prevent much of the slaughter of passengers by the railroads each year. The air brake and block signal system are fine things, but there is plenty of room for improvements in wreck-preventors."

"Nearly every fruit steamer arriving at Eastern ports carries with it from one to three or four stowaways," said T. B. Nathan of New York, at the Lenox. "They secret themselves in the holds of the vessels while the ships are being loaded with bananas.

"As a rule the stoways carry enough provisions to last them twenty-four hours, after which time they make their appearance on deck, and are at once put to work on deck or in the fire room. It is very rarely that any of them land, as they are mostly negroes, inhabitants of the tropics, who are in ignorance of strict immigration laws. They labor under the impression that all that is necessary to get into the United States is to steal on board a boat, hide until it leaves port, and then land when the vessel docks again.

"Every stowaway, practically, is reported to the immigration authorities, and unless they are American citizens they are deported. The stowaway question is a source of much annoyance to the captains, but despite the strict vigilance on their part while they are lying in foreign ports, the unwelcome passengers manage to get aboard safely and hide themselves."

Three members of the Edward Hines Lumber company, Edward Hines of Chicago, president of the concern; Isaac Baker of Chicago, and S. J. Cusson of Ashland, are registered at the Spalding. They are inspecting their interests in this section of the country.

"As the conditions for summer logging were unfavorable, we have closed down all our logging camps at Hines, Wis.," said Mr. Cusson. "We will reopen our Hines camps next winter, for we have a large amount of timber left in Douglas county. I don't know just how long it will be before we finish logging optrations in Northern Wisconsin.

"We originally expected to finish sawing at Ashland this year, but cannot do this, now that we have decided to bring in Ashland some of the timber purchased in Bayfield county in the vicinity of Mason. This is the timber that we acquired with the purchase of the White River Lumber company's plant.

"Our Bigelow mill at Washburn will be closed down this fall and dismantled. We are undecided as to just what we will do with it, but probably will send it to the site of our Southern holdings, where we will be able to use it to good advantage."

The three men returned to Ashland this afternoon.

THE WEATHER.

When the northeaster has been in session at the Head of the Lakes for a week or so, it is time to summon up all the optimism at your command. The northeaster has a faculty of breeding pessimism and of making people look on the dark side of things. They are likely to forget about the "silver lining," and the fact that it positively cannot stay this way always. Cheer up, the worst is yet to come. The weather man says that tonight and tomorrow will be much the same, with a bill of fare of showers, coolness, fog, and northeast winds. Last night's lowest temperature was 40 degs., and yesterday's highest was 44 degs.

A year ago today the northeast wind was blowing, and it was cool, with frosts in the Red River valley, but it was clear and bright and bracing in Duluth. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions today:

"The Colorado disturbance shifted its center to Kansas and Nebraska; the one off the Florida coast remained about stationary; and another has developed off the North Pacific coast, while the barometer remains high north of the Dakotas and Minnesota and off the Virginia coast. These conditions are responsible for continued rains in the Northwest, eastern slopes, Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys, Lake Superior and East Gulf states. Rains also developed in Pacific coast and New England states. Temperatures continue cool in the Northwest and moderately warm in Central, Eastern and Southern states. Indications favor a continuance of strong northeasterly winds, fog, rain and cool temperature in this locality tonight and Saturday."

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, May 25.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Saturday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity—Showers, cool temperature and probably fog tonight and Saturday, with brisk to moderately high northeast winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, May 25.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Saturday: Wisconsin—Showers and thunder storms tonight and Saturday; warmer in southeast portion.

Minnesota and the Dakotas—Rain tonight and Saturday.

Lakes Michigan and Huron—Brisk southerly winds on southern portions, easterly winds on northern portions tonight and Saturday; showers and squalls.

Lake Superior—Fresh to brisk northeast winds, increasing tonight and Saturday; rain.

Can You Afford It?

You can't afford to look as if your hopes had oozed away,
Though failure face you everywhere
you turn;
You can't afford to let the world discover your dismay,
Though others claim the profits that you earn;
You can't afford to go about with dismal mutterings,
Or mourn the wrongs you suffer and the woeful state of things;
You can't afford to show your wounds or try to salve the stings
By tearfully complaining that they burn.

The world has litte sympathy for him who shuffles past,
Proclaiming by his look that he has failed;
The world has small regard for him
whose face is overcast,
And Fortune hates to hear herself assailed.
The world is always ready to believe in him whose air
Is that of one whom victory makes proof against despair;
The world is ever eager to be helpful
if we dare
To seem undaunted where we might have quailed.

You can't afford to sacrifice the watchful world's regard,
No matter how your wounded heart
may ache;
You can't afford to wail because the blows fall thick and hard,
The fates will not be kind for pity's sake.
You can't afford to look the part of one whose hope has fled;
You can't attord to show the wounds
upon your bleeding head;
The world looks on the somber man
as one whose soul is dead,
And cheers men for the hopeful fights
they make.

Billn' Over.

New York Sun: O, what has caused this great commotion, great commotion, in the senate? What match lights the fire that makes the teapot "bile" tempestuously? What demoniac hand inserts the crooked pin into the seat of the Conscript Father? What Poltergeist keeps "the ile" hurling and hurtling?

Denouncing time has begun. The resolution season is open. The political hot spell is at hand. Take, for example, these few lines from the Hon. Joseph Weldon Bailey's speech, delivered in the senate May 16. But first admire the Washington artist who paints Mr. Bailey "making a slight pause," the pause "that a tiger makes before he hurls himself upon his victim." Suddenly the springing tiger appears as chairman of the committee on resolutions:

"I denounce the publication as an unqualified, deliberate and malicious lie."

"I denounce that correspondent as an unqualified, deliberate and malicious liar."

"I denounce the man who inspired the statement as an unqualified, deliberate and malicious liar, whoever he may be, and however high the office he holds."

This is the true Democratic platform style. This is the nub of the whole matter. Politics piping hot; "denunciation" by the yard. What the blazes, to use an appropriately warm term, does the Hepburn bill amount to in all this Washington wordquake? The great thing is:

"Resolved, that the Democrats are, were and ever will be the only original rate regulating Cohen, and that all others are base and infamous counterfeits and bunco steerers.

"Resolved, that we denounce President Roosevelt and the Republican party as traitors to the cause of rate regulation, and invoke upon them the swift justice of a deceived and outraged Poo-pul."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

In Meadow Street.

Sweet Clover keeps the Dew Drop Inn,
For "gilded" butterflies;
She is a barmaid rosy, fair,
To whom each reveler hies.

And Violet, who lives next door,
Has a millinery fine;
Miss Marguerite tells fortunes there—
But further "down the line."

Fat Mr. Hop Toad order keeps,
And should you chance to pass,
You'll hear him order all "young blades"
To "please keep off the grass."

There's music sweet in Meadow Street,
Old Earth knows how to sing;
E'en Tommy Fieldmouse tries to squeak
His song about the spring.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Roseau Region: While all the candidates for governor are now in favor of drainage of swamp lands and the settlement of the unoccupied territory, some of them who were members of recent legislatures were not conspicuous for their labors in that direction.

Little Falls Herald: It's a pity the Democrats can't have the legislature for once. They might elect as senator one of the squarest men the Lord ever made, honest, able, unswerving in defense of Democratic principles, a true-hearted citizen, and his name is T. T. Hudson of Duluth.

Buffalo Lake News: As a splendid running mate for John A. Johnson, and as a desirable candidate for lieutenant governor, the News would suggest the name of that gallant Democrat and excellent citizen, Tim O'Connor of Renville. His name would give material strength to the state ticket, and if elected the next state senate would have a chairman of whom the whole state might feel justly proud.

International Falls Border Budget: A combined business and political campaign is what is interesting Northern Minnesota this year, with the business end the more important of the two.

Albert Lea Tribune: Railroad discriminations, rebates, passes and other transportation questions will be live issues in the campaign in this state this year and there is danger that some candidates will get crushed between the upper and nether millstones.

Crookston Times: The South Dakota primary election appears to be a notable victory for the people. The "insurgents" so-called, have won out by a decisive vote, and the machine will be put on the scrap heap. When the new machine gets to working badly a like fate will overtake it.

Grand Marais Herald: Wonder if the weather man is waiting to make favorable terms with the straw hat factories before bringing on real summer?

Madison Independent Press: The political seers admit that the fight for first place on the Republican ticket is getting to be a one-sided affair, and that the convention may have but one name before it, for governor—Jacobson.

Aitkin Age: We notice by our exchanges that several neighboring towns have organizations known as Harmony clubs. If these aforesaid clubs can succeed in producing harmony, every town ought to have one. Harmony—socially, politically, commercially—harmony in town building, town beautifying and betterment. That's the kind of harmony that's needed everywhere.

Rochester Post and Record: The Maharajah of Gaekwar, who is visiting this country from India, says he wishes to find out what young men learn at our colleges. Well, the baseball season is now warming up, and a little later he can witness the strenuousity of a football education.

Austin Transcript: The Republican state convention at Duluth will consist of 1,090 delegates of which the first congressional district has 127. This is different from the olden time when as went the first district so went the state.

Crookston Times: The railway rate bill appears to have been a pretty good thing for Mr. Smoot.

Fergus Falls Journal: Notwithstanding the attempts made to snuff it out, the possible candidacy of Odin Haldin of Duluth, for state auditor, does not down. First from one quarter of the state, then from another, comes a rumor that he will be a candidate and his candidacy has a vigor which means something if he ever enters.

A Blessing, Not An Evil.

Topeka, Kan., State Journal: Secretary Shaw is reported to have made this statement in a recent speech: "Prominent if not paramount among the political evils which confront us, I count the trend toward the obliteration of party lines."

This is such a remarkable statement—remarkable for its error—that one hesitates to believe Secretary Shaw made it. That it should be deemed an evil because men are becoming more independent than formerly in political matters, and because they are refusing to vote for bad men simply because they are on a certain ticket, seems incomprehensible.

Political parties in a government like ours are an undoubted necessity; but when men become so party-bound that they will support their party, right or wrong; that they will vote for any sort of a candidate, no matter how dishonest or inefficient he may be, if he happens to be on their ticket, is a great evil. Yet according to the statement attributed to Secretary Shaw, this is a benefit.

It is a matter for public congratulation that men are becoming so independent in politics that party lines are becoming obliterated. It was this fact that gave President Roosevelt his tremendous vote two years ago. Thousands and thousands of Democrats wished to express their approval of the president, and they therefore broke over party lines and voted for him, thereby endorsing his policies. Does Secretary Shaw consider that tendency an evil?

It sometimes happens that bad men secure control of party organizations or secure nominations on party tickets. In Ohio, for instance, last year the Cox machine was running things. One of Secretary Shaw's distinguished colleagues in the cabinet, a resident of Ohio, no less a personage than William H. Taft, made a speech in the Ohio campaign denouncing the Cox machine. As a result Boss Cox was overwhelmingly defeated in Cincinnati. Does Secretary Shaw regard that as an evil?

What Secretary Shaw should have said ought to have been this: "Prominent if not paramount among the political blessings which confront us I count the obliteration of party lines." The hope of good government lies in the tendency of the voters in these latter days to break away from party lines and support the best men, regardless of party. This will furnish the strongest incentive to each party to put up its best men for office.

SMILING LINES.

Cleveland Leader: Poet—Will you look over this bit of verse at your leisure?

Editor—See here, young man, what ignorant fool ever gave you the idea that newspaper men ever had any leisure?

Chicago Record-Herald: "They say his wife is a good housekeeper."

"Yes, she kept his house all right when he failed last spring. But of course he had put it in her name."

Houston Chronicle: "Gladys," called her pa, "what time is it?"

"It's eleven, father."

"It's twelve up here. Eleven and twelve are twenty-three!"

And then the young man departed.

Washington Star: "What makes you think he is going to be a candidate?"

"He wants to shake hands with everybody he sees."

Puck: Stranger (in Yaphank)—What show to be given here next week ought to be suppressed. Would you be willing to start a crusade against it?

Local Minister—Who are you, may I ask?

Stranger—I'm the advance agent.

Cleveland Leader: "How did you become such a good cornet player?"

"I had a job in a deaf and dumb asylum, and nobody interfered with my practicing."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "They say that the Indian prince who has just arrived in this country has an income of $5,000,000 a year."

"Yes, but an Indian prince doesn't care for bread without Buddha.

Pease Porridge Hot.

G. S. Pease in Anoka Union: The American people are paying pretty dear for the tariff and we are just finding it out.

The Union hopes that the man nominated at Duluth will be the people's choice—instead of the politicians'.

State convention three weeks away and still no interest evinced by the people. Persistent apathy still continues.

Seemingly the Dunn papers indignantly repudiate any advice from those papers who opposed him in the last campaign. Trouble ahead.

It is well to know that the Republicans of Minnesota can elect any man governor they choose to—and it's no matter what party he belongs to. Some of the party leaders can paste this in their hats for consideration.

ON AN ARMY TRANSPORT

Description of Home of Soldier on the Big Vessels.

Boys in Blue Have a Life Free From All Care.

Seattle, Wash., May 25.—Should Uncle Sam's Pacific transport service come to Seattle, be it for a period long or short, there will enter a new element into Seattle's already heterogeneous life.

The larger transports can carry 2,200 officers and men, enough to populate a small city, and it is the constant business of every officer and man in the transport service aboard to make the thirty-day passage a pleasure for their passengers.

To such an extent do these efforts go, that, according to a prominent member of the quartermaster's department, it was the subject of remark on the occasion of an inspection by a high officer in the British transport service, which has claimed to hold the palm in the matter of treatment of soldiers en voyage. "Well," he is reported to have said, "we Britishers have to take off our hats to your transport management. This beats anything I ever saw."

The British transport officer allows the Tommy Atkinses to shift for themselves mainly. They are allowed to sleep on deck or in hammocks, or wherever there is a convenient place to sling one.

With the transport of the United States, every soldier of the 2,000 that some of them carry has his own neat bunk. The arrangement of upper and lower berths gives plenty of air space between and on all sides. The mattresses and pillows are thick and clean, and there are storm boards to be placed on each side of the sleeper in rough weather.

There are on the large transports two decks where the soldiers sleep, and in the brightest section of the upper berth deck is the hospital quarters, where the ailing from any cause are within convenient reach of the medical staff. There is also a roomy part that contains twelve berths where any diseases of contagious nature are isolated. In connection with this there is a tiny operating room where all medical examinations are also conducted, and a dietary kitchen for the preparing of dainties and appetite-tempters for the sick.

All decks lower than the saloon deck are ventilated under forced pressure by big electrically driven fans, and the officer of each nightly watch has the duty of regular inspections, during which the ventilation is carefully watched and regulated.

When a couple of regiments of troops embark for a voyage each man brings with him his weapons and his hand baggage, which consists of the regulation telescope furnished by the government, about eighteen inches each way and which can be extended according to the possessions of its owner to the proportions of a young trunk.

The bulk of each soldier's possessions is, of course, in his steamer trunk or chest, and this is unavailable during the trip, but is delivered to its owner a day after the completion of the trip.

When the men arrive on board each company is assigned to contiguous berths on the sleeping deck, and the hand baggage towed beneath each lower berth. The soldiers have to attend to their own matters of cleanliness, and for this purpose each man has a detail of police work, either "kitchen police," as it is called, when he assists in the mess arrangements, or the regular kind when, as part of his duties, he helps care for the sleeping quarters.

Besides these details, which mean only an hour or two's work for the entire voyage for each man, there is little for the soldier to do. To prevent illness there are the regular setting up exercises in the morning, as widely extended as the decks will allow. There are also marches around the deck by a company at a time, for an hour each and there are two assemblies of all hands at revellie and retreat each day, the latter being marked by the lowering of the flag and "Star Spangled Banner" by the band

When there is a band aboard, in the case of one or two regiments, a concert every evening helps much to enliven the trip. When there is no band, there are always sufficient musicians to provide this form of enjoyment, unofficially. One trip mentioned, in the case of the Sherman, when there was no band, the big transport took on board at Manila a hundred or more negro army teamsters, and this, according to the officer who tells of it, was the banner trip for the vessel for pure fun.

At the behest of the officers the darkies, many of them with experience in this line, organized a minstrel troupe and gave some genuine gems of performances twice or three times a week.

As with the officers' mess, there are two or three sittings to each soldier meal, a battalion or a battalion and a half being fed at a time. The mess deck is roomy and neat, and though the tall soldier has to stoop when he enters, the closeness of celling to steel floor adds a coziness to the meal time.

Who Gets Consumption?

One human being in every nine dies of it. The strongest man isn't proof against consumption—nor the cleanliest family.

No medicine will cure it, but every man can cure himself and avoid spreading contagion if he is just a little careful.

Pure Food.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In your esteemed issue of May 7th you have an article headed "They are Poisoners." I cannot conceive why the dairy and food commissioners, political chemists, ladies and others who are lecturing on the pure food subject, always endeavor to make the public believe all food products are adulterated and poisonous. When a lecture on "Pure Food" is delivered, why doesn't the lecturer talk on pure food and not on adulterated, why is it not also informed what food is pure? By lecturing on both sides of the question, the public would soon be educated so that they could protect themselves.

Adequate protection will not be afforded the public, however, until the numerous state laws are uniform.

Under existing conditions, what is legal in one state is illegal in another. Massachusetts recognizes the value of boric acid on codfish, the United States senate also recognized the value of borax and boric acid as mild preservatives, otherwise they would not have amended the pure food bill so as to allow their use on all articles of food that they can be removed from by water or otherwise, prior to consumption.

The very aggressive Dr. Warren of Pennsylvania, however, knows that codfish preserved with boric acid are poisonous; consequently, he is having every person that he finds handling codfish preserved with boric acid, arrested.

I would advise shipping salt cured cod in Pennsylvania to convince Dr. Warren that salt alone will not keep codfish in good condition. Then, possibly, he would recognize the value of boric acid as a non-poisonous substance. The Gloucester fishermen are not desirous of poisoning their fellowmen, and they certainly would be foolish to pay 10 or 11 cents per pound for boric acid if they could preserve the fish without it or with salt alone.

The use of boric acid on codfish, not only prevents the fish from turning red, but it also prevents the fish from absorbing much of the salt, consequently, the cod so treated is cured in a milder condition than it could be under any other circumstances.

The United States department of agriculture issues Bulletin No. 183 which instructs farmers how to best cure meat. On page 29 of said bulletin, under the head of "Preservatives" is an article as follows:

"Salt, saltpeter and sugar are the most commonly used preservatives and are the only ones necessary for the perfect curing of the finest quality of cured meats." Further on the same article reads: "Salt is an astringent, and when applied alone to meat renders it very hard and dry. Its action is first to draw out the meat juices, and in a few days it will contract and harden the muscle fibres, thus shrinking the volume of meat. Saltpeter is even more astringent than salt. Its use aids in retaining the natural color of the flesh, but large quantities are harmful to health."

According to the above advice, how can salt be deemed an ideal preservative, and why are not salt cured fish and meats deemed adulterated, as the salt withdraws the meat juices which contain the nutriment, there certainly is a loss of food value.

The law declares an article adulterated if some of the food value is extracted, or if some inferior substance has been introduced. Under there circumstances, sale cured fish and meats would certainly be adulterated.

Borax and boric acid do not penetrate meat; they close the pores which keeps the meat juices in the meat, thus causing the meat to be more nutritious. Instead of borax and boric acid being poisonous, they are the most innocent, mildest and best preservatives extent. The English nation has proven this by consuming borated foods for a quarter of a century.

The promiscuous adulterating of food products, however, should be abolished. When the public realize that it is not economy to purchase food that has been adulterated, the demand for such goods should cease.

Hygienic conditions are as necessary, if not more so, than pure food laws. Very little attention is paid to hygienic. Cleveland, Ohio, recently enacted a law that prevents any person from selling or exposing for sale any article of food outside of any building, in any open window or doorway, or on any street, sidewalk, alley or thoroughfare except that it be covered so as to thoroughly protect it from dust and dirt. I certainly consider such a law very valuable, and I trust that other cities and states will soon enact similar laws, as it is a very important hygienic measure.

The labeling of all articles of preserved food is a wise provision; the public, however, must pay heed to the labels, otherwise they will be of no benefit to them.

When the general public exercise more care in selecting their diet and pay more attention to mastication, exercise, fresh air, etc., the health of the nation will certainly improve. Yours very truly,

H. H. LANGDON,
Food Expert.

BELIEVES IN DULUTH

Charles Davis, a Boston Capitalist, Inspects Interests Here.

Has Invested in Duluth Realty for Thirty-Six Years.

Charles Davis of Boston, Mass., who is a large real estate investor in Duluth through the corporate name of the Davis Real Estate company, is spending a few days in the city looking after his interests. This is the fourth time Mr. Davis has visited Duluth in over thirty years, and he has noted with interest the substantial growth that the city has shown during the intervals of his trips here. The Davis Real Estate company owns some of the best business property in the city on First street, Superior street, and also controls large acreage on Duluth Heights, and toward Lakeside. Crosley Park, which has just been put on the market through C. P. Craig & company, local agents, is owned by the Davis Real Estate company.

Mr. Davis is a firm believer in Duluth as a city for opportune investments, and he has been showing his faith right along by investing his money here.

Referring to his several visits to Duluth, and comparing the realty values now with those of over thirty years ago, Mr. Davis says:

"My first trip to Duluth was made thirty-six years ago. I came to Hinckley, and drove through by stage to Duluth. The population of Duluth at that time was about 1,000. Minneapolis had a population of 10,000 or 12,000, so they told me when I came through that city, while St. Paul was credited with a population of about 16,000.

"The second trip to Duluth was made in 1872, the third during the season of 1893, after I attended the World's Fair at Chicago. This is my fourth visit here.

"I have real estate interests in Duluth ever since I came here the first time. During the past years I have held more or less property here when prices were high, when they were low, when they were going down and when they were going up.

"Thirty-six years ago I bought a half lot, twenty-five feet, on the upper side of Superior street at about Lake avenue, for $2,500, and gave a long time lease to the property on the basis of 10 per cent of the purchase price. About that time I bought some thirteen choice lots on First street in the vicinity of Fourth avenue west, back of where the old Bayview hotel used to stand, and paid from $1,000 to $1,200 for fifty-foot lots, and $1,500 for the corners. Those figures were considered the top prices in those days.

"I remember purchasing eighty acres of land back of what is now called Endion for $75 an acre. About a year or two afterward I was offered $125 an acre for the property.

Duluth has changed a great deal since my first visit here. At that time there was no Duluth ship canal, and they were just building the outside breakwater into the lake."

DRIVEN FROM HIS OLD HOME

Sad Evictment of Aged Man Unable to Pay Mortgage.

New York, May 25.—The old and historic Purdy homestead, at Yorktown, for the first time since it was built, more than a century ago, does not shelter a member of that family. The heaven oaken front door is closed, and the big brass key is hanging in the office of Sheriff Merritt, at White Plains, where it was taken after the lock had been turned against Alsop Purdy, 81 years old, who was evicted by a deputy sheriff, and the furniture and heirlooms, older than the house itself, set out upon the roadway.

The old man, whose great-great-grandfather built the house, had failed to pay interest on a mortgage for $2,700 held against the property by Cefus Horton, and had refused to leave the homestead when ordered to do so. Foreclosure proceedings were brought, and Deputy Sheriff Doyle was given a dispossess warrant to evict Mr. Purdy, his two daughters, Jennie Purdy and Mrs. Cyrus Wilson, and his son, Alvin Purdy.

Sheriff Doyle visited the Purdy home and ordered the oldest resident of the township and his family to quit the house. The white-haired patriarch was the last to obey the order, and stood with tears streaming down his cheeks as he watched the sheriff's assistants take from their places the old grandfather's clock, chests, sideboards, organ and family portraits and bear them into the street. When the house was at last empty the old man turned his face away and with faltering steps walked over the dusty road to the home of his son-in-law, where he found shelter.

Mr. Purdy, whose ancestors fought under George Washington and won medals for acts of gallantry on the field of battle, has lived in the home at Yorktown ever since he was born.

"It was too sad a story to have my old home, which sheltered our family for so many years, torn away in the evening of my life, for me to dwell upon," he said. "I was treated worse than a heathen. It was an outrage to throw all my belongings into the street. I offered to compromise with Mr. Horton by giving him my father's estate, clear of any legacies, and offered to pay a year's interest, but he declined to take it. He wanted the whole amount in cash or nothing."

CHINA EXPERIMENTS WITH MARCONI'S SYSTEM.

Pekin, May 25.—The Chinese government has arranged to establish several stations throughout China for experiments with Marconi's system of wireless telegraphy, and to instruct Chinese operators in working them.

Apparatus has been established on four Chinese men-of-war at Shanghai, and at the three North China cities of Tiensterin, Pekin and Pactingfu, the radius of section about 145 miles.

An Italian officer has been appointed as instructor and engineer.

It is stated that one of the reasons for the Chinese government interestnig itself in wireless telegraphy is the fact its representatives were not invited to the wireless telegraph conference now being held in Europe.

ALWAYS TAKE MOTHER'S ADVICE.

Mother's Medicine Chest.

When we look back to childhood and think of what mother advised, we feel pretty certain that she advised what was right from her own experience. She inherited later in her instinct of motherhood a knowledge of childish ailments and a certain class of remedies that she knew well and their effects. Experience after all is the best teacher. Most mothers know as well as doctors, and often better, what ails a young girl on the threshold of young womanhood and what she needs. For nearly forty years many mothers have recommended to ailing girls a prescription made from well-known native, medicinal plants. Lady's Slipper root, Golden Seal root, Black Cohosh root, Unicorn root, Blue Cohosh root and chemically pure glycerine make one of the best prescriptions for the period-ical troubles and afflictions which visit womankind at one time or another. Prof. F. Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, says of Lady's Slipper root: "It exercises special influence upon nervous conditions, depending upon disorders of the feminine organs—relieves pain, restlessness and nervousness." Prof. Jno. M. Scudder, M. D., says of the same root, "It is valuable in all cases of nervous excitability or irritability." Of Golden Seal root, Edwin M. Hale, M. D., Professor of Materia Medica at Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, says: "In its general effects on the system there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as a tonic useful in all debilitated states." Prof. F. Ellingood, M. D., author of "A Treatise on Materia Medica and Therapeutics," says of Golden Seal root: "It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb." Of Black Cohosh root, Prof. Jno. M. King, M. D., author of "Women and Her Diseases," says: "Upon the reproductive organs it exerts a specific influence, promoting regularity. In dysmenorrhœa (painful periods), it is surpassed by no other drug, being of the greatest utility in irritative and congestive conditions, for dragging pains resembling the pains of rheumatism and for side ache." Of Unicorn root the AMERICAN DISPENSATORY says: "It is one of our most valuable agents, acting as a uterine tonic, and gradually removing abnormal conditions, while at the same time it imparts tone and vigor to the reproductive organs, hence it is much used in leucorrhœa, amenorrhœa (suppressed periods), dysmenorrhœa (painful periods), etc."

Dr. John Fyfe, Editor of the "Eclectic Medical Review," says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica), one of the chief ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription: "A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator and always favors a condition which makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system, cannot fail to be of great usefulness and of the utmost importance to the general practitioner of medicine. In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent."

He continues: "Helonias (Unicorn root)—through its tonic and alterative influence—acts equally well in amenorrhœa (suppressed menstruation) and in menorrhagia (flooding or profuse menstruation). It is especially called for in cases of amenorrhœa which are accompanied by general debility and an atonic (weak) condition of the digestive organs, as it increases the appetite and promotes digestion and assimilation. When there is atony (weakness) of the generative organs and a tendency to miscarriage its tonic influence upon the sexual system will aid much in bringing about a normal condition of the structures involved. In sterility and impotence its curative power is unmistakable, and within a reasonable time it will restore to healthful activity all cases not dependent upon organic wrongs, and in leucorrhœa and defective menstruation it is a frequently needed remedy."

The following are among the leading indications for Helonias: "Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhœa; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa (suppressed menstruation), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and an anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading and predominating ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, associated with other equally efficient medicinal extracts of native roots.

From the above extracts it will be understood why Doctor Pierce is so successful in curing diseases peculiar to women with a carefully prepared glyceric extract of the above mentioned roots in just the right proportions—this compound being called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. As a solvent and preservative, glycerine is superior to alcohol and is entirely unobjectionable. The "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments that does not contain alcohol and that too in large quantities. It is also the only non-secret medicine for women sold by druggists. Its ingredients are printed in full on the bottle wrapper and in plain English.

Dr. Pierce feels that he can afford to take the afflicted into his full confidence and lay all the ingredients of his medicines freely before them because these ingredients are such as are endorsed and most strongly praised by scores of the most eminent medical writers of all the several schools of practice as cures for the diseases for which these medicines are recommended.

Your druggists sell the "FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION" and also that famous alterative, blood purifier and stomach tonic, the "GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY." Write to Dr. Pierce about your case. He is an experienced physican and will treat your case as confidential and without charge for correspondence. Address him at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., of which he is chief consulting physician.

It is as easy to be well as ill—and much more comfortable. Constipation is the cause of many forms of illness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. All dealers in medicines sell them.

A good medical book, written in plain English, and free from technical terms is a valuable work for frequent consultation. Such a work is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It's a book of 1008 pages, profusely illustrated. It is given away now, although formerly sold in cloth binding for $1.50. Send 21 cents, in one-cent stamps, to pay for cost of mailing only for paper-covered copy, addressing Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.; or 31 cents for an elegantly cloth-bound copy.

A good complexion is impossible with the stomach out of order. If pasty sallow people would pay more attention to their stomachs and less to the skin on their faces, they would have better complexions. KODOL FOR DYSPEPSIA will digest what you eat and put your stomach back in right shape to do its own work. Kodol relieves palpitation of the heart, flatulence, sour stomach, heart burn, etc. Sold by all druggists.

RAREBIT FIEND IN A BIG MORMAL SCHOOL.

Ypsilanti, Mich., May 25.—"Help! help! Some one's trying to rob me. Oh! he's choking me! He's trying to kill me!"

Thus cried Miss Smith, a pretty young Normalite roomer, at the home of Benjamin O. Depew, just before 1 o'clock in the morning recently. Other embryo teachers, of which there were half a dozen in the house, opened their eyes at the strange alarm, and, showing remarkable courage, rushed to the scene of the attempted burglary. Fluttering around in their nighties they anxiously inquired for details.

Hysterical from her fright, Miss Smith recounted the story as best she could. In effect she said:

"When I awoke it was with the feeling that there was some one in my room. Then I felt a hand grip my neck. I seemed to be choking, but I grabbed my little bag of money, containing $50, tied with a string to my neck, and held on tight. With the other hand I pushed at the person who was choking me and cried for help. He backed away and at a short distance threw something at my head. It hit the wall and I escaped unhurt."

Just as she was finishing her story, which, by the way, was often interrupted by little outbursts of the other girls, Chief of Police Cage and one or two of his men arrived at the Depew home all out of breath. It isn't often that Ypsilanti has a real live burglar, and Chief Gage didn't propose to let one escape his dragnet.

The chief and his men resorted to all the customary precautions for handling a big case. Among other things they looked for the place the burglar had entered the house and where he had made his escape. They found neither. The chief carefully questioned Miss Smith, and with some trepidation she recounted the whole story, the other girls assisting her to tell it.

"Did he get the $50?" asked the chief.

"No; here it is safe in the bed," answered Miss Smith.

"Any other purses lying around and stolen?" said he to the other Normalites.

"He didn't get mine," said one girl.

"Nor mine," said another.

Chief Gage started for the door.

"What do you make of it?" asked the bravest of the Normalites.

"Rarebit—a cent's worth of dope," said the chief, and he and his men trudged off for their homes.

TOWNE ON PRESIDENT

Former Duluthian Criticises Executive in an Able Speech.

Tells Why Republican Party Should be Ousted From Power.

Washington, May 25.—Well filled galleries and a large membership on the floor listened with great attention yesterday in the house of representatives to two leaders of opposite schools of politics—Representative Charles A. Towne of New York, and Representative John Dalzell of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Towne, when he rose to speak, was accorded an ovation by his associates on the Democratic side, a number of Republicans joining with them in giving him a friendly welcome. His first sentence, "I rise to make some observations to this house, why the Republican party should be driven from power and the Democratic party entrusted with the reins of government," outlined the trend of his address. Following closely in the footsteps of the speech made by Charles B. Landis of Indiana Wednesday, interest centered in Mr. Towne, who was expected to answer the "standpat" speech of the gentleman from the Hoosier state.

Mr. Towne prefaced his remarks by an allusion to the speech made by Mr. Cushman (Washington), whom he denominated the "funny fellow" of the Republican party, wherein the latter spoke rather disparagingly of the change in Mr. Towne's politics. To this Mr. Towne replied that if he had been content to swallow the prescription of the Republican party he would still be in the Republican ranks with 10,000 Republican majority at his back and he believed he could have continued in congress for fifty years from the Duluth district.

Instead, however, the Republican party changed its position on the money question between 1888 and 1896, and, as he desired to be in a position to champion honestly his convictions, and as the Republican party had no convictions during these years, he got out of the party.

He spoke of Mr. Landis' reference to the money question Wednesday and declared that the latter's reply to the interruptions of the Democrats showing that the "whirlwind orator from the Wabash" was densely ignorant of the money question. He conceded that the Democratic party had made a tactical error in 1896 when it committed itself to the ratio of 16 to 1, the Republican party being dexterous in taking advantage of the affirmative position of the Democracy.

"Democracy," he said, "stands in principle today where it stood in 1896. We do not demand free coinage today. Why? Because we do not need it."

Speaking of the increase in the production of gold, he said, addressing the Republicans:

"You did not know what you wanted in 1896 and even now you do not know what you have got. This increase of gold supply saved your faces as well as your offices. The people decided not to open the mints, but heaven decided to open the mines; it was both wiser and kinder than you." (Loud applause.)

He quoted from Roosevelt's "Life of Benton" to show that the president was also out of tune with his party as the party was sometimes out of tune with itself.

"In Roosevelt's 'Life of Benton,' I think in the old first edition," said Mr. Towne, "you will find the following: 'Political economists have pretty generally agreed that protection is vicious in theory and harmful in practice. But if a majority of the people in interest wish it, and it affects only themselves, there is no earthly reason why they should not be allowed to try the experiment to their heart's content.'"

Mr. Towne then read an extract from the speech of the president accepting the nomination, July 27, 1904, wherein Mr. Roosevelt said:

"That whenever the need arises there should be a readjustment of the tariff schedules is undoubted, but such change can with safety be made only by those whose devotion to the principles of high protective tariff is beyond question."

Having concluded the reading, Mr. Towne said:

"I refrain at present from producing the deadly parallel columns from the same high source. They can be produced, I believe, on any subject he ever gave expression to, including the rate bill." (Great applause.)

When Mr. Towne came to an explanation of the press reports on the speech he delivered at Kansas City, several weeks ago, there was a pricking up of ears and a still closer attention paid him. He began deliberately:

"These reports were that I was to return to Washington for the purpose of exposing the president of the United States."

He denied that he said that he would "expose" the president, but said he did not think that was the proper place to present the characteristic of the present chief executive, to magnify and personalize his office, and to exercise powers not only beyond the traditional but beyond the legal and constitutional limitations of that office. (Applause on the Democratic side.)

"There are many things that unfit him for a judicious, careful, just and deliberate discharge of high executive functions, and under the impress of which he has time and again gone beyond the legitimate boundaries of his place." (Applause on the Democratic side.)

Mr. Towne promised to insert in his remarks later "a few of these instances of executive excess, of executive usurpation, of executive wandering beyond that wise and salutary, that legal and constitutional boundary which the constitution of his country has prescribed."

"It is not pleasant to examine," he said, "and I shall not examine at all the question of veracity between a high executive officer, especially the president of the United States and other honorable and reputable gentlemen. It is enough to say that it is exceedingly unfortunate that this particular executive has the misfortune to raise the question of veracity with nearly every public character he has come in contact with during his administration." (Applause on the Democratic side.)

"Does the gentlemen mean to let that statement go into the record?" asked Mr. Payne. Does the gentleman mean to make such a broad statement as that and so say that 'nearly every?'" said Mr. Payne.

"No," interposed Mr. Towne, "I will say with a very great many, that the returns are not all in." (Applause on the Democratic side.)

"In the last campaign," continued Mr. Towne, "it was admitted in many places in this country that the accusations brought against the Republican party of complicity and partnership with these great economic forces that today prevail in the civilized world were true. Republicans in many places admitted it. There were a great many thousand Democrats in the country who believed, whether rightly or not, that the Democratic candidate was largely sponsored by and represented the class as to which the masses of the Democratic party charged that the Republican party was in partnership with. Thousands of Republicans, therefore, who would otherwise have voted against their party, voted for Roosevelt, and thousands of Democrats voted for him, too. When he came into office he had prominence that no elective magistrate in the history of the world has had. It gave him a chance to recognize that the vote of the people was in the nature of a plebescite, as a vote of public confidence, substituting him in that sense as a direct popular representative instead of the ordinary representative legislative body.

"In that attitude he could and did choose his allies to carry out the ideas of legislation he entertained. In the senate of the United States these combinations were made with some Republicans, and many Democrats, and we are informed on the record—and it is seldom challenged by the other side, and which I believe is the truth—that there was at one time arrived at an arrangement by which 47 or 50 votes, enough to pass the law, were assured to the president upon the basis of an amendment to the rate provision of the so-called Hepburn law, providing for a restricted court review, and for a suspension of interlocutory injunction. 'Within twenty-four hours after that agreement was reached, without notice to his allies, even to his ally in his own cabinet, the attorney general, the settlement of that arrangement, which is now known to be eminently satisfactory to the senator from Rhode Island, whose opposition to the president has been one of the chief glories of the president in the estimation of his chief admirers in the country, had triumphed. The Democrats were thrown out. This vauntedly non-partisan rate legislation became a partisan Republican bill as far as they could make it one and the president of the United States, shorn of his barbaric power like another Caractacus, manacled and humbled, followed the chariot of the Duke of Rhode Island." (Applause on the Democratic side).

"What is one of the results? Henceforth our fight is against the Republican party and its iniquity, and Roosevelt is out of the way. He has repudiated his Democratic allies and he is now bound hand and foot to the coterie at the other end of the capitol that denominates the Republican policies in that body, and he can never again act independently of his party, having abdicated formally and submitted himself to the party yoke."

The Democrats crowded about the speaker as he concluded shaking his hands.

Mr. Dalzell, who followed Mr. Towne, spoke in favor of "letting well enough alone," his speech being enthusiastically applauded by the Republicans.

Nothing of a legislative character was accomplished by the house, the day being given over to oratory.

WISCONSIN U COMMENCEMENT

Graduating Class Largest in History of the Institution.

Madison, Wis., May 25.—The fifty-third commencement of the University of Wisconsin will be held from Sunday, June 17, to Wednesday, June 20. About 450 students will be granted the bachelor's degree on this occasion, thirty-eight the master's degree, and twelve the doctor's degree, making a total of over 500 degrees to be conferred, the largest number that has ever been awarde at any commencement.

The exercises of commencement week will be opened on Sunday, June 17, with a baccalaureate address to be delivered by Bishop Samuel Fellows of Chicago, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin in the class of '58. Monday class day will be celebrated on Monday, June 18. The exercises will include the ivy planting ceremony on the upper class campus in the morning, the class program in library hall in the afternoon, and the class play at the Fuller Opera house in the evening. The exercises of class day will close with the pipe of peace ceremony on the lower campus at midnight.

Tuesday, June 19, is to be devoted to alumni meetings and reunions. The annual business meeting of the University Alumni association will be held in the morning, to be followed at 1 o'clock by the alumni dinner in the gymnasium. The classes of '81, '86, '91, '96 and '01 are planning to hold reunions in the afternoon and evening. The new University of Wisconsin Y. M. C. A. club house, which has recently been completed at the cost of $100,000, will be dedicated with appropriate exercises Tuesday evening. Among those who have been invited to take part in the exercises are Governor Folk of Missouri; Bishop James W. Bashford, Wisconsin '73; Bishop McDowell, Robert E. Spear, C. C. Michener, and E. T. Colman.

The commencement day exercises will be held on Wednesday, June 20. The morning program will consist of the conferring of baccalaurente, higher and honorary degrees, the commencement orations, and commencement address by President Charles R. Van Hise. In the afternoon an orchestral concert will be given by Bach's orchestra of Milwaukee, consisting of thirty-two pieces, assisted by Miss Josephine Gamble, violinist of Chicago. The concert will be followed by a reception given by President and Mrs. C. R. VanHise at their home on Langdon street to the alumni and friends of the university. In the evening the alumni reception and promenade concert by Bach's orchestra will be given in the gymnasium, to be followed by the alumni ball. The alumni reception, as usual, will give opportunity for alumni, members of the faculty, and friends of the university to meet informally, and it is planned to receive the alumni and guests both in the new Christian association hall and in the gymnasium. The lawn between the two buildings will be illuminated by Japanese lanterns, and will serve as a promenade.

The complete program for commencement week is as follows:

Sunday, June 17, 4 p. m.—Baccalaureate address, Bishop Samuel Fallows, '50, Chicago; university gymnasium.
Address of welcome, Ralph W. Collie, Merrill.

No Tired Braids when Grape-Nuts food is used.

FACT!!!

Bread dyspepsia is common. It affects the bowels because white bread is nearly all starch, and starch is digested in the intestines, not in the stomach proper.

Un under the sheel of the wheat berry Nature has provided a curious deposit which is turned into diastase when it is subjected to the saliva and to the pancreatic juices in the human intestines.

This diastase is absolutely necessary to digest starch and turn it into grape-sugar, which is the next form; but that part of the wheat berry makes dark flour, and the modern miller cannot readily sell dark flour, so nature's valuable digester is thrown out and the human system must handle the starch as best it can, without the help that Nature intended.

Small wonder that appendicitis, peritonitis, constipation, and all sorts of trouble exist when we go so contrary to Nature's law. The food experts that perfected Grape-Nuts Food, knowing these facts, made use in their experiments of the entire wheat and barley, including all the parts, and subjected them to moisture and long continued warmth, which allows time and the proper conditions for developing the diastase, outside of the human body.

In this way the starchy part is transformed into grape-sugar in a perfectly natural manner, without the use of chemicals or any outside ingredients. The little sparkling crystals of grape-sugar can be seen on the pieces of Grape-Nuts. This food therefore is naturally pre-digested and its use in place of bread will quickly correct the troubles that have been brought about by the too free use of starch in the food, and that is very common in the human race today.

The effect of eating Grape-Nuts ten days or two weeks and the discontinuance of ordinary white bread, is very marked. The used will gain rapidly in strength and physical and mental health.

TRUSTED TELLER GETS AWAY WITH $14,000.

Milwaukee, May 25.—The Marshall & Ilsley bank last night issued a statement announcing the absconding of a receiving teller, saying in part:

"Arthur George Reinke, receiving teller of the Marshall & Ilsley bank, has absconded. He entered the employ of the bank about four years ago and showing unusual ability, rose rapidly from the position of messenger to that of receiving teller to which he was promoted two months ago. His employers had no reason to suppose that the young man lived beyond his income until two days ago, when they received information that he passed most of his Sundays in Chicago, where he spent money lavishly. He was at once confronted and protested that, while he went to Chicago frequently, he was in no way extravagant. The officers of the bank, after a careful examination of his accounts, found a shortage of $14,000, the greater part of which had been taken recently. Reinke has disappeared from the city."

ARKANSAS MAN STARVES TO DEATH ON ICE CREAM.

Little Rock, Ark., May 25.—An investigation by Dr. W. H. Abington of the Argenta board of health, into the death of A. S. Roberts, a jewelry peddler, revealed that Roberts had tried to live on 10 cents worth of ice cream a day and had starved to death. Roberts believed there was a great deal of nourishment in ice cream.

Attractions at Lester Park.

Nature made a park at Lester, and human hands have not been able to improve it much. Lester river, with its many natural waterfalls, the tall pine trees, cedar, spruce, birch and balsams, the ravines, hills and rocks make it a most picturesque place. Chicago would give millions of money for a place like this. Tourists visiting here are amazed at it. The people at the Head of the Lakes appreciate Lester Park by visiting it a great deal in the summer season. Large double truck cars run through from the end of the line at West Duluth, and the fare from any part of the city is but 5 cents. The pavilions are being remodeled, and additions built. No intoxicating liquors are allowed on the grounds, and no dancing on Sunday. It is a most popular place for ladies and children. In addition to the pavilions, a first-class observation wheel is being put in, and other strictly first-class amusements are being installed. Among other things a Laughing Gallery, or Temple of Mirth. This is an up-to-date attraction, and very popular.

Grand opening will take place Decoration day, rain or shine. Two orchestras are engaged for the afternoon and evening. Dancing tickets good at both pavilions.

MALARIA AN INSIDIOUS FOE TO HEALTH

Malaria is an atmospheric poison which we unconsciously breathe into our lungs through the impure air arising from low, marshy places, stagnant ponds, damp cellars, sewer pipes, improperly ventilated houses, decaying vegetable matter, etc. Day after day these germs and poisons are taken into the lungs, and as the blood passes through them it becomes infected with the poison and in its circulation distributes the microbes of disease to all parts of the body. Malaria is a very insidious disease; it gives no warning of its coming until the circulation is filled with the poison and this foe to health has the system at its mercy. The blood becomes polluted, thin and weak and its slow, irregular circulation fails to properly nourish and strengthen the body. Then the entire system is attacked, and if the germs and poisons of Malaria are allowed to remain the strongest constitution will break down. No one can feel well when the system is in a malarial condition; the vitality is weak, the appetite poor, digestion deranged, the complexion grows sallow and the entire body feels the effects of the poison. Malaria must be removed from the system through the circulation and the only medicine that can accomplish this is S. S. S. It not only cleanses the blood of all unhealthy, morbid matter, but destroys the germs, cures Malaria and restores this vital fluid to a strong, healthy condition. S. S. S. is made of roots, herbs and barks combining purifying and tonic properties which keep the blood free of all poisons and the system in perfect condition. While destroying the germs of Malaria and building up the weak, polluted blood S. S. S. gives tone and vigor to the entire system. Book on the blood and any medical advice without charge.

Women's Council Complains of City and Normal Schools.

The smoke nuisance has been taken up by the Women's council of the city at the urgent request of a large number of interested people and consequently at the last meeting of the council a committee was appointed by the president consisting of Mrs. H. C. Marshall, Miss Shatham and Mrs. F. L. Barrows. This committee has sent petitions to the normal school board, to the board of education of the city of Duluth and Mayor Cullum. The committee calls the attention of the school board and the normal school board to the city ordinance passed July 24, 1905, and published July 28, 1905, declaring "the emission of soot or dense smoke from chimneys for a period of longer than five minutes at any one time, shall be deemed and held guilty of creating a nuisance."

The attention of the board is further respectfully called to the fact that large volumes of smoke issuing from the smoke stacks of the various schools of the city and from the normal school have grown to be injurious to the cleanly and attractive homes and to the health of the citizens in their respective neighborhoods and the prayer is made that the nuisance be abated.

The petition to the mayor is much the same, his attention being called to the city ordinance and its enforcement is urged. The public school and other public buildings are mentoned and the menance which the continuance of smoke emission constitutes to cleanliness and health.

PASTOR HAS QUIT FLOCK

Because They Voted to Admit Divorcee Who Married Again.

Laws of the Faith Rudely Violated, He Says.

Mt. Vernon, Ohio, May 25.—The congregation of the Vine Street Christian church here has been thrown into excitement as the result of a sensational scene which was enacted at the church services last Sunday morning, growing out of the admission of Mrs. B. M. Critchfield to membership in the church by letter, and causing Rev. W. A. Roush to tender his resignation from the pulpit as pastor.

Mrs. B. M. Critchfield, formerly a member of the Christian church in Croton, Ohio, withdrew her membership from that church shortly after her marriage and, after coming to Mt. Vernon to make her future home, sent her letter into the church in this city for the purpose of affiliation here.

Her letter was given to the official board of the church to be acted upon by them at the services. The board made a report and referred the matter to the congregation for final action.

When the question of voting for membership was spoken of some of the members desired to postpone the voting upon the name in order that the question might be voted upon when no one was present except the qualified voters of the church, and at these remarks a number left the church.

There was, however, a prevailing sentiment to dispose of the voting upon the name immediately, and after some discussion a vote was taken by the congregation which resulted in Mrs. Critchfield being admitted to membership of the church by a majority of three votes.

As soon as the result of the vote was announced Rev. W. A. Roush announced his resignation as pastor of the church.

It is stated that by the admission to membership of Mrs. Critchfield a rule prohibiting the receiving into membership of the church of divorced persons who remarried, as was the case of Mrs. Critchfield, had been violated. After tendering his resignation Rev. Mr. Roush proceeded with the service.

Rev. Mr. Roush stated that his action is caused by the official board and congregation of the church failing to comply with the laws set forth in their church, and, as he intends to follow the practice of preaching in the Christian church, he can no longer remain the pastor of the church in this city where the congregation refuses to uphold the doctrines of their faith.

He also states that when Mr. and Mrs. Critchfield were married they made application to Rev. Mr. Barr of Croton, Ohio, her former pastor, to perform the ceremony, which was refused. They were married, however, by a minister in Centerburg, Ohio.

Mrs. B. M. Critchfield was formerly Mrs. Estella Stultz, the divorced wife of Oscar Stultz of Sunbury, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Stultz were divorced about three years ago, and following the divorce Mrs. Stultz was appointed manager of the independent telephone exchange in Sunbury. Mr. Critchfield has also been divorced, his wife securing a decree about one year ago. The divorce was granted on the grounds of gross neglect. Mr. Critchfield and Mrs. Stultz were married about six months ago. B. M. Critchfield is one of Mount Vernon's prominent citizens, holding a position with the Mount Vernon Telephone company and was formerly probate judge of this county. No action has been taken by the official board of the Christian church in regard to accepting Rev. Mr. Roush's resignation.

INJUNCTION REFUSED

Which Would Compel Express Company to Deliver Liquor.

Kansas City, May 25.—Judge Smith McPherson of Iowa, in the United States district court here today, refused to grant an injunction sought by the Harvest King Distilling company of Kansas City, which asked that the American Express company be restricted from refusing to transport packages destined to Mississippi.

The Mississippi local option law imposes a heavy fine for such acts. Judge McPherson in denying the injunction said that if he was to grant it it would result in 250 express agents being thrown into jail.

LA PROVENCE BREAKS RECORDS FROM HAVRE.

New York, May 25.—All records from Havre to New York were broken today by the arrival of the new French liner La Provence in 6 days, 3 hours and 35 minutes. This time broke by 5 hours and 35 minutes the best previous record, which was also held by the La Provence, and was made on her maiden trip to New York. This is the steamer's second westward trip across the Atlantic. The record was made under not entirely satisfactody conditions, high seas being encountered which retarded the vessel's progress on two days. The average speed was 21.79 knots per hour.

VETERANS GIVE TALKS

G. A. R. Members Address Pupils at the Central High School.

Stereopticon Views of the Field of Chicamauga Are Shown.

This morning, the first two periods at high school were occupied by Memorial day exercises, it being impossible to hold them next week on account of Senior examinations. The program consisted of addresses by members of the local G. A. R.

The first speaker was D. H. Twomey, and he chose for his subject, "Americanism." His talk was very short, but he emphasized the glory of American citizenship, and the requirements in the way of moral, mental and physical powers that are required by the government. He expressed a hope that not even in the far distant future would it be necessary for the youth of the country to take up arms as he had done, and closed with an exhortation to purity of purpose on the part of the boys and girls of the land.

Asa Dalley, who was hospital steward of the Thirtieth Wisconsin during the war, talked on "The Soldiers of St. Louis County", and gave some very interesting statistics. Mr. Dalley came to Duluth in 1870, so has been connected with Grand Army work here from the beginning, and is well posted in every phase of it. There are, he said, 205 veterans of the civil war in St. Louis county, the youngest being 57, and the oldest 90 years of age, of whom 176 are members of the local posts of the G. A. R.

In 1871 Mr. Dalley was present at the first Memorial day exercises held in Duluth, and then there was but one grave to decorate. Next Wednesday there will be 110 graves honored. The first veteran to die here was Doras Martin, a member of Mr. Dalley's regiment, and the last was Charles Perrish, who died this month, and who was only saved from the potter's field by the G. A. R. button which he wore. Twenty years ago it was with great difficulty that the resting places of the veterans were identified, but now government monuments have been placed at every grave, and the work of the committee has been greatly simplified. There are two Confederate soldiers buried in the city.

Marcus W. Bates concluded the program with an interesting and instructive talk on the battle of Chickamauga, illustrated by stereopticon views collected by Mr. Bates, and showing nearly every portion of the scene of this great battle in the minutest detail. One view was of a bridge built by the Union soldiers in eight days, which is regarded as one of the most wonderful engineering feats of the war. Another showed Sheridan's pontoon bridge which collapsed while a baggage train was in progress across it. Mr. Bates was present at this time, and he described it, very vividly. The many monuments erected on the field, including the handsome memorial to the Second Minnesota, were the subject of a number of views, and the pictures of the winter quarters of the Twenty-first Michigan were accompanied by descriptions of the hardships which Mr. Bates and his comrades endured there.

Music was furnished by the Misses Whipple, Pearson, Washburne, Alexander, Sjosellius, Pierce and Brown. The first number was, "Rest, Heroes, Rest," and the second was a solo by Miss Sjosellius, entitled "A Decoration Day Ode."

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Business College Student at Fargo Arrested for Forgery.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—R. C. Hanson, a business college student, was arrested on this side of the river for attempting to pass a forged check, and then turned over to the Minnesota officials, as he had actually cashed one on that side. He was promptly indicted. He had been sent to school here and neglected his work, falling into bad company. The checks bore the forged signature of Charles Thompson, a well-known farmer in this county. When Officer Berg arrested Hanson he broke away and after an exciting chase was captured in a barn.

The Cass county Democrats have about decided not to put a county ticket in the field, but a complete delegation will be selected to send to the state convention at Minot. E. E. Cole is the leading spirit in Democratic circles.

M. G. Rogers, who was arrested on the charge of permitting gambling in the rear of his cigar and candy store, pleaded guilty and escaped with a fine. None of the men caught in the raid was compelled to appear in court.

F. B. Burnett, registrar at the North Dakota Agricultural college, has resigned to become the head of the modern language department of the Kansas City school. He will be succeeded by Alfred Parrot, who once held the position, but resigned it two years ago.

Bismarck—A heavy rain storm, resembling a cloudburst, occurred in the country near Mannhaven, causing heavy loss to cattle which were caught in the little valleys and drowned by the sudden flood of water.

At one place a wall of water six feet high came roaring down the valley of a little stream, carrying away houses and everything in its path. Many persons had to flee to the hills to escape the rush of waters. It is reported that 200 head of cattle were drowned.

In a heavy electrical storm at Baldwin three section men were struck by lightning while walking along the track. One was instantly killed, one seriously injured and the other made unconscious, but since has been found not to be badly injured.

The name of the man killed was Leopold Boupol. His clothing was torn to shreds and his body burned and disfigured. The injured men are at the hospital, and it is believed both will recover.

Minot—Peter McCoy, a laborer, aged 30, was run over by a Great Northern train and will die. He had been working in the mines at Tasker and was on his way to Williston. His body and both legs were badly crushed.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—Memorial day exercises in Aberdeen and vicinity will be held under the auspices of Robert Anderson post G. A. R. and W. R. C. The resident members of Company L, S. D. N. G., will also participate. The exercises will be held at Riverside cemetery at 10 o'clock next Wednesday morning under the direction of the post commander, Col. N. S. Gardner. The ladies of the W. R. C. have arranged for the decoration of the graves, which will be done by children selected by them and under their charge.

Mrs. Mary Dolan has filed suit for divorce from her husband, Charles R. Dolan, the banker and contractor of Verdon, S. D., and makes serious charges of cruelty. The complaint alleges that on three occasions he threatened her life and that she was finally compelled to leave him. She asks temporary alimony of $220 a month pending the hearing and also $500 for attorney's fees and other expenses connected with the suit.

At the preliminary hearing in circuit court, an order was entered allowing her $60 a month pending the hearing, the custody of two infant children, and $250 for attorneys' fees. Four other minor children, by arrangement between counsel, will be brought here to a Catholic sister's home.

Sioux Falls—As the result of a number of children utilizing a stick of dynamite as a plaything, Willie, the 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hahn, well known residents of Sioux Falls, had some of his fingers blown off and narrowly escaped with his life.

In the same manner, which has not yet been explained, the boy and some companions secured possession of the dynamite, which was in a small stick. After playing with it for a time one of the party noticed a fuse and upon his suggestion the fuse was lighted and a tin can was placed over the dynamite.

After waiting some little time, and the expected explosion not taking place, Willie Hahn approached the dynamite for the purpose of ascertaining what was wrong. He lifted the tin can and had just grasped the dynamite when it exploded. The force of the explosion was sufficient to blow away two fingers and the thumb on the left hand and the end of the thumb and first finger on the right hand. The boy also received slight injuries to the face, hands and arms.

Deadwood—In the sight of his father, who was unable to come to his rescue, little Ralph Jennack was run over by an ice wagon and instantly killed. He was playing in the street in front of his father's livery stable when the wagon came by and the horses took fright at a passing train.

The little boy ran out into the street just as the horses plunged and was struck down by their heavy hoofs.

CONCERNING WOMEN

"The Story of the Reformation," or "The Life of Luther," is the name of a church entertainment which was presented last evening at the Lyceum under the auspices of St. John's English Lutheran church. The entertainment is one originated by Mrs. Harriet E. Monroe of Washington, D. C., twenty years ago and has been presented throughout this country, although it was shown in Duluth for the first time last evening. Nearly two hundred Duluth singers and amateur actors took part in the large production and the scenes and marches and dramatic portion of the entertainment was presented with commendability and with much impressiveness.

The story of the reformation was related by Mrs. Della E. Mayers, the text being illustrated by stereopticon views of the life of Luther, his surroundings and episodes in his life. The dramatic portions by Duluth talent were introduced at intervals.

The opening feature was an allegorical processional of peasants and people and intricate and symbolic figures were formed by the 167 people of the chorus. "The Son of God" and "Christmas Eve" were sung during the march and the march closed with a tableau with Eclesia, represented by Miss Florence Swendby, the central figure and the other members of the company effectively posed about the stage.

The principal scene introduced during the course of the lecture was the trial of Luther. The act was well carried out. Prof. R. E. Denfeld appeared as Emperor Charles V of Germany, and the part of Luther was taken by Prof. L. A. Ink of Superior. B. P. Neff appeared as Elector Frederick III of Saxony, and Dr. J. D. Park as Cardinal Cajetan of Rome. The minor parts in the scene were assumed by Rev. Willis Beck, John Brown, H. O. H. Munson, R. M. Pritz, P. H. Evenson, A. E. Broadbridge, E. L. Eskelsen, L. G. Wendtlandt and Edell Gudrid Sodahl. The scene was well set and the costumes were adequate. The dignity and seriousness of the trial was impressive and so portrayed.

The scenes by the nuns and novices and the choirmen were pleasing, especially the singing of the nuns chorus and the solos by Miss Florence Hyland and Mrs. Clara Falk Murphy. Those taking part in this scene were: Florence Hyland, May Miller, Mrs. W. V. Grubb, Nettie Cremmel, Mabel Johnson, Ella Talboys, Florence Swendby, Frances Earhardt, Mrs. D. Pearson, Clara Mecalson, Mrs. A. R. Bjorquist, Bertha Newell, Mrs. Rosenblad, Mrs. W. D. McGill, Stella Hactor, Ella Mason, Dora Nelson, Olga Olson, Mayme Kennedy, Tillie Mecalson, Marian Berry, Alice Cooley, Cora Hilliard, Gertrude Wallace, Esther Nelson. The role of Mother Superior was well handled by Mrs. Burt Holcomb.

The evening's entertainment closed with another large allegorical processional and with flags flying Luther's great battle hymn, "Ein Feste Burg," was sung.

The director of the performance was Miss Lydia C. Heller and Mrs. Clara Falk Murphy was assistant musical director. The entertainment will be repeated at the Lyceum this evening and the many interested in it are delighted at the success of the undertaking.

FEBRUARY BRIDE.

Miss Katherine Thompson and Dr. Brigham Married.

The first public announcement of the marriage of Miss Katherine Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Thompson, of this city, and Dr. Frank Brigham of Two Harbors, has reached Duluth through the St. Cloud Daily Times. The Times says:

"Dr. Frank Brigham of Two Harbors arrived in the city Sunday morning for a visit with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. S. Brigham, and it will be surprising to the many friends of the young man to learn that he brought with him a bride. The surprise was made complete in that the parents and other relatives of the young man were not aware of the marriage until the young couple arrived yesterday. Dr. Frank Brigham was married to Miss Katherine Thompson of Duluth, about two months ago, but they have kept the matter quiet until they could come to St. Cloud and surprise the doctor's parents. Dr. Frank is a graduate of the medical department of the State university, and has been connected with a hospital at Two Harbors for a year or so. He was reared in this city and he has a large circle of friends who will hasten to extend congratulations. Miss Thompson was a popular nurse at Duluth before her marriage."

Miss Thompson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Thompson of this city, who are among the early Duluth settlers. Her wedding to Dr. Brigham took place Feb. 27, at the parsonage of the West End Presbyterian church, the service being read by Rev. S. F. Sharpless, the bride being attended by Miss Julia Davis of this city. Miss Thompson is a graduate of St. Barnabas hospital of Minneapolis, and has practiced in Duluth since her graduation. She is well known in the city, having been born and brought up here. Although the marriage of Dr. and Mrs. Brigham is a surprise to her acquaintances, the marriage was not kept secret from her parents. Dr. Brigham and his bride will visit in the southern part of the state, and later will go to Two Harbors, where they will be at home.

In Honor of Sailors.

The Women's Relief corps will be in charge of the strewing of flowers on the waters on Memorial day in honor of the sailor dead. The members of the corps have been tendered the use of The Fern, and the ceremony will take place immediately after the ceremonies at the Armory. The members of the corps will have a number of guests at the Memorial services on the water.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. W. R. Addison and children of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. George Ruk of Fargo, N. D., are the guests of A. W. Lane of 215 East Fifth street.

Mrs. Clinton Markell and Miss Markell, who have passed the winter in New York, have returned.

Hosts at Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Washburn will be hosts at dinner tomorrow evening in honor of the graduating class of the Normal school, and the faculty of the school. Many of the high school faculty and other teachers and friends will be guests. If the weather will permit, the evening meal will be served on the lawn, and the guests are invited for 4 o'clock. This entertainment in honor of the graduates and faculty of the Normal school has come to be an annual affair, and is anticipated as one of the most pleasant of graduation week.

What Retail Markets Offer.

Milk lamb.

Asparagus, 7 cents a bunch.

Rhubarb, 3 lbs. for 10 cents.

Strawberries, 10 cents a box.

Tomatoes, 35 cents a small basket.

When you come to think of it a whole materia medica awaits the housewife in every uptodate market for "they say" that spinach is good for the complexion. Witness the even disbursement of pigment in the colored lady's complexion, and she likes nothing better than a peck of spinach and a ham shank. They also say that rhubarb is good to do away with rheumatism, asparagus is good for the kidneys, tomatoes combat a tape worm, if anybody ever had such a thing, and cucumbers make you forget your other troubles by providing a very real one for your immediate consideration. But this is all the work of some unbusy person who was suffering the same mental derangement as the person who first propounded that perfectly foolish "Two-can-live-as-cheaply-as-one", thing. Nobody has ever yet proved that, and nobody, of course, ever will, but it seems to be a mighty comfortable statement to people at a certain time in their life.

Really the first milk lamb of the season will be in the market tomorrow, and some people may enjoy this delicacy for their Sunday dinner.

Net Newest Fabric for Negligees and Peignors

Novelty expresses itself most forcibly in the silk negligees and peignoirs for women's wear which are shown in such a bewildering assortment this season, and among the new materials net—not only dotted, but plain—is the newest material. China silk is a close favorite and soft taffeta follows next in order.

Essentially feminine are these dainty garments for women's wear in the privacy of her own apartment or for breakfast when in the bosom of her family. In no other garment of her wardrobe does a woman express her femininity so thoroughly as in one of these dainty robes of soft, clinging silk and lace, and it is then small wonder that every last one of her sex aims to possess at least one of them.

Several styles of cutting the negligees are shown, with an infinite variety of adaptations. In one case they will hang free from the neck, the material being gathered both front and back beneath the full collar or bertha that forms an important feature of all of them. In other cases there will be a shallow yoke from which the material will hang. Still another shows a semi-fitting garment with but little fulness, almost kimono-like in its width.

As a lounging robe the first is well liked. One pretty way of making up this style is to trim the entire gown with horizontal rows of insertion, the lace being set in in clusters of three, while the twelve or fourteen inch flounce around the bottom has innumerable rows of Valenciennes edging fulled on, which makes an exceedingly fluffy and pretty finish. A vertical row of the insertion outlines the seams and trims the sleeves, which are full. The latter are brought into a band at the wrist, with a ruffle falling below. The collar in sailor effect is trimmed with rows of insertion, while several rows of the Valenciennes edging finish it.

A pretty Oriental lace trims the kimono styled gown. To obviate the plainness of the cut a deep collar or bertha, composed of silk and lace, falls full over the shoulders and nearly to the waistline in front. From beneath the collar, starting from the underarm seams, are two full pieces of the silk, lace edged, which tie loosely and gracefully below the waist line and fall in long pointed ends nearly to the hem of the garment. Double ruffles finish the bell-shaped sleeves, edged with rows of the two inch lace.

Comfort is to be aimed at before all else in selecting one of these garments, and they should not draw or bind in any portion of it. Next, the beauty of decoration is to be considered, and so far as this is concerned, a woman may let her taste run riot, for it is quite impossible to get them too dressy.

THE EVENING STORY.

A COW IN A MINING CAMP

By Philip Verrill Mighels.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Hubbard, standing at the opening of his mine, saw a miniature whirlwind whisk a hat from the sage brush below on the hill. Immediately thereafter a young woman arose from a rock where she had been sitting to chase after her property. Laughing aloud, the miner ran down the hill and caught the hat.

"Well, I swear, I didn't know you was anywheres about, Georgie," he panted; "but I seen the whirlwind steal this, and here I come."

She coiled her hair on her head. It was wavy hair, brown where it started from the scalp, but golden for its greater length. "Where was you?" she answered. "I didn't see nobody."

"I was up to the claim," said he. "Was you resting here in the brush?"

"I was trying to be alone."

"Huh!" said he, "and I was yearning to see your pretty face."

She tossed her head impatiently.

"Well, don't stand there till you take root and grow!" she snapped. "I've got to get back to camp before it's night."

They started westward in the brush, she with feverish haste.

They saw a swarthy man approaching. He spat away his cigarette and showed his contempt as he gazed on the work-dusty form of the girl's companion.

"Well, Georgie," he slowly drawled, "haven't you shook him yet? I would think he'd know that he's a rank sucker. Ain't he dropped to your work?"

The miner's face was crimson as he confronted the sneering newcomer. "Look here, Charlie Dow, my fine gambler," said he, in a growl, "you're making undecent remarks about a lady which has promised to be my wife. I see you've got your gun on but I ain't. You'll set it on the dump, if you're a man, for I'm going to give you a thumping."

"Chop off, will you!" said the gambler. "You ain't worth fighting. You're a squeezed lemon. Do you want to know where your last little bar of bullion went, which you gave to Georgie? Look at that."

He had hardly flashed the small billet of metal before the miner leaped upon him. The gambler jumped and attempted to draw his revolver; but the hand of Hubbard was there ahead, and flung it away.

The girl, up to this, had merely stood there, admiring the gambler. Now she was darting alertly about the struggling two, her countenance intense with concern.

Then, like a bolt from the clearest sky, the butt of the gambler's pistol suddenly descended on the back of Hubbard's head. The girl had dealt him a powerful blow. He dropped on his face. The gambler fell only to his hands and was quickly on his feet. He darted at once to the prostrate form.

"No, no!" cried the girl, shuddering. "Hurry up—git away!" She grasped Dow's hand in her own and dragged to get him off the dump. In the twilight the two hastened together over the trail to Thompson's Bar.

When Hubbard opened his eyes, the moon was shining coldly on the hills. The air was keen with frost. He arose stiffly and rubbed at a swollen spot on his head. He staggered as he dusted his hat and tried to think. Then he made his way down the slope to a cabin at the edge of Bullion Hill Camp.

The chinks of the cabin appeared to let in all the chill of the wind, except on the northern side, where the snow had plastered all the logs with a six-inch coating of ice.

Now and again on the puffs of wind came a mooing sound, fraught with suffering. Hubbard, taking a lantern, fought his way through the storm to a shed a hundred yards to the west. A bellow louder than any before came on the wind.

His light was reflected from four bright points, two the wild eyes of a trembling cow, and two more the new optics of a tiny flop-eared calf. The mother creature lay upon the ground, bellowing eagerly, a pencil of snow across her back, flung from a gaping chink in the boarding.

Hubbard hung the lantern on a nail. Then he emptied a number of ore sacks to blanket the freezing creatures. He lifted the calf near the mother's nose, and otherwise labored for the lives and comfort of both. He was back and forth from the cabin to the shed a dozen times; he poured hot drinks down the cow's throat all night. About 4 in the morning she died. Hubbard took the calf in his arms, covered it closely with the sacks and stumbled with it to the cabin. He placed it down before the fire and made ready for bed.

The miners came out of their bunks and stood with arms akimbo about the tiny animal, earnestly regarding its blinking eyes. One announced that they had named the calf the "Bully Boy."

"That's all right," said Hubbard, "only he's a girl, and an orphan besides, for his mother has kicked the bucket."

The days that followed brought a storm of snow that is now famous in the annals of the Pacific slope. Roads were lost in the drifts, trains were blockaded in the mountains, towns were isolated completely from the world without. The stage to Bullion Hill failed even to start for more than two weeks.

The miners in the cabin hoarded milk for the little calf with jealous care, yet it was all gone by noon of the fourth day. The Bully Boy was hungry. Day by day Hubbard went down the hill for news of the stage. When the milk was gone he bought the only paper of oats in camp. With this he fashioned a porridge. It proved a poor expedient and was soon gone.

The four men watched their Bully Boy in silence and despair. They had learned to regard it with incredible affection. The red little body was peaked with bones and gullied with hollows, the legs were weak. On the seventh day, with fingers in the tiny creature's mouth, Hubbard carried it down to the store.

The miners there placed stroking hands upon the silken coat of the only creature ever born in Bullion Hill with a sort of awe. "Poor little Bully Boy!" was all they said.

That night, or, rather, at 2 o'clock in the morning, the Bully Boy, who had heretofore maintained a patient silence, gave voice to a solitary bleat. It was like a child's helpless cry:

"Mah-mah."

Hubbard dressed and went scuffling through the snow to the shed. In the cold and darkness he sat there for more than two hours, with his fingers in the mouth of the starving little creature.

"I'm going to Thompson's Bar," he said to the others in the morning, "for to fetch some milk."

"It's twenty miles over and twenty back," said Skinny.

"I don't care if it's a hundred." He put on snowshoes and heavy clothing. The miners watched him going, and waved their hats as he stood for a second on the ridge of the hill.

The afternoon was well commenced at Thompson's Bar when, in answer to his knocking, the door of one of the cabins was opened to Hubbard and a voice invited him to enter. He went in to ask for tinned milk, beholding a woman shabbily dressed and careless in her appearance.

She ran her fingers through her golden hair, and smiled in his face. "Don't you know me, Hub?" she asked. "Am I changed so much as that?"

His face was burning hotly. "I reckon I know you, Miss Georgie," he answered in a husky voice. "I don't forget easy."

"Oh, I'm glad!" she cried, placing her hand on his arm, "for you always was my friend."

He drew away. "I reckon—I've got to be going," he faltered.

"Oh, you wouldn't go so quick?" she coaxed, gliding between him and the door. "You ain't a-going to treat me mean?"

In her eyes he saw the look that long before had made his heart thump and his brain reel. "I've got to get back to Bullion Hill tonight," he repeated doggedly.

"Oh, no!" she pleaded, touching his hand caressingly. "You are holding things against me, Hub dear, which you hadn't ought. I was terribly fascinated by Charlie Dow—you ought to know I was—and I didn't know what I was doing. You ain't a-going to hold that against a helpless girl? You're tired, Hub dear. Set down, and don't go to Bullion Hill tonight."

In his ears was the voice of Bully Boy, yet he was thrilled by the woman. She seemed more than ever warm and delicious to the cold man whose senses were clouded. He braced himself by a summoning of all his will.

"Where is he at?" he inquired.

"Who?" she said, "Charlie?—I don't know. He's went and left me—went with Spanish Mag. I didn't know what I was doing. It was you I was loving all the time." She looked in his face with eyes that blazed and dilated magnetically.

He was weakly disengaging himself from her clinging arms. "I've got to be starting," he repeated, with less determination. "Let me go."

"Oh, darling Hub?" she pleaded, while the tears welled up in her eyes, "you wouldn't go and leave your little Georgie here—even if only for the old love? Wasn't we once happy, dearest? Wasn't we lovers?" She added in a whisper, "If you'll stay I'll make you happier than any man in the world, and nothing shall ever come between you and I again."

Her breath was hot against his cheek. She had drawn him slowly to a chair, and now her arms crept about his neck. She knelt at his side, her lips held daringly up to his own.

He felt himself dizzy, intoxicated. Her eyes were holding his gaze with an irresistible power. All the passion of his nature was stealing over his brain. Suddenly his look was concentrated on a locket on her breast. It was open, and in it he saw—the face of Charlie Dow.

From time to time, after dark, the miners went out to listen for Hubbard. Five o'clock and 6 came and passed without a sign or a sound.

Suddenly, out of the stillness of the snow came a muffled cry.

"M-a-h—m-a-h!"

They started oddly. From the drifts on the hill came an answer.

They rushed from the cabin and ran to the shed.

"Hey—little Bully Boy!"

"Here you are, little Bully Boy," they heard in a crooning voice. "Here's your old Hub—here's your fingers."

By the light of the lantern they saw Hubbard lying flat in the shed, beside the calf, his fingers in the mouth of the thin little creature.

Scattered from his arm were many tins of milk, cold and frosted.

"Well, Hub," said a miner, "I reckon you've saved his life."

"That's where you're off," said Hubbard, thoughtfully. "It was Bully Boy that saved me."

GROOM IS KIDNAPED.

"Frat" Members Haze Couple at Ann Arbor for Hours.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 25.—The wedding festivities of C. Vaughn Jones of Evanston, Ill., and Miss Laura Ranson of this city were rudely interrupted just after the conclusion of the ceremony in the Episcopal church, when members of the Sigma Nu fraternity kidnaped the groom. All the time the reception was in progress, Mr. Jones was held a captive, and he was not returned to his bride until midnight.

The hazing party was not through, however. The members insisted on entertaining the happy (?) couple until 4 o'clock in the morning and then withdrew, only to form a guard around the hotel so that their victims could not escape on their wedding trip.

Mr. Jones finally managed to outwit his tormentors, however, and late in the forenoon, with his bride, escaped. It is believed they started for Joliet, Ill., their future home.

CONSCIENCE AWOKE

And Ohio Man Repaid a Theft After Ten Years.

Webster City, Iowa, May 25.—Mrs. Lot Thomas, widow of Judge Thomas, who was congressman from the Eleventh Iowa district, has received a letter from a man at Ashland, Ohio, containing 17 cents. The letter stated that the money was sent to Mrs. Thomas because the writer, ten years ago, when a tenant on her father's farm, stole a bushel of wheat. Mrs. Thomas, being one of the heirs to her father's estate, therefore was entitled to her share of the value of the wheat, wrote the conscience-stricken man. Each one of the heirs received a similar amount. The man added that his conscience had troubled him all this time.

WEDAN GETS NOTHING

Jury Returns Verdict in Favor of Mill Company.

Arsenau Personal Injury Case is Dismissed on Motion.

Nels J. Wedan failed to recover any damages from the Merrill & Ring Mill company for injuries received on a woodsaw at the plant some time ago. The verdict was arrived at last evening, but the contents were not known until the court opened this morning. Wedan asked for $5,270 for the loss of three fingers, caused, he claimed, by a belt slipping on the pulley to the carrier table. He claimed the company was responsible for the injury because it did not keep its equipment in proper repair. The company claimed that Wedan was not employed by it, but by David Gibbons, who had the wood contract, and that the latter, if anybody, was liable.

The jury in the case of H. L. Legge against G. W. Martin, Richard Whitesides, L. M. Lindell and S. L. Smith, returned a sealed verdict shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon that was also opened this morning. The verdict was in favor of Mr. Legge, and assessed his damages at $945.35. He sued for something over $1,200.

The action was one in which Mr. Legge claimed an unpaid balance on a contract to do diamond drilling on an ore property under option to Mr. Martin and his associates. The delinquent payment was admitted by the defendants, but they made no counter claim that Mr. Legge broke faith and did not follow out the terms of his contract.

A move was made in Judge Ensign's room this morning which is in accord with the statutes, but which is somewhat unusual in this court. After eighteen talesmen had been examined for qualifications in the personal injury case of Margaret Arsenau, guardian of Bertford Arsenau, against the Duluth Street Railway company, and before either side had indicated those whom it wished to strike off, J. H. Norton, who is associated with John Jenswold, Jr., in representing Mrs. Arsenau, moved for a dismissal of the case. No reason for the motion was given, and under the statutes none is said to be required.

C. O. Baldwin, who is assisting Thomas S. Woods in defending the company's interests, objected to the dismissal, and urged that it was hardly fair for the plaintiff to dismiss the case because Mr. Norton did not like the jury and after the company had been put to considerable expense to bring witnesses to Duluth from a long distance.

The motion to dismiss without prejudice was granted by Judge Ensign, and a jury was drawn to hear the evidence in the action of Arthur H. Grieser against the Chisholmn Light & Power company.

In this action, Mr. Grieser, who was formerly in the banking business at Chisholm, in partnership with P. E. Dowling, claims that the bank loaned J. H. Crowley, one of the officers of the light company $1,076, which he is alleged to have never repaid. Mr. Dowling assigned his claim to Mr. Grieser, and the latter now seeks to collect what Mr. Crowley's attorney says was an overdraft.

Mr. Grieser is represented by C. B. Miller and the Chisholm Light & Power company by M. H. McMahon.

LOCAL FIRM GETS CONTRACT

Campbell and Ferier Will Build 80-Mile Railroad Extension.

The local contracting firm of Campbell & Ferier has just closed a large contract for the construction of about eighty miles of the Midland extension for the Great Northern railway from Niche, N. D., westward. The firm is fitting out to begin work within a few days and will begin shipping men and equipment from Duluth next Monday. Besides the men and camp supplies the firm will ship four pile drivers and several teams. The construction work will be underway for the remainder of the season.

RAILROADS

MUST KEEP GOOD WATCHES.

Trainmen on Missabe Road to Have Timepieces Inspected.

Duluth, Missabe & Northern trainmen will have correct timepieces hereafter. An order has gone into effect, similar to the one which has been in force on the Great Northern for some time, providing for the weekly inspection of the timepieces.

The new rule requires all trainmen, yardmasters, dispatchers, flagmen and section foremen to have watches of a certain standard, and that they be presented to the road's official inspector every week for regular inspection. F. A. Klass of Hibbing is the official inspector, as well as for the Great Northern, on the range.

The watches must not vary more than thirty seconds from one week's end to another.

DULUTH. SUPERIOR.

POVERTY IS SURPRISING

Assessors, Apparently, Can Find Nothing But Broken Furniture.

Appalling Reports of Pauperism Would Draw Tears From Stone.

Broken down pianos, decrepit sewing machines, scratched and scarred furniture, second hand carpets, worn out rugs, broken china, faded pictures, torn linen, and frayed out draperies, apparently constitute the only furniture to be found in Duluth, if the reports handed the assessors are to be considered authentic.

It would almost seem as if there were not a set of household belongings in the city that is fit for anything but the junk pile, and which would be sent there if the owners could find a junk pile operator who would accept the stuff.

What has become of the new furniture sold by the Duluth merchants this year, is a mystery which the assessors cannot solve. The owners seem to take a grewsome delight in exposing all the sacredly guarded cracks in the furniture, the rents that are carefully hidden by draperies, the unsteady legs in the chairs, the lack of varnish on the piano, the manner in which the sewing machine "sticks," and all the hidden secrets of the family furniture.

The owners are not content with merely presenting the dark side of things. They maliciously slander the defenseless furniture in a manner that is scandalous. They offer the assessor the whole outfit if he will pay for carting it away.

Nobody seems to have as much furniture as he had last year. Some of it has been sold. Other pieces have been broken and thrown into the attic. Others were lost in moving. And "anyway the assessment last year was far too high, and should have been cut down by about half."

There seems to be no doubt but that the whole population of Duluth is on the verge of bankruptcy, judging from the reports made to the assessors. They have unearthed the most abject, hopeless pauperism in homes furnished with oriental rugs and silk draperies. It's hard to see where some of these poor families will get their next meal, unless they can "soak" some of the fine furniture.

And the estimates they place on their real estate bring back memories of Superior when the boom broke. It does not seem hardly worth while for the assessors to place a value on one lot, and if the reports were accepted as true, the lots could be lumped and valued on the basis of wild acreage.

But occasionally the assessors find a man who actually has property, and openly and recklessly asserts that his furniture is worth from $1,000 to $2,000, and that he would not sell his lot for what he gave for it, and that he has a horse or anautomobile that is as good as new, and money in the bank.

And in some way it happens that these recklessly honest people don't have to dig up more for personal taxes than the self-confessed paupers.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE.

Gov. Johnson's Speech Brought Next Convention to Minnesota.

H. C. Withrow has returned from a visit in the East where he attended the annual meeting of the National Association of Charities and Corrections which was convened at Philadelphia from May 9 to 16. The meeting was a most interesting one. At the opening session the speaker was ex-President Grover Cleveland, and other speakers prominent in the work added to the helpfulness of the meetings.

Mr. Withrow spent much time in Chicago and Illinois inspecting the truant homes and institutions. The plans are of the finest and the methods of discipline are of the best. Mr. Withrow is most enthusiastic over the Illinois institutions. He also visited at Washington and was introduced by Congressman Bede to the president.

"It was due to the speech in the conference hall by Governor Johnson that Minnesota secured the next annual convention which will be held at Minneapolis probably in June of next year," said Mr. Withrow this morning. "The meeting this year was the largest ever held, every state in the union being represented and over 1,200 delegates being present."

Gymnasium Picnic.

The picnic of the children's class of the physical department of the Young Women's Christian association which was to have been held tomorrow will be held rain or shine. If the weather is fine the trip to Lester Park will be taken as planned, and if the northeaster continues, as the weather man says it will, the class will have a "regular picnic" in the gymnasium hall. The children are as pleased with one arrangement as the other for the gymnasium holds infinite possibilities for fun.

BURTON WILL RESIGN

If His Application for a Rehearing is Denied by Court.

Washington, May 25.—Senator Hale's resolution instructing the senate committee on privileges and elections to inquire into the decision of the supreme court in the case of Senator Burton of Kansas, was considered informally by the committee today, but no action was taken.

Chairman Burrows informed the committee of the conversation he had with Senator Burton, and advised that no investigation should be had pending the application of Burton for a rehearing. He said there was no doubt that Senator Burton would resign if his application is denied.

CORNELL WINS BOAT RACE FROM HARVARD.

Boston, May 25.—Cornell wins boat race by three lengths.

The Harvard and Cornell varsity crews got away at 2:30¼, unofficial time. Cornell had slightly the better of the start.

STOCKHOLDERS!

An adjourned meeting of the Duluth and Virginia Gold Mining company will be held at 202 Alworth Bldg., tonight at 8 o'clock p. m. Among other important matters to be discussed relative to putting the company on a sound, financial basis, the sending of a well known mining expert to examine the company's property will be considered.

Do not fail to attend as this will be a meeting of the utmost importance to all the stockholders.

A. M. MORISON, Secretary.

At Harvard bridge (about the middle of the course) Cornell appeared to be in the lead by about two lengths.

Time: Cornell, 10 minutes, 41 3-5 seconds; Harvard, 10 minutes, 52 seconds.

Former Policeman Fined.

A BARGE TO GO DOWN THE LAKES

Manila Will be Towed to Some Lower Lake Port.

As soon as she can be prepared for the trip, the Pittsburg Steamship company's barge Manila will be taken to some lower lake port to be repaired and possibly, converted into a steamer. Local officials of the compauny say that they do not know whether that will be done or not.

The Manila is lying in the harbor just off the Duluth Boat club's house, where she was left when brought in last winter from Encampment island by the Reid Wrecking company, which released her from the north shore point where she was thrust during the big storm of last November.

It is probable that the craft will be placed in dry dock at Detroit or Cleveland. Local officials of the company have not been advised as to that. Experts are to look her over and such repairs as are necessary to make her seaworthy for the trip down the lakes, will be made at once. Pumps will be put at work on her right away. She is to be towed to the lower lakes.

Ever since it was discovered that the steamer Lafayette, wrecked on the north shore, cannot be saved, the officials of the Pittsburg company have been talking of placing her engines in the Manila, but unless the Lafayette's engines are removed very soon, it would seem that this plan was to be abandoned.

The Manila will probably leave on her trip to the vessel hospital within a week.

CITY BRIEFS.

At the Lincoln Park Rink, this evening, a skating party will be given by Duluth Hive No. 1, L. O. T. M.

Protests against the confirmation of the assessment for the paving of Tenth avenue east, were made this morning at the meeting of the board of public works, and the confirmation was postponed until the next meeting of the board.

At the Star of Hope mission this evening at 8 o'clock the young people of the Epworth League of the Norwegian and Danish M. E. church will conduct the service. E. A. Reppe, the president of the league will speak. The quartet will sing several numbers.

The case of Hans Christensen, who was accused of neglecting to comply with the orders of the police and remove a building from the street on Park Point, was tried yesterday afternoon in the municipal court. Mr. Christensen was found guilty and fined $10 and costs. The defense was that Mr. Christensen was not the owner, but only the agent of the building.

The second warranty deed conveying a portion of the courthouse site at Fourth avenue west to the county was filed with the register of deeds yesterday. The deed covers lot 70 on West Second street and runs from Edward S. Coe and wife to St. Louis county. The consideration was $7,500, the sum for which the lot was appraised under the condemnation proceedings.

An unknown man was struck by a small East end car, near the corner of Fourth avenue west, about 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. He was not injured, and was able to walk away unassisted. He did not give his name.

The newly-elected directors of the Commercial club will be given a dinner at the club next Monday evening at 6:30 o'clock by the old directors.

A WHITE CITY IS BURNING

Amusement Resort at Cleveland in Grasp of Fire Fiend.

Cleveland, May 25.—The White City, an extensive amusement resort on the lake, east of this city, is being swept by fire, and will probably be a total loss. The fire started in the Dreamland theater.

An hour after the flames broke out, a large boiler in the power house blew up. As far as can be learned no one was hurt. While half a dozen men were working on the roof of a cafe, it collapsed, and two firemen were injured.

Several fire companies have been sent from this city to the scene.

NEW POSTMASTER IN CHARGE JULY 1

Guy A. Eaton Will Succeed E. L. Fisher With New Fiscal Year.

Guy A. Eaton, accompanied by Mrs. Eaton, left yesterday for the East and will be away for some weeks. He gave it out before leaving that he expected to become postmaster of Duluth on July 1, which is the beginning of the new fiscal year.

Mr. Eaton and the present postmaster, E. L. Fisher, have agreed upon this date, although Mr. Eaton's appointment has not yet been confirmed. In this way Mr. Fisher will be able to close up his business for the year and Mr. Eaton will have fewer threads to gather up on his assumption of the office.

PINNEY WILL GET HIS $1,000

St. Paul, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court today affirmed the findings of a jury in the St. Louis county district court which awarded William Pinney $1,000 for injuries sustained in an explosion of dynamite. Pinney was made deaf by the explosion.

The accident occurred in the Duluth harbor, where a crew employed by G. R. King were at work. They were thawing out dynamite preliminary to using it for blasting purposes and the stuff exploded. Three other men were killed and Pinney, the only one to escape, claimed he was rendered deaf.

Pinney asked for $7,500 but the jury only gave him $1,000.

The supreme court today handed down opinions in the following cases: Hennepin county—F. S. Berger vs. Swan B. Turnblade, order affirmed.

Itasca county—Michael McAlpine vs. F. E. Kretka and C. L. Dobner, reversed.

Hundreds of people in Duluth have gotten acquainted within the past week —through Herald wants.

LAW FAILED TO BRING RETURNS

So Attorney Became a Coniacker to Support His Family.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 25.—Unable to support two grown daughters and an insane wife by his profession as a lawyer, William B. Schwartz, a member of the Indianapolis bar, admitted to secret service officials that he had been forced to make counterfeit half dollars to add to his income.

Schwartz was arrested in his office by Capt. Thomas E. Halls, chief of the secret service department, and Merrill E. Wilson, chief deputy United States marshal. Some of the most perfect imitations of half dollars ever found in Indianapolis were discovered in Schwartz's office, where he finished his output after making the preliminary molds at his home, 419 Grace street.

There was little difficulty in getting Schwartz to admit his guilt. He has been under surveillance almost a year, and it is believed he has been making coin nearly two years. Brass molds were used in manufacturing the rouch coins, which were composed generally of Babbitt metal. These molds or dies were used in Schwartz's house, and after the rough coins were prepared they were taken to his office and "finished" in an electric battery, one half dollar being "finished" was found.

Officers who made the arrest do not believe that Schwartz passed any great amount of the "queer" in Indianapolis, but that he sold his output to an organized gang, which has been passing it in different cities of the United States.

When arrested, Schwartz told a pitiful tale of poverty and the struggle for existence he has had for the last few years.

SHE DIED OF FRIGHT

When She Came Home and Found Some Burglars There.

Logansport, Ind., May 25.—Mystery surrounds the death of Miss Martha B. Buchanon, aged 78. Neighbors heard her screaming on the front porch of her home. Her only coherent cry was "Look there!" They telephoned the police, who tripped over her dead body as they entered.

A week ago Miss Buchanon sold a piece of property for $600. The money cannot be found.

The theory of the police is that Miss Buchanon suffered from heart trouble, and that finding men robbing her home died of fright.

STEAMSHIPS ARE LOADED

American Millionaires and Pretty Daughters Rushing to London.

One Family Secures Entire Floor of Carlton Hotel.

London, May 25.—An army of American millionaires, with the usual accompaniment of pretty daughters and open check books, is sweeping down on London and creating a record in lavish expenditure.

The keynote of this campaign of extravagance was struck last week by a man from Philadelphia, who walked into the Carlton and said he would just take an entire floor for himself and his family. Subsequent arrivals were informed that there was no more room.

The great West end hotels were already crowded, yet the rush has hardly begun. Every steamship is fully booked for the next three months, and so great is the desire to spend the winter's profits in Europe that hundreds of tourists are cheerfully paying first-class rates for second-class berths rather than wait until the season is over.

More money will be spent by Americans in London this summer than ever before. They are coming prepared to scatter dollars with a reckless hand, for the past year has been one of unequaled prosperity in the United States and many men have jumped from comparative poverty into affluence.

All the steamships arriving at British ports brought well known American millionaires and their families. Among the Cedric's passengers were Dr. Seward Webb, a railway magnate, whose private car is said to be the most luxurious in America; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hanan and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carstairs, of Philadelphia, all of whom are at the Carlton.

Among the other Americans at the Carlton are Mr. Rodman Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, who engaged the entire floor aforesaid; Mr. and Mrs. Havemeyer, whose fortunes represent the great American sugar interests, and Mr. W. B. Henderson of Boston.

All the great hotels, such as the Savoy, the Cecil, the Carlton, Claridge's, the Russell and the Great Central are crowded with Americans.

Many millionaires had the forethought to engage apartments months in advance. Others who find themselves without accommodation are offering fabulous sums for suites with a bath.

Even the Bloomsbury district, where numberless embryo millionaires lodge, realizes that this is to be a record year for Americans, and hurried preparations are being made to provide extra sleeping accommodations at most of the large boarding houses.

Picture dealers, curio dealers and book sellers see a prosperous season ahead. The old furniture industry is already booming, and it is believed that the year's output of "antiques" Chippendale chairs for American export will break all records at the midland factories.

There will be many kinds of millionaires in London in the next few weeks. Fashionable millinery and dressmaking establishments are already executing orders for American millionairesses, who are buying more in London and less in Paris every year.

Even the cable companies will profit greatly by the invasion, for all of these millionaires, who have made their money overnight, would not consider a trip to Europe enjoyable unless they could conduct their financial operations by cable. The American who breaks into the aristocracy of dollars continues to think in thousands to the day of his death.

There will be many personally conducted tours in which the gentle "school-marm" from the New England states will predominate. School-marms of the pie belt, which is the old English district of the Northeast, where people eat fruit pies for breakfast, have only one ambition, and that is to "do England," the home of their ancestors.

Tours are also arranged in every state in the union, and many prize tickets are issued in various ways. A Chicago newspaper is sending the ten most popular shop girls voted for by their colleagues, and a Kansas City pork packer is paying for the tour of twenty-five of his employes who have not been late for work during ten years.

Daron Takaki, ex-surgeon-in-chief of the Japanese navy, is delivering a series of interesting lectures at St. Thomas' hospital on the means by which the health of the mikado's soldiers and sailors is preserved.

Baron Takaki, ex-surgeon- in chief of (1875-1880) studied at St. Thomas' hospital, has introduced into the Japanese army and navy reforms in the matter of hygiene and diteary.

It was he who suggested that during the campaign the Japanese soldiers and sailors should frequently wash their clothing, so that it might be rendered antiseptic in case of wounds. The title of baron was conferred on him by the mikado for the perfection to which he had brought the dietary of the navy.

"I have come to England for a holiday and to study new methods at the hospitals," said Baron Takaki. "On May 23 I sail for America, where I intend staying until July 2.

"I went through the war with Russia as a spectator, being in Manchuria with the army, and as the medical men of the navy have supplied me with many facts and figures, I shall be able to show the effects in war time of our official diet on the troops."

E. S. Caton, editor of Tobacco, is authority for the statement that the reduction of the tobacco leaf duty will be very welcome to manufacturers.

"The smaller manufacturers will benefit greatly," he said. "When Mr. Auston Chamberlain put 3 pence per pound on stripped tobacco it was a great hardship, for they had not the facilities for manipulating the ribs of the unstripped leaves. Consequently they had to buy the stripped tobacco and pay the extra duty.

"The reduction comes at a very opportune time, as the price of the American tobacco leaf is advancing considerably.

"In view of that fact, I do not think retailers can expect more favorable terms from manufacturers. The consumer will benefit by getting a better and purer tobacco at the same price."

The striking declaration of Sir Geroll Barnes, president of the divorce court, denouncing judicial separations and hinting broadly at the desirability of altering the divorce law so as to place women on an equality with men is likely to create a stormy controversy.

The high church party is strongly opposed even to the existing system of divorce, and even one of the judges, Justice Phillimore—has, from the bench (while assisting in the divorce court), expressed his regret at having to administer the divorce law.

But the president of the divorce court suggests that it might be in the public interest to make divorce easier for women to obtain, and he pointed out that in Scotland and most civilized countries a wife to whom he was unable to grant a divorce would have been able to have secured her decree.

HIBBING TO BE HEADQUARTERS

Rhodes Mining Company to Build Home for General Offices.

With the visit of J. W. Rhodes to the Mesaba range comes the announcement that the Rhodes Mining company, of which he is the head, is to erect a two-story office building in Hibbing, and establish its general offices there.

Contracts have been let for the erection of the structure. It will be located near the Great Northern depot in Hibbing, and work will begin on it in a few days. The company's present general offices are located in the First National Bank building at Hibbing.

The Rhodes Mining company, which is really a subsidiary corporation of the Cherry Valley Iron company, owns and operates five mines. They are the La Rue at Nashwauk, the Croxton at Chisholm, the Nassau, east of Hibbing, the Brunt at Mountain Iron and the Hobart, near Sparta. The La Rue and the Croxton were purchased from Joseph Sellwood in January.

Alexander Maitland is general manager of the concern, and his son, A. F. Maitland, is general superintendent.

For several days Mr. Rhodes and a party of friends, some of whom are interested with him in the properties, have been looking over the Rhodes mines.

THE SURVEY HAS BEEN COMPLETED

For Great Northern From Dewey Lake to International Falls.

International Falls, Minn., May 25.—The survey of the Great Northern's new line into International Falls has been completed. It took Engineer Eddy and his crew just a month to complete the line from Dewey Lake to International Falls, which is fast time, considering the heavily timbered country through which the lien will pass. The distance by the line established is 77 miles and Mr. Eddy says that it is an extraordinarily favorable country for railroad building, as there are no bad cuts or fills and few swamps.

From Sturgeon Lake to International Falls the line was run ten degrees west of north and there were so few deviations that it practically is an air line. Though the present survey is only preliminary on account of similarity of the adjacent country, the engineers did not believe the permanent line would vary much from the base line. The route established would take the line into this city down Second avenue, but it is not yet known where the depot and terminals will be situated.

The climax of six months' negotiations between the Koochiching company and the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg railroad has settled all doubt as to where that road will cross the river, and there is no longer any doubt that International Falls will not get the road, but that a rival town will be established a Pither's point. The Cook interests, which control the new road, have maintained from the start that they would, if unable to come to terms with the Koochiching company, cross the river at Pither's point, and would build sawmills there and establish a rival city. They have exercised options held on property at the point, and have acquired a quantity of valuable land on which to build there terminals and for townsite purposes.

WEATHER IS THE CAUSE

Business Along Michigan Street Has Fallen Off During Week.

Berries Now Coming From Missouri—Car of New Potatoes.

Cold, wet weather has cut into the commission business this week, and the market has been dull.

With a record of only two or three bright, warm days this month, it would be difficult to imagine more unfacorable weather for the commission business. Strawberries, fruits and fresh green vegetables lose much of their attractiveness in cold and wet weather, and the city trade in this line of produce has been very small.

The commission men have been shipping some goods, but the weather has practically cut the city business in two, and the dealers are all fervently hoping for a change.

"Everybody may not understand why this weather makes such a difference," said one of the dealers, "but a long stretch of it simply paralyzes our business. In weather such as we have been having the women don't get out to do their shopping. The people live on the staple articles only, and there is little or no demand for fresh fruit and fresh vegetables, such as there is in warm, bright weather."

The strawberry season is at its height at the present time, and the berries are being sold at 10 cents a quart by the grocers. The price quoted on Michigan street is from $2 to $2.25 for a case of twenty-four quarts.

The receipts have been very heavy during the week, and the falling off in the demand caused by the cold, wet weather, has caused the market to sag. The weather in the South has been very favorable for shipping.

Firmer prices are looked for next week. The Missouri berries will be on the market then, and the change in the shipping point generally brings higher prices for a few days. During the last week or ten days the source of supply has been Arkansas.

The Missouri berries are probably the best that are received during the season, or at least they have been in former years, and during next week some very choice berries should be offered on the Duluth market.

The potato market is firmer this week, and it is difficult to get enough to supply the demand. They are quoted as high as 65 and 70 cents on Michigan street, and the supply is none too large even at that figure.

The first car of new potatoes will be received today or tomorrow, coming from Texas.

Some small shipments of new potatoes have been coming in from time to time, but this will be the first solid car. The shipments up to the present time have been coming from Florida and Louisiana, but the car lot will come from Texas. The receipt of the first car will cause a decline in the market, and from this time on the new potatoes will begin to cut some figure. The season is a little backward this year, owing to wet weather in the South earlier in the spring.

Fresh, green onions are now coming in car lots from the South, and they are one of the features of the market this week. Texas is the big shipping point for them.

The California fruits are firm and unchanged in price. California oranges are selling at from $3.75 to $4.25 a case, and lemons are quoted at $4.75 and $5 a case.

There are a few California cherries on the market, but they are scarce and high.

The receipts of pineapples and bananas are heavier, and these fruits are now quite plentiful.

Butter and egg prices are unchanged from last week. Creamery prints are still quoted at from 21 to 22 cents, and fresh eggs at 15½ to 16 cents.

The receipts of eggs have been heavy during the week, but any surplus is placed in cold storage, and the price is holding firm.

CHANDLER MUST QUIT

Ex-Senator Who Stirred Rate Controvery, to Lose His Job.

Will be Retired From the Spanish Claims Commission.

Washington, May 25.—Former Senator Chandler says he has no present intention of resigning his place as the head of the Spanish claims commission. The president has decided that he is to be separated from the public serivce. As the appointment is one within the gift of the president, whose confidence he has so abused and with whom he raised a direct question of veracity, some surprise was expressed that the former senator should take this position. This was the more pronounced because his friends have declared that he had ample means with which to live without employment, and one of them is authority for the statement that in the past year Mr. Chandler's connection with the government has cost him no less than $25,000 in fees in cases which he could not with propriety accept.

In spite of the attitude of Mr. Chandler, and in spite of the fact that he has decided not to resign, there is ample warrant for saying that he will not be an officer of the administration after September 1 next. Neither will the president lay himself open to criticism for summarily removing Mr. Chandler and thus be charged with venting a spite against him.

The legislation which created the Spanish claims commission provided that it should exist for two years. It was created in 1903. The legislation might be extended for periods of six months at the discretion of the president of the United States and on his order. It develops that every six months Mr. Chandler, as the chairman of the commission, has followed the custom of going to the White House and securing from the president a written order which prolongs the life of the commission for six months. The last renewal of this character must have been about the time when he was about to enter upon the confidential mission which the president intrusted to him in connection with the railroad rate bill. It was on March 1 last. This carries the commission up to September 1.

If any one can picture President Roosevelt receiving Mr. Chandler at the White House under present conditions for the purpose of issuing a discretionary order prolonging his official life, he has a wonderful stretch of imagination. Indeed, it is learned that some of the friends of the president urged that he dismiss Chandler or ask for his resignation, and, in view of his actions, there could be no question as to his right to decapitate Chandler if he chose. Other of the friends of the administration urged that to take such action would tend to make a martyr of him, and, perhaps, lay the president open to the charge that he vented his spite against the former senator from New Hampshire. Then it was suggested that the very nature of the legislation which brought the commission into existence offered the opportunity that the president could readily embrace of disposing of Mr. Chandler, without criticism attaching to the act. The president in so proceeding will have the sympathy of a very large element in both houses of congress, quite apart from the merits of the controversy in which Chandler involved him.

There have been repeated assaults on the commission and speeches have been made during the present and last sessions of congress to show that its members were enjoying an expensive sinecure. A resolution has passed the house within the month providing that information be transmitted to the house as to the nature and amount of the claims still pending, the amount of those adjusted and the cost of the government of these adjudications. Eighteen claims have been allowed, amounting to $323,000, and the commission has cost the government $600,000. Local attorneys who have urged claims before the commission have asserted repeatedly that the delays to which they have been subjected are inexcusable and that their clients die on their hands without getting their claims passed upon, while the passage of time makes the task of securing witnesses and documentary evidence more difficult.

It is probably true that the commission has been as effective as any of like nature ever created by the government, but it is contended that all the work it is now doing could well be done by the court of claims. There are four members of the commission, each of whom receives $5,000 a year. There are also twenty-four clerks and employes of the commission.

It is suggested by some members of congress that the president may possibly be relieved of all embarrassment in connection with the commission and Mr. Chandler by the failure of congress to include provision for the commission in the regular appropriation measure this session.

When You have a Bad Breath

THAT'S the time to take a Cascaret.

—When your tongue is coated,

—When you have Heartburn, Belching, Acid Risings in throat,

—When Pimples begin to peep out,

—When your Stomach Gnaws or Burns,

—That's the time to check coming Constipation, Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

One single Candy Cascaret will do it if taken at the right minute, just when you first feel the need of it.

A "Cascaret in time is worth nine" later on.

Cascarets don't Purge, nor Weaken, nor waste Digestive Juices in flooding out the Bowels, like Salts, Castor Oil, "Physics."

But,—they act like Exercise on the Muscles that shrink and expand the Intestines, thus pushing the Food on Naturally to its Finish.

When the Bowel Muscles grow flabby weak, or lazy from want of Exercise, the Food does not tickle them enough to make them act.

That's Constipation!

Castor Oil, or "Physic" will help to slide out one load of trouble, but they can't help the Cause.

In fact, they weaken the Bowel-Muscles more than ever by slackening them, and by doing work for them which they should do for themselves.

When your Arm-Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise, to strengthen them—not a sling to support them.

When your Bowel-Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise to strengthen them—not "Physic" to pamper them.

Then carry the little ten-cent "Vest Pocket" box constantly with you, and take a Cascaret whenever you suspect you need it.

One Cascaret at a time will promptly cleanse a foul Breath, or Coated Tongue, thus proving clearly its ready, steady, sure, but mild and effective action.

Have the little 10c Emergency box of Cascarets constantly near you!

All Druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year, for six years past.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

FREE TO OUR FRIENDS!

We want to send to our friends a beautiful French-designed, GOLD-PLATED BONBON BOX, hard-enameled in colors. It is a beauty for the dressing table. Ten cents in stamps is asked as a measure of good faith and to cover cost of Cascarets, with which this dainty trinket is loaded. Send to-day, mentioning this paper. NORTHWEST IS STRONG

Too Much Rain Makes Wheat Firm—Lower Elsewhere.

Flax Offerings Small and Prices Have an Advance.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 25.—Reports of extensive rains caused weakness in most of the American wheat markets today. Reports of too much rain in the Northwest had a tendency to keep prices firm in the Northwestern markets. Liverpool closed ½d to ¼d higher, Paris, Berlin and Budapest ¼c lower and Antwerp unchanged. The Argentine shipments were large.

It is expected that stocks of wheat in store at Duluth will decrease 575,000 bus this week.

The Modern Miller says: "Deterioration is reported in winter wheat, due to dry weather. The lowering in condition is most marked in the soft winter wheat sections, including Missouri and the states east of the Mississippi. Rains have fallen and afforded relief in Kansas and Nebraska and latest advices say the plant has been benefited in these states. The rains are extending into Eastern territory where moisture is urgently needed. Prospects in Oklahoma continue good and weather conditions are more favorable in Texas. Beneficial rains have fallen in the Pacific Northwest."

The May option closed unchanged in Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Louis, ¼c higher in Chicago, ¼c lower in New York and ⅜c off in Kansas City. The July option closed unchanged in Duluth, ¼c off in Chicago and New York, a shade off in Minneapolis, ⅝@⅜c off in St. Louis and ½c lower in Kansas City.

Corn was weaker, the July option in Chicago closing ⅝ clower. Corn was ½c higher in Liverpool. July oats closed ½c lower in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 34, against 3 last year, and at Minneapolis 120, against 226 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 154 cars, against 229 last year. Chicago received 8, against none last year.

Primary receipts were 268,000 bus., last year 303,000 bus. Shipments 352,000 bus., last year 116,000 bus. Clearance of wheat and flour aggregated 167,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat were 1,-904,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 928,000 bus., last year 592,000 bus. Shipments 403,000 bus., last year 351,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 24,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of corn were 2,-264,000 bus.

Wheat was active during the entire session of the Duluth market. Trading was steady and prices a little stronger most of the time. May wheat closed unchanged at 84c. July wheat opened unchanged at 83¼c, advanced to 84⅝c at 9:45, fell off to 84¼c at 9:50, rallied to 84⅝c at 10, fell off to 84¼c at 10:14, rallied to 84⅝c at 10:24 and ranged between that and 84¼c during the rest of the session, closing at 84⅜c unchanged from yesterday. September wheat was inactive at the opening, sold at 82c and closed at 81¾c, unchanged from yesterday. Durum wheat advanced ½c.

Flax was stronger. Offerings of flax were light but the buying was sufficient to take care of all of it and to cause higher prices. Flax was unchanged in Antwerp and in London ⅞c lower. It is expected that the stocks of flax in store at Duluth will decrease 185,000 bus. this week. The Argentine shipments of flax were 152,000 bus., against 368,000 bus. last week and 376,000 bus. a year ago. May flax closed 1c higher at $1.16. July flax opened ½c higher at $1.16⅜, fell off to $1.16⅛, rallied to $1.16⅝, rallied to $1.17¼ and closed at $1.17¼, a gain of ¾c over yesterday. September flax opened unchanged at $1.16¼, and advanced steadily to the close, which was $1.17, a gain of ¾c over yesterday. October flax opened ¼c lower at $1.11½, advanced to $1.15¾ and closed at that price, a gain of ¾c over yesterday.

May oats to arrive and on track were ¼c lower and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Market Opens Easier on Selling by the Pit Traders.

Chicago, May 25.—The wheat market opened easier today on selling by pit traders which was based on reports of rain in the Southwest. Later the market became firm on good buying by commission houses and all the loss was regained. July opened ⅝c to 1c lower at 82⅞c to 83c and sold up to 83¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 152 cars, against 115 cars last week and 239 cars a year ago.

Toward the middle of the day prices eased off somewhat on profit-taking. The price of July dropped to 82¾@⅞c. Near the end of the session the market again became firm on buying for export demand. The close was steady with July off ¼c at 83½c.

The corn market was easier at the opening because of wet weather in the corn belt. Later the market became firm, because of an excellent demand by cash houses. July opened ⅛c to ¼@⅜c lower at 47½@⅝c to 47¾c and advanced to 47¾c. Local receipts were 500 cars, with 300 of contract grade.

The corn market weakened during the last half of the session on selling due to the reported wet weather. The low point for July was 47c. The close was weak with July off ⅝c at 47⅛c.

The oats market was somewhat easier than wheat and corn. The cause of the weakness was rains in Illinois with a prediction of their continuance. Local receipts were somewhat heavier than had been expected and this weakened prices. July opened ⅜c lower at 33¼c and sold at 33⅜c. Local receipts were 133 cars.

The provisions market was strong. Trading was light because receipts of hogs were small. Lard and ribs were the active demand. July pork opened 10c to 12½c higher at $16.30 to $16.33½ and advanced to $16.40. Lard was 5@7½c higher at $8.80 to $8.82½ and sold up $8.85. Ribs were up 5@7½c at $9.30 to $9.32½ and sold at $9.40.

Close: Wheat—May 86¼c; July 83¼c. Corn—May 47¾c; July 47¼c. Oats—May 33¼c; July 33⅛c. Pork—May, $16.20; July, $16.25. Lard—May, $8.70; July, $8.77½. Ribs—May, $9.25; July, $9.30. Grain Gossip.

Chicago Record-Herald: "Everything goes to show that the public must contemplate a permanently higher level of prices for grain," said former President W. S. Warren of the Chicago Board of Trade. "The fact that all our big crops of last year have disappeared without any pronounced European demand makes it appear that we must have bumper crops this year to prevent very high prices in this country. This, I believe to be the underlying strength of the situation that the trade is unconsciously combating all the time now."

Robert Pringle, Chicago: It is just dull enough to encourage our bears to put out a little wheat. The market is acting all right to me and I think should be bought under 85 cents.

Well, friends, we think that the next thing in order, is a June wedding of millionaires.

The "Old Man," to prevent a scandalous elopment, has given his consent and has gone to Salt Lake to drown himself.

But, seriously, we expect the Ophir Buckhorn Consolidation to be announced next month and Ophir Stock should then advance toward dollar.

Call and we'll convince you and sell you some Ophir.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

After Noon Following Snap and Activity of Morning.

Prices Were Pulled Back and the Close Was Easy.

New York, May 25.—Well distributed buying orders carried opening prices in the stock market upward today throughout the list. Gains in some of the speculative favorites were wide and very large orders were executed in one or two blocks. Transfers of Reading were in blocks of 1,000 to 8,000 shares at an advance of 1⅝. Great Northern preferred rose 3¾. Anaconda 2. Northern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, Wabash preferred, American Locomotive, American Smelting and United States Reduction preferred 1¼ to 1½ and Amalgamated Copper, Tennessee Coal, Colorado Fuel and Pennsylvania large fractions. Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha sold at a decline of 4½.

Continued buying of Reading on a large scale revived bullish confidence to a large degree and there was a heavy absorption of the coalers, grain carriers and metal stocks. The movement in Reading overshadowed everything else in point of importance, but the rapidity of its rise induced selling of other stocks when the general list had gone materially higher. Reading sold at 141¾, a gain of 3⅜, but had reacted to below 141 at 11 o'clock. Advances in other stocks were also shaded and there was a perceptible slackening in the demand. Among the important gains noted were: Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis preferred 5½@3⅝ Wabash preferred and Locomotive 2; Kansas & Texas preferred 1¾ and the common, Erie and the second preferred, Ontario & Western, St. Paul, New York Central, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Republic Steel and Colorado Fuel 1 to 1¾.

Dealings decreased on the reaction which reached 2 in Reading. Prices then started upwards again, selected stocks making spectacular advances, but the general run of stocks did not get higher than before. Great Northern preferred rose 5⅜. Northern Pacific 4¾. Wabash preferred 2¾. Colorado Fuel and Atlantic Coast Line 2, Louisville & Nashville and American Smelting 1⅜ and Canadian Pacific 1¼. Central of Jersey sold at a decline of 17⅜. At noon the trading was dull and prices showed fractional recessions. There was heavy buying of Wabash debenture "B" bonds. Bonds generally were steady at noon.

All the snap and activity which characterized the big operations of the forenoon went out of the market and the speculation became desultory and without feature.

Restricted dealings discouraged any general uplifting of prices, but there were few stocks which were successfully put higher. Bear influence did not extend beyond holding the market steady in the face of profit-taking in Reading and other active railroad stocks and specialties. Great Northern preferred improved 6¾. Reading second preferred 3 and Smelting preferred 1¼.

There were belated advances in stocks which had been laggard in the early trading and Reading recovered to 141⅞, the best of the day. Active realizing went on at other points and pulled prices back again. New York Central rose 2¼ and Pennsylvania ⅝ and the average nearly a point. Illinois Central gained 2¾. Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis 1⅜. Northwestern and Western Maryland 1¼. United States Steel 1⅜ and United States Realty rallied to 2 over last night. Trading became dull again with the drop in prices and the closing was easy.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed with an improved tone. This was in evidence right from the opening of the market. The coal stocks were practically the features, and giving strength to the balance of the market. Erie common was particularly well bought, and the tip has gone forth that this stock has not participated in the general strength and is entitled to a sharp upturn. Sentiment is more hopeful, and the volume of business is showing up larger. We still feel it a trading market, but sentiment at the moment is much improved.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 25.—The cotton market opened quiet and steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 3 points in response to higher cables. Prices eased off a couple of points immediately after the call under realizing by some recent buyers for a turn, but the market steadied again later in the morning on another bullish acreage, estimate pointing to an increase of a little over 8 per cent and a rather low condition report of 82.4 per cent issued by a local firm. Trading was more active during the middle of the morning and prices ranged about 3 to 4 points net higher on the active months.

Spot quiet; middling uplands, 11.10; middling gulf, 12.15; sales, 1,600 bales. Futures closed steady; closing bids: May, 11.25; June, 11.17; July, 11.16; August, 10.91; September, 10.70; October, 10.66; November, 10.65; December, 10.66; February, 10.69; March, 10.77.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The buying of Utah was the feature of the market today and the stock showed a sharp advance of 2 points. It is rumored that the next semi-annual dividend will be $3. Good buying of Osceola was again in evidence, and the stock is becoming scarce around this level. New York bought Boston Consolidated and the stock is tipped for a further rise. The whole market, however, will probably be dull for a time, and we would take advantage of the strong spots to sell on, with the exception of Copper Range, Osceola, Utah and North Butte, which, we think, will sell materially higher on the strength of the metal market.

Paine, Webber & Co.: The Boston News Bureau says: John D. Ryan of the Amalgamated Copper company, states that the Parrott dividend was recently cut to 25 cents, solely on account of the interruption to hoisting operations as the result of the re-timbering of the big shaft. Repair work on this shaft has materially cut down the amount of rock which could be hoisted and naturally earnings had to suffer in consequence. The conditions necessitating the dividend reduction are only temporary and the shaft should be in commission at an early date."

FIRE AT WINONA.

Union Fibre Company's Plant Burns--- Loss About $114,000.

Winona, Minn., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—At an early hour this morning the main buildings of the Union Fibre company in the west part of the city were entirely destroyed by fire. Last Saturday afternoon the Union Fibre company suffered a loss of about $10,000 caused by the burning of one of its largest warehouses, which with this morning's fire practically annihilated the plant. The loss is estimated at $114,000, fully covered by insurance.

SAMARITAN COUNCIL

Virginia, Minn., May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—A council of the order of Modern Samaritans will be organized this evening at Eagles' hall. Organizer A. A. Fider has been very successful and expects to start out the council with a membership of more than fifty. Some of the imperial officers from Duluth will be present to assist in the initiatory services.

The Duluth Brewing & Malting company has decided to add a third story to its hotel building here, occupied by J. J. Sullivan, instead of adding to the rear as formerly planned. The addition of a third story will furnish room for much needed guest chambers. The work will be started in a few days.

The late Marshall Field, in speaking of his mercantile career, said: "I early discovered that if I wanted to succeed I must make the newspaper my ally. After all, I had only one tongue and it had thousands." Through this alliance Mr. Field accumulated a colossal fortune. If there is a merchant who doubts that "The Evening Herald" can help him, let him consider this great merchant's words.

WHIRLWIND CAMPAIGN BY COLE IS SURPRISE TO THE POLITICIANS

Said to Have Especially Injured Candidacy of Jacobson.

Attempt May be Made to Stampede Convention to Hanson.

Schmahl Making Vigorous Fight for Secretary of State.

St. Paul, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. L. Cole's whirlwind campaign during the last week has surprised political circles all over the state. There are evidences that he is spending money lavishly in his campaign, and some of the politicians are attempting to find out what faction is really behind Cole's candidacy. C. H. Warner of Aitkin is practically managing the campaign for the Northern man, and the two together manage to make the dust fly. Not only is Cole receiving favorable mention from the press through his own section, but even as far south at Houston county and neighboring vicinities a strong Cole feeling is noticeable both in the country press and from solid business men.

It was the general opinion in many circles this week that Cole has especially injured the candidacy of Jacobson. It appears that he has cut into the Lac Qui Parle's candidate's country from all sides. While Cole is getting in touch with the people, Jacobson has tied up with other prospective possibilities in an endless chain system of letters.

Senator Cole of Fergus Falls is working hard in the interests of his brother's candidacy, and has already, it is said, lined up his district solid for Cole. There are many, it is said, who will cast their votes for Cole in Duluth next month because of their strong personal friendship for A. B. Cole, who has always been one of the most popular senators.

With the Duluth convention but a few weeks off, the gubernatorial situation is as far from crystalization as it ever was. While some candidates seem to be more in the limelight this week, the spot light may shift again and bring another into equal prominence. It is anyone's race as far as surface conditions indicate. None of the candidates are going about telling of their success. They are all quiet workers. Block refuses absolutely to discuss his chance for publication, beyond the laconic statement that "everything looks fine."

Block is making a show of strength in Hennepin, owing to the fact that the Fletcher faction is out strong for Block. This would indicate that the federal ring is either divided on a candidate this year, or else they refuse to mix in the fight in view of the rather complex conditions.

Those who have their ears to the ground state that they hear the ap-

YACHTSMEN TEMPT FATE

To Race to Bermuda Islands in Diminutive Boats.

To Sail Atlantic, With No Shelter in Case of Storm.

New York, May 26.—Six hundred and fifty miles off shore out into the broad Atlantic ocean with no shelter for refuge in stress of weather, is the course laid for the little squadron of diminutive racing yachts scheduled to start from New York to Bermuda today. The trophy is a $500 cup, the gift of Sir Thomas Lipton, and the rules under which the race is sailed calls for a seaworthy, wholesome type of craft. The Brooklyn Yacht club holds the cup in custody, the race is under its direction and all the boats entered are owned by members of that club, although the event was open to boats under fifty feet in length, of any club membership.

Four boats are entered for the race. The largest of them is but forty-four feet in length while the smallest is only twenty-eight feet long, such a craft as few experienced mariners would care to risk the dangers of the Atlantic in. Moreover, the little boats are captained and manned by amateur yachtsmen, the owners and their friends. Altogether the event is considered one of the most venturesome and perhaps the severest test of the seaworthiness of small pleasure craft yet attempted on the cost, for a hurricane in the middle of the gulf stream or even a moderate gale would be a serious strain on the seamanship of the amateur sailors as well as upon the ability of the racing boats.

The boats entered, their owners, length over all and time allowances, are as follows:

Sloop, Bonnie Kate, W. B. Goddard, 44 feet, scratch.

Yawl, Lila, R. D. Floyd, 40 feet, 5 hours, 20 minutes.

Yawl, Tamerlane, Frank Maier, 39 feet, 8 hours, 20 minutes.

Sloop, Gauntlet, George W. Robinson, 28 feet, 24 hours, 30 minutes.

Some doubt was expressed whether the Bonnie Kate would start. Six to eight men constituted the crew of each craft and each carried a small boat as tender but hardly big enough for much use in event of disaster.

The start was scheduled for 3 p. m., and a big fleet of small boats was expected to escort the racers down the bay. The finish line will be fixed off the harbor of Hamilton, Bermuda, where preparations have been made to give the Americans a generous reception. Under fair conditions the yachtsmen hope to reach Bermuda in six to eight days. While there they will sail a race around the islands and then race back to Brooklyn for a cash prize.

MARKETS OF MANCHURIA

Being Monopolized by Japanese to Exclusion of Others.

Washington, May 26.—Eastern mails bring news of friction between the English merchants and the Japanese officials resulting from the difficulty experienced by the former in obtaining access to the markets of Manchuria. It is charged that the Japanese seized the opportunity afforded by their military occupancy of the country to concentrate all of the trade in the hands of their own merchants and that not only is the country glutted with goods to a point that makes it practically impossible to find openings for European goods, but through their control of transportation in Manchuria and Korea the Japanese officials are able to discriminate against traders of other nationalities. In one place the Chinese, themselves complain that the Japanese have built a bridge across one of the principal streams so low that it can no longer be used by the Chinese boats with the result that traffic is diverted entirely to the Japanese owned railroads.

FINAL MATCH IN GOLF TOURNAMENT IS ON.

New York, May 26.—The final match of thirty-six holes for the Metropolitan amateur golf championship was begun today on St. Andrews links between Jerome D. Travers of Mont Clair, N. J., and Eben Byers of the Allegheny club of Pittsburg, entered from the St. Andrews club. The victory of Byers over Walter J. Travis of Garden City yesterday, was the sensation of the week's play. Byers had beaten Travis four years ago in the national tournament at Glenview, near Chicago, but travis had frequently defeated Byers since that. In addition to the big match for the title, there are three other final matches for minor cups to be decided today, and there is a big entry for the eighteen-hole handicap, which will wind up the tournament.

WILL RESTORE LOST CHILDREN

Who Became Separated From Parents in Frisco Disaster.

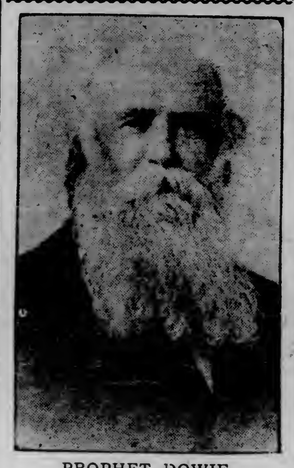
Washington, May 26.—An appeal from Ellen Louise Bigelow of Harvard, Mass., to President Roosevelt, on behalf of children who were separarted from their parents by the California earthquake, resulted in special instructions to Dr. Devine, the Red Cross agent in San Francisco, urging him to have notices of missing children posted at all relief stations, and to send Red Cross headquarters full descriptions of missing children, that immediate steps may be taken to get information regarding them. The note from the Massachusetts woman enclosed clippings from Ogden, Utah; Salem, Or.; Seattle, Wash., and other Western cities concerning children who became separated from their parents, and were taken in all directions on trains for refuge. This letter was sent from the White House to Red Cross headquarters, and immediate instructions were directed to Dr. Devine, in which the co-operation of the force at the head offices in this city was offered for the purpose of advertising lost children and bringing about the reunion of all families scattered by the disaster.

MARINE IS A HERO

But Will Not Get Medal On Account of Technicality.

Washington, May 26.—Although he risked his life in the efforts to save a drowning comrade, Arthur T. Reeder, of the marine corps will not receive a medal from the treasury department as a reward for his valor because the medals are only for deeds of heroism in the "navigable waters of the United States," and the Chagres river in the Canal zone is held not to be within the provisions of the law.

CALL FOR OXYGEN FOR DR. DOWIE



PROPHET DOWIE.

Chicago, May 26.—John Alexander Dowie is believed to be seriously ill in his apartments in the Virginia hotel. A hurried call for oxygen was sent out early today, and it was admitted by his followers that he is a very sick man.

MISCREANTS WRECK TRAIN

Fast Running New York Central Express Leaves the Rails.

Believed That Striking Section Men Tampered With Fish Plates.

Amsterdam, N. Y., May 26.—New York Central express train No. 34, east bound, was wrecked at an early hour today near Hoffman, seven miles east of this city, while running at a high rate of speed. No human lives were lost, but nine horses were killed, and an express agent was bruised. The train consisted of seven express cars, two horse cars and three empty drawing room coaches. The locomotive and two express cars left the rails, plowing across the tracks and piling up, blocked all tracks for several hours. The wreck undoubtedly was caused by the fish plates having been tampered with. About 100 Italian section hands between Hoffman and this city struck Thursday for higher wages, and marched seven miles along the Central's tracks. Yesterday they continued their demonstrations, but several of the men were arrested in this city for trespassing, and were fined.

DURAND COMING BACK.

Liverpool, May 26.—Ambassador Durand was a passenger on board the Cunard liner Lucania, which sailed from here today for New York.

THE STANDARD OIL HAS A GREAT ADVANTAGE IN RATES ON LAKE SHORE

Former Chief Clerk Gives Commission Valuable Information.

Road Tried to Ruin Him After He Left Employ.

Succeeded in Getting Low Rates for New Company.

Cleveland, May 26.—W. H. Machen, a former chief clerk in the car department of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad general office in Cleveland, was the first witness today in the Standard Oil investigation by the interstate commerce commission. He testified that he had charge of the compiling of the mileage of the cars of the Union Tank Line.

He said that reports were forwarded each day at noon to the Cleveland office of the Standard Oil company. The Lake Shore company, he declared, gave the Standard a big advantage in tabulating records of tank cars in that the mileage of Standard tank cars was figured on a different basis than the cars of competing companies. The advantage amounted all the way from 8 cents to 54 cents per car, according to the distances between different points on the road.

When he left the employ of the Lake Shore several years ago, he began work for the Peerless Transit company, an independent tank line. He asked the Lake Shore officials for the same basis of figuring mileage as was given to the Union Tank line. He was ridiculed, he said, and was told that he did not know what he was talking about, and every effort was made to belittle him in the eyes of his new employers.

Finally, however, having obtained copies of the Union Tank lines reports, and taken them to the proper officials, the road reluctantly granted his request.

Some two weeks ago, however, he said he had ascertained that the old order of things had been resumed, and he went to investigate. The Lake Shore officials, he said, acted surprised, and offered the explanation that the Peerless Transit company, being the only concern which was allowed the same rates as the Union Tank line, the matter had been quite forgotten. The Union Tank line rate was at once restored. Machen also testified that the Lake Shore and Pennsylvania companies had recently been rejecting Peerless Transit company's tank cars, built in accordance with specifications furnished by the railroad companies, while Union Tank cars, not complying with specifications, were accepted.

CHILD DROWNED.

Mellen, Wis., May 26.—The 2-year-old daughter of Camillo David was drowned Thursday night while playing on the bank of Bad river. She is supposed to have fallen in.

NINETEEN INDICTED

Grand Jury Returns Bills Against Bridge Companies and Agents.

Allen County, O., Said to Have Been Shamefully Robbed.

Lima, Ohio, May 26.—Nineteen bridge companies and agents were indicted by the grand jury late Friday afternoon, but the county officials refuse to make their names public until service can be had upon them. Thirty-four indictments in all were returned, but true bills against the bridge companies and agents were "secret." Conditions in Allen county, because of the operation of the bridge trust, are reported by the grand jury as even worse than expected.

Of the thirty-four indictments returned, there are two each against Former County Commissioner T. C. Burns, Geo. W. Kanawad and Albert Heffner.

The exposures regarding the bridge trust operations here are said to show that the county has paid from three to five times what should have been the ordinary cost of bridges.

The most sensational evidence, it is said, came from the bridge trust agents, James T. Adams of Findlay, John Dunn of Columbus, and John Reed of Canton, each of whom was exempt from any local prosecutions.

PRESENTS CREDENTIALS.

Ambassador Wright is Received by the Mikado of Japan.

Tokio, May 26.—Ambassador Wright, accompanied by the members of the American embassy, and the ladies of the party, proceeded to the palace today to present his credentials to the emperor. The court master of the ceremonies went to the embassy to convey the ambassador to the palace in an imperial carriage, and a troop of imperial lancers acted as a guard of honor. This brilliant procession reached the palace through the main gate, which is reserved for their majesties and the princes of the imperial house, and for visitors arriving and departing on state occasions. It is reported that the emperor was most cordial in his reception of the ambassador and his suite, who afterwards were received in audience by the empress.

Mr. Wilson, former secretary, and until recently in charge of the American legation here, who it has been announced is to succeed H. H. D. Peirce as third assistant secretary of state, will start for home May 29.

RESCUED BY LIFE BOAT

Wreckers on Steamer Mataafa Forced to Ask for Assistance.

Heavy Gale Makes Their Position on Steamer Untenable.

Memories of the terrible storm of Nov. 28 were recalled this morning, when another call for the life savers was sent from the ill-fated steamer Mataafa.

When work on the wrecking was abandoned Thursday, owing to the heavy sea, seven men were left aboard the steamer to keep the fires going and the pumps working. The wind increased in violence during last night, and toward morning a very heavy sea was running. The men began to find their position untenable, and a call was sent to the life savers for assistance.

This time the lifesavers were successful in reaching the steamer, the violence of the storm being nothing as compared with that of last November. The life boat was launched successfully, and reached the side of the steamer without mishap. All seven men were taken off, and brought to shore in safety, none the worse for their night on the steamer.

The sea was far too heavy for the tugs to venture near the boat, and had it not been for the life saving crew the men would have been compelled to remain aboard until the storm abated.

In spite of the fact that they were in no immediate danger, the night spent in the ill-fated vessel where nine men met a horrible death from exposure under conditions much similar to theirs, must have conjured up many unpleasant thoughts in the minds of the seven men.

REAL GALE PROMISED

High Winds Will Prevail on Lake Superior Over Sunday.

Chicago, May 26.—Storm warnings are flying at all upper lake ports today, and the weather bureau promises a real gale from the tip of Lake Superior eastward. Tonight the winds will be dangerously high and tomorrow they will not be much better.

St. Paul, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Weather Observer Williams announced today that the unsettled condition of the weather which has prevailed throughout the month will continue at least until Monday night. "Unsettled conditions prevail throughout the West as far as the coast," he said.

"It was below freezing this morning at Devils Lake and Minnedosa and it was snowing at Miles City and Havre. From such weather as this there is little promise of anything much better around these parts. The temperature dropped last evening twenty-four degrees, the biggest drop recorded on the weather map. Yesterday it was 64 and at 7 this morning it was only 40. During the night .72 of an inch of rain fell, raising the total for the month to 8.29. The river this morning showed a stage of 10.3, a rise of three-tenths of a foot since yesterday.

A STRONG PROTEST AGAINST POLYGAMY.

Richmond, Ind., May 26.—The committee on reform of the United Presbyterian general assembly today recommended that the assembly communicate with the United States senate urging prompt and thorough action in the Smoot case and protesting against the existence of polygamy, or polygamous practices in the United States or in any place subject to its jurisdiction. The committee further urges that the church join with other reform forces in the effort to have congress refuse to admit any more territories to statehood until an anti-polygamy amendment to the constitution has been enacted or until the Mormon church has given conclusive evidence of having abolished polygamy.

BOLT KILLS ONE; ANOTHER IS HURT.

Walnut Grove, Minn., May 26.—Lightning struck the large icehouse owned by Jacobs & Nelson of this village, setting it on fire and destroying most of the building.

While milking cows Charles Olson and his wife were severely injured by a bolt which struck their barn, killing two horses and three cows. Mr. Olson is in a critical condition. The barn was fired, but quick action by farm hands saved it.

A farmer, whose name is unknown, living northeast of the village about ten miles, was struck by lightning and killed; also his horse. The rain has washed corn and all late-planted seed out of the ground.

CHERISHED HOPES OF THE RUSSIAN PEOPLE NEGATIVED BY CZAR

Government's Policy Announced to Parliament by the Premier.

Leader of Social Democrats Flings Down Gauntlet to Rulers.

Violently Demands the Retirement of the Bureaucratic Cabinet.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—Before a house more crowded than on the opening day, with every member in his seat, and the press and public galleries crowded to suffocation, Premier Goremykin this afternoon read to the lower house the expected declaration of the government's policy, pronouncing the imperial negative on the most cherished hopes and plans of the people's representatives. In the imperial box sat Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaievich, following the proceedings with the keenest interest. There was scarcely standing room in the section assigned members of the upper house, and the premier and the entire cabinet, with the exception of Vice Admiral Birileff, minister of marine, and Lieut.-Gen. Rudiger, minister of war, occupied seats on the ministerial benches.

The scene before the opening was of great but suppressed excitement. All present were aware that the response would utterly fail to meet the wishes of the lower house, and a hum of eager discussion as to the effect of the resolution expressing lack of confidence in the government which the Constitutional Democrats and the Labor party had drafted in advance, filled the hall and corridors. The tinkle of President Mouromtseff's bell calling the house to instant silence, whereupon, without waiting for any further preliminaries, Premier Goremykin mounted to the tribune and began reading the governmental declarations. He evidently was not used to public speeches, as he labored under considerable strain, and spoke in a low, weak voice, which at times, though deathly silence prevailed, failed to reach the rear of the great hall, except as an indistinct muttering.

The reading, which was as rapid as if the premier had been in a hurry to get through with a disagreeable task, lasted eighteen minutes, and was interrupted only by pauses to swallow several glasses of water. The members, in the meanwhile, sat stolidly silent, and when the premier had finished and bowed to the assembly, not a murmur of approval was heard throughout the house, where the pages began to distribute printed copies of the speech.

A wonderful scene followed when M. Roditcheff, the leader of the Constitutional Democrats, mounted to the rostrum to reject, in behalf of his party, the government's reply. With burning words he flung down the gauntlet to the government, thunders of applause greeting his sallies of defiance.

The Grand Duke Nicholas Nickolalevich shrank back into a corner of the imperial box as the orator flayed the administration, and the premier and the other members of the cabinet seemed to shrink lower down in their chairs.

When M. Roditcheff turned toward the benches occupied by the ministry,

WITNESS WILL NOW TESTIFY

Kansas City Capitalist is Again Charged With Bribery.

St. Louis, May 26.—Assistant Circuit Attorney Fickeissen stated today that he had just drawn up an information charging Robert M. Snyder, capitalist of Kansas City, with bribery in the allegation of having paid $50,000 to certain members of the city council in 1898 for the passage of the central traction bill.

This information takes the place of the old information against Snyder, the case against him having been nolle prossed about two weeks ago by Circuit Attorney Sager, because of the absence from the city of Former Councilman Fred G. Utthoff, the most important witness for the state. Mr. Sager is now in Denver, and Utthoff is also there. Assistant Circuit Attorney Fickeissen drew up the new information after having received notification from Circuit Attorney Sager that Utthoff had promised to appear at a new trial of Snyder.

CASSATT BOOKED PASSAGE SUDDENLY.

Paris, May 26.—A. J. Cassatt, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, who is a passenger on board the Hamburg-American liner Amerika, which sailed from Cherbourg for New York yesterday, booked his passage while the steamer train was waiting at the depot. Subsequently his name was not entered on the list. He informed a steamship official that he had intended sailing later, but had been urgently called back.

BUYS UTAH MINES.

H. E. Smith Closes Large Deal in Salt Lake City.

The Inter-Mountain Republican of Salt Lake City, Utah, says:

"The No-You-Don't group of mines at Stockton, that under the pioneer administration were productive of ores of the value of many thousands of dollars, have passed into the hands of H. E. Smith of Duluth, Minn., the engineer by whom the transaction was promoted being Peter Porter of Salt Lake, and the consideration by which W. W. Chisholm and James A. Cunningham were induced to part with the properties being $50,000. The intention of the purchaser is to begin the reopening of the properties at once, and to that end the machinery is to be removed to the former shaft, which has attained a depth of 400 feet, and which was the outlet for a considerable tonnage of ore of good quality before that through which the management worked in later years was started. A careful examination of the property has convinced Mr. Porter that it holds out as many possibilities as any in the camp, while that E. J. Raddatz, manager of the Honerine, has consented to assume the management for Mr. Smith and his associates cannot but inspire confidence in the results that are to be achieved. There is no one, perhaps, who is as conversant with the No-You-Don't, and that he will succeed in adding it to the list of producers in a short time is confidently believed."

KING BRINGS PRINCESS TO MADRID IN AN AUTO.

Madrid, May 26.—King Alfonso rode in an automobile today from the Royal palace to the Pardo palace, where he joined Princess Ena. Later the king brought the princess and her mother, Princess Henry, to Madrid, driving the car himself. Much enthusiasm was manifested along the route, the people joyfully testifying their admiration for Princess Ena. There were no notable features on the program today.

BUT ONE VOTE SAVES MINISTER.

Appleton, Wis., May 26.—But one vote today kept Rev. A. H. Seekiel, representative of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon league, from being convicted of violating the Sunday labor law for purchasing beer on the Sabbath, to use as evidence against saloon men operating on Sunday. The jury voted five to one for conviction. The case will be tried again Tuesday.

CAPTAIN KIDD INVENTS DEVICE FOR ORE BOATS

Designed to Permit Unloading With Clam Shell Machine.

If Successful Will Cheapen and Quicken Unloading of Cargo.

Capt. Joseph Kidd of Duluth believes—and this belief is endorsed by many prominent vesselmen and dockmen—that he has found the scheme whereby the ore or coal carrier may unload its cargo without the help of men other than those who handle the clam-shell unloading machines. In the ordinary modern freighter the clam-shells are effective in unloading until the bottom of the ship is reached. Then the men have to be sent down into the hold with shovels to gather the ore or coal together and later to actually shovel it into the clam-shell. Capt. Kidd claims that in a ship built with the type of hold which he has just invented and had patented the clam-shells will completely empty her with the exception of the few crumbs which are left under any circumstances.

Cuts of one of the designs on which he secured the patent are given here—a longitudinal view of the proposed hull. This view explains the idea of the scheme. The inverted "V" shaped affairs shown in this are hollow partitions running from side to side across the steamer and from a series of hoppers spaced 12-foot centers into which the ore or coal, as the case may be, is dumped in loading. In unloading the clam-shell buckets which are used on the receiving docks, are sent down to clutch the cargo and bring it up. After the hoppers are reached, the idea is to send these buckets down the middle of the hoppers. As the ore is taken out of the hopper, that which remains will, by force of gravity, pile into the middle of it, sliding down the sides as the amount becomes less and less and in this way will continue to be in the middle of the hopper and available for the jaws of the clam-shell bucket until the last vestige of it will have been removed from the vessel.

This is not an entirely new idea, for Capt. Kidd designed substantially the same thing before and which idea has been embodied in the Tomlinson steamer Hoover & Mason. However, there is this difference: In the steamer Hoover & Mason the sides of the hoppers close clear to the bottom. This was found to be unsuccessful, for the reason that the continued slope allowed ore or coal toward the last to accumulate on the sides and the buckets were unable to get at it. Capt. Kidd believes that in his new design, he has overcome this difficulty. In the longitudinal view given here, it will be observed that toward the bottom of the hoppers the slope assumes a perpendicular shape. In this cut the design is planned to give a perpendicular drop to the side of 24 inches; but Capt. Kidd prefers and so states in his application for a patent, that the perpendicular part of the hopper shall be one-half the total height, giving just slope enough to the top part of the hopper, to compel the cargo to accumulate in the center.

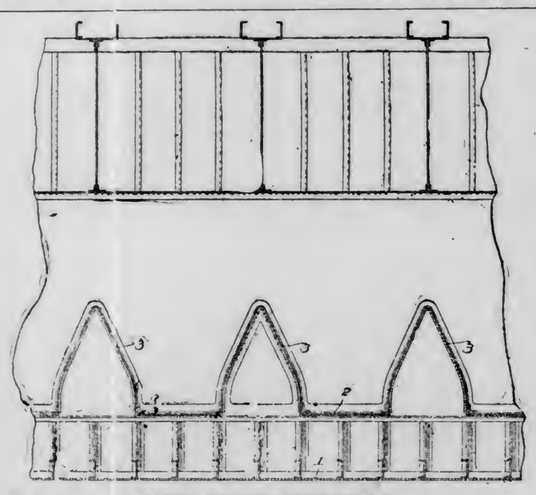
The design is meeting with a widespread endorsement among vesselmen and especially dockmen, who are supposed to be the most likely to know what will be successful with the appliances they have at hand for unloading. Capt. Kidd has just received a letter from the superintendent of one of the biggest docks on Lake Erie, a man who is considered an expert at his business and this is what he says of the new patent:

"I have looked over the plans very carefully and am satisfied that in so far as the unloading goes, a boat of this type would be an entire success. This type of construction simplifies unloading machinery and increases the efficiency of unloading machinery, for the reason that it can work to its maximum capacity until the boat is almost entirely cleaned up.

"The shape of the peaks as you show them, I think is very good; in fact in criticising the Hoover & Mason, I suggested the shape such as you show them, so that I think you have adopted very good lines.

"Care should be taken regarding the ore in the wings. The bilges should be either sloped or boxed in so that there will be no difficulty in taking the ore out of the wings with the grab buckets. From an unloading standpoint, I am very sure this boat will be an entire success."

Another advantage of the invention as claimed by Capt. Kidd is that it strengthens the ship. The partitions are designed to prevent the possibility of the vessel sagging by reason of an unequal distribution of the load, and it is claimed, is made so strong that all of the cargo might be piled in the middle of the hold without causing the vessel to sag. The partitions are built in solidly riveted to the hull and form a rigid permanent portion thereof and also serve to permit the water ballast to come up high, increasing the capacity and renders the vessel more seaworthy.



CAPT. KIDD'S INVENTION.
Inverted "V" shapes represent sides of hoppers running crosswise in vessel's hold, forming hoppers beneath the hatches.

THE SHAW AND CORALIA

Come in Collision at the Sault---The Shaw Considerably Damaged.

Sault Ste. Marie, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Shaw, bound down with the whaleback barge 123 in tow collided last night in the fog with the upbound steamer Coralia which had in tow the barge Maia. The impact caused the Shaw to strand on Round Island, but she was afterwards released. The tow line between the Coralia and the barge scraped along the whole length of the deck of the Shaw, carrying away both spars and bending the smoke stack. The Shaw also has a large hole in the starboard bow on the windlass deck and the starboard anchor is gone, but there is no injury below the waterline. The 123 has plates and frames damaged on the port bow and is leaking. Temporary repairs will be made here. Both the Coralia and the Maia also received injury, but they proceeded on their way to Duluth.

LOSES DECK LOAD.

Lumber Steamer Prentice Has to Put Back in Gale.

The gale which is blowing from the northeast is holding a good many boats in the harbor. About 2 o'clock this afternoon the steamer C. A. Black of the Pittsburg fleet ventured out and she was the first to go out or enter since 9 o'clock this morning at which time the gale was blowing strongly. It started some time during the night.

Early this morning the steam lumber hooker Prentice started out, but after getting about Lakeside found the gale a bit too strong for her so she started to turn about and head back for port.

When she was turning the wind and sea caught her on the port side and she lost about half of her deck load.

The steamer got back into port all right, but had a bad list to starboard. She is now getting straightened out and will leave again as soon as the wind dies down.

The Uranus Ashore.

Houghton, May 27.—During a dense fog the steamer Uranus of the Gilchrist fleet, got out of her channel while rounding Keweenaw point and stranded on Eagle river reef. The steamer is reported to be out 18 inches forward with the forward compartments full of water. She was bound from Duluth to Lake Erie with a cargo of iron ore. The Portage Lake life-saving crew in command of Capt. T. H. McCormick, with tugs and workmen to throw the cargo overboard, have gone to her assistance.

John C. Eden's Company Takes Option on Morgan Property.

The Rhodes Iron company, of which John C. Eden, who is well known in Duluth, is president, has taken an option on the Morgan property, in the Iron River, Mich., district, and is preparing to begin diamond drill operations at once.

The Morgan property adjoins the Caspian mine of Pickands, Mather & Company, and the Fogarty and McGillis properties.

The Rhodes interests are also said to have an option on the Section 12 mine, adjoining the Baltic and Fogarty, the most promising properties in the district.

REBUILDING HAS STARTED.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Merchants Have Now Started Replacing Their Burned Stores.

Friends of C. S. Sargent, who left Duluth a day or so ago to return to his home in Fairbanks, Alaska, only to learn that his retail establishment there had burned, have heard from him, and the enterprising Northland merchant already has a new store under way in the Alaska city.

Mr. Sargent received word that a warehouse he was interested in was also destroyed. His representatives there are doing business for his firm in another, however, and the construction of a new store is beginning.

Mr. Sargent himself will not be in Fairbanks for a month. He is going by way of San Francisco.

No Relief in Sight Yet.

Users of Pacific coast timber are still waiting for consignments of lumber and there is no relief in sight yet. One big user received a wire today from a big manufacturer of fir timber, stating that he had no end of timber in readiness to ship, but that he was unable to secure the cars. This car shortage has been menacing building operations and other improvements all this spring.

McCUMBER'S CHARGES

Of Graft in Grain Inspection Angers Minnesota Commission.

Will Demand That the Allegations Shall be Investigated.

St. Paul, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state railway and warehouse commission announces that it intends to demand an investigation of charges made by Senator McCumber, that the grain inspection department of the state is one huge graft.

"We are not going to allow a slur like this to stand," said Commissioner Staples today.

"We are now preparing a statement and will forward copies of it to Senator Clapp and Senator Nelson with the request that they demand an immediate investigation of the charges. These accusations of late have been too frequent and we do not propose to remain silent any longer."

Senator McCumber's charges, which were supported by Senator Hansbrough, in the United States senate yesterday, had for their basis the statement that North Dakota farmers suffered the loss of thousands of dollars by having their wheat graded as of inferior quality. The Minneapolis grain inspection department, Senator McCumber held, was permeated with graft and he offered in substantiation the recent decision of Judge Sanborn, holding the Wisconsin grain inspection law to be unconstitutional. This decision made serious charges against the Minnesota inspection law.

"The basis of these charges," said Commissioner Staples, "seems to be some figures emanating from a Mr. Crumpton, a former grain dealer at Superior and now a member of the Duluth board of trade. They covered a period of ten years from 1892 and pretended to show that more grain is shipped out of the state than is received, something like 36,000,000 bushels.

"The trouble with these figures, is that they are taken from the registrar's report at Duluth and do not in any way show the grain taken into the mills. Had he used the weighmaster's figures he would have found in three years alone, 1893, 1894 and 1895, over 30,000,000 bushels found its way to the mills. It is this discrepancy in Crumpton's figures that has made all the trouble. He has since discredited his own figures.

"The charges that the inspection system of the state is permeated with graft has been flung at the commission several times and the members say they are tired of it. For that reason they will demand an investigation.

AGED MAN'S HEART FAILS.

Wisconsin Pioneer Found Dead in Bed at a Relative's Home.

Hudson, Wis., May 26.—John Welch, aged 76, one of the first settlers in St. Joseph township, St. Croix county, was found dead in his bed at the home of his son-in-law, William Harney, at Warren, east of Hudson. Death was due to paralysis of the heart. Mr. Welch leaves a family of four daughters. The remains were interred at Somerset, Wis.

About the American Navy.

Naval men claim that this important lesson was learned from the Russian-Japanese war, namely, that the navy of the United States must be well provided with heavy warships, in order that we may hold the proud position we now occupy among the nations of the world. Thousands of sickly persons long ago learned the lesson that for making people well and keeping them so there was no medicine like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Every bottle is now backed by a 50-years' record of cures, which ought to convince the most skeptical that it contains true merit and is worthy of a fair trial. If the stomach is weak, appetite poor, sleep restless or nerves unstrung, the Bitters is needed at once. It also cures dyspepia, indigetion, costiveness, heartburn, bloating female ills, dizziness, fainting spells or malaria.

JOHN L. ON THE FIGHT.

Says Outcome Will Not Be a Help to the Pugilistic Game.

John L. Sullivan manifested a great interest in the returns from the Nelson-Herrera fight which was to have been pulled off in San Francisco last evening. The big fellow waited till long after the last reports were in in the hope that the fighters might change their minds and get together.

"If those scales were not right, the fighters and their managers knew in time to remedy the difficulty, and they should have done so," said John L. "That business of getting 5,000 people together and keeping their nerves up for a grand mill and then turning them out without giving them a run for their money will certainly not boost the fight business on the coast. Nelson seemed to be willing enough to go against the Mexican at mostly any old weight; but I presume Herrera was perfectly right in his contention that he had done all that was fair to have the fight come off. It is not every day in the week that fight promoters, or any other promoters of any kind of an amusement proposition, can get a $50,000 crowd of people together and I think that if the match had been properly handled from both sides that the battle could have been fought, even in the face of all the difficulties."

Last evening at the Metropolitan Mattson, the wrestler with the Sullivan company disposed of five large men in less than nine minutes. Some of these men were there with the avoirdupois and with plenty of muscle and bone. This evening Mattson will take on five other local men among whom are two husky boiler makers, hard as steel and in the very pink of condition.

The Sullivan company closes its engagement in Duluth Sunday night and will go from here to Superior where the company plays three days.

MUST BEGIN CIVIL SUITS

On Former Officers of Northwestern Life to Recover Money.

Minneapolis, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—State Insurance Commissioner T. D. O'Brien has made formal demand upon the officers of the Northwestern Life Insurance company that they begin civil suits against the former officials to recover certain large sums alleged to have been illegally diverted while they were in office. L. K. Thompson, president of the company, today said that such suits had been under contemplation for some time but that the directors were awaiting the outcome of the criminal trials now in progress before taking any action. Dr. J. F. Force, former president of the company, who is now on trial for alleged grand larceny, today testified regarding his contract with the company, stating that he drew less than his salary and that the money made over to him upon his retirement simply represented that portion of his remuneration which had not been paid him while in office.

TRICK IN ALL TRADES.

Daring Circus Feat Not so Difficult When You Know How.

If you were ever thrilled to the marrow by the sight of some daring performer in pink tights looping the loop in midair, it may be rather a relief to learn from the following that there is just a chance the dashing individual was not in quite so much danger as you thought, says London Answers. One of these queens of the air lately brought an action for damages—and won it—because the apparatus, which ought to have made her quite safe, at the critical moment failed to act, and she unfortunately fell down.

This was very unlucky, because the ingenious devices provided ought to have prevented any fall being possible. The "loop" was "looped" on a little four-wheeled carriage which ran along the airy path provided for it, and had between each pair of wheels a little steel bar which reached down through a groove in the track.

The bar, being furnished with a cross-piece running on tiny castors, thus kept the car to the track in whatever position. It was invisible to the audience, being a matter which did not concern them, but one night the bar jumped the groove, and threw the car off the lower part of the track.

Result—a broken leg for the performer, who claimed damages in the courts, averring negligence on the part of the owners of the circus. She won her case, but as all the details had to come out publicly, some cynical people thought it rather a "give away." Of course, many performances of this kind are quite genuine, be it said; but as human life is a precious thing it should be well guarded.

Not very long ago a lion tamer from Hungary—not that there are any lions there—of the name of Max Ardenow, came to this country and thrilled many audiences in the provinces by his daring in the lions' den. He had three of these animals and a bear, and it is only fair to say that scarcely any man ever took such liberties with the king of beasts. He did not seem to care what indignities he put them to, and went to great lengths to stir up their rage. Many people even thought he was brutal to them, and few lion tamers had so much eclat while it lasted.

A curious fact, however, which came out later, was that the lions had not a tooth among them, and their claws were cut short between the toes. They were all very ancient beasts, and, in fact, were fed on "slops" out of hours. Sometimes, when Ardnow went to lengths that no self-respecting lion could put up with he was sent flying across the cage by the blow of a paw, but that was all. He had to stir them up a great deal to make them look respectfully fierce, but the end came when at Liverpool one of the lions yawned rudely at the audience. Several people noticed the lack of teeth, and a smart Lancaster reporter ferreted out the truth and published it. Such ridicule fell on Andrenow that he left the country soon afterward, and it is said he has retired from the lion-taming trade, having done very well at it while his vogue was at its height.

A great many people in this country a few years ago held their breath nightly while a marvelous rifle shot performer, who called himself "The Modern William Tell," showed the most thrilling performances with a rifle that have ever been staged. His specialty was to shoot glass balls off the head of his son, a boy of 12 or so, and did it with the most marvelous precision, not only straight from the shoulder, but under it, backward between his legs, and even facing the other way, and shooting by means of a mirror, he picked off the glass globe every time without even grazing his son's scalp.

Some good people thought the show should be stopped as too perilous for decency. It was not till "William Tell" returned to his native United States, however, that the secret was exposed. The glass balls contained detonators, and were placed on a couple of tiny wires which ran through a wig the boy wore, and which led down one of his legs by way of a pocket electrical accumulator. As he stood with his hands at the sides, a slight pressure of the fingers connected the two wires together and completed the circuit and exploded the little detonator, which burst the ball to pieces as if by a bullet. The cartridges in the rifle were blank. One night the ball burst prematurely, and a suspicious Pittsburg audience, "rushed" the stage and discovered the secret for themselves.

You may possibly have felt a little "thrilly" at seeing a juggler keep six or seven knives circling in a glittering stream round his head. These knives, however, have edges considerably blunter than your domestic butter knife, and it would do the performer no harm to catch them by the blades instead of the handles, if he could.

It would take a very clever juggler to do so, however, for the handles are very carefully weighted and are bound to fall lowest. By watching, you will observe that however the knives are thrown the blades remain nearly upright as they pass through the air.

As to knives, by the way, the most ingenious and unique safety contrivance in any "thrilling" show was that invented and used by two performers in the "World's Greatest Knife Act" some years since. This was a variation of the ancient one in which a person stands against a wall and another throws knives all around him, leaving them sticking in the wall. In the case of the "World's Greatest," etc., this was much improved, and the precision with which the knives were sent the distance they were thrown from, and the force with which they dashed into the wood made the performance very remarkable. The position of the lady when the knives were hurled at her looked terribly perilous.

The device was this: The screen against which she stood was of soft wood, covered with thin paper. At the back of the screen were several great horseshoe magnets, with their spokes touching the soft wood, and between these, as it were, stood the lady. The magnets were magnetized by a very powerful electric current. Though the screen covered them, it did not overcome their power, which was so great that no steel knife thrown toward them could deflect at all in its flight, but sped straight to the magnets' poles and stuck in the wood that shielded them. These poles thus circled the lady all around, and with fairly straight throwing she was as safe as if she had been plate armor. Any slight fault in the aim was overcome by the "pull" of the magnets as her husband hurled the knives at her.

"Small service is real service—while it lasts;" and Herald want advertising is real advertising—and for a thousand purposes, ample advertising.

BUYS UTAH MINES.

H. E. Smith Closes Large Deal in Salt Lake City.

The Inter-Mountain Republican of Salt Lake City, Utah, says:

"The No-You-Don't group of mines at Stockton, that under the pioneer administration were productive of ores of the value of many thousands of dollars, have passed into the hands of H. E. Smith of Duluth, Minn., the engineer by whom the transaction was promoted being Peter Porter of Salt Lake, and the consideration by which W. W. Chisholm and James A. Cunningham were induced to part with the properties being $50,000. The intention of the purchaser is to begin the reopening of the properties at once, and to that end the machinery is to be removed to the former shaft, which has attained a depth of 400 feet, and which was the outlet for a considerable tonnage of ore of good quality before that through which the management worked in later years was started. A careful examination of the property has convinced Mr. Porter that it holds out as many possibilities as any in the camp, while that E. J. Raddatz, manager of the Honerine, has consented to assume the management for Mr. Smith and his associates cannot but inspire confidence in the results that are to be achieved. There is no one, perhaps, who is as conversant with the No-You-Don't, and that he will succeed in adding it to the list of producers in a short time is confidently believed."

KING BRINGS PRINCESS TO MADRID IN AN AUTO.

Madrid, May 26.—King Alfonso rode in an automobile today from the Royal palace to the Pardo palace, where he joined Princess Ena. Later the king brought the princess and her mother, Princess Henry, to Madrid, driving the car himself. Much enthusiasm was manifested along the route, the people joyfully testifying their admiration for Princess Ena. There were no notable features on the program today.

BUT ONE VOTE SAVES MINISTER.

Appleton, Wis., May 26.—But one vote today kept Rev. A. H. Seekiel, representative of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon league, from being convicted of violating the Sunday labor law for purchasing beer on the Sabbath, to use as evidence against saloon men operating on Sunday. The jury voted five to one for conviction. The case will be tried again Tuesday.

CAPTAIN KIDD INVENTS DEVICE FOR ORE BOATS

Designed to Permit Unloading With Clam Shell Machine.

If Successful Will Cheapen and Quicken Unloading of Cargo.

Capt. Joseph Kidd of Duluth believes—and this belief is endorsed by many prominent vesselmen and dockmen—that he has found the scheme whereby the ore or coal carrier may unload its cargo without the help of men other than those who handle the clam-shell unloading machines. In the ordinary modern freighter the clam-shells are effective in unloading until the bottom of the ship is reached. Then the men have to be sent down into the hold with shovels to gather the ore or coal together and later to actually shovel it into the clam-shell. Capt. Kidd claims that in a ship built with the type of hold which he has just invented and had patented the clam-shells will completely empty her with the exception of the few crumbs which are left under any circumstances.

Cuts of one of the designs on which he secured the patent are given here—a longitudinal view of the proposed hull. This view explains the idea of the scheme. The inverted "V" shaped affairs shown in this are hollow partitions running from side to side across the steamer and from a series of hoppers spaced 12-foot centers into which the ore or coal, as the case may be, is dumped in loading. In unloading the clam-shell buckets which are used on the receiving docks, are sent down to clutch the cargo and bring it up. After the hoppers are reached, the idea is to send these buckets down the middle of the hoppers. As the ore is taken out of the hopper, that which remains will, by force of gravity, pile into the middle of it, sliding down the sides as the amount becomes less and less and in this way will continue to be in the middle of the hopper and available for the jaws of the clam-shell bucket until the last vestige of it will have been removed from the vessel.

This is not an entirely new idea, for Capt. Kidd designed substantially the same thing before and which idea has been embodied in the Tomlinson steamer Hoover & Mason. However, there is this difference: In the steamer Hoover & Mason the sides of the hoppers close clear to the bottom. This was found to be unsuccessful, for the reason that the continued slope allowed ore or coal toward the last to accumulate on the sides and the buckets were unable to get at it. Capt. Kidd believes that in his new design, he has overcome this difficulty. In the longitudinal view given here, it will be observed that toward the bottom of the hoppers the side assumes a perpendicular shape. In this out the design is planned to give a perpendicular drop to the side of 24 inches; but Capt. Kidd prefers and so states in his application for a patent, that the perpendicular part of the hopper shall be one-half the total height, giving just slope enough to the top part of the hopper, to compel the cargo to accumulate in the center.

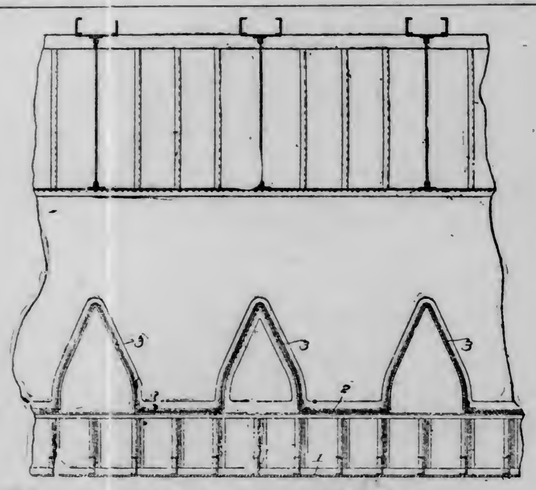
The design is meeting with a widespread endorsement among vesselmen and especially dockmen, who are supposed to be the most likely to know what will be successful with the appliances they have at hand for unloading. Capt. Kidd has just received a letter from the superintendent of one of the biggest docks on Lake Erie, a man who is considered an expert at his business and this is what he says of the new patent:

"I have looked over the plans very carefully and am satisfied that in so far as the unloading goes, a boat of this type would be an entire success. This type of construction simplifies unloading machinery and increases the efficiency of unloading machinery, for the reason that it can work to its maximum capacity until the boat is almost entirely cleaned up.

"The shape of the peaks as you show them, I think is very good; in fact in criticising the Hoover & Mason, I suggested the shape such as you show them, so that I think you have adopted very good lines.

"Care should be taken regarding the ore in the wings. The bilges should be either sloped or boxed in so that there will be no difficulty in taking the ore out of the wings with the grab buckets. From an unloading standpoint, I am very sure this boat will be an entire success."

Another advantage of the invention as claimed by Capt. Kidd is that it strengthens the ship. The partitions are designed to prevent the possibility of the vessel sagging by reason of an unequal distribution of the load, and it is claimed, is made so strong that all of the cargo might be piled in the middle of the hold without causing the vessel to sag. The partitions are built in solidly riveted to the hull and form a rigid permanent portion thereof and also serve to permit the water ballast to come up high, increasing the capacity and renders the vessel more seaworthy.



CAPT. KIDD'S INVENTION.
Inverted "V" shapes represent sides of hoppers running crosswise in vessel's hold, forming hoppers beneath the hatches.

THE SHAW AND CORALIA

Come in Collision at the Sault---The Shaw Considerably Damaged.

Sault Ste. Marie, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Shaw, bound down with the whaleback barge 123 in tow collided last night in the fog with the upbound steamer Coralia which had in tow the barge Maia. The impact caused the Shaw to strand on Round Isl. and, but she was afterwards released. The tow line between the Coralia and the barge scraped along the whole length of the deck of the Shaw, carrying away both spars and bending the smoke stack. The Shaw also has a large hole in the starboard bow on the windlass deck and the starboard anchor is gone, but there is no injury below the waterline. The 123 has plates and frames damaged on the port bow and is leaking. Temporary repairs will be made here. Both the Coralia and the Maia also received injury, but they proceeded on their way to Duluth.

LOSES DECK LOAD.

Lumber Steamer Prentice Has to Put Back in Gale.

The gale which is blowing from the northeast is holding a good many boats in the harbor. About 2 o'clock this afternoon the steamer C. A. Black of the Pittsburg fleet ventured out and she was the first to go out or enter since 9 o'clock this morning at which time the gale was blowing strongly. It started some time during the night.

Early this morning the steam lumber hooker Prentice started out, but after getting about Lakeside found the gale a bit too strong for her so she started to turn about and head back for port.

When she was turning the wind and sea caught her on the port side and she lost about half of her deck load.

The steamer got back into port all right, but had a bad list to starboard. She is now getting straightened out and will leave again as soon as the wind dies down.

The Uranus Ashore.

Houghton, May 27.—During a dense fog the steamer Uranus of the Gilchrist fleet, got out of her channel while rounding Keweenaw point and stranded on Eagle river reef. The steamer is reported to be out 18 inches forward with the forward compartments full of water. She was bound from Duluth to Lake Erie with a cargo of iron ore. The Portage Lake life-saving crew in command of Capt. T. H. McCormick, with tugs and workmen to throw the cargo overboard, have gone to her assistance.

OPERATIONS TO BEGIN SOON

John C. Eden's Company Takes Option on Morgan Property.

The Rhodes Iron company, of which John C. Eden, who is well known in Duluth, is president, has taken an option on the Morgan property, in the Iron River, Mich., district, and is preparing to begin diamond drill operations at once.

The Morgan property adjoins the Casplan mine of Pickands, Mather & Company, and the Fogarty and McGillis properties.

The Rhodes interests are also said to have an option on the Section 12 mine, adjoining the Baltic and Fogarty, the most promising properties in the district.

REBUILDING HAS STARTED.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Merchants Have Now Started Replacing Their Burned Stores.

Friends of C. S. Sargent, who left Duluth a day or so ago to return to his home in Fairbanks, Alaska, only to learn that his retail establishment there had burned, have heard from him, and the enterprising Northland merchant already has a new store under way in the Alaska city.

Mr. Sargent received word that a warehouse he was interested in was also destroyed. His representatives there are doing business for his firm in another, however, and the construction of a new store is beginning.

Mr. Sargent himself will not be in Fairbanks for a month. He is going by way of San Francisco.

No Relief in Sight Yet.

Users of Pacific coast timber are still waiting for consignments of lumber and there is no relief in sight yet. One big user received a wire today from a big manufacturer of fir timber, stating that he had no end of timber in readiness to ship, but that he was unable to secure the cars. This car shortage has been menacing building operations and other improvements all this spring.

McCUMBER'S CHARGES

Of Graft in Grain Inspection Angers Minnesota Commission.

Will Demand That the Allegations Shall be Investigated.

St. Paul, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state railway and warehouse commission announces that it intends to demand an investigation of charges made by Senator McCumber, that the grain inspection department of the state is one huge graft.

"We are not going to allow a slur like this to stand," said Commissioner Staples today.

"We are now preparing a statement and will forward copies of it to Senator Clapp and Senator Nelson with the request that they demand an immediate investigation of the charges. These accusations of late have been too frequent and we do not propose to remain silent any longer."

Senator McCumber's charges, which were supported by Senator Hansbrough, in the United States senate yesterday, had for their basis the statement that North Dakota farmers suffered the loss of thousands of dollars by having their wheat graded as of inferior quality. The Minneapolis grain inspection department, Senator McCumber held, was permeated with graft and he offered in substantiation the recent decision of Judge Sanborn, holding the Wisconsin grain inspection law to be unconstitutional. This decision made serious charges against the Minnesota inspection law.

"The basis of these charges," said Commissioner Staples, "seems to be some figures emanating from a Mr. Crumpton, a former grain dealer at Superior and now a member of the Duluth board of trade. They covered a period of ten years from 1892 and pretended to show that more grain is shipped out of the state than is received, something like 36,000,000 bushels.

"The trouble with these figures, is that they are taken from the registrar's report at Duluth and do not in any way show the grain taken into the mills. Had he used the weighmaster's figures he would have found in three years alone, 1893, 1894 and 1895, over 30,000,000 bushels found its way to the mills. It is this discrepancy in Crumpton's figures that has made all the trouble. He has since discredited his own figures.

"The charges that the inspection system of the state is permeated with graft has been flung at the commission several times and the members say they are tired of it. For that reason they will demand an investigation.

AGED MAN'S HEART FAILS.

Wisconsin Pioneer Found Dead in Bed at a Relative's Home.

Hudson, Wis., May 26.—John Welch, aged 76, one of the first settlers in St. Joseph township, St. Croix county, was found dead in his bed at the home of his son-in-law, William Harney, at Warren, east of Hudson. Death was due to paralysis of the heart. Mr. Welch leaves a family of four daughters. The remains were interred at Somerset, Wis.

About the American Navy.

Naval men claim that this important lesson was learned from the Russian-Japanese war, namely, that the navy of the United States must be well provided with heavy warships, in order that we may hold the proud position we now occupy among the nations of the world. Thousands of sickly persons long ago learned the lesson that for making people well and keeping them so there was no medicine like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Every bottle is now backed by a 50-years' record of cures, which ought to convince the most skeptical that it contains true merit and is worthy of a fair trial. If the stomach is weak, appetite poor, sleep restless or nerves unstrung, the Bitters is needed at once. It also cures dyspepla, indigetion, costiveness, heartburn, bloating female ills, dizziness, fainting spells or malaria.

JOHN L. ON THE FIGHT.

Says Outcome Will Not Be a Help to the Pugilistic Game.

John L. Sullivan manifested a great interest in the returns from the Nelson-Herrera fight which was to have been pulled off in San Francisco last evening. The big fellow waited till long after the last reports were in in the hope that the fighters might change their minds and get together.

"If those scales were not right, the fighters and their managers knew in time to remedy the difficulty, and they should have done so," said John L. "That business of getting 5,000 people together and keeping their nerves up for a grand mill and then turning them out without giving them a run for their money will certainly not boost the fight business on the coast. Nelson seemed to be willing enough to go against the Mexican at mostly any old weight; but I presume Herrera was perfectly right in his contention that he had done all that was fair to have the fight come off. It is not every day in the week that fight promoters, or any other promoters of any kind of an amusement proposition, can get a $50,000 crowd of people together and I think that if the match had been properly handled from both sides that the battle could have been fought, even in the face of all the difficulties."

Last evening at the Metropolitan Mattson, the wrestler with the Sullivan company disposed of five large men in less than nine minutes. Some of these men were there with the avoirdupois and with plenty of muscle and bone. This evening Mattson will take on five other local men among whom are two husky boiler makers, hard as steel and in the very pink of condition.

The Sullivan compauy closes its engagement in Duluth Sunday night and will go from here to Superior where the company plays three days.

MUST BEGIN CIVIL SUITS

On Former Officers of Northwestern Life to Recover Money.

Minneapolis, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—State Insurance Commissioner T. D. O'Brien has made formal demand upon the officers of the Northwestern Life Insurance company that they begin civil suits against the former officials to recover certain large sums alleged to have been illegally diverted while they were in office. L. K. Thompson, president of the company, today said that such suits had been under contemplation for some time but that the directors were awaiting the outcome of the criminal trials now in progress before taking any action. Dr. J. P. Force, former president of the company, who is now on trial for alleged grand larceny, today testified regarding his contract with the company, stating that he drew less than his salary and that the money made over to him upon his retirement simply represented that portion of his remuneration which had not been paid him while in office.

TRICK IN ALL TRADES.

Daring Circus Feat Not so Difficult When You Know How.

If you were ever thrilled to the marrow by the sight of some daring performer in pink tights looping the loop in midair, it may be rather a relief to learn from the following that there is just a chance the dashing individual was not in quite so much dangor as you thought, says London Answers. One of these queens of the air lately brought an action for damages—and won it—because the apparatus, which ought to have made her quite safe, at the critical moment failed to act, and she unfortunately fell down.

This was very unlucky, because the ingenious devices provided ought to have prevented any fall being possible. The "loop" was "looped" on a little four-wheeled carriage which ran along the airy path provided for tit, and had between each pair of wheels a little steel bar which reached down through a groove in the track.

The bar, being furnished with a cross-piece running on tiny castors, thus kept the car to the track in whatever position. It was invisible to the audience, being a matter which did not concern them, but one night the bar jumped the groove, and threw the car off the lower part of the track.

Result—a broken leg for the performer, who claimed damages in the courts, averring negligence on the part of the owners of the circus. She won her case, but as all the details had to come out publicly, some cynical people thought it rather a "give away." Of course, many performances of this kind are quite genuine, bo it said; but as human life is a precious thing it should be well guarded.

Not very long ago a lion tamer from Hungary—not that there are any lions there—of the name of Max Ardenow, came to this country and thrilled many audiences in the provinces by his daring in the lions' den. He had three of these animals and a bear, and it is only fair to say that scarcely any man ever took such liberties with the king of beasts. He did not seem to care what indignities he put them to, and went to great lengths to stir up their rage. Many people even thought he was brutal to them, and few lion tamers had so much eclat while it lasted.

A curious fact, however, which came out later, was that the lions had not a tooth among them, and their claws were cut short between the toes. They were all very ancient beasts, and, in fact, were fed on "slops" out of hours. Sometimes, when Ardnow went to lengths that no self-respecting lion could put up with he was sent flying across the cage by the blow of a paw, but that was all. He had to stir them up a great deal to make them look respectfully fierce, but the end came when at Liverpool one of the lions yawned rudely at the audience. Several people noticed the lack of teeth, and a smart Lancaster reporter ferreted out the truth and published it. Such ridicule fell on Andronow that he left the country soon afterward, and it is said he has retired from the lion-taming trade, having done very well at it while his vogue was at its height.

A great many people in this country a few years ago held their breath nightly while a marvelous rifle shot performer, who called himself "The Modern William Tell," showed the most thrilling performances with a rifle that have ever been staged. His specialty was to shoot glass balls off the head of his son, a boy of 12 or so, and did it with the most marvelous precision; not only straight from the shoulder, but under it, backward between his legs, and even facing the other way, and shooting by means of a mirror, he picked off the glass globe every time without even grazing his son's scalp. lives cat$$$$$$$$ etaoin shrdlu cmfwypb

Some good people thought the show should be stopped as too perilous for decency. It was not till "William Tell" returned to his native United States, however, that the secret was exposed. The glass balls contained detonators, and were placed on a couple of tiny wires which ran through a wig the boy wore, and which led down one of his legs by way of a pocket electrical accumulator. As he stood with his hands at the sides, a slight pressure of the fingers connected the two wires together and completed the circuit and exploded the little detonator, which burst the ball to pieces as if by a bullet. The cartridges in the rifle were blank. One night the ball burst prematurely, and a suspicious Pittsburg audience, "rushed" the stage and discovered the secret for themselves.

You may possibly have felt a little "thrilly" at seeing a juggler keep six or seven knives circling in a glittering stream round his head. These knives, however, have edges considerably blunter than your domestic butter knife, and it would do the performer no harm to catch them by the blades instead of the handles, if he could.

It would take a very clever juggler to do so, however, for the handles are very carefully weighted and are bound to fall lowest. By watching, you will observe that however the knives are thrown the blades remain nearly upright as they pass through the air.

As to knives, by the way, the most ingenious and unique safety contrivance in any "thrilling" show was that invented and used by two performers in the "World's Greatest Knife Act" some years since. This was a variation of the ancient one in which a person stands against a wall and another throws knives all around him, leaving them sticking in the wall. In the case of the "World's Greatest," etc., this was much improved, and the precision with which the knives were sent the distance they were thrown from, and the force with which they dashed into the wood made the performance very remarkable. The position of the lady when the knives were hurled at her looked terribly perilous.

The device was this: The screen against which she stood was of soft wood, covered with thin paper. At the back of the screen were several great horseshoe magnets, with their spokes touching the soft wood, and between these, as it were, stood the lady. The magnets were magnetized by a very powerful electric current. Though the screen covered them, it did not overcome their power, which was so great that no steel knife thrown toward them could deflect at all in its flight, but sped straight to the magnets' poles and stuck in the wood that shielded them. These poles thus circled the lady all around, and with fairly straight throwing she was as safe as if she had been plate armor. Any slight fault in the aim was overcome by the "pull" of the magnets as her husband hurled the knives at her.

WORKINGMEN AND REBATES ON STORE ORDERS.

In one of the first of our "Saturday Night Talks" on the mooted Rebate Question we mentioned one particular feature which seems to us most serious and ugly. It is the giving of a ten-per cent rebate to certain employers on orders for merchandise issued to their men, the amounts of which are deducted from the men's pay. These employers, in connivance with certain storekeepers, make an extra profit out of the wages they pay.

Not all orders given by employers to their men are subjected to this nefarious practice. Far from it, but we could mention a few concrete cases. However, we are fighting a bad custom and not any business men, who, right or wrong, take advantage of the custom while it is allowed to exist.

Workingmen should look into this matter, for they are the ones who needs must get the worst of it in such a deal. Certain storekeepers (the ten-per-centers), solicit this kind of business, just as they solicit trade from individuals on the 10 per cent rebate basis. They prepare for it in two ways: First, by marking their prices higher than One-Price stores on the same class of goods; principally however, by purchasing cheaper goods at lower wholesale prices. There is a vast difference, for instance, in a "dollar article" at the two kinds of stores—a difference that may amount to two or three dollars a dozen on the wholesale cost of the article.

We have had many occasions to refuse such orders, because this business is in conflict with our One-Price system, much as we would appreciate the trade of the men themselves.

Test the truth of what we say by insisting on being given orders on one-price stores. If you can get them at all, you can bank on getting your goods either 10 per cent cheaper or of getting goods with 10 per cent more intrinsic value.

PASTOR HAD A LOVE AFFAIR

Sends in Resignation Following Stories After Violent Amour.

Chicago, May 26.--Rev. E. H. Shepley, young, energetic, unmarried--sometimes called "the fighting parson"--suddenly has relinquished his pastorate of the First Congregational Church of Geneva, Ill. The minister's resignation, which has set every tongue in Geneva a-wagging, is said to have been prompted by unrequited love.

Dr. Shepley went to the Geneva church three years ago, his previous pastorate having been at Bethany congregation in Chicago. Among the young women who heard his Geneva sermons was Miss Edith Wilson, niece of Miss Mary Wilson of Geneva, and of John P. Wilson of Chicago. Miss Wilson's parents died when she was a child, and the girl, who a year ago was graduated from a seminary in Beloit, Wis., made her home with her aunt.

Miss Wilson has been teaching in the Geneva public schools the last year, and Shepley was among her most valued admirers. He called frequently, and it became common gossip that the clergyman was anxious to make the pretty pedagogue his wife. But Miss Edith's Aunt Mary objected, put her foot down and announced that the proposed match must not be consummated.

A few nights ago, the pastor, gloomy and downhearted, is said to have requested a final interview. He drove up to the Wilson home in a carriage and the two went for a drive. The minister is declared then to have proposed marriage again—this time in burning words—and is said to have been refused.

"Marry me or I will kill you and myself then," he is said to have threatened.

The answer was a scream.

Dr. Shepley drew a razor and flashed it in the starlight—so the story runs—and seemed to be intent on carrying out his threat. To pacify him the young woman is said to have consented to marriage, and she reached home in safety.

Miss Wilson informed her aunt of the affair and it soon became town talk. Rev. Mr. Shepley was commonly reported to have lost his mind. Detectives were hired to watch the Wilson premises and the clergyman was asked to resign. He did so.

TELLER STEALS FOR GAY LIFE

Was Officer of Milwaukee Bank, Regarded as Model.

Milwaukee, May 26.—Arthur G. Reinke, receiving teller of the Marshall & Ilsley bank, and regarded for years a model of pious demeanor, spent $14,000 of his bank's funds in seeing the sights of Chicago. Reinke is missing and the police are looking for him.

The receiving teller was looked upon as the type of man which mothers might hold their sons imitate, and while in Milwaukee always conducted himself in a most exemplary manner. It was learned recently, however, that during visits to Chicago he was accustomed to make on Sundays he was a "high roller," and his own salary was not sufficient to enable him to live the gay life he wished while there. How long he was engaged in taking money from the bank is not known. His books are being examined.

The bank will lose nothing, as Reinke is bonded for $4,60 by a surety company and his relatives, it is said, have promised to make up the remainder.

His exposure came about through an accident. Last Tuesday a man from Chicago who had business with the bank mentioned the fact that one of its employes seemed to lead a gay life when in Chicago.

After the visitor had gone Reinke was called in by Cashier Puelisher and taxed with riotous living, while on visits to Chicago. He indignantly denied anything of the kind and made his protest so strong that the bank officials were almost convinced there must be a mistake. However, to be sure, they told Reinke he might take a week's vacation.

Meantime his books were looked into. The experts had not gone far before they began to find trace of missing cash. Blocks of $1,000 were found to have disappeared mysteriously, and the clearing-house had been charged with them. On investigation it was found the clearing-house knew nothing about of the missing moneys, and it was seen that Reinke was short. The amount kept piling up until it is admitted that a shortage of $14,000 was found, and it is rumored that it exceeded this sum.

After being called upon by Puelisher, Reinke disappeared.

SANITARY CONDITIONS

Must Rule in the Packing Houses, Says President.

Extensive Changes by the Packers Are Deemed Necessary.

Chicago, May 26.—A Washington special to the Chicago Tribune says: The condition of some of the packing houses at Chicago was severely criticised by President Roosevelt in an interview he had with William E. Skinner and W. L. Carlisle, representing the livestock interests of the country, and Representatives Madden of Chicago, Cox of New York and Brooks of Colorado.

Mr. Skinner is the representative of the Union Stock Yards company at Chicago, and Mr. Carlisle is dean of the agricultural college at Denver. These men, in accordance with the request of livestock interests all over the country, conferred with the packers on Monday, and then came to Washington to see the president.

The president announced that he proposed to see conditions of which complaints have been made in the packing houses changed as promptly as possible; that the buildings should be remodeled in order to obtain better ventilation and more light, and that ample toilet facilities should be provided for employes, far enough removed from the rooms in which meat was prepared for food to prevent contamination.

Speaking for the livestock interests and for the packers, Mr. Skinner assured the president that the packers had authorized him to state that if the president would appoint a commission of high-grade scientific sanitation experts, including one practical man versed in inspection and animal husbandry, they would be glad to adopt any suggestions the commission might make for improvements or changes, not only in the method of slaughtering, but in the sanitary conditions of packing houses.

Mr. Skinner went a step farther than the packing houses proposed. He urged the president to appoint a national sanitary commission which should be authorized to deal with the whole subject of food products. He represented that it was unfair to single out one industry to the exclusion of all others, and make it a subject of criticism so as to injure it throughout the world.

After the exploitation of the "embalmed beef" charges by Gen. Miles, following the Spanish war, the packing houses, and, as Mr. Skinner termed the cattlemen, "the instant-byslanderers," suffered a considerable decrease in the sale of their products. Apprehension is expressed that the same result will follow from the agitation which now exists, and which the president, it is said, is aiding through the investigation he has made and is making.

The president's concern, however, is to secure fresh, clean, uncontaminated meat for the American people, and to remove the suspicion which exists abroad regarding our meat products, and which necessarily affects the extent of the sales. He assured his callers yesterday he was most anxious that the industry should not be disastrously affected. At the same time he said he intended to see that proper sanitary conditions existed, and he wanted it to be distinctly understood, once those conditions were established, he would not permit any letup in their enforcement.

The president stated he had not received as yet the official report of Messrs. Neill and Reynolds, who were sent recently to Chicago to investigate the packinghouses. The description of the conditions which had been given him by those men confirmed the offensive charges contained in the articles printed by the London Lancet in 1905.

The Lancet declared there were no slaughterhouses in Chicago; that the industry was handled in factories, which were badly lighted, unsanitary, unclean and disease-breeding. Conditions were far worse than those which existed at points in Europe where there is not by any means as much wealth as in Chicago.

The Lancet referred to the fact that condemned carcasses were disposed of on the same floor and in close proximity to beef which was pronounced wholesome. It described the filthy condition of the floors upon which the men expectorated and along which the meat was dragged. As considerable tuberculosis prevailed among the employes, there was grave danger that the bacilli would attach themselves to the meat and in this way consumption would be spread, not only over the United States, but to England and other countries. The Lancet also stated that many employes work in overheated and damp atmospheres, and others in chilly and cold storage rooms, with the result that tuberculosis, diseases of the respiratory organs, rheumatism and heart disease had developed.

Among the improvements suggested by the writer of the article were an increase of toilet facilities, proper and adequate lavatories, the building of absolutely watertight flooring and paving, the constant flushing with water and steam and the erection of destructors away from slaughterhouses where carcases condemned, by the government inspectors should be destroyed.

The president said to the delegation he would like Representative Mann to take Messrs. Skinner and Carlisle to Charles P. Neill, commissioner of labor, and say to that official that all of the stockmen's interests were involved in the question, and should be considered. Mr. Madden interrupted to say that he had a high opinion of Mr. Neill, who was an able, conscientious man.

"I am delighted to hear you say that," said the president. "But I want to say that if were not for the interests of stockmen and the danger that those interests might be detrimentally affected by action I might take, I would take drastic measures immediately and compel the packers to make the necessary sanitary changes in their establishments. Conditions are bad, worse than I had thought. They have not made any effort to ameliorate conditions. I know this agitation is hurting the export business, but I do not want to do anything hastily that will injure the innocent. This is the only reason why I hesitate to give the matter the widest publicity."

The president urged that if the packers were sincere they would join forces with the administration in securing the passage of the Beveridge bill providing for the federal regulation of the meat business.

Representative Mann took Messrs. Skinner and Carlisle to the bureau of labor after leaving the White House, and arranged for a conference with Mr. Neill and Mr. Reynolds. Mr. Neill said there would have to be material and extensive changes in the sanitary conditions of the packing houses to meet what he considers the interests of the country.

BARGAINS IN MEDICINE.

A woman once wrote us that she was not going to buy Scott's Emulsion any more because it cost too much. Said she could get some other emulsion for less money. Penny wise and pound foolish. Scott's Emulsion costs more because it is worth more—costs more to make. We could make Scott's Emulsion cost less by using less oil. Could take less care in making it, too. If we did, however, Scott's Emulsion wouldn't be the standard preparation of cod liver oil as it is to-day.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Little Calumet Girl Runs Away—May Have Gone on Stage.

Calumet.—Little Bermice Danielson has been missing from her home and school two weeks and the case is shrouded in mystery. She is the daughter of Fred Danielson and was one of the girls who took part in the song and dance, "The Rag Man," at the recent Elks' show. It is the opinion of some that she is stage struck and ran away to get on with some company.

A new Y. M. C. A. building to cost $50,000 or more is projected for Calumet. The Calumet & Hecla company has donated a valuable site and $2,000. One citizen has given $10,000 and it is believed the remainder can be raised.

Fire destroyed five houses, causing a loss of $1,000, at Lake Rowland on the Copper Range railroad. The fire is believed to have started from a spark from a sawmill.

Marquette.—The fund for forest fire sufferers in this vicinity now amounts to over $2,000, of which the county board has appropriated $1,500. A great quantity of clothing and furniture has been contributed by the general public and those burned out will be well looked after.

Sault Ste. Marie.—Judge Steere has issued an order to show cause why a writ of pre-emptory mandamus should not be issued to make the board of review assess the Michigan Lake Superior Power company according to the value of the property which is alleged to be worth $7,000,000. The petition was signed by Attorney General John E. Bird, and made returnable May 31. Charles S. Beadle furnished the information on which the petition is based.

The company now pays a specific state tax of $5,000 on a capitalization of a half million, under a special law passed by the legislature when the company was organized.

The company is fighting the case, alleging that it will hinder the sale of certificates which will be used to secure a half million dollars needed to improve the plant. It has asked the city council to stop the proceedings if possible, but the council is not interested in the case, which will go to the supreme court, no matter what the outcome in the circuit court. It is alleged that the specific tax law is unconstitutional.

Norway.—Norway, Menominee range, is enjoying a period of great prosperity just now. Six automobiles have, at least, been ordered for early delivery, and this fact is taken to indicate that that mining camp and depression are strangers. A new motor-propelled car has recently been received by Superintendent Elmer Jones of the Saginaw mine, at Norway.

L'Anse.—The Nester estate has a crew of about one hundred men in camp three miles south of the head of the bay, out from L'Anse, cutting, peeling and decking logs. There is about 5,000,000 feet of mixed timber. Another camp has been opened about three miles west of Baraga, with a crew of seventy-five men. There are about 3,000,000 feet of mixed timber to cut there.

Manistique.—Joseph Brassel of Manistique, who operates a camp near Steuben, Alger county, recently made a valuable capture of foxes. There are three of the animals, one being all black and the other two silver grays. They are little fellows, but they are thriving under the careful attention of Mr. Bassel. The mother of the animals has thus far eluded capture. She has been seen and it is said that she is black. The gray fox is worth from $800 to $1,000, it is said.

SPYING UPON THE CLERKS

Detectives Test Honesty of Men and Women Behind Counters.

System of Odd Cents Helpful in Keeping a Tally.

New York, May 26.—Think of the joy of being able to shop nearly all day long every day of your woman's life, of never having to pay for anything you buy—but, instead, of being paid for doing this shopping! There are women who do this—professional shoppers, they are called—employes of a detective agency, whose duty it is, in the course of their shopping, to spy upon the clerks in a store and make report to the chief executive. The professional shoppers make up one of the most successful detective agencies in the country, an agency regularly employed by certain large stores throughout the United States.

The professional shopper, never stays long in one place, lest she lose her value by becoming known to the men and women she is employed to keep an eye on. For two weeks, perhaps, a group of these women shoppers will be engaged to make a canvass of a store. They will shop in every department of the store, one day appearing in rich attire and purchasing heavily in expensive materials, the next dressing shabbily and making their purchases from small household goods.

Without appearing to do so, they have a sharp eye on the clerk while she makes her calculations and make quick note if they detect anything out of the way in her actions.

One of these professional shoppers went into the hat department of a Fulton street store recently and bought a hat for $4.98. They usually buy something at an odd price, so they will be sure to get change.

The purchaser gave to the clerk a $5 bill. She noticed that the clerk made out a check for a hat costing $2.98, sent it with the $5 to the cash desk and received $2.02 in change with the returned check. She gave the 2 cents change to the customer, appropriating the $2, and then managed to get the $4.98 hat wrapped and delivered to the waiting customer. In some departments she would have found this impossible, as the wrapper would have been wiser than to wrap the $4.98 hat on the $2.98 check.

In another case, where the professional customer selected goods at the same price—$4.98—the saleswoman worked the same game, but protected herself from discovery by correcting the checks. This is as delicate a process as the bank cashier undertakes when he juggles with the figures of his books. It is necessary to take the check that has been returned from the cash desk, place it back exactly in its original position in the salesbook, so that it will rest with the figures directly over the figures on the duplicate check, with the carbon paper between. In this case the saleswoman managed to do this, and then made a vertical mark in pencil across the figure 2, changing it to a figure 4. It was so cleverly done that the carbon copy showed $4.98 with the 4 so plain that nobody could have suspected anything.

In some cases the saleswomen make a bungle in attempting to correct checks after the original has been torn from the book. They get the new figures in the wrong place on the carbon copy that the saleswoman is required to keep. This of course, is apt to arouse suspicion.

During a recent tour of one of the Brooklyn stores another professional shopper made a purchase in the trunk department, buying a trunk for $9.75 and giving the salesman a $10 bill. The salesman, the shopper noted, made out his check for a trunk strap, price 75 cents, and when he got $9.25 from the cash desk, he gave the customer 25 cents in change, pocketing the $9.

The salesman took a big risk when he attempted a theft of this sort, because the purchase was something the customer could not carry away. It had to be delivered, and in order to get it out the salesman had to give the delivery department a check showing that a trunk had been sold for $9.75. This involved the erasure of the word "strap" and the writing of the figure on both the original and the carbon copy. It was a difficult job, but the salesman accomplished it, only to be summoned to the superintendent's office and confronted with proof of his guilt as soon as he had put through his steal.

In the Brooklyn and Manhattan stores there are so many checks on the employes that often a group of these detective shoppers will trace through a store for two weeks and not detect a single case of dishonesty. After going about through a Brooklyn store once for two weeks the only detected dishonesty was the pocketing of 25 cents change by a young girl. She was at once summoned to the superintendent's desk and called to account for the theft, but she told a story that touched his heart and awakened his sympathies.

He had to dismiss her from his employ, because his store couldn't afford to keep a dishonest girl, but he gave her $5 out of his own pocket and a little moral lecture that seemed to have visible effect. Afterward the case was investigated and the superintendent learned that the girl was the daughter of a prosperous butcher and was working just to have extra money for candy and chewing gum.

In the West, wherever the organization of the stores is poor, the professional shoppers often make big hauls during their campaigns, and fully repay a store for the money it spends for their services. The professional shopper gets well paid for her shopping, to compensate her for never having the pleasure of seeing her purchases come home in fascinating parcels. She gets a regular salary from the head of the detective agency, who is paid a lump sum for two weeks shopping by his detectives.

The superintendents of the big Brooklyn and Manhattan stores are unanimous in their declarations that the clerks they employ are almost invariably honest, and that their loss from pilfering is comparatively small. There is in every store a system of rewards whereby a person detecting a clerk in any dishonesty is heavily rewarded. Then, too, the clerk has always before her, or him, the fact that if she should be caught stealing, she not only would lose her position with the store in which she is employed, but she would find it impossible to get employment with any other store in the city.

Every employer makes inquiries of the place where the girl formerly worked, and if her record is not clear refuses to engage her services. With these checks and the strict system employed in all the stores, there is slim opportunity for dishonesty, even where the tendency exists. There is very small possibility of stealing money; the chief temptation is to smuggle goods; and even there the chances of discovery are so great that the attempt is not often made. Whenever there is a sale of any valuable stock, like jewelry or laces, there is always a count at the close of the day, to see that nothing had disappeared other than what has been sold.

The odd cents system is employed by a great many of the large stores, not so much for its appeal to the eager bargain seeker who seizes on a dollar-ninety-eight article where she would pass it at $2, as to keep tally on the clerks. When a 59 cents, 98 cents, and the like, is charged for articles, there is almost sure to be a demand for change, necessitating the clerk's sending to the cash desk, where a tally is kept on the clerk, allowing to her scant chance to tamper with the money. One of the Brooklyn stores works this system so cleverly that it finds no need for a detective agency to keep watch on its employes.

Every store of any size and importance has to employ a force of detectives, however, to protect it from shoplifters, who are abroad in the land in plentiful numbers, and will be, no doubt, as long as there are shops and womn with inordinate love of pretty things. These store detectives go about from counter to counter just as you and I do, wearing no sign of their trade anywhere about them. They have a good, searching eye, and are pretty apt to spy out the wrong-doer if she comes within their line of vision. They are both men and women, these regular store detectives, and they give no thought to the clerks—only to the customers. The clerks, of course, come to recognize and know them. When a detective spies out a shoplifter he never accosts her in the store, but follows her when she leaves the store and nails her on the street. He brings the thief, usually, through the back door, into the store again and then takes her to the superintendent's office, where she is made to confess and also to give up her booty.

A store does not always prosecute a shop-lifter, but gives her—unfortunately it usually is the feminine gender—to understand that if she ever comes into the store again she will be arrested.

There are systematic shop-lifters to be reckoned with by every store, women in whose skirts capacious pockets are cleverly concealed, and into which they can stuff such things as lace robes and fur collars without any apparent difference in the hang of their skirts. They go into the business as a profession and are usually as clever at their work as the detective at his. They sometimes ply their trade for years before he finds them, but they invariably try their tricks once too often and come to grief in the end.

Sometimes a store detective is overardent in his task of spying and accuses an innocent woman, who turns on him a sputtering volcano of rage and indignation. Perhaps her umbrella has caught a bit of lace or a pair of stockings in passing a counter and the article has slipped down into its open pocket. The detective, discovering the circumstance, may think the act intentional, when the woman is entirely unconscious of her newly acquired possession.

The detective has to have ready some very clever apologies before he is allowed to escape unharmed from the wrath of the accused. When a person is suspected, the floor walker is often notified by the detective and makes it evident to the woman that she is being watched by following her about in her rounds.

The constant effort of the detective force of a store is not so much to seize shop-lifters as to prevent shop-lifting.

Every large store has frequent evidences of penitence on the part of shop-lifters in the way of letters containing money that come constantly in their mails. There is usually no explanation with these letters, just a word or two to tell the purpose. "Conscience Money" frequently are the only words that accompany them. In some instances stolen articles themselves are sent back to ease pricking consciences, things often that must have been in the possession of the person for a long time. For instance, a Fulton street store received not long ago some pieces of china of a stock that it had not carried for more than six years. The whole lot probably would have amounted to only a little more than $2, but its possession had evidently lain too heavily on the mind of the shop-lifter to give her much pleasure in its use during the years she had had it.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains the linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it, or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

COPPER STOCK MARKET DULL

Trading is Very Light. Bisbees Have a Weaker Tone.

Copper stocks had a desultory time of it today. The market was decidedly dull and some of the stocks closed weaker. North Butte closed unchanged at $93 bid and $93.50 asked. It opened at $93.50 and declined to $93. The total number of shares traded in was 1,001. Amalgamated opened at $108.75, declined to $108 and closed at $108.25 bid. Anaconda opened at $268.50, advanced to $269 and declined to $267, closing at $267 bid.

Butte Coalition sold at $33.50 and closed at $33.25 bid and $33.50 asked. Calumet & Arizona held firm, opening at $116, selling at that price through the session and closing at $118 bid.

The Bisbees closed weaker. Calumet & Pittsburg sold during the early part of the session at $37.50, declined to $35 and closed at $25 bid and $26 asked. Lake Superior & Pittsburg sold at $26 and advanced to $27, closing at $27 bid. Although it is proposed to take the stocks in the consolidated company on the same basis, Lake Superior & Pittsburg had a better tone than Calumet & Pittsburg and the reason for it is said to be explained by the anxiety to buy Lake Superior & Pittsburg on the part of those wise ones who were on the inside as to the consolidation plans and who sold Lake Superior & Pittsburg some time ago, in order to buy Calumet & Pittsburg. It is said that they now find themselves short on Lake Superior & Pittsburg. Calumet & Pittsburg is being quite freely offered, but Lake Superior & Pittsburg is not so plentiful. Junction closed at $23 asked and Pittsburg & Duluth at $16.50 bid and $17 asked. Denn-Arizona closed at $13.75 bid.

Black Mountain closed at $10 bid and $10.25 asked, Warren at $14.75 asked and Copper Queen of Idaho at $2.25 asked. Keweenaw sold at $12 and closed at $12 bid.

THE COLOR LINE SHARPLY DRAWN

Negro Question Comes to Surface in Presbyterian Assembly.

Des Moines, May 26.—The color line was sharply drawn and the negro question came squarely to the surface in the Presbyterian general assembly here for the first time today. The committee on church policy submitted a report recommending the erection of a synod in Alabama to include the presbyteries of Birmingham, Levere and Rogersville, to be known as the synod of Chattanooga. The presbyteries are now included in the synod of Tennessee. The other presbyteries in the synod are Frenchbroad, Holston, Kingston and Union.

The presbyteries of Birmingham, Levere and Rogersville are composed of negro churches. The others are composed of white churches. The purpose of the committee was to divide the races. No sooner had the report been submitted than Russell Taylor, a negro minister of Levere and one of the commissioners to the assembly from that presbytery, took the floor. He violently opposed the proposed synod on the ground that the three presbyteries specified were not numerically strong enough or well enough versed in church law to assume the functions and duty of a synod. Members of the committee spoke for the erection of the synod, carefully avoiding the race question and emphasizing the claim that each of the three presbyteries had asked such action. After spirited discussion, in which the negro commissioners received the majority of the applause, it was unanimously voted to refer the whole subject to the assembly of 1907.

NINETY-SIX YEARS OLD.

Descendant of First White Child Born of Pilgrim Parents.

Grinnell, Iowa, May 26.—On May 22, 1810, in Stanstead, province of Quebec, formerly Lower Canada, was born Lucy A. White, who traces her descent directly from the White family of which Peregrine White, the first white child born of the Pilgrim settlers on "a rock-bound coast," was the progenitor. About twenty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Luther M. Verbeck removed from Canada, to be near their son, C. H. Verbeck, who lives in Grinnell. Soon after arriving here Mr. Verbeck died and the subject of this sketch now lives with her son.

Mrs. Lucy Verbeck takes great interest in current events, and was specially interested in the Russian-Japanese war, being interested mainly because of the fact that a Verbeck, known in the family as "Japan Verbeck," was a missionary for many years in Japan, and who made an impress upon the Japanese nation in the formation period, shortly after Commodore Perry opened that empire to civilization.

With the exception of her sight, which failed two years ago, Mrs. Verbeck retains her faculties in a remarkable degree.

Her son reads the news of the day to her, and she discusses passing events as shrewdly as any.

She celebrated her 96th birthday on Tuesday, with visitors who called. Her time is spent in braiding or knitting rugs, which, since losing her sight, is her sole occupation.

Her health is good, and she is as vigorous as ordinary women twenty years her junior.

NOTICE, DEGREE OF HONOR.

All members of Progress Lodge No. 6, Degree of Honor, are requested to meet at Columbia hall, at 2 o'clock, sharp, tomorrow, to attend the funeral of Sister Lydia A. Heller.

MRS. WEILEY, Chief of Honor.

FAMILY SEEMS HOODOOED.

Violent Deaths Are Common to Occupants of Minnesota Farm.

Mankato, Minn., May 26.—The death of Anton Sanghaug, who was struck by lightning on his farm near Windom, is the latest of a peculiar chain of fatalities that have occurred in his family.

Fifteen years ago Ole Sanghaug, the father, met death in a mysterious manner, and it was strongly suspected that he was murdered. Three years ago Tillie Sanghaug, one of the daughters, died of quick consumption, and shortly after her death occurred that of her brother, Ole Sanghaug, Jr., from typhoid fever.

About a month ago John S. Sanghaug, another of the sons, was run over by an Omaha passenger train near Windom and instantly killed, and this week Anton was killed by lightning. All were living on the farm three miles west of Windom.

Not If as Rich as Rockefeller.

If you had all the wealth of Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, you could not buy a better medicine for bowel complaints than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The most eminent physician can not prescribe a better preparation for colic and diarrhoea, both for children and adults. The uniform success of this remedy has shown it to be superior to all others. It never fails, and when reduced with water and sweetened, is pleasant to take. Every family should be supplied with it. Sold by all leading druggists.

SHORT SPECIAL TERM.

S. F. Snively Must Pay Six Thousand Dollars to Receiver Neff.

The special term of district court took only a short time this morning, and during that time several cases were stricken from the calendar, while others were continued to next Saturday.

In the suit of P. J. Neff, receiver of the Motor Line Improvement company, against S. F. Snively, an order for judgment against the defendant was obtained. This judgment amounts to $6,900. An order was issued about two years ago commanding the stockholders of the company to pay to the receiver the par value of their stock, which was $100 a share. Mr. Snively did not do this, and suit was brought against him. This judgment is for the full amount.

The Longyear Lumber company was granted an injunction restraining Benjamin Le Doux from trespassing on certain lands claimed by the Longyear company in St. Louis county.

The suit of William T. Burns against the Modern Steel Structural company and the city of Duluth was stricken from the calendar. This case involved patent rights on the aerial bridge, Burns claiming to be holder of certain patents which had been infringed in the building of the bridge. However, the matter was settled some weeks ago, and The Herald published the basis of settlement at that time.

The case of Joseph Stubler, respondent, against Elschen Bros., appellants, appealed from municipal court, was also stricken. This was a suit for wages and has evidently been settled.

Memorial Day Concert.

A concert will be given the evening of Memorial day by the First Norwegian Lutheran choir at the church at the corner of First avenue east and Third street. The soloists are Mrs. Horace Davis, soprano, Olga Prytz, soprano, O. Mecalson, baritone, and Miss Morton at the piano. The accompanists are Miss Morton, Miss Frost and Miss Ringsred. The program will begin promptly at 8 o'clock, and is as follows:

"Roney's Boys."

Whiskey and Beer Habit.

Nearly every day we hear something good about Orrine, the only guaranteed cure for the whisky and beer habit. The other day a lady told us that a person in whom she is greatly interested has discontinued drinking since using Orrine. This treatment does not detain the user from work, and is a simple remedy, easy to use, and so sure to cure drunkards and stop the fearful craving for drinking, that we sell it under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

Orrine is in two forms; No. 1 to be given secretly, and No. 2 for those who wish to be cured. Each form costs $1.00, and both are guaranteed. We would not recommend it if we had not assured ourselves of its great value. Mail orders filled. The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C., or F. W. Kugler, 108 West Superior street, Duluth.

PRIZES ARE PRESENTED

Banquet Given for Winners in Recent Interscholastic Field Meet.

Jefferson School Receives Championship Pennant Won by Students.

The boys' department building was turned over, last night, to the interscholastic field meet committee and the contestants in the recent field meet conducted by the boys' department Y. M. C. A.

The occasion was the presentation of the prizes won last Saturday.

Phil Bevis acted as toastmaster and opened the program with an address, welcoming all the contestants and the many teachers who were present. Sidney Morterud of the Lincoln school, president of the Interscholastic league, responded to the toast, "The Field Meet." He thanked the members of the committee for the way in which they worked to make the meet a success, and showed by comparison that the meet this year was a bigger success in every way than any held on former occasions.

The event of the evening was the presentation of the pennant, to the school winning the largest number of points. This was won by the Jefferson school with fifty-eight points, the Lincoln school being a close second, with forty-four. Miss Calverly, principal of the school, received the pennant and said that it would always have an honored place in the school.

Arthur Helmer was presented with the gold medal given by the boys' department, and Sidney Morterud with the silver medal given by the Kelley Hardware company. Both received an enthusiastic reception and replied briefly expressing their appreciation of the honod. Both champions are members of the boys' department, and have been in training in the gymnasium for the past two years.

The trip to the Deerwood camp offered to the school selling the most tickets, was won by the Lincoln school which sold 317. Sidney Morterud and William Stevens both received tickets to attend the camp in August.

Mike Wagner, secretary of the committee, responded to the toast, "The Officials and the Press." He thanked the officials for the splendid work they did, and the press for the publicity given.

Mr. Cole spoke for the baseball league, and Mr. McLeod gave a financial statement, showing receipts of $90.20 with an expense of $84.40, leaving a balance of $5.80 on the right side. He thanked the committee for the able way in which they handled the business end of the meet.

The silk badges were then awarded the winners of first and second places in the events.

The following musical program was given: Piano solo, Wellmer Wright; dialogue, Philip Pare, Edith Johnson; recitation, Olga Lundberg; piano solo, Miss Craig; songs by Stanley and Lolita Lamb, and a recitation by Irene Wardell.

Refreshments were then served and the evening was brought to a close with a stereopticon entertainment.

YOUR ATTENTION, PLEASE,

AROMA STRAWBERRIES!

We have contracted for the entire crop of this, the finest berry grown, and will receive one car of these each day during the coming week. Preserve your berries now, and insist on your grocer giving you the Aroma strawberries—they have the Hood river berries beaten a mile. Do not wait for something later, as the Wisconsin berries will be a short crop, and prices will rule high the balance of the season.

"The word "Aroma" marked on every case.

DUPONT FOR SEAT ADDICTS WANTED

Millionaire Powder Maker to be Second Senator for Delaware.

Washington, May 26.—H. A. Dupont, the millionaire powder manufacturer and a Republican, will be elected state senator from Delaware as the result of a harmonious agreement between the various factions which have been fighting for a number of years. The factions have agreed to request Governor Lee to call a special session of the legislature to elect a senator to fill the vacancy in the senate. The governor will issue the call in a few days.

Senator Allee, who has been working to eliminate Addicks from the Delaware political situation, called on President Roosevelt yesterday and assured him that satisfactory progress had been made toward bringing the factions together and stated that according to the information he then had Col. Dupont, who had been allied with the anti-Addicks faction, would be elected by the Republicans. Allee was elected to the senate by the Addicks faction and Col. Dupont will be selected as the representative of the other faction. This will, it is believed, put an end to the political feud which has existed in Delaware for several years. But Addicks and Allee are no longer friends and Addicks is very bitter toward Allee, referring to him as "a traitor," and as "the little jeweler of Dover." Addicks still believes that many of his old followers in the state legislature remain true to him, but Senator Allee declared today that Dupont would be elected to the senate practically without opposition.

DAVIDSON NOW LEADS, BUT LENROOT A COMER.

Madison, Wis., May 26.—That Governor James O. Davidson is the biggest entry in the Wisconsin gubernatorial race today is generally conceded by politicians at the capital city.

If a vote were taken in the next month it is agreed he would sweep the boards easily. The interest in the situation centers in the "growing possibilities" of Senator La Follette's choice, Irvine L. Lenroot, of Superior, speaker of the assembly.

Wheelhorses of the La Follette organization declare that from now on until the primary election in September Speaker Lenroot will be constantly in the public eye and will gain strength. The plan is to have the speaker write public letters on political questions and make many speeches.

BRITISH FLAG STRUCK.

Irishman Didn't Like to See it Over American Building.

Jackson, Mich, May 26.—The sight of a British flag flying from the staff of the city hospital was too much for the Irish eyes of Mike Maloney, formerly a United States soldier in the Philippines, and he made a redhot Celtic protest to the matron, Miss Pickens.

An effort was made to mollify Maloney with the statement that the flag was thrown to the breeze at the request of a nurse, Miss Maud Carven, who is a Canadian and a loyal subject of King Edward, in honor of the physicians in attendance at the meeting of the State Medical society, but such an excuse did not go.

The American nurese also thought that the British flag was out of place over an American institution. Finally the matron gave the order and the flag was struck, leaving the Stars and Stripes in sole possession.

SENT TO A MADHOUSE THOUGH HE WAS SANE.

Madison, Wis., May 26.—A case in which a sane man was committed to a Wisconsin insane asylum was heard in the Dane county court yesterday. The principal was E. H. Ryan, aged 40 years, a widely-known real estate dealer of Mauston, who was ordered discharged from the asylum immediately at the close of the hearing.

On returning home from a business trip several weeks ago, Ryan's 8-year-old daughter complained to him that a neighbor's boy had thrown sand into her hair. This aroused the ire of Ryan and he caught the youngster and administered a sound spanking.

Shortly afterward the grandfather of the boy complained to the authorities that Ryan was a dangerous man to be allowed at large, and asked that he be sent to an insane asylum. Ryan thought that the charge was simply one of assault. Even when a physician had a short chat with him, no suspicion of the real proceedings dawned on him.

The fact that his wife was ill in bed and his attorney temporarily absent from the city increased his predicament. Only one doctor instead of two, as required by law, saw or examined him between the time of his arrest and his commitment, and he was not taken before the judge who ordered his commitment.

Ryan was in the asylum nineteen days before his wife became well enough to ask for his release.

MAYOR SIGNS WITH WHITE SOX

He Will Start Duluth Team on Pennant Winning Season.

Mayor Cullum has caught on with the White Sox.

He has been signed by Captain Artie O'Dea to open the league season here Monday afternoon, and will start the game against Fargo. How long he lasts will depend on his own abilities, but Artie has given him all any young player could ask—a chance—and His Honor's future in league baseball now rests with himself alone.

The mayor was asked this morning regarding this rumor, and also about the story that he was to open the White City with a balloon ascension.

"I may go in the air at times," said his honor, "but I shall not attempt the airship trip if I can prevail upon President Tessman to take my place.

"Yes, I have been engaged for the coming season to occupy the box for the local league team. I so like the applause of the multitude, you know, that if my strong right arm does not go lame I will start the team on its pennane-winning trip Monday afternoon next, and I expect every fan to be in his place, to support me in any trouble I may have with the umpire."

The mayor allowed the awestruck reporter to "feel his muscle," but refused to let out the secret of the curves he has at his disposal.

ONLY NINETEEN, BUT HAS A MARRYING RECORD.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 26.—The elopement of Lela V. Douglas of Sac City and Albert L. Alexander of Mapleton to Chicago, and their subsequent marriage at Milwaukee revealed a remarkable story.

The bridegroom, though but 19, and five years the junior of his bride, is a prominent business man of Mapleton, and possesses an independent fortune in his own name. He was recently divorced, having married a Blencoe girl at the age of 17, and being made defendant in a divorce suit on the ground of desertion after a year of wedded life.

Miss Douglas, the bride, was the daughter of Newell Douglas, an Episcopalian clergyman, residing at Sac City. The Douglas family formerly lived at Mapleton and Alexander and Lela were sweethearts before Alexander's first marriage. The parents objected to his attentions and it was on this account that he married the Blencoe girl.

He soon realized his mistake, however, and the courtship of Miss Douglas continued and a few days ago when the youthful lover, free to marry again, induce her to steal away from home and accompany him to Chicago, from which point they proceeded to Milwaukee. They were married Thursday at the residence of Mrs. Frank Barnes, 519 Milwaukee street. Mrs. Barnes is a cousin of the bride.

Rev. Mr. Douglas has not yet signified his willingness to forgive the couple. Alexander's mother, a wealthy woman, has forgiven them. Young Alexander is a jeweler.

GIRL'S HEAD CRUSHED.

Fatally Hurt While Watching Her Father Sawing Logs.

Browerville, Minn., May 26.—A peculiar accident occurred at the home of Michael Motzko, two miles from here. Mr. Motzko was sawing some large logs that lay on skids, one end of which was somewhat lower than the other. His little 4-year-old daughter was sitting on the log which he was sawing and when it was cut through it suddenly rolled and the child lest her balance and was caught between the rolling log and another and her head crushed. She lived three hours, but did not recover consciousness.

MAY HAVE TO COMPEL IT

Little Progress Made in Efforts to Abate Pole Nuisance.

Not Feasible to Use Same Poles for Different Wires.

"The council has power to order both companies off the streets and compel joint occupancy of the poles in the alleys," said Alderman Moore, at the conclusion of the conference regarding the telephone pole nuisance, yesterday afternoon, "but the aim of the committee was to arrive at a peaceable settlement, if possible. So far we have had no assistance from either telephone company.

"You did nothing last year on the underground plan," he continued, speaking to Mr. Mauseau, "and this plan shows you will convert only two blocks this year."

Little or no progress was made at the conference yesterday. Those present were: Aldermen Moore, Burgess and Getchell, City Attorney Fesler, City Electrician Hough, the members of the board of public works, C. M. Mauseau and Supt. French of the Duluth Telephone company, Manager Hubbard of the Zenith company, and Manager Van Bergen and Supt. Marks of the Duluth Edison Electric company.

Both of the telephone companies declared that it was not feasible to place light and telephone wires on the same poles. Manager Hubbard said that on a wet day the induction is strong at a distance of ten feet, and causes a noise on the telephone wires which makes it very difficult to hear ordinary conversation.

Mr. Hubbard said that the officers of his company had no particular objection to occupying the same poles with the other telephone company. "It would be preferable to occupying the same poles as the electric company," he said.

The electric company is willing to occupy poles with either of the telephone companies if the council requests it.

Representatives of the Duluth Telephone company, at the last meeting, held on Wednesday, expressed themselves as unwilling to use the poles in conjunction with the rival company.

Mr. Mauseau of the Duluth company, stated that the plan of making the different companies use the same poles was a new one to him, and said that he did not believe it could be carried out. He expressed the belief that the individual instances of occupancy of the alleys should be taken up separately, and disposed of in this way. He also exhibited plans for placing the wires underground. The work will be gradual, and the changes will be made as the business warrants. This will not do away with the poles entirely, however, as they will be required for distributing the wires among the subscribers.

It was finally decided to continue the matter for another week to give Mr. Mauseau an opportunity to take it up with the officials of the company, and ascertain what concessions can be made.

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey of 3322 Clinton street, Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism, why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm, and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. For sale by all the leading druggists.

HOODLUMS USE EGGS

Story of Reformation Calls Forth Disgraceful Display at Lyceum.

Demonstration is Preceded by Hisses From the Family Circle.

Some irresponsible and lawless hoodlums who disapproved of the sentiments conveyed by the story of the life of Martin Luther, which was presented at the Lyceum last evening, displayed their disapproval by a shower of eggs from the top gallery. Instead of remaining away, they went there with the express purpose of making trouble.

In the opening scenes of the play, hisses of disapproval were heard from the family circle and top gallery. The disturbers became more and more aggressive, as the story was unfolded, and finally the outbreak culminated in the third scene, in a shower of eggs which broke against the scenery. One egg fell into the lap of the Elector, who was seated near the center of the stage, and another struck near Frank Maxwell, one of the other participants in the play.

The excitement created by the outburst was intense. Two of the women in the audience fainted, and a number of people hurriedly left the theater.

The police had been summoned earlier in the evening and three of the officers and two detectives had been on the lookout for rioters. Three young men were taken into custody after the shower of eggs. They gave their names as Joseph Fleming, blacksmith, aged 21 years; John McLinden, teamster, aged 18 years, and Patrick Gregen, blacksmith, aged 30 years. All three men were unmarried. Beneath their seats in the gallery, the police found three dozen eggs.

The men were not arrested until the third scene of the story. The employes of the theater and the police had been atempting to locate the disturbers, but could not be certain of the men until that time.

The play was conducted by Mrs. D. E. Mayers under the auspices of St. John's English Lutheran church, and about 160 Duluth people took part. It was in the form of an illustrated lecture, telling the story of the reformation and the life of Martin Luther.

The references to incidents in the history of the reformation, and the manner in which certain religious questions were touched upon, evidently displeased a number of persons who did not have the good taste and good judgment to stay away from an entertainment of this nature, and attended with the evident intention of creating a disturbance and breaking up the performance if possible.

In the latter part of their program they were unsuccessful, as the program continued undisturbed after the offenders had been arrested and taken to headquarters by Patrolman Wanvick.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The residence of J. D. Drake, a farmer living eight miles east of Waxahachie, Tex., was struck by a tornado Friday, and completely demolished. A child was killed and others were injured.

One of the trucks of the special train carrying Sarah Bernhardt and her company broke two miles from Mankato, Kas., Friday afternoon, delaying the train several hours. No serious damage was done. A special carrying hundreds of members of the Omaha Commercial club on an excursion through the state, was following but was flagged in time to prevent a collision.

A tornado struck Whiting, Iowa, at 6 o'clock Friday morning and demolished a residence and barn. The occupants of the house saw the storm approaching and took refuge in the cellar. No other damage was done.

According to the records to date in the coroner's office, the death list from fire and earthquake at San Francisco is 402. The last name added is that of Fred F. Stanley, a letter carrier.

J. B. Johnson was killed, A. Keeting fatally injured and several others slightly injured by a dynamite explosion at a railroad camp twelve miles from Deridder, La., Friday afternoon. The men were out at target practice with rifles when one of the bullets struck a 400 pound pile of dynamite.

EXCHANGE QUIPS AT THE "SENIOR FAREWELL"

Members of High School Graduating Class Make Merry at Spread, Give History and Prophecy and Conclude the Evening With a Dance, Which Lower Classmen Attend.

Last evening, the class of '06 of the Duluth high school, added a glorious finale to its social career in the form of the Senior farewell spread. No expense nor pains were spared to make the affair a complete success and the end attained certainly justified the means.

Nearly every member of the class sat down to the elaborate spread in the lower hall at 6 o'clock and did justice to the excellent menu. The toasts were remarkably fine and by giving the class prophecy, last will and testament, and history, at the farewell spread, the class established a precedent which will probably be followed by all the future graduating classes. These features of the graduating exercises have been discarded from class night on account of their length and monotony to those not intimately acquainted with the members of the class, but here, before an audience limited to the class itself, they made a decided hit.

The class prophecy was handled in a novel way by Edna Ericson and Arthur Dunning. Twenty years after the graduation of the class Miss Ericson found herself shipwrecked on a desert island with no one in sight. An exploring tour disclosed Mr. Dunning, however, and in their loneliness they proceeded to talk over the various fortunes of the members of '06.

These were interesting in the extreme. Miron Bunnell was employed setting type in his father's newspaper office. Forsyth and Quimby were lost track of when their hair began to turn grey, and Ben Frink was on the lecture stage, his talks being illustrated by drawings by Magnus Fossum, while Coson and Crosby were running the stage accessories for the same performance.

In reply to Miss Ericson's question as to who tied the knot for Charley MacFadden and Mabel Perrault, Dunning replied that he was to have done so, but had been engaged by Earl White and Florence Winchester for the same night and so could not officiate. In his absence, Howard MacAdams, just ordained, did the job.

Henry Becker had found congenial employment running a ladies' tailoring establishment and Ed Park had set himself up as a dentist. Henry Klein occupied a prominent position on the judicial bench and Margaret Whipple was teaching school at Proctor. Ethel Becklinger was suffering as a result of some dental work done for her by Dr. Charles MacFadden and "Crassy" had aspirations in the direction of a hunter. Andrew Dunn and Florence Brown had set themselves up in business as bakers with the appropriate name of Dunn, Brown & Co., and Frieda Beier had succeeded Miss Von Scholten in the German department of the school.

Miss Mabel Culkin told the class history, dwelling upon their troubles as Freshmen, their defeats and victories as Sophomores, their hard work as Juniors and their good times as haughty Seniors. She mentioned the fact that they enjoyed the distinction of being the last class to give a party outside the school, as their Sophomore hop was the last affair before the edict of the school board decreeing that all school dances be held in the building.

As testator of the class, Charles MacFadden fairly covered himself with glory. To Principal Smith, the class bequeathed a pair of gum shoes in order that his nervous tread may not in the future warn evil-doers of his approach. Miss Taylor's inheritance was a megaphone, and Mr. Ferguson received a Whiteley exerciser. Mr. Crull is to receive a copy of "What Is and What Is Not Business" and Mr. MacFadden stated that as Professor Neal's winning smile had already won the hearts of about half of the Senior girls, he thought that no other bequest was necessary.

To the Juniors, was bequeathed the hope that they might some day reach the lofty pinnacle of Lorry attained by the Seniors, to the Sophomores the sincerest sympathy for their inability to suppress the capers of the Freshmen, and to the Freshmen, the congratulations of the class on their ability to take care of themselves.

Principal Smith, Miss Von Scholten and Mr. Neal of the faculty expressed their deep regard for the class, the class. their congratulations on the success of the spread, and their hopes for success for the members of '06 in the world.

President Borgen officiated as toast master and fulfilled the duties of the ofice in the most approved style.

At eight, the class adjourned to the upper hall where a large number of the lower classmen were already waiting and a program of sixteen dances was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The programs were in book form, very small, and though the printer made the mistake of embossing an '06 class pin in '05 colors on the cover, the effect was very pleasing.

NO CUP CONTEST THIS YEAR.

Duluth and Superior High School Teams Cannot Agree on Rules.

As a result of the failure of the Duluth and Blaine high schools to agree on rules to govern the contests, it is probable that the championship cup offered by the Northern Hardware company to the high school baseball teams of the Head of the Lakes, will not be tried for until next year.

Last week, the hardware company submitted for consideration a set of rules for the games to the three schools. They were based on the interscholastic rules of Minnesota, since they are much more stringent than the Wisconsin code, and Duluth must play under them.

The chief differences are that the Minnesota rules require a passing average in each study, while the Wisconsin rules only require an average of 75 per cent in all four subjects, and that the Minnesota code prohibits a player from representing his school after an attendance of more than four years, while this provision is omitted from the Wisconsin agreement. Blaine decided that its team would be seriously crippled by these provisions to permit her entering the contest if they were in force, but Principal Smith persisted that Duluth should only contest under those rules.

The hardware company has expressed a willingness to keep the trophy until next year, and it will probably be played for then.

TEACHERS ARE STIFF.

Not in Condition to Play Ball With the Seniors.

The second Faculty-Senior baseball game did not come off Wednesday, as planned, on account of the poor condition of the faculty ball players. Capt. Phillips interviewed his men Tuesday and found them all stiff, sore and suffering from various ailments contracted in the first contest, so he was obliged to call the game off.

Both teams are eager for blood, however, and Mr. Phillips has figured out that by the judicious use of ointments and bandages he can get his aggregation limbered up by Monday, June 4, and the game will be played then. Principal Foster of West Duluth has avowed his intention of getting into this game if it kills him, and his presence on the third bag will add much to the strength of the faculty ball chasers. Mr. Culmer will go out to right field, and Mr. Gregory will be dropped. The Senior line-up will remain unchanged.

WILL BE BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

Juniors Send Out Many Invitations for Junior-Senior Reception.

The Juniors, who have charge of the Junior-Senior reception to be given Thursday, June 7, at the Spalding, have been working hard and are confident that the affair will be the biggest and best yet.

Two hundred and fifty invitations have been sent out to persons outside of school, and while the committee does not wish to make public its plans for decoration, it promisse something surprisingly handsome. The programs are to be something like those used when '05 had charge of the affair, though slightly smaller. There will be twenty numbers and four extras.

The Juniors held their last class meeting Wednesday, and the most important action taken was the selection of a new yell for the class. The following was selected:

Boom-a-jig-a, boom,
Jig-a-boom-a, ba,
Boom-a-jig-a, jig-a-boom-a,
Ki Yi Yah!
1907,
Rah, Rah, Rah!

Treasurer Ely reported $62.50 in the terasury, and it was decided to raise the money for the class department in the Zenith by subscription. A guarantee fund for the reception is being circulated this week.

High School Notes.

Memorial day exercises were held during the first two periods yesterday, in order that they might not interfere with the Senior examinations, which take place next week. D. H. Twomey, Asa Dailey and Marcus W. Bates, members of the G. A. R., spoke to the school. Mr. Bates talked on "The Battle of Chickamauga," and his lecture was illustrated by stereopticon views.

Music was furnished by Misses Whipple, Pearson, Washburne, Alexander, Sjoselius, Pierce and Brown.

Principal Smith is preparing the charts of the assembly hall, from which the Seniors will make their selection of seats for class and commencement nights. The small size of the graduating class enables the members to receive a larger number of tickets than is customary, and each will get ten for each night, the drawing to be made in lots of six and four.

The Zenith will not be issued until a week from Monday, as it is feared that it will interfere with Senior "exams" if issued Friday.

The long-postponed field day will probably take place a week from today, and all plans have been made to hold it on that date.

WHIRLWIND CAMPAIGN BY COLE IS A SURPRISE.

proach of a Hanson boom. As Caesar thrice spurned the crown at the feast of Lupercal, so Hanson has more than thrice spurned the offers of his friends to land the nomination for him. While he stands ready to receive it if it is handed to him on a silver salver, he resolutely refuses to have it forced upon him by a few of his friends. His refusal to enter the race at all is regarded only as a means to pave the way for him as a dark horse. With so many candidates in the field for the gubernatorial nomination, it is feared that a dead lock, or something worse, will result, and that Hanson will be the only logical solution of the problem.

The Hanson boomers are increasing every day. They herald the fact that he is a Swede, and that the next candidate must be a Swede, and under no consideration a Norwegian. Mr. Hanson refuses to commit himself one way or the other, beyond saying, "Gentlemen, you have my word for it that I am not a candidate." He will not say, however, that he will prevent his friends proposing his name to the convention. It is stated on good authority that a party of delegates will go to the convention for the express purpose of proposing Hanson, and they expect to stampede the convention for the Litchfield man.

Those who are attempting to "job" Staples, candidate for re-election as railroad and warehouse commissioner, have been effectually quelled. It is a current rumor that several have designs on Staples' seat on the commission, and hope to kill off his chances for re-nomination by getting him into the gubernatorial race. Mr. Staples has announced that he would not allow his name to be presented to the convention, and he has called off all his friends who are agitating the matter under the misapprehension that he consents to it. He states that he is a candidate for renomination for the position he now holds, and calls upon his friends to support him for that office, and that office alone.

Julius Schmahl has been making a vigorous campaign during the last few weeks. He and C. C. Dinehart are the most active candidates in the field, and although working for different offices, they are in reality opposing each other, for the nomination of one would mean the defeat of the other for nationality reasons. The press of the state is busy flattering both candidates, and enough can not be said in favor of them.

It is stated that the party is suspicious of the fidelity of Nelson of Hallock, and that there will be a number of "knockers" at Duluth next month. It is conceded that the race lies between Schmahl, Capt. Hunter and J. J. Lomen. Schmahl is especially well known through the state. There is hardly a county in the state in which he does not know two or three leaders personally, and is able to call them by name. His long service as a clerk in the house has given him a wide and very valuable acquaintance when it comes to landing a nomination.

Governor Johnson, while in Washington, was the recipient of a very encouraging remark from one of the Minnesota delegation. He said:

"Why, there ought not to be much of a fight on. Governor Johnson should be elected again. He was suitable for a lot of Republicans two years ago and there is no reason why he should not be suitable this year."

There is a general feeling that Governor Johnson should be given another term. It is generally conceded that he has made a good governor, and while in office has not used it to unduly further political ends. Men of all colors of political belief have received a square deal in his office and when it came to a question of public policy he has never allowed petty politics to govern him. As governor of Minnesota he has been above it all.

Capt. James Hunter of Faribault, who is out to capture the nomination for secretary of state, was in St. Paul last week. He stated that he had looked into the political situation of nearly every town in the state, and if he did not land the nomination he was assured that he would put up enough strength to make the successful man know that he was running. He said that in his district no decision as to the head of the ticket had been reached.

I. S. Kolhei of Cottonwood has announced himself as a candidate for representative from the Seventeenth district. He has lived in the district for many years.

Daniel Campion of Cedar Lake, filed this week for the Democratic nomination for representative from Scott county. He represented that district some years ago.

In the Forty-eighth district, S. F. Alderman filed this week for the senate. A. J. Halstead of Brainerd has also been urged as a candidate.

Dan W. Lawler is being mentioned prominently as a Democratic candidate for congress from the Fourth district. If he does not run for the state senate it is likely that he can be induced to enter the race. He is an orator of no mean ability and has the reputation of being a good campaigner. F. B. Lynch, a member of the Democratic state central committee, has also been mentioned as a possible candidate for congress. E. C. Ives has also been mentioned as a candidate who would make a strong bid for the labor vote.

Capt. C. C. Whitney is out for Somerville for governor and predicts that Lord's strength will go over to him.

The Murray County Herald (Democratic), has attempted to launch the state ticket in this manner:

"For governor, Andy Stephens, or P. E. Hanson; for auditor, S. G. Iverson; for secretary of state, Julius Schmahl; for treasurer, C. E. Dinehart.

THE GOVERNORSHIP.

In spite of an obvious lack of public interest, the governorship fight in the ranks of the Republican party of Minnesota is approaching something like real campaign temperature as the convention day draws near.

At first most of the candidates hung bashfully back, expressing the view that because of the smouldering heat engendered by the bitter pre-convention fight of two years ago the office should seek the man this time. But this attitude was too much for mere humanity to hold very long. It was all very nice to talk about the office hunting the man, but with a multitude of candidates in the field each one was obsessed by the alarming thought that perhaps it would hunt somebody else. So one by one they began an active canvass, until now practically all of the seven candidates are busily searching for delegates.

In the opinion of The Herald the lack of public interest referred to above is due wholly to the satisfaction of the people of Minnesota, regardless of politics, with the present administration. Governor Johnson has given the state a business administration that is equal to any it has ever had, if it is not the best. By his vigorous, clean-cut participation in the affairs of the nation he has brought great credit to the state, and his common sense views and his pleasing personality have made him a prime favorite with the people of Minnesota, without regard to politics.

No good reason has been shown why there should be any change, and The Herald believes that there should be none. Therefore, the prospects for the success in November of the man who is successful at Duluth next month are very remote indeed. The only possible reason that could be advanced for a change is that Republicans who are strongly partisan might prefer to have a governor from their own party. And this reason is appealing less and less to the average voter every year.

In view of the fact that the state convention is to be held in Duluth, a thing of which Duluth is very proud, The Herald has studiously refrained from interfering, by comment or innuendo, in the contest for the Republican nomination, and it purposes to continue to so refrain. There are seven gentlemen in pursuit of the honor, all of them, it is to be hoped, most estimable gentlemen, and all of them more or less generally well known to the people.

Curiously enough, of late this situation has resolved itself into a fight of one man against the field. J. F. Jacobson of Madison, former member of the state legislature, and known as "Jacobson of Lac Qui Parle", is the one man, and while he may not be nominated in Duluth next month, he is certainly giving the other candidates some uncomfortable moments. His is easily the chief figure in the contest. While his legislative career seemed to give occasion for some resentment in Northern Minnesota, in view of his hostile attitude toward the needs of this end of the state, he has many strong friends, apparently, even in the section that he once considered to be the "enemy's country".

"Old Jake", wherever he is and whatever he may do in public affairs, has always been a positive character, and abundantly able to make his opponents realize that they had something to contend with. He is a picturesque and vigorous fighter, and if his opposition to public expenditures did sometimes lead his opponents to call him "penny wise and pound foolish", he stamped his policies upon the legislatures in which he sat, and when "Jake" started in to pound a measure through or to beat a bill into smithereens, he generally did it. If he can control the state convention as he used to control the house, the other candidates may well feel uneasy.

WOMAN'S IDEAL CITY.

Lucy Maynard Salmon, professor of history in Vassar college, has been talking about the ideal city of the twentieth century, and her views will give male Philistines, who have not yet given the subject the attention they should, an idea of what the women citizens of Duluth and other cities are working for.

Miss Salmon is an advanced examplar of high womanly culture, and her views are entitled to great weight. Of course, in her ideal city, she wants clean, shady streets. She does not want any billboards, for they are unsightly and untidy. She wants recreation parks and piers and everything of that sort, to give the people wholesome pleasure in their hour of leisure, and to tempt them out of their stuffy homes and into the pure open air.

She wants no dismal vacant lots, but instead she would have attractive squares full of trees and grass plots and flower beds. She would have roadside benches for pedestrians, where they can stop and rest and take in the beauties of assisted nature under the shade of handsome trees.

She would not have all the beauty and tidiness and comfort on the outside, however. She would go into the backyards and make them "visions of beauty". She would go into the homes and make them neat and tidy and wholesome. She would brighten dull walls with window boxes, and she would teach the children and their parents how to make the home bright and comfortable, a veritable harbor of refuge from the storm and stress of life.

In contrast with the aristocratic clubs, in the tenement districts she would have settlement plans that would give the poor similar comforts and relaxation. She would have such provisions for education, association and recreation as would keep the boys and girls out of the streets, so that we "need not turn to curfew laws as a negative means of dealing with conditions that ought never to have existed." In other words, instead of treating symptoms by restrictive measures, she would cure disease by going at its root, and by removing the conditions that make the streets more attractive to the children than any other place.

This shows what the women are trying to do. Their "women's councils" and their clubs of this, that and the other name will generally be found aiming to bring about some such conditions as Miss Salmon would have in her ideal city. They cannot do it all at once. Maybe there are some features that they never can do. But they are trying, the best they know how, to make things better, and they are entitled to the fullest possible sympathy and support.

THE NEW RAILROAD.

The plans of the Wisconsin Central railroad for getting into the heart of Duluth with its passenger station, first revealed in The Herald last night, are on a scale so elaborate as to give Duluth people a new idea of the importance of the new road to this city. They should also give Duluth a new idea of its own importance, when a new railroad is so anxious to get into the city as to go to the expense and trouble involved in carrying out these plans.

The depot site is to be between Sixth and Eighth avenues west and between Michigan and Superior streets. To get to this site the railroad must burrow under Piedmont avenue west, and run a tunnel the entire distance of four blocks, much of the way through solid rock. This is a very difficult engineering feat, and it will cost a mint of money.

Again, the new railroad has to condemn a large amount of valuable city property, including two blocks on the south side of the Bowery from Sixth to Eighth avenues west. This is very valuable property, and among the buildings upon it is the Metropolitan Opera house, which will have to come down with the rest to make room for the new station.

The Wisconsin Central, first under the name of the Lake Superior & Southeastern and now in its own name, has been heading for Duluth for some time. The definite announcement that it was coming was made several months ago, and long before that there had been persistent rumors to that effect. Since the announcement was made the railroad has been perfecting its arrangements in a quiet and orderly manner, as beseems a well-behaved railroad corporation. It does not appear to have incurred the slightest opposition anywhere in its acquisition of the necessary property, for while it has naturally sought to buy it as cheaply as possible it has shown a disposition to be fair with the owners who were to be deprived of their lands.

The new railroad is vastly important to Duluth in more ways than one. It gives a new and valuable outlet to the East for the freight and passenger traffic of this region, and it introduces an element of competition into the Northwestern railroad field that cannot fail to be of great benefit to Duluth. Again, it opens the eyes of those who had thoughtlessly imagined that there was no more room for new railroads to run into Duluth without paying tribute to those already so comfortably installed.

ANOTHER LIBEL DISPROVED.

Woman, in her struggles upward from her onetime position of inferiority to man, has had to contend with a multitude of base libels upon her character and capacity. She has been said to gossip, when everybody knows that man gossips just as much as she does, if not more. It has been said of her that she cannot throw a stone with any possibility of hitting what she aims at, when everybody ought to know that that is because it is not her nature to throw stones, but to bind up the bruises made by stones man has thrown. It has been said that she cannot drive a nail, and now comes a story from a small Connecticut town, furnished by the New York Sun, to prove that this is a base and malicious falsehood.

Down in Marlboro, in the Nutmeg state, the people are proud in their possession of a "champion nail driver", and the champion is a woman. According to the dispatch from Marlboro telling of the great event, seven girls entered a nail-driving contest. Each was provided with a hammer, a block of wood, and five eightpenny wire nails. The seven contestants were all posed, each before her individual block of wood, with hammer poised in air and with five nails clutched grimly in her left hand. At a given signal each girl began to drive her nails, and for a few minutes the pounding reminded one of a gang of carpenters working by the piece, with mealtime only a few minutes away.

In an incredibly short time—unfortunately the official record is not given—a Miss Dickenson raised her hammer above her head as a sign that she had finished, while the others continued to pound away until they had finished. Miss Dickenson was an easy winner, and the judges had no difficulty in awarding her the prize, a silver berry spoon, which she received amid the cheers and applause of the audience.

Every one of the thirty-five nails were driven home, and not a finger was smashed. Could seven men, unused to carpentry, be chosen at random, that would be able to do better? Thus is another hoary libel upon womankind driven from its lair and hunted to the burying ground for exploded superstitions.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS.

The plan of public playgrounds for children, which has been taken up so successfully in many cities, has been under consideration by the Women's Council of Duluth, and this industrious and farsighted body has been quietly working for some time to bring about a condition of public sentiment that will result in providing such an institution for Duluth.

The lake shore park scheme, upon which Mayor Cullum has been working, seems to provide a way for this that could hardly be improved upon. If the city decides to buy the tract between London road and the lake shore from Eighth avenue east to Thirteenth avenue east, it will include ample space not only for a handsome park, but for splendid playgrounds for the children of the East end.

That will be one public playground, if the plans now under way are successful, and if a start is made here it will give encouragement to the campaign for others. In the West end, if a space can be found, there should be another, and West Duluth should have a third.

Of course this all takes time and money, and it cannot be done at once. The lake shore park idea depends upon the generosity of the public-spirited citizens of that section, who will be called upon to contribute a large share of the cost of purchasing the land. The Northern Pacific railroad, which owns the property, has been kind enough to make a very handsome offer of it at little more than half its actual value. Such an opportunity as this, if it is suffered to get away now, will hardly come again. There is no spot in all the East end so admirably adapted for park or playground purposes as this.

It is true that a railroad runs through the plot, but fences would be built along the right of way on both sides, and the parts of the park separated by the road could be easily connected again by rustic bridges at a trifling expense. This would give easy access to the lake shore, with its beautiful rocks and its handsome beach, and altogether, if the citizens of the East end make it possible by supplying the sinews of war in the form of cash donations for the purchase of the property, these shore acres can be quickly and easily made into the most beautiful and accessible breathing spot in the entire city.

THE BUILDING LAWS.

Building Inspector Kielley seems to be stirring up something of a local storm by his attitude toward violations of laws designed to protect inmates of buildings in Duluth. So far as can be ascertained, it is his purpose to see that the letter of the law is strictly observed, and it is evidently his intention to have it so that if anybody is hurt it will not be his fault.

The opposition to this policy that has arisen among property-owners is the natural result of a new policy so radically different from that of his predecessors. Owners admit that freight elevators and fire escapes are not, in many cases, exactly what the law requires, but they point out that they have got along pretty well so far, without serious accidents, and they can see no reason why they could not get along awhile longer under the same conditions. They take the view, some of them, that these laws are like some other laws on the statute books, designed more to be used in case of necessity than to be strictly enforced.

On the other hand, it is possible that the building inspector is doing something that should have been done before. It is undeniable that these provisions of law and city ordinance were created with the idea that they would result in reducing the liability of accident to life and limb. It is possible, perhaps, that some of them are unnecessarily severe, though this has not yet been conclusively proved in any case.

It is pretty hard, however, to attack a man who is able to point out a definite command of law to explain his actions. Even if it is shown that the law under which he acts is unnecessary, or that it is needlessly harsh, he can always reply that if the law isn't right, it ought to be changed, but that it is his business to see that it is enforced, not to make the law or to interpret it.

Whatever the verdict may be as to the policy of enforcing strict compliance with the letter of the law in all cases, there can be but one view of the building inspector's action where conditions are obviously menacing. In such cases it is clearly his duty to insist upon the correction of these dangerous conditions, and he would not be a useful public servant if he did not so insist.

Though it is possible that there are cases where, while elevators or fire escapes do not comply with the letter of the law, yet conditions are not such as to warrant fear of accident, wherever the law is not complied with, and the result is a condition full of possibilities of danger, strict compliance should be rigidly enforced. The small expense of meeting with the demands of the law is a trifle compared with the suffering that may thereby be averted.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"It is a difficult thing to get an American to take hold of an imported innovation," said V. A. Nash of New York at the Spalding, "but once you get a first-class article in his hands, there generally follows a demand for the thing which keeps the manufacturers hustling on the other side of the water. I know of an old house in Holland. It was started in 1680, and has been handed down from father to son until the present day.

"They hadn't done much in this country until the St. Louis exposition. Then they opened a place on the grounds. For the first two months they didn't sell $100 worth of goods, and then after people began to buy hand-painted plaques and tilings, the company couldn't fill the orders fast enough. The demand is greater than the supply now.

"Start a craze and they all follow it. Not long ago everything was all Japanese goods in America. The demand was big, and the country was flooded with everything Japanese. Before that it was Indian goods, and bead work and pottery was to be seen in all the store windows. What it will be next nobody knows, but there is sure to be another craze before long, and the man who is in on the ground floor is the one who will profit by it. Some years ago there was a strong demand for Delft ware, and while the craze for that has gone by, there is still a demand for a good piece of Delft, and today hand-painted Delft tiles and plaques are quite popular.

"In America a furore starts for one thing, and all the people get what everybody else is getting in order to be in style. In Europe they always try to get something different from what their neighbor has, and if they get it they think they are more in style than if they had something after the same pattern as others. That, I guess, is the difference in the people."

"All kinds of schemes are evolved for getting money out of insurance companies, both fire and life," said James Ashworth of Chicago at the Spalding. "The fire companies are the greatest sufferers at the hands of unscrupulous persons, and have to be constantly on their guard against such losses.

"In Chicago there is a certain district where no insurance at all will be issued, because the risk is so great through people who look upon an insurance company as legitimate prey. One of this class was caught in good shape a few years ago. He had a good plan, and probably it would have worked but for a piece of carelessness on his part.

"His scheme was to start a store in a respectable neighborhood and stock it complete. In one part of the building I think he had cigars and tobaccos, and dry goods in the other part. Both were well stocked, and the establishment seemed to be first-class in every way. Things went along for a few weeks, and he succeeded in getting the goods insured to their full value, or more. Then one night empty boxes were substituted for the full ones in both places, preparatory to burning out. The man, in order to make the job sure, soaked the interior of the building and all of its contents with kerosene.

"The outlook for a clean sweep by fire was good. But the man was so careless as to leave a gasoline can standing in one corner. He entered the store and touched his match all right, but before he could get away the can of gasoline exploded, covering him with the burning stuff. In a second he was a sheet of flame. He rushed into the street and called for help. He was taken in tow by a policeman and the fire department was summoned. It got there in time to save the building, and to disclose the fact that the blaze was incendiary. The poor fellow was pretty badly burned. When he recovered sufficiently he was sent to prison for a long term."

Miss Pearl Petz, clerk at the Spalding hotel, has returned from a three months' sojourn in California, and has resumed her duties at the hotel. Miss Petz was in Los Angeles at the time of the earthquake, and was in San Francisco last Monday. Work of rebuilding the city has scarcely begun, she says, and it will be weeks before the ruins are cleared away.

Fighting Consumption.

Eugene Wood in Everybody's for June: It is news, by the way, to know that the great white plague is enormously more curable when it is taken in its very earliest stages than when it is allowed to run on a little while. Don't lose time about it. When you don't come right back to par after having had pneumonia, or the grip, or an extra hard cold; when you feel lassitude after any kind of lung trouble (and the best men are coming to look at pleurisy as something a good deal more serious than a mere stitch in the side; they are pretty sure it is a tuberculous affection); when your afternoon temperature, taken at different hours, 4, 5, 6 and 8 o'clock, is higher than it ought to be, don't imagine that you will save time by waiting. You will be a long time dead. Worse than that, you will be a long time dying. Consumption is a reasonably comfortable death, but an expensive one, since you hang on for so long without being able to earn anything. Find out if you have the least little touch of it. Then drop everything, except the business of getting well. You for the outdoor life 24 hours out of the 24! You for eggs and milk to the limit of your digestive capacity! You for rest, and the careless mind, and gentle exercise under medical supervision. (Easy to say, isn't it?)

It is also a small item of news that for light haired, blue eyed people to live out of doors where it is always bright and sunny is a mistake, and a dangerous mistake when they have tuberculosis, for then they haven't got any too much strength, and the glaring light falling upon skins and eyes unprovided with dark pigmentation to absorb it is a source of irritation and fidgets, which makes recovery rather difficult. A cloudier climate is better for blondes, and there is nothing dangerous or unsuitable in a damp climate so long as the patient is kept comfortable. This additional item will be gall and wormwood to the Get-Strong-Quickists: Those who don't care for meat are very likely to die of tuberculosis.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

The recent courthouse article published by The Evening Herald has been favorably received, and there are universal expressions of disgust and sorrow evinced by the public at the preposterous idea of the county commissioners contemplating the expenditure of any more money on this anti-picturesque building in the suburbs of the town. In the first place, an election was held in this county in 1882 as to whether the county should issue courthouse bonds. The measure was almost unanimously defeated, showing that the people were opposed to the erection of a courthouse at that time, for the reason that the building must necessarily be erected on the ground known as the courthouse square. Contrary to this decision, the county board, on May 24, 1882, passed a resolution to erect a county building on courthouse square, to cost $10,000. Later the amount was changed to $15,000, and at another meeting a contract was let at $15,934. The contractors were paid small sums additional, until the total cost was $20,000, and a county building erected, which is a monument of comeliness and an eyesore to every citizen. Now the commissioners propose to beautify and improve the structure, which is an impossibility..

General Manager Chase of the Duluth street railway said today that the surfacing of the line on Superior street was about completed. The double track has been in use today, but will be in better shape after the switch tracks have been removed.

At Tower, Sunday afternoon, the village marshal, Sam Owens, was called into one of the saloons to quell a disturbance. THE WEATHER.

It was a nasty night. The northeast wind took on fresh strength, the rain pelted down pitilessly and persistently, and the lake grew black and angry. This morning these objectionable conditions still prevailed, though the rain at times showed signs of wearying, and the clouds became lighter and less threatening. Next moment they lowered again, the rain resumed its march, and hope vanished. The weather man does not expect anything better right away. In fact, he issues the same old menu for tonight and tomorrow, of rain, fog, cold and high northeast winds. Last night's coldest here was 32 deg. and yesterday's highest was 46 deg.

A year ago today a west wind made it warmer, but clouds made it cooler, and the combination was pleasantly cool.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The storm central Friday morning over Nebraska, has moved to Western Iowa, while the one in the extreme Northwest has increased in strength, with center over British Columbia. These conditions caused light to heavy rains in all districts except Southwestern, Eastern Gulf, Ohio valley and Middle Atlantic states, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The Western Canada high pressure remained about stationary, but it has caused cool weather throughout the entire Northwest, including the upper lake region, with freezing temperature at Devils Lake and Qu'Appelle. Indications favor continued rain, cool temperature and high northeast winds in this locality tonight and Sunday."

Following were yesterday's highest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

FLASHES OF FUN.

Philadelphia Ledger: The railroad official was on the stand.

"And you accepted shares from the Eighteen Karat Coal company?"

"Sure thing."

"And why?"

"That company had more than its share. I am an advocate of the distribution of wealth," replied the witness, with unruffled calm.

Chicago Tribune: "George," said Mrs. Ferguson, "I know it is early in the evening yet, but would you mind lying down on the lounge and taking a nap?"

"What for?" asked Mr. Ferguson.

"Because the baby is fretful, and your snoring always lulls him to sleep."

Chicago Tribune: "Ruggles, you've improved the looks of that house of yours wonderfully in the last few months. It's one of the most attractive properties on the street now."

"Yes; that's the trouble. It has attracted the attention of the assessor and three or four burglars since I fixed it up."

Chicago Tribune: Dr. Kallomell—Like your new location, do you, notwithstanding its general healthfulness?

Dr. Sawbones—Splendidly. I've already had six of the loveliest cases of appendicitis you ever laid your eyes on.

Washington Star: "As near as I kin make de difference out," said Uncle Eben, "it's dis way. De speculations dat wins is investments, an' dem dat loses is gamblin'."

Cleveland Leader: "Why did Titewodd choose to be married by a justice instead of a preacher?"

"He said that church weddings took too long, and he had hired the carriage by the hour."

Washington Star: "What has your boy been studying?" asked the neighbor.

"Well, fur one thing," answered Farmer Corntossel, "he's been studying botany."

"What is botany?"

"Botany is what teaches a man the names of a whole lot of things he hasn't sense enough to raise."

Saturday Night Talk

Triumphant Humanity.

One of the most prominent ministers on the Pacific coast, in a newspaper article the other day, said that the doctrine of total depravity had gone by the boards in that part of the world at least ever since the earthquake. He went on to expatiate upon the kindness and consideration so universally displayed during those April days of fire and fear. Even men who had not been credited with possessing any religion rose to unprecedented heights of valor and self-sacrifice.

How would it do to substitute for this now outworn doctrine of total depravity, framed by men who may not have been quite so familiar with human nature as it actually exists, as they were with their philosophies and theologies, a doctrine of boundless human capacity for retrieving disaster? When have we had such a conspicuous exhibition of rapid emergence from the pit of misery, such a rebirth of hope and ambition, such an upspringing of a general purpose to make the future fairer than the past, as we have witnessed these past few weeks on the other side of the American continent?

The recuperative powers of a city and of an individual, too, are well-nigh marvelous. We sometimes measure human ability by its achievements on virgin soil, its capacity to fell forests, to bridge chasms, to tunnel mountains, to construct great waterways. But the greatest thing which a man or a group of men do is reconstructing the outer framework and the inner furniture of their lives, after all has been demolished. Tell me what a man does when he is down and I will tell you his caliber.

It is only once in a great while that an entire city has to set itself to the herculean task of rebuilding itself, but every day, somewhere in the world, men are faced with the problem of starting all over again, and every day men are bravely picking up the fag ends of their lives and beginning with indomitable purpose anew. They are doing it in the realm of finance. Nothing was more admirable in William McKinley than the way in which he set himself, when well on toward middle life, to the problem of paying his debts after he had met with sudden and embarrassing reverses. Statistics are sometimes quoted to show that perhaps 90 per cent of the men who enter business fail. Such figures may have a basis in truth, but some one ought to offset them by stating facts about the number of men who having failed once or in one line of trade, succeed on a second, or third, or even fourth venture, because they had courage to "try, try again."

Still finer is the spirit which men and women show in bereavement or in personal sorrow of any form. Even while their eyes are wet with tears, they are saying to themselves, "I will not let this distressing experience ruin my life or the life of those associated with me. I will find the sunshine behind this cloud, the heavenly meaning in the earthly sorrow."

The triumphant qualities in human life shine brightest in him who says, in true humility and penitence, "I have sinned," only to follow that confession with the words, "I will arise." There is no use in uttering the one phrase without the other. For sin can be shaken off and cast aside forever, and he who starts resolutely on the homeward path is sure to find and see the Father standing with outstretched arms when he himself is still a great way off.

A triumphant humanity, indeed, is this in which we are all bound together. And will not such humanity triumph eventually over that last foe whom we name death? THE PARSON.

Feeling that they ought to do something to wipe out the social obligations incurred by attendance at the Kimberton home for dinner one Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Blathersby decided to entertain at cards. So one afternoon, Mrs. Blathersby skipped across lots to the Kimberton fence and informed the good lady presiding on the other side that her presence and that of her husband was desired at the Blathersby residence after the dishes had been washed that night. Mrs. Kimberton, speaking for herself and her husband, said they would be dead willing to come. It was decided to invite Mr. and Mrs. Carrigan in, just to make the game interesting. Mrs. C. accepted the invitation and promised to be on hand early with her husband.

After supper that evening, Mrs. Blathersby put the sittingroom in order and Mr. Blathersby went over to the Dutchman's to get a couple of quarts of beer and some Little Zenith cigars. At about 8 o'clock, the Kimbertons and the Carrigans arrived and the function was under way.

While Mr. Blathersby shuffled the cards several times and showed the ladies some tricks that were all the rage on this circuit some years ago, the question of what to play was discussed. The choice finally fell on poker, and it was made unanimous. All of them knew how to play for they recalled a certain evening last winter when Mrs. Blathersby had held four nines against Mr. Kimberton's full house and that Mrs. B. was enriched sufficiently by the evening's entertainment to purchase a perfectly lovely waist.

Everyone went in to win and the game was lively from the kick-off. The Kimbertons were still stinging under the defeat of the last game and were anxious to recover their losses and get enough of the gate money to buy a new kitchen table. Their ardor had cooled after that fatal game, but it had revived by now and they were full of hope once more.

Everything went along smoothly and all present seemed to be having a perfectly dandy time. The gentlemen puffed the Little Zeniths, blew smoke in the ladies' faces and discussed the prospects of the White Sox while the ladies regaled themselves with delightful yarns about a woman in the next block, whose husband got drunk and beat her about three times a week. No one forgot to look at their cards, however, and all kept their eyes open for signs of treachery.

The game went pretty evenly for a time. Mrs. Blathersby was compelled to buy more chips at intervals but her husband harbored a tall stack which represented several visits by Mr. Kimberton, to the banker. Then Mr. Blathersby and Mrs. Carrigan both took several big pots and everyone decided that it was time to attend to business and corral some of the coin. So they studied their cards carefully and attempted to draw to every little pair that came along. The ante was 2 cents and the limit, 10 cents.

When Mrs. Blathersby opened the pot for 10 cents, Mrs. Kimberton raised it with a gleam of triumph in her eyes. She drew two cards so did Mrs. Blathersby. Everyone came in for 10 cents and Mrs. Blathersby raised it 10 cents, the other good lady came back strong with another. When this took place, Mrs. Kimberton looked at her cards for quite awhile and finally called. Then Mrs. Blathersby carelessly spread four prima donnas on the table and raked in the chips.

There was consternation among the Kimbertons. It was evident that they were going to lose and that desperate measures were necessary. Mr. Kimberton dealt the cards carefully and wished the others would take their eyes away from him for a minute.

Mrs. Kimberton held up two ten spots and in the draw acquired a pair of kings. It then occurred to her that that she had discarded a king so she carefully picked up her discard instead of the two tens she had intended to save.

"Hey, them is your discard," said Mr. Blathersby, severely.

"I am sure they ain't," said Mrs. Kimberton. "I only drawed two cards and I suttinly ought to know what I held up," said Mrs. Kimberton, haughtily.

"Yuh must be mistaken, Bella, I seen you throw them cards away and hold them two over there," said Mrs. Blathersby. She had filled a flush but a horrible fear pervaded her soul that Mrs. Kimebrton was negotiating for a full house by means which were hardly fair.

"Well, it don't make no difference; lets call it a misdeal," said Mr. Blathersby, easily. He had nothing worth while in his own hand.

"No," said Mrs. Kimberton, determinedly. "I can't play no longer when people get sore when a party makes a little mistake and picks up the wrong cards. I never likes to play with parties which can't overlook little things like that. Come, Jim, I think we better go home.

But Mr. Kimberton objected. "Oh, lets play some more, I ain't had a decent hand tonight and I don't like to quit loser. There ain't no use of getting huffy."

"I won't stay no longer. I likes to know when a pusson is my friend and when they is not. Let's be going."

Mr. Blathersby was preparing to urge them to stay when his wife gave him a kick and informed by the wig wag system that they were ahead of the game and perfectly willing to remain, so the Carrigans made no preparations for leaving. They did not intend to break up the game so early.

The leavetaking of the Kimbertons hardly resembled a love-feast. It was brief and quite devoid of formality. When Mr. and Mrs. Kimberton reached the bottom of the stairs—the Blathersbys lived in an apartment house—she was struck with a brilliant idea and resolved to carry it into effect. Fortune favored her plan, for there was a policeman on the corner. She rushed madly up to him.

"Hurry up to flat 4 at the top of the stairs," she said, excitedly. "We just heard a lot of yelling there and I think they's a man there killing his wife."

Then the Kimbertons set out for home, on a trot.

"I hope he pinches 'em," said Mrs. Kimberton, as they turned into their own yard, "I was never so insulted in my life."

"Have you ever happened to notice the novel contrivances that are manufactured to conceal the fact that the owners carry their lunch?" asked the man who had made lots of money in copper stocks, to the others who happened to be loafing in the broker's office.

Most of them admitted that they had.

"Yes, sir, some of them are real remarkable," continued the man. "Every morning you can see people going along the street carrying music rolls and cameras which in reality contain their noonday meal. Most of 'em are young folks, who don't like to have it get around that they lug their own grub. Somehow, they hate to have it known about as the young men hate to carry home their own laundry.

"I read somewhere the other day that the school girls carry their lunches in affairs that look like books. Probably the geography contains sandwiches, the Latin pie and the German book, milk. I understand that one girl dropped her books and the German book sprang a leak."

"I remember an incident very much like that," said another. "A certain man came to live in the neighborhood, and the only peculiar thing about the new family seemed to be their fondness for kerosene oil. The men would carry an oil can down to the store and back home again regularly every evening. I guess he was one of the Standard Oil company's principal sources of profit for a long time.

"When the folks in the neighborhood were sitting on their front porches of an evening, they would always see this man go by with his oil can. I believe that one man suggested to him that he ought to have electric lights put in his house as he would save money thereby. His can was one of these open-work affairs. You know what I mean. It was made of tin and had little glass windows on the sides.

"The interest in him was general and some people in the block used to keep track of the oil that family burned. They figured it out that he spent at least one-fifth of his salary for the rebate fluid.

"One evening, when we were all sitting out on the porch, our good customer of John D. Rockefeller came up the street with his usual can, but seemed to be laboring under difficulties. He acted as if he had been helping to make Milwaukee famous and finally tripped and fell right in front of our house.

"I went to his assistance and finally got him on his feet again. His oil can had busted though, and its contents was spilling all over the sidewalk. It seemed to have foam on it and my suspicions were confirmed when my drunken neighbor said: 'My! there's a lot of good beer going to waste!.'"

Don't take scoop coffee when you want Arbuckles' ARIOSA Coffee, which is sold only in sealed packages and never loose out of a "scoop."

A grocer may recommend a loose coffee at so much a pound. He is all right. He means well. If he handled the coffee himself from the tree to you, you might well trust him implicitly.

But he does not!

He may know something about coffee. He may think he does, but let that pass.

He buys it loose! From whom? You don't know—if you did it would not mean anything. He trusts the man he buys it from—maybe a salesman, maybe a wholesaler, maybe a little local roaster. It does not matter. What do they know about coffee? More than the grocer? Perhaps.

Where do they get their coffee?
Where does it come from?
Whose hands touched it last?
Where had they been?

They can't tell Java from Brazilian by the looks after it is roasted, and it takes a man, expert by years of practical experience, to select sound, sweet green coffee of high cup merit; and another man with the knowledge and experience to proportion and blend for uniform results in the cup. First they must have the supply to preserve uniform quality.

Arbuckles buy more coffee than any four other concerns in the world combined, and their coffee is the most uniform. Then the roasting.

"The Brazilian Ambassador tells me that coffee-roasting is an art," was the court testimony of a world famous chemist. Where are artists more likely to find employment—manipulating a little roaster or in the Arbuckle mills, where the yearly roast amounts to the hundred million pounds?

Don't take scoop coffee, but buy a package of Arbuckles' ARIOSA. Take it home and keep the bean intact until ready to use. We hermetically seal each bean after roasting with a coating of fresh eggs and granulated sugar to close the pores and preserve the flavor. A little warming makes it easy to grind and develops the flavor. Coffee deteriorates if exposed to the air—it also collects dust and absorbs impurities. That is why you should "BEWARE OF THE SCOOP."

If your grocer will not sell you the genuine Arbuckles' ARIOSA Coffee it will be greatly to your advantage to buy from us direct. Send us $1.80, postal or express money order, and we will send 10 pounds of Arbuckles' ARIOSA in a strong wooden box, transportation paid to your freight station. Price fluctuates and cannot be guaranteed for any period. You cannot buy as good coffee for the money under any other name or loose by the pound. More—the coffee will come in the original packages bearing the signature of Arbuckle Bros., which entitles you to free presents—10 pounds—10 signatures. New book with colored pictures of 97 beautiful useful presents will be sent free if you write. You can write first and see the book before you order the coffee.

The present department is an old institution with us to add a little sentiment to the business.

PRICE IS NO EVIDENCE OF QUALITY!

ARIOSA is just as likely to suit your taste as coffee that costs 25 or 35 cents a pound. It aids digestion and increases the power and ambition to work.

THE WEEK AT THE NORMAL

Plans for Summer School Which Will Open June 18.

Faculty and Line of Work—Events at the School.

The summer school announcements have been printed, and are ready for distribution. The school will be held from June 18 to Aug. 1, at the Normal. The summer school is for the benefit of the teachers in St. Louis, Carleton, Cook and Lake counties.

The faculty will include: President, E. W. Bohannon; L. W. Kline, who will teach phychology and pedagogy; J. W. Hubbard, who will teach geography and physics; H. C. Strong, who will teach history and civics; Katherine D. Post, who will teach English grammar; C. F. Curtis Riley, who will teach physiology and botany, and W. C. Cobb, superintendent of the Cloquct school, who will teach algebra and geometry.

The work to be offered will be quite similar to that done in preceding sessions of the summer school, and will meet the need of the two classes of students. Those who desire to review the common branches, and those who desire to earn normal credits. Those who elect the review course will carry not more than four subjects, and will recite once a day, and will not receive normal credits. Those who elect the normal credit course will be admitted and enrolled as regular Normal students. Their records will become a part of the permanent records of the school, and will be accepted in place of examinations for the state teachers' certificates, when they represent a final standing of 80, or above. Such students will carry not more than two subjects, and will recite twice a day on each subject. Regular students of the normal school wishing to make up deficiencies in order to gain a regular standing will be admitted upon recommendation of the faculty; also all prospective students, of the graduate courses, who may be deficient in one or more subjects on the list of entrance requirements, are expected to take advantage of the opportunity to remove such deficiency.

Any one holding a state teachers' certificate of the second grade, a county diploma, or certificate of the state high school board in arithmetic, geography, English grammar, United States history, and physiology, will be admitted without examination to the classes, for those who are seeking normal credits. Entrance examinations in the subjects named will be held on the day of opening, June 18, for those who are unable to enter in any of the above described ways. The daily programs will provide for classes in English grammar, United States history, arithmetic, physics, algebra, geometry, geography, physiology, civics, reading, school management, psychology, and general methods. Work in other subjects will be offered if a sufficient number should ask for it.

The daily work will begin at 8:30 and close at 1 o'clock. All laboratory work will be done in the afternoon. All students are expected to enter on the first day and be prepared to begin the regular class work on the day following. Prospective students should give notice of their intention to enter, some time in advance of the opening. The students are expected to bring with them any textbooks or works of reference likely to be of service. Such other books as may be needed and any supplies can be had at the school at cost. A list of rooms and boarding places will be on file at the office. Other particulars on the work can be had by addressing President Bohannon at the State Normal school, Duluth.

The freshman class had charge of the program in chapel this week. Miss Bainbridge spoke to the students Monday. Tuesday Mrs. Davis sang. Miss Post talked to the students Wednesday morning. Thursday the chorus sang the song "Rise Again, Glad Summer Sun" by Henry Leslie. Friday Dr. Kline spoke to the pupils on the subject, "Common Sense."

The Glee club held its weekly practice on Friday in the music room. The club is busy practicing the commencement music.

The Juniors planned an outdoor picnic for Friday but on account of the weather were obliged to have it at the Normal. A pleasant afternoon was spent and a picnic lunch was served later in the afternoon. The guests included: Misses Post, Shoesmith, Carey, Anne, Breutigan, Brown, Flynn, Hinsman, Toltorf, Ives, Kelly, Krey, Leland, McLean, Mitchell, Olson, Owens, Pepple, Phelps, Roberts, Land, Shaver, Shaw, Ulsrud, Wolfe, Gowan, Magner, MacDonald, Bartz, Chisholm, Keehan, Taylor, Turnbull, Wiltse and Latture.

The Third year class gave a party in the music room Friday afternoon. The afternoon was spent in games and amusements. Refreshments were served later in the afternoon. The guests included: Misses Mason, Anderson, Burgher, Burton, Hathaway, Johnson, Clara Johnson, Kristenson, La Valle, Lilja, McKay, Nichols, Porter, Schultz, Shaver, Westaway, Witson, Warde.

The Seniors are busy practicing for the class-day exercises.

BOYS CANNOT WORK AT NIGHT

As Telegraph Messengers, Says the State Labor Commissioner.

St. Paul, May 26.—W. H. Williams, state labor commissioner, is preparing to make a searching investigation into the ages of the boys employed by the various telegraph and messenger service companies in the state, and especially in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. Reports have come to him that the various companies are employing boys to carry night messages. Under the state law, no boy under 16 can work after 7 o'clock in the evening. Rev. David Morgan of St. Paul yesterday reported to the commissioner's office that he had discovered a 14-year-old boy, working for one of the large companies, and that the boy stated that his hours were from 7 o'clock in the evening until 11 o'clock.

The inspectors are engaging in other work, but as soon as they are free they will turn their attention to this work. The department has conducted a special crusade against child labor for months, and it is the intention of the labor commissioner to be as vigilant as ever. This is the season of the year when students leave school to go to work, and when permits are being issued in large numbers. Although the boys under 16 years old have permits to work, these permits only allow them to work until 7 o'clock in the evening. The department intends to be as strict concerning child labor during the summer months as in winter. The law gives the parents wide latitude during the summer months as far as the age of the child is concerned, but the nature of the work to which a child is put is as rigidly stipulated in summer as in winter.

Complaints have also reached the bureau that boys under age are still being employed in bowling alleys, to set up pins, which, if they work in the evening, is a direct violation of the state law. The investigation may be extended into this class of child labor also.

GOOD ROADS CAUSE

Is Flourishing In the Southern Part of the State.

St. Paul, May 26.—George W. Cooley, state engineer, returned yesterday from Plainview, where he has been holding a good roads' convention. The cause of good roads, he states, is flourishing in the southern part of the state, and at every convention there is an increase in the attendance. Conventions will be held at the following places during June:

Albert Lea, June 2; Montevideo, June 4; Lafayette, June 19; Foley, June 21; Grand Rapids, June 22, and at Duluth, on a date which has still to be set.

PERJURES HIMSELF TO GET COMPANION FREE

Young Jailbird Admits in Court He Lied Under Oath.

Three Young Toughs With Bad Records Must Face Trial.

"I did the best I could for him," said Joseph Benzin, alias McAlister, alias Joe Martini, when he left the witness stand this morning in the municipal court, a self-confessed thief and perjurer, after making a vain attempt to get his companion, "Frisco Shorty," free from the charge of grand larceny hanging over his head.

Benzin, "Frisco Shorty" and Arthur Brown form a trio of young jailbirds who were rounded up by the police Tuesday, on the charge of prowling around the hotels and lodging houses of the city, and stealing from the bedrooms.

The three young men have records that are far from enviable. Brown admitted on the witness stand that he had twice been sentenced to Red Wing. On one occasion he stole a horse and rode away on it, and the second time he entered a pickle factory in St. Paul.

"Frisco Shorty" stated on the witness stand that his right name is John Gordon, but that he has gone under the name of Frank Maloy for the last year. He was arrested on suspicion of burglary in St. Paul, but the charge was changed to drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and he served ninety days in the workhouse there.

Joseph Benzin, alias McAlister, alias Marthi, is a well known "rat burglar," according to T. H. Murnane, the Bertillon expert at St. Paul. He was arrested in connection with the hold-up of a farmer near La Crosse, recently, but was acquitted. He has served time in the St. Paul workhouse.

Benzin and "Frisco Shorty" both hail from San Francisco, but they have not been there for a year or more. They are both wanted now in Minneapolis on a burglary charge.

Brown comes from St. Paul.

The three young men arrived in Duluth last Sunday, and Monday the thefts began to be reported to the police. Tuesday morning they were located in a room at 207 West Superior street, all asleep in one bed. Some of the stolen goods were found in the room, and the rest had been checked at the Lenox hotel.

Benzin and Brown both waived their preliminary examination last Tuesday. Gordon, however, denied all knowledge of the crime, and put up a strong defense. He claimed that he had not been with the other two all day Monday, and that he knew nothing of the stolen goods. He claimed that he had come to Duluth to look for work, together with Benzin, and that they had met Brown here.

Gordon claimed that he spent Monday looking for work, and had gone to the room and returned about 12 o'clock. The other two, he said, did not come in until later, and he did not know anything of their actions.

Gordon put his other two companions on the stand in his own defense. Brown swore that Gordon's story was true, and admitted that he and Benzin had stolen the goods, and had checked the grips at the Lenox.

Benzin made a gesture of disgust as the witness was telling his story. He had previously denied all knowledge of the goods, and after Brown had confessed, he was called back to the stand. Under the cross-examination by County Attorney McClintock, Benzin admitted that Brown's story was correct.

"Then you perjured yourself?" asked Mr. McClintock.

"I suppose so," said the witness.

"Do you want to ask him anything more?" asked the county attorney, turning to Gordon.

"No. I don't want him any more."

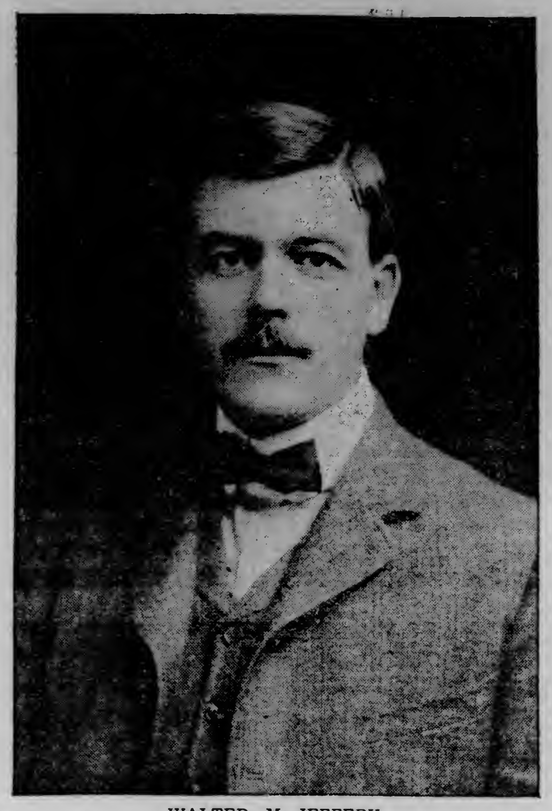
"You see nobody has any use for you any longer," said Mr. McClintock.

"Well, I did the best I could for him," said the witness.

The evidence which counted most heavily against Gordon was the finding of one of the Lenox hotel checks in his pocket, and the testimony of the check room boy that Gordon was one of the men that checked the grips. Therefore, in spite of the testimony of both Benzin and Brown that Gordon was not with them, Judge Windom bound Gordon over to the grand jury, and fixed his bail at $500. The other two had already been bound over, and all three will await their trial on a grand larceny charge.

It is possible that Gordon will be sent back to Minneapolis and tried there on the charge the Minneapolis police have against him if it is found that they have a clearer case than the Duluth police.

DEATH FOLLOWS SECOND STROKE OF PARALYSIS



WALTER M. JEFFERY,
Auditor of Oliver Iron Mining Company, Whom Death Has Claimed.

Walter M. Jeffery, auditor of the Oliver Iron Mining and Pittsburg Steamship companies, died at 2:30 this afternoon, at his residence, 28 Twenty-first avenue east. He had been ailing for several weeks, and for the past three days had been in a comatose condition, unable to recognize anyone. Death came to him peacefully; he did not regain consciousness.

Some months ago Mr. Jeffery suffered a stroke of paralysis, and while coming back from California, about three weeks ago, had a recurrence of the same disease. His condition became gradually worse, and he was obliged to take to his bed.

This week his condition became very serious indeed, and for the past four days his life had been despaired of. He sank rapidly, and finally went into a state of coma, from which all the science of the physicians could not arouse him. He did not awaken again.

At his bedside were his wife and two children, his mother and two sisters. His mother and one sister are residents of Houghton, Mich., while his other sister is Mrs. Charles S. Roulo of this city.

As auditor of the Oliver Iron Mining company and of the Pittsburg Steamship company as well, Mr. Jeffery had an important post in the Steel corporation's organization in the Lake Superior district. He was a marvelous accountant. His adeptness at figures made him the wonder of his fellow workers when he first entered the mining business and made him a most valuable man.

Mr. Jeffery was a clerk at the Regent mine, at Negaunee, Mich., when T. F. Cole was in charge there. When the Oliver Iron Mining company was formed, he went to Milwaukee with Dr. Hulst and there became chief clerk in the general manager's office. Later, he became assistant auditor of the Oliver company and upon the death of Henry C. Daft, was made auditor of the entire concern.

When the Oliver company went into the United States Steel corporation, his duties and responsibilities were greatly increased. He was a fine man in the place and had the auditing department well organized. He was also at the head of the Pittsburg Steamship company's auditing department.

No arrangements for funeral have been made as yet.

FISHER IS A CANDIDATE

Duluth Postmaster Will File for Nomination for Sheriff.

Friends Report Much Encouragement and Get His Consent.

E. L. Fisher is a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff.

Mr. Fisher has not yet filed for the nomination nor will he possibly for some weeks; but he is a candidate. Let that be distinctly understood. And be it further understood that his campaign is already under way and is claimed to be gaining ground with remarkable speed.

This will not be welcome news to other candidates now in the field for the Republican nomination for they all hoped that the postmaster would keep out of the field as they recognized him as a dangerous man. Now that he is in there will be a merry fight.

Mr. Fisher did not announce his candidacy himself, but on being urged to say whether or not he would file for the nomination, he said that he would, although not right away, and possibly not until after his term as postmaster ends, which will be about July 1. His friends, however, have been notified of his candidacy and are now and have been for some time working in his behalf, urging a lining up, fixing fences and pulling wires for his benefit.

Mr. Fisher has been talked of ever since the Miles-Armstead-Bates mix-up, and as soon as his name was announced by way of suggestion, friends immediately began to line up for him and urge him to get into the game. He hesitated for some time, realizing that a try for the shrievalty nomination would mean a hard fight and a persistent campaign. But he was so assured of support from all directions, and his friends, who had been feeling the public pulse, as it were, reported such encouragement that he decided to become a candidate. Before very long he will formally announce himself.

BAD FIRE AT PESHTIGO, WIS.

Engines Have Been Sent From Marinette and Menominee.

Marinette, Wis., May 26.—A call was received by the fire department of this city this afternoon from the city of Peshtigo, for help. There is a bad blaze in the business district, and a gale of wind blowing. Considerable property has already been destroyed, and the small department, with only two streams, is unable to stop the flames. Fire broke out at 2 o'clock. Marinette and Menominee fire departments have sent engines to fight the fire.

NAVAL BILL AGREED ON

Carries Appropriation for Biggest Battleship in the World.

Washington, May 26.—The naval appropriation bill will be reported to the senate on Tuesday. The appropriation for a battleship of the type of the Dreadnaught now being constructed for the British navy was accepted by the senate committee as it passed the house. The battleship will carry as heavy armor and as powerful armament as any warship afloat.

One million dollars was appropriated for the purchase of submarine torpedo boats, the house having authorized contracts but made no appropriation.

Toward the accumulation of a reserve supply of powder and shell, the house appropriation of $1,000,000 was increased to $2,300,000.

For the purchase and manufacture of reserve guns for ships of the navy, the appropriation was increased from $500,000 to $750,000.

For the extension of the wireless telegraph system on the Pacific coast $65,000 was appropriated.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED BEYOND

Sault Ste. Marie, May 26.—S. H. Davis, local agent for the Anchor Line and a well known marine man, died suddenly here today of heart failure.

New Orleans, May 26.—J. E. McDaniel, correspondent of the Associated Press at New Orleans for 35 years, died today after a week's illness. Mr. McDaniel was a native of Alabama and served in the Civil war. He was engaged in mercantile pursuits in New Orleans for a time after the war and was business manager of the Picayune for a short time. Since then he had been the correspondent of the Associated Press in New Orleans. He was 71 years old.

LIVES OF 2,100 GIRLS ARE ENDANGERED.

New York, May 26.—The lives of about 400 laundry girls were imperiled today by a fire which started in the chemical laboratory of the Ducker Leavitt company at 530 West Twenty-fifth street, and swept through the back of this building into the Schlesinger laundry building, which fronted on Twenty-fourth street. Many girls jumped from first story windows. Fifteen minutes after the fire started it was reported that three persons were taken to the hospital. The fire spread with great rapidity, and five alarms were turned in.

RACES ARE SCHEDULED

Duluth Yacht Club Season to Open Decoration Day.

Regular Cup and Pennant Races Will Begin June 23.

R. W. Marshall, chairman of the sail committee of the Duluth Yacht club, has prepared a schedule of races for the season of 1906. The sailing season will open Decoration day, with preliminary races, followed by trial races on June 2, 9 and 16. The regular schedule of races will be sailed beginning June 23, as follows:

28-FOOT SLOOPS.

Pennant Races—June 23, July 7, July 21, Aug. 11, Aug. 25.

Commercial Club Cup Races—June 30, July 14, July 28, Aug. 18, Sept. 1.

Special obstacle races for prizes offered by sailing committee on July 4.

18-FOOT CAT BOATS.

Pennant Races—June 23, July 7, July 21, Aug. 11, Aug. 25.

Commodore Cup Races—June 30, July 14, July 28, Aug. 18, Sept. 1.

Ladies' day regatta for appropriate prizes will be held Aug. 4.

CLASS B—32-FOOT SLOOPS.

Superior and Duluth boats competing for the J. B. Cotton cup: July 14, Duluth, July 21 at Superior, July 28 at Duluth, Aug. 11 at Superior, Aug. 18 at Duluth.

The courses to be sailed will be decided by sailing committee on day of races over course designated by the following buoys:

Buoy No. 1, start.
Buoy No. 2, off M. A. Hanna dock.
Buoy No. 3, Oatka Beach.
Buoy No. 4, log dump.
Buoy No. 6, center of harbor, opposite Old Superior boat house.

The starting time and course of each race will be posted on bulletin board and captains must acquaint themselves with same from board. It is desirable to start races at 2:45 p. m.

The cafe will open for May 30 and on and after June 9.

The club owns four of the 22-foot cat boats which it will rent to members on any days except Wednesdays and Saturdays, when they will be reserved for racing.

SOLDIERS DROWNED AT MANILA.

Manila, May 26.—Sergeant W. H. Thompson, Privates J. O. Miller and J. S. Morrison, of the Eighth cavalry, and Private Mondosa of the constabulary, together with five horses, were drowned yesterday in the Lingayan river by the capsizing of a ferry boat. The bodies of Thompson and Morrison have been recovered.

BOGUS BOTTLE MESSAGES.

London Mail: An appeal is made by Thomas A. Barber, the British vice consul at Oran, Algeria, to captains and officers of ships to do all in their power to prevent persons with a perverted sense of humor from casting sealed bottles into the sea bearing messages purporting to be from shipwrecked mariners.

Mr. Barber, in a letter to the Daily Mail, says: "Within a month two sealed bottles have been picked up on this coast, and the finders have brought them long distances, expecting naturally a commensurate reward for their trouble. When I tell you that in most cases the contents are far from interesting, and, in fact, frequently outrageously profane and rude, you will, I think, agree with me that the sooner the practice ceases the better. It brings our countrymen into disrepute when, as in such cases, I have to translate the contents.

"Add to this that people who have gone to such trouble to bring these bottles to the notice of the local authorities, finding that they have been hoaxed, will in future take no such trouble, with the result that a really important communication would never come to hand."

Mr. Barber incloses a sample of one of these hoaxes. It reads as follows:

"Half-past February, 2009 B. C.

"The writer, E. Crusoe, is marooned on a small island in the state of Ohio. I was a seaman on the Mary Ann, a three-masted whaling sloop, which was shipwrecked on the coast of Missouri, three miles from Kalamazoo, Mich., at a quarter to March, in the year of our Lord, 1759. Please help a fellow-creature in distress. I am living on peanuts."

A Lloyd's official informed a Daily Mail representative that at least nine out of ten of the bottles found in the sea contained bogus messages, and no attention was paid to them. The position of all ships on the register was approximately known almost at any time, and invented "letters" from "shipwrecked persons" usually bore internal evidence of being bogus.

SIGNED THE NOTICE.

Boston Herald: John Stetson, the theatrical manager, was a stickler for detail. During the palmy days of the old Globe theater stock company, Mr. Stetson became irritated at his stage manager, Mr. Sharp, and found fault with him in many ways. One day the stage manager posted this notice in the wings for the benefit of the company:

"All members of the company are requested to be on hand for rehearsal Monday morning at 10 o'clock—sharp."

Mr. Stetson chanced to be walking about the stage some time later, and observed the notice, which he stopped to read. The stage was deserted, save for one or two scene painters.

Mr. Stetson turned around and rapped loudly on the boards with his cane.

"Here you," he cried, as the men came running up, "rub that d—d Sharp off the bottom of that paper and put on Stetson," and he pointed with his cane to the last word.

HIS TITLES MIXED.

Kansas City Journal: Senator Hemenway, of Indiana, is new to the ways of the senate, but very familiar with the ways of the house, where he served for many years before he went into the senate. One day in debate on the pure food bill he referred many times to Senator Hepburn, who was in charge of the bill, as "the gentleman from Idaho," which is the custom of the house. In the senate they say "the senator from Idaho." After Hemenway had called Heyburn "the gentleman from Idaho," several times he realized that he had made a mistake. "I hope," he said apologetically, "that the senator from Idaho will pardon me for calling him a gentleman." A little later Hemenway had occasion to refer to Senator Gallinger. He said: "The senator from New Hampshire, the most eminent physician in the senate." "Thank you for nothing," snapped Gallinger, "inasmuch as I am the only physician in the senate."

TALKS ON PUBLICITY

Mr. Rucker Addresses the House on Political Corruption.

Says Apathy of Republicans to Such Nonsense is Startling.

Washington, May 26.—Publicity before election as well as after election, was the subject of an address delivered by Mr. Rucker (Mo.) today in the house, while the latter had under consideration the diplomatic and consular bill.

The house pricked up its ears when Mr. Rucker mentioned the names of members of the committee who voted for his publicity bill, Gillespie of Texas, Hardwick of Georgia, Ellerbe of South Carolina, Watkins of Louisiana and himself, all Democrats, while the Republicans on the committee voted against it.

Mr. Olmstad (Pa.) called the gentlemen to order, saying that he had no right to divulge the proceedings in committee. Mr. Rucker was ordered to proceed in order, but ingeniously got in the record the names of the Republican members of the committee on election of president, vice president and members of congress by stating that if the bill were in the house the Republicans towards his or any other bill prohibiting political corruption was startling. He suggested that when the Democrats got control of the Sixtieth congress and relegated the Republicans to the Cherokee strip they would pass a law that would punish corruptionists of all classes.

"When the Democrats get the next house," said Mr. Rucker, "and elect that splendid Democrat, John Sharp Williams, as speaker, unless my good friend and colleague, Champ Clark of Missouri is a candidate for speaker, then will come good legislation for the people."

Passing from a Democratic house, Mr. Rucker saw a Democratic president in the White House and your brightest son (pointing to the Republican side), is a lightning bug alongside the man whom we will elect, our peerless leader, William J. Bryan." (Applause on Democratic side.)

Mr. Olmstead (Pa.) suggested that the matter of publicity was subject for action by the states; that Pennsylvania had passed a publicity bill immeasurably stronger than the Rucker bill.

Mr. Rucker replied: "You can't stop political corruption in Pennsylvania. The only way you can stop corruptionists in the Keystone state is to hang them." (Great laughter in which the Pennsylvania delegates joined.)

STONE WELL.

Chillicothe, Ohio, News-Advertiser: The residents of Bainbridge are much excited over a remarkable landslide which has taken place on the south side of that village during the past few days, and which is not yet at an end, for sections of the hill continue to slide away at intervals. The slide is on what is known as Higgins Hill, where a stone quarry has been operated for many years.

The hill was over forty feet high, and a great deal of valuable rock had been removed from it during the past few years, but the greater part of the broken stone and earth has been dumped on the hillside. The recent wet weather caused this to loosen and a portion of the hill commenced to slide on Thursday night and has been going down ever since.

A mud roadway, which was used by teams to bring down the stone, was entirely obliterated, but the remarkable part of the slide is that an old stone well, which was on the top of the hill, slid down the embankment for a distance of twenty-two feet and was not destroyed.

The well, which is sixteen feet deep, has always had from twelve to fifteen feet of water in it, and there is an old windlass on the top. As has been stated, that well slid down the side of the hill, windlass, stone and water, and it did not even cause turbidness of the water. The windlass, which is nearly worn out, appears as good today as it was before the well moved.

On Monday afternoon the hill again slid for about two feet, and during that time the cables which were attached to a heavy derrick broke. The derrick struck a workman named David Rochie and he was so seriously injured internally that it is feared he may die.

The hill, as stated, is just on the outskirts of Bainbridge, and the residents of the village are predicting that before it ends the stone and earth will reach the schoolhouse yard.

IRISHMAN AND MULES.

Philadelphia Ledger: Out in a small Western town a building operation was going on. The material had to be carted five miles, and a young Irishman was employed to drive a team of mules.

It had been raining for two days and the roads were a sight. It was as much as the teamsters could do to keep their teams going, so bad were the roads.

The next morning it was raining as hard as ever. The driver went to the stable with a shovel.

"Where are you going, Dan?" asked the boss.

"To curry the ears of me mewls," answered Dan.

"Why are you going to curry their ears?" asked the boss.

"Sure, thim's all ov 'im remains out of the mud, sor."

HE TOOK IT.

The Tatler: A medical practitioner in the West of Ireland had for a patient a stalwart peasant whose particular ailment he was at a loss to diagnose. At last the physician brought him a dozen small but powerful pills, telling him he would call again in a day or two, by which time he would have finished the box. In due course the doctor looked in and found the sufferer in bed looking very woebegone and complaining that the pills had made him no better. "Are you quite sure you took the whole box, Pat?" inquired the man of medicine. "Begorrah, docther, I did that same, and shure I had a divil of a time swallowin' it, but shure, docther, we'll give it a chance; perhaps the lid ain't come off yet."

LIVED 110 YEARS.

Kansas City Journal: Jesse Jones of Pulaski, Tenn., is nearly 110 years old, having been born of a Portuguese father and a Choctaw Indian mother in Raleigh, N. C., June 10, 1796. He fought in four wars, having honorable discharge at the close of each—the war of 1812, the Florida French and Indian troubles, the struggle with Mexico and the Civil war. Erect and keen eyed, he does not look much over 50, and expects to live to see 125. He has been married six times, thirty-two children having been born to him. His present wife is 48 years old, and his youngest child, a daughter, is just turned 17.

OWES NOTHING ON THE FERN

State Has Sufficient Credit at Washington to Pay Bill.

Washington, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Bede introduced Mr. and Mrs. Guy Eaton, John Heino and J. B. Middlecoff of Duluth, to President Roosevelt, this morning, and the Duluthians had a pleasant chat with the chief executive.

It is understood that the senate will confirm the nomination of Guy Eaton to be postmaster at Duluth, next week.

Representative Bede and Commander Eaton also visited the navy department regarding the bill rendered against the state for repairs made upon the United States ship Fern, prior to loaning her to the Minnesota naval militia. The original charge against the state for these repairs was $8,600, but this has been gradually scaled down until it is now but $2,800, and there is more than this latter sum to the credit of Minnesota from the general fund appropriated to assist states to support its military, therefore it will be gratifying to the members of Minnesota naval militia to know they are free from debt so far as the Fern is concerned.

MORE SICKNESS IN CAMP.

Wrecking Crew at Crescent City Feels Touch of Old Complaint.

Several members of the wrecking crew at work on the stranded steamer Crescent City at Lakewood, are again ailing with the mysterious sickness which assailed the entire crew more than a week ago. Capt. W. W. Smith is perhaps more seriously ill than the rest and has been confined to his bed.

The state chemists were unable to find any serious impurities in the camp's food supply and the cause of the sickness at the camp is a mystery. The only solution which suggests itself now is that the men have been poisoned by the water which they have been drinking.

The sick men were much improved this morning. None has been dangerously ill at any time.

Business College to Move.

The Brocklehurst & Barber business college will move next week from 26 West Superior street to the Hayes building, at 30 and 32 East Superior street, where it will have about double the space it now has. The present quarters have been occupied only about a year, but have been entirely outgrown. When the college moves to its new home it will be known as the Central Business college.

BIG STEEL FREIGHTER MICHIGAN LAUNCHED.

Detroit, May 26.—The 540-foot steel freighter Michigan constructed at the yards of the Great Lakes Engineering works in Ecorse for the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, was successfully launched this afternoon. Miss Edessa Warner, daughter of Governor Warner, christened the ship. The Michigan will be used for ore carrying.

CITY BRIEFS.

Under a new policy adopted by the Barber Asphalt company, all contracts for paving and the steps leading up to them, are carefully examined by an attorney before the deal is closed, and this morning the company's lawyer went over the Greysolon road contract. The move may have been partly the result of the former trouble with the city.

Rev. J. O. Buswell and Prof. W. W. Weaver will be the speakers at a series of meetings which will be held at the Branch Bethel, May 27 to June 3. Rev. Buswell is the superintendent of the Lake Gallilee Biblo school and Prof. Weaver is late of the Berea college. In addition to these prominent speakers a large chorus of forty voices will add to the interest of the meetings.

The Forward Guild of the First Presbyterian church will hold the last meeting of the year next Saturday afternoon with Mrs. R. W. Bowden of 1820 East First street. The speaker will be Mrs. Wesley Feetham, who will speak on the work of the local Young Women's Christian association.

An entertainment will be given Wednesday evening, May 30, by the Young Ladies' Aid society of the Swedish Mission church, and a fine program of music and other numbers has been arranged.

Joseph Fleming, John McLinder and Pat Berger, the three men arrested for throwing eggs on the Lyceum stage last evening, entered a plea of not guilty in the municipal court this morning, and their hearing was set for Tuesday, their bail being fixed at $25 in each case.

Phil Bevis will address the Sunday afternoon meeting for older boys at the Y. M. C. A. meeting tomorrow. There will be a musical program by Miss Marie Clark, Pearl Hector, Lea Smead and Earling Mostue. Only one meeting a month will be held during June, July and August. The Knights of Sir Galahad for younger boys will meet at 3 o'clock.

In The Herald last evening in the district court proceedings A. H. Grieser was reported as having loaned J. H. Crowley $1,076, which he was alleged to have never repaid. The name should have been D. D. Crowley, for J. H. Crowley had nothing whatever to do with the transaction.

Range Candidate Talked of.

J. A. Jones of Hibbing, organizer for the Western Federation of Miners, Ed McHale of Sparta and James Daily of Eveleth, were in Duluth today on their way to Denver to attend the convention of the federation.

They say that on the range there is a strong demand for Peter Cosgrove of Sparta to run for sheriff and that he has practically agreed to file for the Republican nomination. He is constable at Sparta.

PERSONALS.

Miss Marshall, principal of the Two Harbors high school, is the guest of Miss Adele McClaren, and will remain over Sunday.

Norman D. McLeod, secretary of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., leaves today for a two weeks' visit to his old home at Ottawa, Ont.

E. J. Anderson of Grand Rapids, Minn., is in the city in the interest of the new high school being built there.

Mrs. S. J. Higgins has returned from an extended visit with relatives in Buffalo, Washington and Baltimore.

N. Zauft left for Philadelphia today, over the Omaha.

C. W. Elston left for Chicago today.

A. B. Wolvin left for Chicago today.

Mrs. L. S. Loeb left today over the Omaha for Prindleville, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Peyton left for Walker, Minn., today.

J. C. Anderson left for Canby, Minn., last night.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McIlhargy and James McIlhargy left over the Northern Pacific this morning for Spokane, Wash.

C. H. Hurst of Ironwood, Mich., is a guest at the Spalding.

HEAVY STORM ON LAKE MICHIGAN

Two Vessels Ashore at North Point Near Racine, Wis.

Racine, Wis., May 26.—Lake Michigan was struck by a terrific storm from the northeast early today and as a result two small vessels are ashore above North Point, the Sunrise and the John Eggert, but the crews on board composed of ten men in all, did not suffer and were not in danger.

The life saving station was notified, but owing to the heavy sea running, nothing could be done.

It is believed that the heavy sea will totally wreck the two vessels.

The wind reached a high velocity and considerable damage was done in the city.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Cleveland Leader: The apostle business has reached a dishearteneing stage when Elijah Dowie is ordered into court to show his credentials.

Baltimore American: It appears that the chaplain of the United States senate is inclined to humor. He quotes the scriptural text, "Blessed are the peacemakers" at a time when there seems to be no peace-makers in the woods.

Philadelphia Record: The ecclesiastical court which tried Dr. Crapsey of Rochester has found that a man who does not believe in the virgin birth or the bodily resurrection of our Lord is incapable of reciting the apostles' creed with the necessary degree of sincerity, and is out of place as a clergyman in a church which maintains that creed as one of its standards. The Protestant Episcopal church tolerates considerable latitude, but feels that it must draw the line somewhere.

Philadelphia Ledger: An Indiana preacher seeks divorce largely upon the allegation that his wife had a habit of sitting in the congregation and "making faces" at him just at critical points in his sermon. There can be no denial that such conduct on the part of the lady would tend to distract the thoughts even of an earnest pastor. Would it not be wiser for her to make her face before entering the church? This is a practice not perhaps to be commended, and yet not without precedent.

Chicago Chronicle: Rev. Dr. Moffatt, in his speech at the Presbyterian banquet on Tuesday evening, criticised his church for devoting too much attention to doctrine and said that was the reason that it had not prospered as the Methodist church had. He may be right about it, but history proves that doctrine is the life of religion and of sectarian power. Every great religious movement the world has ever seen has centered around some one doctrine. In Paul's day it was the doctrine of the resurrection, in Luther's day it was justification by faith, in John Wesley's day it was regeneration, and in Jonathan Edwards' day it was the doctrine of hell. The Methodists have prospered by constantly preaching free will and the possibility of certainty in regard to salvation. The trouble with the Presbyterians is that instead of preaching their theology they devote much of their time to undermining it.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Feared Settler Who Failed to Answer Contest is Dead.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—The register of the local land office has received a letter from R. C. Burlingame, a business man of Brophy, calling attention to the fact that John Kuchner, who failed to appear before the register to answer to a contest for his claim, the hearing on which was set for April 13, is still missing, and Burlingame says he believes the man has met with foul play.

A Mr. Black, for whom Kuchner worked last winter, said he left there March 26 with a team and wagon which he had bought with his savings, and $300, which he had saved to improve his farm.

Black said he supposed Kuchner was on his claim. No trace, however, has been found of the missing man, and Black has offered a reward for information concerning him.

Fargo—Unique services were held in the First Congregational church Thursday, when Frances Miller was ordained as a minister. Miss Miller is a graduate of Fargo college, and has conducted evangelistic services over the state. More recently she has been associated with Evangelist Sunday, and has been successful. The church council held an examination, decided she was eligible as a minister in the Congregational church, and she was ordained. The sermon was preached by the venerable Dr. Dudley, after which a reception was tendered the new minister. Miss Miller's parents reside in this city, where she was born.

In addition to ordering the dogs of the city muzzled, because of the rabies scare, Mayor Johnson has issued an order enforcing the dog license law, which has been a dead letter for many years. The owners will have to secure licenses in a reasonable time or the dogs are to be exterminated.

Mayor Burt Williams of Ashland, Wis., President Major and Secretary Blair of the Minnesota Farmers' exchange, met here and arranged to have the farmers' excursion to Ashland on June 20. The original date was fixed for June 7, but trains could not be secured at that time. A rate of one fare, with tickets good for five days, has been secured. The object of the excursion is to interest the farmers of the state in the establishment of a line of terminal elevators in that city to handle the grain raised by the farmers affiliated with the Independent elevator movement in Minnesota and the Dakotas.

Sheldon.—A reward of $50 is offered by Sheriff T. J. Dwire for the capture of Dan Williams, who escaped from the county jail while serving a year's sentence for bootlegging, and attempted jail breaking. Williams is a desperate character, and in making his escape entered the sheriff's office and appropriated a revolver and cartridges. He worked a ruse on the sheriff by making a dummy and placing it in his cell. The prisoner is tall and slim, and walks with a limp.

No clue has been found to the men who blew the safe in the Enderlin postoffice and secured $50 in money.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre.—Quotations on range horses noted the last few days are decidedly different from what they were a few years ago. Not long ago horses practically were given away in the country west of here, one large herd of well-bred horses being sold at $12 a head, all the way through, and many horses would not bring more than $10 apiece to their owners.

At present sales are being made at from $250 to $300 a span for range-bred work horses, and the sales of individual animals at between $150 and $200 each, are not rare.

This situation, no doubt, will mean activity in breeding good horses, and some time in the future another overstocking of the range and a reduction in prices, but in the meantime the owners of good horseflesh are reaping a harvest for their persistence in continuing breeding in the years of low prices.

Beresford.—The M. J. White livery and feed barn was destroyed by fire of unknown origin. No insurance. The barn was remodeled a few years ago, and used as a veterinary hospital.

Sioux Falls.—Willie, the 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hahn, had several of his fingers blown off, and narrowly escaped with his life as the result of children using a stick of dynamite as a plaything.

Deadwood.—In the sight of his father, who was unable to go to his rescue, Ralph Jennack was run over by an ice wagon and instantly killed.

IN POLITICS.

W. W. Sivright of Hutchinson, Minn., is being mentioned for the position of chairman of the Republican state convention in Duluth next month. His name has also been mentioned in connection with the lieutenant governorship, but he has stated positively that he will not be a candidate. Concerning his position, and the chances of his becoming chairman of the convention, the Hutchinson Independent says:

"W. W. Sivright will not be a candidate for lieutenant governor in the coming election. While Mr. Sivright has received many requests from his friends over the state to allow his name to come before the Republican convention as a candidate, he has given them no encouragement, and positively refuses to do so. His business interest will not allow the sacrifice of time, and there are various other reasons for his not being a candidate.

"His friends are now urging him to allow them to present his name as chairman of the state convention, which meets at Duluth next month. Mr. Sivright will allow the use of his name in this connection and will doubtless receive the support of his many friends in the state.

"Mr. Sivright is a well posted parliamentarian, and an excellent presiding officer, and will fill the position with credit to himself and the satisfaction of the delegates of the convention. Mr. Sivright appreciates the many complimentary notices given him by the newspapers of the state."

With the Republican state convention less than three weeks distant, renewed interest is being taken in Duluth in the candidates for governor. As G. S. Pease, editor of the Anoka Union said, while in the city this week, no very great interest is being shown in the gubernatorial situation, but what there is is becoming more marked as the time for the state convention draws near.

Block has said that he will visit Duluth within a few days, probably next week. So far he has put most of his personal efforts into Hennepin and Ramsey counties. His lines reach out in every direction, but the Minneapolis Journal has it that there is little Block talk outside of the Twin Cities, and says his strength is hard to locate. One thing sure, he hasn't occasioned any great amount of talk in Duluth, and it doesn't look as though he would be able to develop much strength here, unless a decided change takes place. Quite a lot of Block literature has been received in Duluth.

Cole talk is quite the common thing in Duluth just now. The city and county appear friendly toward the Walker man. Stephens also has many friends in Duluth and St. Louis county, and one or the other of these candidates might happen to receive the support of the St. Louis county delegation, if he showed up with a good following. Both men are well fixed in a worldly way, and can well afford to spend as much time and money in the campaign as seems desirable. A Stephens club formed in Crookston is working energetically in behalf of their candidate. Cole is carrying on an effective campaign from his headquarters in St. Paul, and seems to be meeting with much success.

A local political leader, who returned from St. Paul this week, and who keeps pretty well posted on things political, expresses the opinion that Jacobson will develop the biggest strength in the convention. Pease, on the other hand, while in Duluth, said Jacobson would never be nominated. He remarked upon the strength being developed by Cole, and seemed inclined to the opinion that the latter stood a good chance of becoming the favorite in the convention, although he did not by any means predict that Cole would be nominated. The editor agreed with every one else in saying that the situation was such that no positive predictions could be made in the governorship tangle.

County Auditor Odin Haldin advises his friends to pay no attention to the St. Paul Dispatch story, to the effect that he will be a candidate for state auditor, opposing State Auditor Iverson. The Dispatch says:

"Quite a few of the so-called wise ones have been inclined to ridicule the story abroad that State Auditor Iverson is due to have opposition for a renomination, but just the same it is coming. Odin Haldin of Duluth is to be his rival, sure as fate. Odin has denied it before, but that was only part of the play. That there was a game on, involving the auditorship was apparent a week ago when Odin conferred with Bob Dunn and others at the Merchants hotel, and it has been further cinched by the advice of a Duluth friend to the local correspondents to keep their eyes open for Odin's announcement. He has already filed for county auditor, but that need not stand in his way. He can withdraw it at any time.

"How Mr. Haldin will land the coveted place is problematical, but as explained by a Sixth district man the game is for the Eighth district, which includes St. Louis county, to vote in the convention as a unit and thus establish a trading basis that will be hard to get away from. By this means a trade with either Lord or Block might bring to the Duluth man a bunch of votes that Iverson would have hard work in overcoming. Iverson is generally accepted as a First district man, but those in on the deal are circulating a story to the effect that the First no longer recognizes him as such because of his lengthy St. Paul residence. In any event, however, Haldin and his friends have a hard nut to crack. Minnesota conventions are strong on precedent, and precedent, you know, proscribes a second term for an office-holder. Then, again, Sam is somewhat of a politician himself. As to Odin Haldin, he is considered one of the foremost Republican leaders in th upper country. A clash between the two would certainly make a pretty fight."

The declaration of Roger S. Munger that he would become a candidate for the Republican nomination for senator in the Fiftieth district was rather unexpected. Senator T. M. Pugh, who now represents the district, is a candidate for re-election. Mr. Munger's affidavit of nomination was filed with the county auditor this week. He was register of deeds one term. Mr. Munger has many friends in the district, and is a man who has done much for Duluth.

The Northfield News claims to have discovered that P. E. Dowling has balked at the "order to sign a pledge to support Nelson for re-election. The News says:

"Up in St. Louis county it is said that P. E. Dowling has balked at the order to sign a pledge to support Nelson for re-election. Dr. Barnes, his opponent for the place, has already signed the paper submitted to him by the Duluth federal machine men, and terrific measures are being brought to bear on Dowling. He is being given the alternative of declaring, over his own signature for Nelson, or to be unmercifully slaughtered in the primaries by the Nelson-Clapp crowd. Dowling is a fighting Irishman, and may be able to stand off the coyotes who are snarling at him, while they secretly admire him for an independence none of them have been able to display.

The expected has happened, and a Republican candidate for sheriff from the range, has announced that he will file for the nomination. James Sullivan of Virginia, is understood to be the latest aspirant for the county job. He says that with so many candidates in the field from Duluth, he should have a good show of winning out.

Ever since the airing of the Bates-Miles-Armstead tangle, which brought two or three new candidates into the field from the city, it has been expected that a range candidate would announce himself for the nomination, going on the principle that if he could line the range towns up, the Duluth vote would be split sufficiently for him to win out for the nomination. Whether or not this idea will work out this way, only time will show.

There is still talk that Retiring Postmaster E. L. Fisher will file for the nomination for sheriff, and W. C. Sargent is being prominently mentioned in connection with the position. More candidates, as yet unknown, are liable to crop out at any time, judging by the way things have been going during the past few weeks.

W. I. Nolan, who was in the city yesterday and is here today from Minneapolis, had little to say on politics, further than that to state he was not a candidate for lieutenant governor, unless the nomination happened to be handed him on a platter, in which event he might accept.

The Garfield Republican club will hold a meeting Tuesday evening, May 29, at Kalamazoo hall. There will be a program of music and speeches. The Garfield quartet has been organized, with W. H. Hancock, Frank Temstermak, Frank Maxwell and O. L. Dorworth as members. They will be heard for the first time in the new quartet next Tuesday evening. All of the four possess excellent voices.

John H. Norton will speak on "What Not to Do in Politics." "The Panama Canal" is the subject assigned H. S. Clapp, and Alva Gall will speak on "Scarecrows."

NEXT MEETING AT COLUMBUS, O.

Presbyterian General Assembly Selects Ohio City for 1907.

Des Moines, May 26—Columbus, Ohio, was chosen as the meeting place for next year's session of the Presbyterian general assembly, defeating St. Louis by an overwhelming vote on the first ballot, taken late yesterday afternoon. Last night a popular meeting in the interest of temperance was held, with C. Lilley presiding. An effort will be made to conclude the work of the assembly today.

The thirty-sixth annual report of the board of erection of the Presbyterian church reports the loss by death of Hezekiah King and the Rev. Dr. Robert F. Sample, the former of whom, with one exception, the oldest in office of the members of the board.

The applications received show a decided advance upon that of the previous year, especially those to the general fund, which exceed in amount asked any previous year in the history of the board. In all departments the number of applications for aid was 291, and the total amount of aid requested, either as grants or loans for church buildings or manses, was $272,694.

The board has been able to respond to all demands for grants from the younger and weaker churches, and to requests for loans in all cases where the need seemed urgent.

The number of contributing churches was larger by 140 than the year before, and church offerings show an increase of $953.63.

JOHNSON THE WINNER.

Defeats North Dakota Wrestler in Match at Fergus Falls.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 26.—(Special to The Herald).—In a wrestling match held here last evening, Martin Johnson of Duluth defeated Fred Roll, the North Dakota champion, taking three falls out of five. The match was very evenly contested, Johnson winning first, fourth and fifth falls, while Boll took the second and third.

WEAK KIDNEYS MAKE WEAK BODIES

Kidney Diseases Cause Half the Common Aches and Ills of Duluth People.

As one weak link weakens a chain, so weak kidneys weaken the whole body and hasten the final breaking-down.

Overwork, strains, colds and other causes injure the kidneys, and when their activity is lessened the whole body suffers from the excess of uric poison circulated in the blood.

Aches and pains and languor and urinary ills come, and there is an ever-increasing tendency towards diabetes and fatal Bright's disease. There is no real help for the sufferer except kidney help.

Doan's Kidney Pills act directly on the kidneys and cure every kidney ill. Duluth cures are the proof.

L. P. Schneider, butcher at McAuley's Washington Market and living at 210 West Fourteenth avenue, Duluth, Minn., says: "A statement I made in 1898, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, and which has been published in the local papers very mildly expresses my opinion of that remedy. After suffering for a long time with pain through the back and loins which made it almost impossible for me to stoop or lift anything without torture, and after using various medicines and treatments without effect, Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and the lapse of six years has proved that the cure has been permanent. I am sure that I suffered the worst tortures of kidney trouble. Often the pain felt as if a sharp knife was piercing me. At night although I was tired out I could not rest or lie in one position without getting sore all over. The kidney secretion were irregular and contained a heavy sediment. Since I found this cure I have time after time advised others to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and I never miss an opportunity to speak well of them."

The trades assembly met last evening, and among other things decided upon forming a stock company for the purchase, maintenance and management of a park and pavilion for the use of the labor unions of the city at any time, but particularly on Labor day; and also for the renting out to other parties desiring the place. The old committee on grounds, which had looked the matter up, was reappointed as the committee to have the job of getting up a constitution, by-laws, rules, etc., of the new organization to be formed; in short, to effect the organiation. This committee consists of John McDonald, Frank Boreen, Henry Deroche, Joseph Shartel and John A. Barron.

The committee has grounds in view, but has determined not to give a hint of its location, because, they say, prices would be immediately boosted. Said one of them: "Some real estate men have not enough sense to last them over night. They fix a price—plenty high enough too—on a piece of property, and as soon as somebody goes after it, the agent immediately sends the price soaring."

The committee has determined that such will not be successfully worked in this instance. They have placed a limit on the total expenditure, which it is proposed to make, and will not go beyond it; so that some too enterprising real estate agent is very likely to spoil a good sale if he gets hoggish.

It is proposed to get four lots, which, it is believed, can be purchased for an average of $100 a lot, and to put up a building of about $5,000 in value. To do this, the proposition is to form a stock company, made up of the various unions of the city, each union to take stock in the company and furnish the funds for the purchase and building proposed. A board of directors is then to be established, and each union interested financially in the company is to be represented on this board of directors. The matter will be submitted to the various unions, and on their attitude rests the whole thing. Should a sufficient number of the unions favor the plan, the assembly will push the matter to a conclusion, but should there be a lukewarmness among the unions in general, the matter will likely be dropped.

A copy of a communication being sent to all central labor bodies by the American Federation of Musicians was read at the meeting or the Trades' Assembly last night. It takes a direct fall out of Creatore, he of the wild hair and wilder gestures, and flat-footedly calls him a swindler. The circular letter is a protect against the bringing of so many "Royal Italian bands" to this country to play in concert work and in parks, etc. It is claimed that musicians are brought here under conditions which an American musician could not countenance. The letter asserts that the whole thing is a swindle, and that Creatore is the greatest of the swindlers. As soon as a band which he brings across from Italy gets onto the fact that they are not getting a just reward for their labors, he drops them and goes across the pond for another. The writer says that Creatore is after the money more than art. The writer of the letter, who is the secretary of the federation in St. Louis, Mo., asks the co-operation of all central bodies of organized labor to help fight this so-called "Royal Italian band" evil, for the reason that musicians brought into the country under such conditions cannot be reached through the alien contract labor law, being expressly exempt from the operations of this law.

There is a strike of bottle workers at the Fitger brewery. Only eight men are involved, and it is because the company would not recognize the union. The executive committee of the Trades Assembly reported on this last night, and John McDonald, as spokesman for the committee, said that he believes the matter can be adjusted, as Mr. Fitger seems to be desirous of being fair, but objects to his having to recognize the union when the other brewing company is not asked to; that is the whole ground for contention.

A communication from the local electrical workers' union was read, in which the Trades' Assembly is asked to "go after" the Bell Telephone people. The union claims that the Bell people have resisted all efforts to unionize its electrical workers and the local union is out to fight the Bell.

"BLUEBEARD" LEGEND.

Kansas City Journal: "Bluebird" is known to the folklore of nearly all nations.

Originally the tale was told of an Arab chief, who determined to curb the curiosity of women. So in succession he married wives to whom he gave the key to a chamber in his home. When he found by marks in the dust that they had disobeyed his order never to open the door, he beheaded them. The sixth was rescued and Bluebird was slain.

The Bluebird story was brought into English literature through the French of Charles Perrault, an old seventeenth century chronicler. He gave Bluebeard the name of Chevalier Raoül, and founded the story on a historic character named Giles de Laval, Baron de Retz, who lived from 1404 until 1440.

Laval distinguished himself in the wars of Charles VII. of France, fought with the Maid of Orleans, became a marshal of France, and at last retired to his cstle of Retz. A quarrel with the Duke of Brittany brought on an investigation, which developed the fact that he practiced hideous barbarities in his castle. During fourteen years he had enticed more than 100 children to his stronghold and sacrificed them to Satan, being a slave to superstitions. For these deeds he was burned alive near Nantes in 1440.

A similar character appears in some collections of old Italian stories, and the tale of the Third Calendar in the Arabian Nights bears a very close resemblance to the Bluebeard legend. Tieck, the German author, has used the material in a drama called "Phantasus." Getry, a Frenchman, produced a comic opera called "Raoul Barbe-Bleue," in 1789, which was transplanted to the English stage by Coleman in 1798. Offenbach produced an opera bouffe called "Barbe-Bleue" in 1866. The opera "Mr. Bluebard," known to present-day theatergoers, is a modernization.

MINORITY COMMITTEEMAN.

Kansas City Journal: Congressman John Sharp Williams is one of the two minority members of the committee on rules, and as such, of course, has very little to say as to what shall be done by that body. In the course of some remarks the other day he said he had a bill which he hoped the majority would allow him to bring before the house. "The gentleman is a member of the committee on rules," put in Gardner of Massachusetts. "Yes," drawled Williams, "nominally." The house recognized the thrust with a roar. But Gardner persisted. "You attend the meetings of that committee," he said. "I am invited to the seance," returned Williams, "but I am never consulted about the spiritualistic appearances."

RAILROAD ANNOUNCEMENT IS FEATURE OF REALTY

Disclosure of Wisconsin Central's Plans Cause Sensation in the Real Estate Market—Dealers Believe it Means Good Things for Duluth—Charles R. Davis of Boston Believes in Duluth.

The announcement in The Herald last evening that the Wisconsin Central Railway company has disclosed its intentions as regards its entry into Duluth confirms beyond all doubt the report given credence last week that the two blocks of Superior and Michigan street property between Sixth and Eighth avenues west, were being acquired for railroad purposes and that the Wisconsin Central Railway company would use the two blocks for a depot terminal. To reach the depot location the company will tunnel under Michigan street from Twelfth avenue west.

The project is one that dispels any doubt but that the Wisconsin Central people are willing to do things on a big scale to get into Duluth and the people in local realty circles are deeply interested and delighted over the turn in affairs. The use of two blocks for railroad purposes will take from the market a large and valuable portion of the centrally located business property, but on the ohter hand, the advantage it will be to the city to have another competing line of railroad will more than make up for that. Time will tell just how far reaching will be the effect of the consummation of the railway company's plans on local real estate, but among the brokers' predictions are being made freely that "there will be something doing."

Among the visitors in Duluth this week was Charles R. Davis of Boston who, under the name of the Davis Real Estate company, owns a considerable amount of centrally located business property here, as well as a large acreage on Duluth Heights, and at Crosley Park in the eastern end of the city. Mr. Davis has been an investor in local realty for the past thirty-six years and he is a firm believer in his investments. He regards Duluth real estate prices as very conservative compared with the prices he knows of in other cities for the same class of property. Mr. Davis says that Duluth needs more manufacturing interests and he is confident that the city will get them within the next few years, owing to the water power development and the increased railroad facilities.

"I find a substantial change in the city since my last visit here during the World's Fair year," said Mr. Davis before leaving for home yesterday. "During that interval I notice the increase in wholesale houses, in new business blocks, in fine residences, and street improvements. All this betokens prosperity. The wholesalers and the retailers tell me their business is growing and I am convinced more than ever of the bright future before the city.

Thirty-six years ago Mr. Davis bought a twenty-five foot lot on the upper side of Superior street near Lake avenue for $2,500. He bought thirteen choice lots on First street near Fourth avenue west at prices ranging from $1,000 to $1,500, which figures were regarded as top prices at that time. Mr. Davis also bought eighty acres of land back of Endion for $75 an acre and a short time afterward was offered $125 per acre for it. All the property that he bought so long ago could not now be touched for many times the price he paid for the lots.

C. P. Craig & Co., who represent the Davis Real Estate company in the handling of Crosley Park addition, report that the sale of lots continues with a splendid demand. Over twenty lots were sold this week to buyers on the installment plan, making a total of about 100 lots disposed of since the tract was put on the market, about two weeks ago.

An important residence sale of the week was the transfer of George Chesebrough's home at 2220 East Superior street, to Pentecost Mitchell, general manager of the Oliver Mining company, for $25,000. The deal was made through the office of J. A. Stephenson. Besides the house, a handsome structure, erected three years ago, the property comprises four lots, with a frontage of 100 feet, on the lower side of Superior street.

Transfer has been made to the county of St. Louis this week of two of the properties in the courthouse site, secured under condemnation proceedings. The prices paid were in accord with the awards made by the appraisers. The Tennis lot, on First street, was transferred by warranty deed, for a consideration of $22,500, and Edward S. Coe and wife gave a warranty deed covering lot 70, on West Second street, for $7,500.

Architect J. J. Wangenstein announced this week that the contract for the $65,000 school house at Coleraine, Minn., has been awarded to E. M. Johnson of Minneapolis. It is understood that the bid was in the neighborhood of $54,000.

William Horkan has sold L. Crowley a residence property near the northwest corner of Third street and Twenty-sixth avenue west for $4,500.

The deed for the West First street lot, where the Elks will erect their building, went on file this week. The deed runs from A. S. Chase, and the consideration was $25,000.

Elizabeth Watterworth has purchased from Agnes F. Hitchcock, for $2,800, a lot on the lower side of Fourth street, between Third and Fourth avenues west.

A. H. Bean has purchased of S. W. Jones a residence property on the east side of Sixteenth avenue east, between Fourth and Fifth streets, for $5,000.

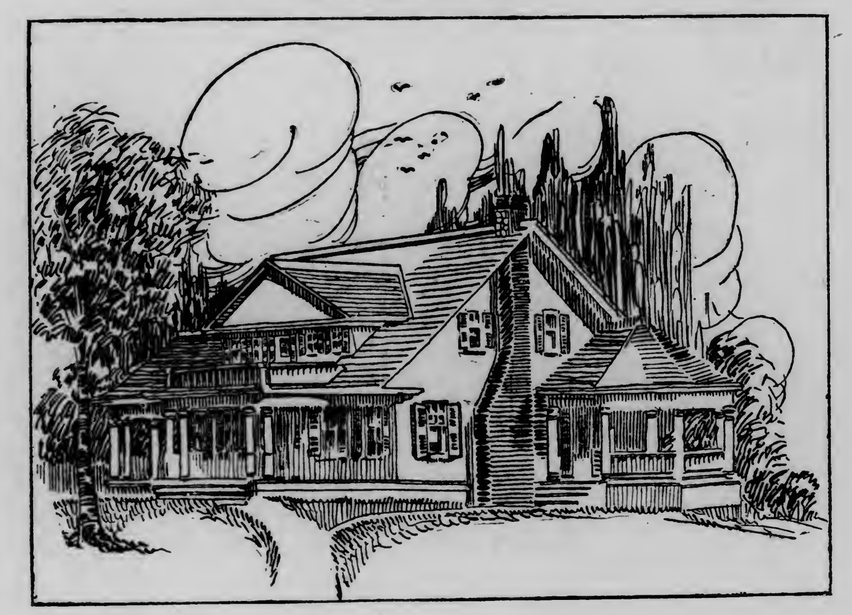
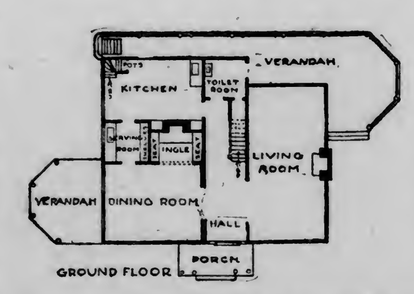
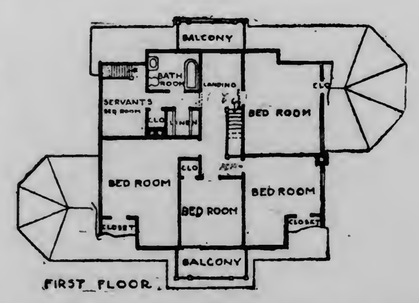
A COUNTRY HOUSE FOR $3,000





GROUND FLOOR



FIRST FLOOR

The residence illustrated herewith was designed and built as a summer place and combines all the qualifications which should be found in a cottage of this class. It is so constructed that with very little alteration it can be converted into an ideal all-the-year-round house. The exterior is a striking one, the large verandas at the sides and rear, and Colonial porch in front adding considerable to its appearance.

It has stone foundations and large cellar accommodation, so that in the event of its being desired to make it a permanent residence, a furnace can readily be put in. On the ground floor two special features are noticeable, first, the large size of the livingroom; and secondly, the compactly arranged servants' quarters. The livingroom at a summer residence must, of necessity, be a large one, and this one is of sufficient size to admit of its being divided by folding doors into two; each may be fitted up with bookcases, etc. The kitchen, lavatory and other accommodation on the ground floor, together with the servant's bedroom and the bathroom on the first floor, so arranged that they can be shut off entirely from the rest of the house, and heated by one stove, so that they will afford suitable accommodation in the winter for a caretaker.

The four bedrooms on the first floor are all large airy rooms, and are each provided with a large clothes closet, which is a great advantage and convenience. At the front and rear ore balconies, an essential feature in a summer cottge. The following is an accurate estimate of the building cost of this charming cottage:

Masonry, brickwork, etc.	$ 300
Carpenter work, including hardware	1,700
Plastering	250
Painting and glazing	250
Plumbing	225
Tinsmith	60
	$2,785
Heating, if built as a permanent house (hot air)	100
	$2,885

JOHN L. SULLIVAN ON REAL ESTATE

"Real estate investments, carefully made, are an excellent thing. I am a firm believer in them, and it is the observations of many years in traveling through all parts of the country that have convinced me of this."

It was John L. Sullivan, who for years was champion fighter of the world, that said this to The Herald. Now, there are many people who have the idea that Mr. Sullivan knows nothing but fighting, and it has been the pleasure of his press agents for years to put into his mouth the language of the sporting element, no matter whether he was talking of the prize ring or the beneficent effects of the simple life. The truth is that John L Sullivan is a big, bluff, good-natured, sensible man with some very good ideas that he can express and does express in the simple language of everyday people. In the course of a conversation upon the prosperity of the country today, the public excitement over stocks and mining and the evident drift toward a greater interest in real estate, he gave expression to some shrewd ideas that indicate that he is a man of judgment.

"Of course, no man must invest in real estate wildly," said he, "no more than he should in any other matter in which he is to put his money. One thing I have noticed is this; let a man buy a piece of outlying property in any growing city, one that has good prospects and let that piece of land be in a position where it is certain to have an electric line pass through it some day, and it will be a big money maker every time. In Minneapolis twenty years ago around Lake Harriet and Lake Calhoun the development had hardly begun. Today high-priced residence lots are found where then acre property could be bought at fairly reasonable prices."

Everywhere they have traveled recently, and it includes a large part of the West, Mr. Sullivan says they have found evidences of great mining excitement and development.

"This is a great country and it is enjoying a great period of prosperity," said Mr. Sullivan. "This prosperity seems to be everywhere, not merely in some sections. I believe it will continue, too, so long as our farmers enjoy the good crops they have been getting for some years. The prosperity of the farmer is the foundation of it all. His crops in good years mean more than $2,000,000,000 annually. Cut out a half or a quarter of that and there is a tremendous loss.

"Kansas is a fine example of what the prosperity of the farmers means. Years ago that state was bankrupt, its farms covered with mortgages, its people despondent, with little to look forward to. Then came the era of big crops; the mortgages were paid off, and wealth came. Then they looked around and said, 'we have the money to put in banks, we will have our own banks.' Today the people own their own banks and keep their money in the state. North Dakota has had pretty much the same history, though perhaps he did not get down to so low a state as did Kansas, and I suppose many others went through pretty much the same trial."

ORDER FOR HEARING APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis. —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, May 25th, 1906.

In the Matter of the Estate of Jacob Koski, Deceased:

On receiving and filing the petition of John Koski of the County of St. Louis, Minnesota, representing, among other things, that Jacob Koski, late of the County of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, on the 7th day of March, A. D. 1906, at the County of St. Louis, died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this County at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is a brother of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to John Koski granted;

It Is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said Court on Monday, the 25th day of June, A. D. 1906, at ten o'clock A. M., at the Probate Office, in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice hereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County, and that a copy of this order be served upon the County Treasurer of St. Louis County, not less than ten days prior to said day of hearing.

Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, this 25th day of May, A. D. 1906.

By the Court,
DAVID H. LAWRENCE,
Judge of Probate of Lake County, Acting
Judge of Probate of St. Louis Co., Minn.

(Seal Probate Court, St. Louis Co., Minn.)
Duluth Evening Herald, May 26-June 2-9-1906.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.—

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Five hundred and fifty-three and twelve one-hundredths dollars ($553.12) including $1.62 taxes paid by the undersigned at the date of this notice, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Louis Peterson and John M. Beckstrom, Mortgagors, to Daniel W. Scott, Mortgagee, bearing date the 14th day of December, 1892, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of St. Louis and State of Minnesota, on the 9th day of January, 1893, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Block 67 of Mortgages, on page 494;

Which said Mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Daniel W. Scott, Mortgagee, to Joseph B. Cotton by written assignment dated the 2nd day of November, 1894, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, on the 15th day of May, 1906, at 11:30 o'clock A. M., in Book 200 of Mortgages on page 383;

Which said Mortgage, together with said debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Joseph B. Cotton, the Assignee and Holder thereof, to Shaw Iron Company, a Minnesota corporation, by written assignment dated the 14th day of May, 1906, and recorded on the 15th day of May, 1906, at 11:30 o'clock A. M., in Book 200 of said Mortgages page 382; and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

Lots numbered Six (6) and Seven (7) in Block numbered Eight (8) in the town of Biwabik according to the recorded plat thereof on file in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for St. Louis County, Minnesota, in said St. Louis County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said St. Louis County at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Duluth in said County and State, on the 3rd day of July, 1906, at ten o'clock A. M., of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said mortgage indebtedness, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and twenty-five dollars, Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

TOO WET IN NORTHWEST

Reports of Continued Rains Cause Firmness In Wheat Markets.

Light But Steady Trading in Flax, With Stronger Prices.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 26.—Wheat was firmer in the American markets today on reports of too much rain in the Northwest. News from North Dakota and the Red River valley was especially bullish. Declines abroad had a bearish effect. Liverpool closed easy, ⅜d to ½d lower; Paris ¼c to ½c higher, Berlin ⅛c lower, Budapest October wheat ⅝c higher, and Antwerp unchanged.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments of wheat for this week at 10,000,000 bus., of which Europe will take about 9,600,000 bus. The actual shipments last week were 11,656,000 bus., and those of a year ago, 9,152,000 bus.

The imperial statistical bureau of Germany estimates the wheat crop of the empire on May 15, at 84 per cent, against 78 per cent last month and 82 per cent a year ago.

The May option was ¼c higher in Duluth, Minneapolis, New York and St. Louis, ⅜c higher in Chicago and ⅛c in Kansas City and Winnipeg. The July option closed ⅝c higher in Duluth and Kansas City, ⅛@⅜c in Chicago, ½@⅝c in Minneapolis, ⅛c in New York and St. Louis and unchanged in Winnipeg.

Corn was stronger, the July option closing ½c up in Chicago. It was ¼d to ½d lower in Liverpool. July oats closed ⅜c higher in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 25 against 3 last year, and at Minneapolis 129 against 313 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 154 against 316 last year. Chicago received 5 against 13 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 260,000 bus, last year 428,000 bus. Shipments 151,000 bus, last year 195,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 155,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 890,000 bus, last year 840,000 bus. Shipments 645,000 bus, last year 144,000 bus. Clearances of corn 296,000 bus.

Wheat trading was light but steady during the session of the Duluth market and the tone was good throughout. May wheat closed ¼c higher at 84¼c. July wheat opened ⅛c higher at 84¼c, declined to 84⅛c at 9:45, rallied to 85c at 11:35 and declined at the close to 84⅝c, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. September wheat opened ⅛c higher at 81⅞c, advanced to 82⅝c and closed at 82¼c, a gain of ½c over yesterday.

Trading in flax was light but steady. It was unchanged to ⅜c lower in London. May flax closed unchanged at $1.11.6. July flax opened ⅛c higher at $1.17¼, declined to $1.17, rallied to $1.17⅜, declined to $1.17¼, rallied to $1.17⅜ and declined to $1.17¼, closing at that price, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday.

September flax opened unchanged at $1.17, advanced to $1.17⅜, fell off to $1.17, rallied to $1.17¼ and closed at that price, a gain of ¼c over yesterday. October flax opened ¼c higher at $1.15⅝, declined to $1.15½ and closed at that price, unchanged from yesterday.

May oats and oats to arrive and on track were ⅛c higher and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

The Continued Wet Weather Causes Firm Opening in Wheat.

Chicago, May 26.—The continued wet weather in the Northwest caused a firm opening in the local wheat market today. Trading was light with commission houses and pit traders doing the greater part of the buying. A decline of ½d at Liverpool and a bearish effect. July opened ½c lower at 83¼c, sold down to 82⅞@82c, and rallied to 83¼@83c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 159 cars, against 163 cars last week and 329 cars one year ago.

The market was strong all day. A dispatch from Minneapolis said that there was prospects of a hard frost there tonight and this stiffened prices materially. The high point for July was 83⅝c. The close was strong with July ¼@⅜c higher at 83⅜@½c.

The corn market was firm. Trading was very light and offerings were small. July opened ¼@¾c higher at 47¼@47⅜c and advanced to 47⅝c. Local receipts were 548 cars with 393 of contract grade.

Prices held well from the opening to the close. The high point for July was 47⅝@¾c. The close was strong, with July ½c up at 47⅝c.

The market in oats was firm. There was a fair demand by commission houses and selling was scattered. The trading was largely in the September option. July opened ¼c to ⅝@⅜c up at 33½c to 33¾@⅝c and advanced to 33⅝c. Local receipts were 187 cars.

Provisions were quiet and easier. July pork opened 7½c up at $16.17½. Lard was up 2½c at $8.75. Ribs were 2½c higher at $9.27½.

Close: Wheat—May, 86¼c; July, 83⅜@⅝c. Corn—May, 48¼c; July, 47⅜c. Oats—May, 35⅝c; July, 33½c. Pork—May, $16.20; July, $16.20. Lard—May, $8.67½; July, $8.77½@8.77½. Ribs—May, $9.55; July, $9.30@9.32½. Rye—Cash, 61@66c; July, 62½@63½c. Flax—Cash Northwestern, $1.15½; Southwestern, $1.06½; May, $1.06½. Timothy—September, $3.75. Clover—Cash, $11.25. Barley—Cash, 41@55c. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market made but one little dip today, which came right after the opening, thereafter turning strong and clearly showing an upward tendency, closing ¼c under the high mark, recovering yesterday's slight loss. The weather in the Northwest is causing much concern in the trade, and the fact that the weather forecast is for rain pretty much over the winter wheat country, and rain or snow in the Northwest, makes the average trader feel that the weather is out of "gee," and favorable to the bull side of the market. Crop complaints were less numerous, but the feeling is growing that actual damage has been done to winter wheat. The market is gaining new friends daily. Its strength surprises even the bulls, and in the present temper of the trade would take but little to become a great big broad market. There is still a large short interest in the off-months. They are growing less confident daily, and if this freaky weather continues for a day or two the majority of them will be forced to come under cover. We feel there is still enough in the situation to warrant buying wheat on the moderate setbacks. Improved weather would naturally take the edge off somewhat, but our advices are there has been much damage throughout the winter wheat country, which is now only becoming apparent.

Corn—This market showed quite a reversal of form, being strong throughout and recovering practically all of yesterday's closer; this too, in the face of excellent weather conditions for corn, and 500 cars estimated for Monday. The action of today's market seems to suggest the weak-kneed bulls were frightened out of their holdings yesterday. The market, to us shows wonderful strength, and we must add, present conditions, from a supply and demand basis, seem to warrant this strength.

A. C. Crowe, Hillsboro, N. D.—This is simply hell and repeat. The whole valley is a lake this morning. There will be heavy losses on wheat that is in and there will be a very large acreage that farmers intended to put into flax because it was too late for wheat that cannot be sown at all.

Chicago Record-Herald: The open interest in May wheat is figured at 3,000,000 bushels, the Wrenn House being short the greater part. One commission house is credited with holding 1,000,000 bushels, another 900,000 bushels, another 750,000 and one house with a New York connection about 400,000 bushels. Should these figures prove correct the trade is looking for sky rocket in May in the remaining days this month. Watson has a big spread, being short Chicago May and long Minneapolis July. This is shown by the continued liberal purchases of May by Wrenn and sales of July at Minneapolis by Watson. It is done as quietly as possible so as not to attract attention. There is no other large short interest outside of that Wrenn-Watson crowd. A report comes from a good authority from New York, of settlement said to be made on 1,000,000 bushels, which cleaned up a line of 1,000,000 bushels held by New Yorkers through a house in which Watson had a large open account.

Wisconsin Grain & Stock company: Wheat—The market was nervous and sharply higher. Trade was light and mostly of a professional character. The rains in the Northwest were potent factors in today's trading. Harvest has started in earnest in Texas and returns indicate a crop of from twelve to fifteen million bushels, which will be the largest for a number of years. Rains predicted for the whole wheat-growing territory for tonight and Sunday. Foreign advices were that conditions remain very satisfactory and their markets reflected the feeling by sending lower closing for the day. Semi-official report of India wheat crop says that it will be eighteen million bushels larger than the best crop ever raised there. Minneapolis stocks decreased only 125,000 bushels for the day. For the time being it seems to be a see-saw market with all the odds in favor of the seller and on hard spots like today we would advise quick sales for good returns.

FOOLING THE BEANS.

Boston Herald: Hen Coulliard, recently deceased, was for forty years one of the most noted characters in Franklin county. A quaint Yankee of the old-time type, his sayings and doings were the talk of the entire county.

One day "Hen," as he was familiarly called, was at work in his back yard at Shelburne Falls preparatory to bestowing a coat of whitewash on his henhouse. He had completed the mixing of the whitewash, and, looking around for something on which to test its quality, picked one from a pile of elderwood bean poles and ran the brush over its length.

Just at that moment "Vet" Smith, another character, equally well known throughout the county, happened to be driving by, and saw Coulliard at work. He stopped his horse, and, prompted by an overwhelming curiosity, for which he was noted, inquired: "Hello, what in time ye whitewashin' them bean poles for?"

Coulliard kept right on with his work, but replied: "Thought everybody knew that beans will grow better on birch poles."

"Waal, I'll be dummed," said "Vet;" "ye don't expect to make birch poles that way, do ye?"

"Maybe not," was the quick reply; "it'll make the darned beans think the poles are birch, anyway."

"In prosperity prepare for a change—in adversity hope for one." In either case, advertising will make it a change for the better.

Report of Big Strikes

On my property in Nevada have made it necessary for me to go there at once. Investors desiring to purchase stock, however, before the price advances may do so by communicating with my office.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Nearly All the Shares Showed Fractional Net Losses.

Bank Statement Showed Increased Loans and Reduced Surplus.

New York, May 26.—Opening prices in the stock market today were inclined to yield and dealings were small. Reading and Northern Pacific ran off ½, and Union Pacific opened ½ lower. United States Realty advanced 1½.

Heavy buying of the Wabash stocks and bonds and a rally of a point in Reading afforded only temporary relief to the market. Railroad stocks that have been recent speculative favorites were among the weakest, especially the trans-continental group. Lackawanna fell 5, Central of Jersey 2 and St. Paul, Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, New York Central, Copper, Smelting, Tennessee Coal and Consolidated Gas 1 to 1¼. Corn Products preferred Wabash preferred and Western Maryland moved up 1, Wabash Debenture "B" and United States Realty 2¼. The market had rallied ½ point or more by 11 o'clock.

There was no demand of importance and in the absence of renewed selling pressure prices changed but little. Westinghouse Electric rose 4 points, while St. Louis Southwestern preferred fell 1 and Anaconda 2½. The close was dull and easy.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: This market opened with a weak tone, which was carried through the session. There was nothing new to cause the changed feeling from yesterday. A poor bank statement had been looked for, and when the figures were published the statement was fully as bad as expected. The action of the market today seems to bear out our recent writings. The best we can see is a trading market and one of narrow fluctuations.

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market dropped back into dullness today and was given over to the room traders who were sellers during the first hour and some of the declines amounted to a point or more. On the decline, however, there was support and at no time was the list really weak. The important news development was the bank statement which was disappointing, showing an increase of nearly $9,000,000 in loans and reduction of about $3,500,000 in surplus. The closing was dull with nearly all stocks showing fractional net losses.

Zeller to Baker: There is renewed liquidation in copper. On its merits the stock should sell considerably higher and while we are bullish on it, we would not advise buying until this pressure from insiders ceases.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 26.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 to 4 points in response to steady cables and bullish week end figures. After the call prices fell off to a shade under closing prices of yesterday under realizing in the absence of bull support. Trading was mostly for professional account.

Cotton futures closed quiet and steady. Closing bids: May, 11.37; June, 11.; July, 11.13; Aug., 10.80; Sept., 10.69; Oct., 10.62; Nov., 10.62; Dec., 10.63; Jan., 10.68; Feb., 10.68; March, 10.74. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 10.65; do gulf, 12.05. Sales, none.

Bank Statement.

New York, May 26.—The statement of the clearing house banks for this week shows that the banks hold $6,684,150 over the legal reserve requirements. This is a decrease of $3,435,125 under last week. The statement follows: Loans $1,049,390,800; increase $8,668,700; deposits, $1,022,731,800; increase $5,868,800; circulation, $40,834,900, decrease $176,900; legal tenders $83,896,100; increase $2,500,200; specie $180,981,000; decrease $4,460,100; reserve $264,877,100, decrease $1,960,400; reserve required $258,182,950, increase $1,474,725; surplus $6,694,150, decrease $3,435,125. Ex-United States deposits, $11,298,700, decrease $5,602,925.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Copper stocks were slightly easier all through the list today, principally on account of the dullness. The leading traders made a little move in Franklin and on improved conditions, the stock is talked for a few points rise. We understand that the damage at the Atlantic has been exaggerated, and the selling seems to have ceased. Tecumseh and Rhode Island will benefit by any improvement shown in Franklin. The market for Utah was small today, but the stock is being accumulated around these prices.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

APPEAL TAKEN BY BOTH SIDES

New Point in Umlauf Will Case at Fergus Falls.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 26.—The Carl Umlauf will case, which has been pending in the probate court, is likely to be carried to the supreme court to decide a peculiar point.

Carl Umlauf, a prominent farmer, died a short time ago leaving all of his property, worth about $40,000, to his wife. The will was duly presented for probate, but when the subscribing witnesses came into court and were asked if this was Mr. Umlauf's last will, they hesitated, and asked to make some explanation.

They stated that Mr. Umlauf had come to this city and wished to have a will drawn dividing his estate among his children, and at the same time making ample provision for his wife. The person called upon did not feel competent to draw a will, such as he wished, and suggested that he secure an attorney. It was late in the evening and the attorneys had all left for their homes, but he feared to wait until he should again come to the city, as he was in very poor health.

It was suggested that he will the property to his wife, with the understanding that if he died before he was able to have a new will drawn she should carry out his wishes as he had outlined them. A simple will was accordingly drawn, bequeathing everything to the wife, and his death occurred a short time afterwards.

The wife now declines to divide with the children, and one of them promptly instituted proceedings to set aside the will. Judge Frankberg, after mature deliberation, decided that the will should be admitted, subject, however, to the testimony of the subscribing witnesses, with the understanding that her husband's wishes, as outlined by them, should be carried out. Both sides have appealed from this decision, and a prolonged contest is expected, as the point is one that has never been passed upon in this state.

TRIGGS FAMILY IS SEPARATED

The Professor Lives in Chicago, and His Wife in Paris.

Chicago, May 26.—Professor Oscar L. Triggs, formerly of Minneapolis, who severed his connection with the University of Chicago under circumstances that caused a stir throughout the educational world, has reached an agreement with Mrs. Triggs for a permanent separation. Whether a divorce will follow has not been made public. The separation is and will remain as complete as any legal mandate could effect. Mrs. Triggs being located in Paris, France, and the professor in Chicago—an arrangement mutually agreed on.

Professor Triggs is living at 1114 Thirty-third street. The apartments he now calls home are those of Miss C. M. Fagan, a handsome young demonstrator of hygienic articles.

Prior to taking up an abode in the Thirty-third street apartments, both the professor and Miss Fagan lived at the People's Industrial college, 1926 Indiana avenue. After a stormy scene in the college, Miss Fagan left. She was followed shortly afterward by Prof. Triggs.

Reports that Prof. Triggs contemplated an immediate divorce, to be followed by marriage to Miss Fagan were denied by Prof. Triggs yesterday. He admitted the fact of his separation from Mrs. Triggs and declared he saw nothing unconventional in his present status.

"Mrs. Mabel McCoy Irwin occupies the premises with us, or did until a week ago," said Prof. Triggs. "I do not know that divorce proceedings will follow, nor do I care to say that I contemplate another marriage. There is nothing in the relations of Miss Fagan and myself to occasion comment, although malicious persons are seeking to make much of it.

"They have even gone so far as to circulate reports that I am interested in a project to establish a 'free-love' community. This I deny in the strongest terms."

GROUNDS FOR OPPOSITION

Kansas City Journal: One of President Roosevelt's Western friends applied to him for a job. The president was willing and sought to find him a place. He had about settled on one when there came a great protest from the Western friend's state. "They discovered," said the president, "that he had killed four men. I didn't know that. Still, the homicide record did not form the basis of the protest. The people who opposed my friend opposed him not on the ground of killing people, but because they said he was an agnostic."

BLOOD-SOAKED RELIGIONIST

Kansas City Journal: Mohammedans of the Caucasus have a religious ceremony called "Chucksee Wucksee." It is a ceremony in which the fanatics cut and wound themselves in the following ghastly fashion, according to a traveler: "Each man, grasping a kinjal in his hand, brought it up in front and down on the crown of his head. Almost at every stroke the blood gushed forth and soon one man after another became a staggering, blood-soaked figure."

A DISAPPEARING RACE.

Kansas City Journal: A curious race which from contact with civilization is disappearing from the face of the earth is the Agalambos, the "web-footed," short-legged Papuan dwarfs. Capt. Barton, an official of New Guinean, describes a visit he paid to them thus: "A rumor having reached Cape Nelson that these interesting folk had all been massacred, it was gratifying to find a few of them still living. Six males and four females were seen. They averred that they had no children living, and it seems likely that in a few years the tribe will have wholly died out."

NAILED TO AN EGG.

Kansas City Journal: A Hungarian blacksmith recently sent as a present to the emperor of Austria a horseshoe, a pair of pincers, a file and a knife, all ingeniously nailed to a goose's egg without the egg being broken. The emperor sent in return his photograph, a gold medal and 30 ducats.

VICTIM OF CRUEL FATE

Ben Davis Brought Into Court by Black Tom Cat.

Cat, Dog, Chinaman and Ben Have a Progressive Fight.

Ben Davis, cook in a Chinese restaurant at 620 West Superior street, was the victim of a cruel chain of circumstances, which enmeshed him in its coils, and finally landed him in the police station, charged with disorderly conduct.

Ben owns a dog, and the proprietor of the restaurant owns a cat. Such a combination, on its very face, presents unlimited possibilities as a trouble maker, and it lived up to expectations. Ben, last evening, secured some bones from the restaurant kitchen, for his dog. Towser was crunching the bones in peaceful contentment, when the cat approached, with her back in the air, her tail rigid, and her hair stiff as bristles. She minced about Towser, and sniffed longingly at the meat.

Such a challenge, even from the proprietor's cat, was more than any good, red, dog blood could stand. Towser dived and got her. He was about ready to add some fresh cat meat as dessert, when the proprietor came in view, and went for Towser. He was wiping up the floor with Towser, when Ben appeared and went for the proprietor. Towser and his feline victim crept unnoticed from the scene, ashamed of their little side show, while the proprietor and Ben mixed up in lively fashion.

Then the law interfered, and Ben was arrested, as he was claimed to have been the aggressor. He was fined $5 and costs on the charge of disorderly conduct, by Judge Windom.

And all the trouble was caused by the greedy appetite of the snoopy, black feline that couldn't content herself with her own bowl of milk. The judge said he couldn't blame the dog very much for attacking the cat, or the proprietor very much for attacking the dog, or Ben very much for attacking the proprietor.

It was all resistless fate.

POSTMASTER RESIGNS.

Fertile, Minn., May 25.—Brown Ducksted, postmaster of this place, sent in his resignation last Tuesday night to the fourth assistant postmaster general, to take effect upon the appointment of a successor. Mr. Ducksted has held the office for some eight years. There are already several applicants for the place, but the general public seem to favor the appointment of S. J. Laduc, who has applied for the position.

LEARNING HOW TO HANG.

London Mail: Several executions took palace recently at Pentonville prison on the scafiold which has been the scene of the final exit of numerous natorious criminals.

The executioner was Alec Taylor, the newly appointed common hangman, and the subjects, "hanged" in set form were lay figures of cloth and sand.

It is, of course, essential that the official that has to carry out the last dread sentenco of the law should first thoroughly learn the technique of his grewsome profession to insure that when the time comes all the operations will happen decently and in order. Therefore each new hangman immediately after his appointment goes through a realistic course of training. In pursuance of this policy Taylor, under the guidance of experienced prison officials who havo assisted at many executions, is new serving his apprenticeship.

Several sandbags shaped to represent men of different weights were supplied for Taylor's practice. He was instructed that men of varying builds should be given certain prescribed "drops" to effect instantaneous death. Then a sandbag made to the rough semblance and weight of a man was placed on the scaffold flap. Taylor was told the weight, the noose was properly adjusted, the requisite drop arranged for and the lever pulled. This experiment was performed again and again with differently weighted bags.

The other part of the hangman's training, the pinioning of a condemned prisoner, was even more realistic. For the time being stalwart warders posed as condemned murderers. Taylor, practicing on them, was shown the quickest and most effective way of securing the hands and feet.

A NASTY DIG.

Los Angeles Times: Dr. R. A. Torrey, the evangelist, was dining at a Philadelphia house, when the talk turned to Easter millinery.

In his ready way, Dr. Torrey used this topic as a peg whereon to hang a little lesson.

"Some people," he said, "can plant a sting in the pleasantest remark. Most of us only care to wound when we are angry, but these folk, the bane of social life, are continually inflicting causeless stabs.

"One of these people, a woman, met another woman, who is elderly, yesterday.

"'Now, this is pleasant,' said the elderly woman, after a few minutes' chat. 'You haven't seen me for eleven years, and yet you knew me at once. I can't have changed so dreadfully, can I?'

"'I recognized your bonnet,' said the first woman."

LONG-LIFED STATESMAN.

Kansas City Journal: Statesmanship in England seems conductive to longevity. William Ewart Gladstone's case is the most remarkable of all in respect of the great age at which he accepted office in his last premiership. Lord Palmerston was the only other premier who became an octogenarian while in office. Of prime ministers besides these two who lived to be octonenarians there were Lord Sidmouth (Henry Addington), who died when 87; Earl Russell, 86; the Duke of Wellington, 82, and Earl Grey, 81. Beaconsfield died at 77 and Chatham at 70. At the other end of the scale is Pitt, who died at 47. But, then, Pitt entered Cambridge university at 14 and was prime minister of Great Britain at 24.

ENGLAND'S FREAK VOTERS

Kansas City Journal: If a person's name gets on the English registry of voters, however improperly, he has an indefeasible right to vote. Thus it happened in the recent election that a woman voted for a member of parliament. In another case, at Rayleigh, in Essex, a schoolboy—James Griggs, 11 years old, residing at Thundersley—found himself legally entitled to claim a vote. At the Rayleigh polling station the lad presented himself on the day of the election, and, satisfying the officials in charge of his identity with the person named in the register, was given a paper and allowed to vote. Master Griggs has surely established a record.

RAILROADS

EXCURSION NUMBER TWO

Northern Pacific Will Run Special From Wahpeton, N. D.

Will Arrive June 19—One From Morris, Minn., June 6.

The Northern Pacific has announced an excursion from Wahpeton, N. D., to Duluth, to be run June 19. A special train, in probably two or three sections, will leave Wahpeton at 5 o'clock in the morning, and is due to arrive here at 2:35 p. m. Returning, it will leave Duluth at 11 a. m. on June 22. The round-trip rate is $2.50.

This is the second excursion to Duluth announced by the Northern Pacific this spring. The other will come from Morris, Minn., June 6, leaving Morris early in the morning and arriving here in the afternoon. Both specials will take on passengers at intermediate points. It is believed they will be well patronized.

The Northern Pacific is advertising the excursions in a liberal fashion, and doing all it can to get the people here. The specials will run through a good territory, bringing a highly desirable class of people. Other excursions will probably be announced from time to time during the summer months.

REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

E. L. Millar Tells of Progress Made by Northern Railway Club.

The Northern Pacific Railway club held another of its very successful meetings last night. In spite of the disagreeable weather there was a large attendance. The organization was just six months old yesterday, and a feature of the evening was the reading of a paper by E. L. Millar on "The Progress of the Club."

Mr. Millar dwelt upon the remarkable success the club has met with so far, and said that all records established by other clubs of a like nature in the matter of attendance at the meetings have been broken by the local organization. He also made note of the fact that the little booklet issued monthly under direction of C. L. Kennedy, giving official proceedings of the meetings, is more attractively and interestingly arranged than any other thing of the kind issued elsewhere, not excepting even the large cities of the East.

President McGonagle was absent, and his place as presiding officer was taken by Vice President Blanchard. T. Julian McGill of Minneapolis, read a paper on "Shop Drives." A fine program of musical and vaudeville numbers was rendered. The June, July and August meetings will be held at the Yacht club on the Point.

RAIN DELAYS WORK.

Railroad Contractors Are All Getting Blue Over the Outlook.

Railroad contractors are getting the blues because of the present streak of bad weather. The rain interferes seriously with the progress of railway repair and construction work. Large crews of men all through the rain belt are lying idle, waiting for the sun to shine again. When good weather does make its appearance, the ground will be so wet as to further delay the work.

Practically every road entering Duluth, and several foreign roads, have standing orders with the local employment agents for men. The Omaha is in need of a considerable number for work along the line between here and Southern Wisconsin. The Lake Superior & Southeastern is still calling for more laborers, and the Duluth & Iron Range, and Missabe lines are in need of men.

Not many laborers have been hiring out for the last few days. The weather puts a damper on their spirits, and they evidently dislike the thought of accepting an outdoor job under prevailing weather conditions.

New Road Files Articles.

Madison, Wis., May 26.—The Wisconsin & Northern Railroad company, which proposes to build a new line from Menasha to a point on the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie line near North Crandon Junction, in Forest county, has filed its articles of incorporation. The road is to be 180 miles long, and will pass through Winnebago, Shawano, Langley, and Forest counties. The company is capitalized at $1,000,000. The promoters are J. S. Jones and H. C. Adams, Chicago; Leander Choate, C. H. Hartley, T. R. Wall, R. H. Edwards, and A. H. Josslyn, Oshkosh; M. D. Kelth and Samuel Shaw, Crandon; Charles R. Smith, Neenah; E. H. Van Ostrand, Antigo, and M. J. Wallrich, Shawano.

Week-End Fishing Rates.

Week-end fishing rates between Duluth and Solon Springs, Gordon and Minong, Wis., have been established by the Omaha road. The Solon Springs tickets are on sale daily, while the other may be purchased Fridays and Saturdays, good returning the following Monday.

FOR ECONOMY IN OPERATION

Mayas Mine Surpasses Nearly All Others on Mesaba.

Virginia, Minn., May 26.—(Special to The Herald).—For economy in operation, there is perhaps no mine on the Mesaba range that equals that of the Mayas Mining company, located three miles east of Mesaba station. During the past week, 1,600 tons of ore have been shipped daily, with a force of sixty-five men, and all is done with hand labor, not a particle of steam power being used on the property. Although this is the first year the property has been operated, it is expected to ship at least 100,000 tons during the season, with very little increase in the force now employed. The ore is located high on a side hill, and the ore is mined in open pit and loaded directly into the ore cars, through chutes.

Considerable exploration work is now in progress on the Eastern Mesaba in the vicinity of the Mayas. G. A. St. Clair has had two drills at work for several weeks, the Great Northern has several drill crews employed in that territory, and the Winnifred Iron Mining company recently sent in a drill which is now in operation.

Sheriff W. J. Bates of Duluth, Mayor Charles Jessmore of Eveleth, and William Coss of Tower, returned the first of the week from Virginia, Mont., where they visited a gold mining proposition, in which they are interested. They are all well pleased with the developments. Joseph Backus of Virginia, who is heavily interested in the property, expects to visit the mine in the near future.

Mr. Steinberg intends to depart next week to begin development of the placer claims of the Overwhich Gold Mining company in Montana.

Rudolph Ericson of Ishpeming, Mich., chief engineer of the Inter-State Iron company's mines, was in the city recently inspecting the company's properties.

D. B. McDonald of the Cole & McDonald Exploration company, departed Thursday for an inspection of the company's work on the Michigan ranges.

B. F. Smith and E. D. Parmalee departed Thursday for an inspection of the Grab Lead & Zinc company's properties near Plattsville, Wis.

F. A. Wildes, Jr., who looks after the state's interest on the range, was over from Hibbing this week.

The Oliver Iron Mining company is erecting a large addition to its machine shop at Mountain Iron.

K. Pellon, superintendent for the Inter-State company, was in Duluth the first of the week.

LEMP RICHES ARE DIVIDED

Seven Children Get Equal Shares of Ten Millions.

St. Louis, Mo., May 26.—The will of Mrs. Julia Lemp, widow of William J. Lemp, millionaire brewer, has been filed for probate. The value of her estate is estimated at $10,000,000. Miss Elsa Lemp is left one-seventh of the estate, which is to be held in trust until she is 30 years old, by her brothers, William J. Lemp, Jr., and Charles A. Lemp. She is to get $1,000,000 on the day of her marriage, and if she dies without issue before she is 30 years old her share will revert to the other heirs. Each of the other six children gets an equal share of the estate, but some of the bequests are conditional.

Itch cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Never fails. Sold by all druggists.

PURE VANADIUM IS DISCOVERED

It May Revolutionize the Making of Iron and Steel.

Pittsburg, aMy 26.—What promises to revolutionize the making of iron and steel is the recent discovery of large deposits of almost pure vanadium in Peru, South America. It is reported Standard Oil interests are identified with the company which has secured concessions from the Peruvian government.

Vanadium is a gray white powder, and is the element which has given the peculiar toughness and resistance to Swedish iron. By its use it is claimed steel can be insured against fracture, and armour plate produced at half its present weight and thickness.

THE PRESIDENT CANNOT ATTEND

Annual Encampment of Grand Army of the Republic.

Washington, May 26.—President Roosevelt was formally invited yesterday to attend the thirtieth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. Representative Loren Fletcher submitted the invitation, which included a handsome brochure from the national G. A. R., letters from Governor Johnson, Mayor Jones of Minneapolis, and the Commercial club of that city. Gen. John A. L. Hull of Des Moines, Iowa, appeared about the same time at the White House and presented the president with invitations to attend the Spanish war veterans' reunion at Des Moines, the week preceding the Minneapolis encampment.

The president said that he could not attend either of these meetings, as he hoped to take a needed rest during August.

NO SENTENCE FOR PRESENT

Thomas and Taggart Will Not Know Punishment Until June.

Kansas City, May 26.—Judge McPherson announced in court today that sentence will not be pronounced until early in June on George L. Thomas of New York and L. B. Taggart, his clerk, found guilty in the United States district court, yesterday, of conspiring with a Kansas City shipper to obtain rebate on freight shipments from railroads. One of the attorneys for the defendants intimated that a jail sentence was not expected, and anticipating this they probably would not file an appeal, but accept sentence and pay any fine the court might assess.

This ended the hearing in the rebate cases at Kansas City for the present, Judge McPherson having reset the dates of the trials of the other defendants.

The cases against the Armour Packing company, Nelson Morris & Co., and other packers, charged with accepting rebates and concessions, were set for hearing June 5.

The trial of the Burlington, charged with granting rebates to packers, is set for June 6. The case of the Chicago & Alton, J. N. Faithorn and F. A. Wann, former officials of the Alton, on similar charges, is set for June 9.

One other conspiracy case remains to be tried—that of W. H. Krosky, a Kansas City freight broker, charged with conspiring to obtain rebates from railroads for shipments of flour from Wichita and other points. This was set for trial on June 12. Judge McPherson returned today to his home at Red Oak, Iowa, saying he would return to Kansas City on June 5, to preside at the other trials.

CANDIDATE WITHDRAWS.

Webster City, Iowa, May 26.—A telegram was received in this city yesterday from Fred Kretchmer, of Dubuque, candidate for state treasurer, announcing that gentleman's withdrawal from the race. The dispatch is as follows: "Under the circumstances, my friends have advised me to withdraw. I have acted accordingly."

GIRL DIES OF INJURIES.

Bayfield, Wis., May 26.—Mildred, the daughter of B. P. Hill, editor of the Press, died yesterday as the result of the severe burns she received Sunday. Since that time she has been suffering intense pain and was unconscious nearly all the time.

The late Marshall Field, in speaking of his mercantile career, said: "I early discovered that if I wanted to succeed I must make the newspaper my ally. After all, I had only one tongue and it had thousands." Through this alliance Mr. Field accumulated a colossal fortune. If there is a merchant who doubts that "The Evening Herald" can help him, let him consider this great merchant's words.

BUTTE MINING DISTRICT

New Equipment for East Butte Received--East Butte Extension Company Buys More Claims--Work on Copper Chief.

Butte, Mont., May 26.—The East Butte Copper company has received a portion of its new equipment and the remainder is expected to arrive at any time within the next few days. The part delivered consists of three boilers, furnace frames and smokestacks. The foundation for the machinery is under way and will be ready for its load by the time the engine and compressor arrive. The company has finished its shaft to a depth of 400 feet and is now cutting a station at the bottom. Sinking will be resumed as soon as the station is cut out sufficiently to permit of a resumption of work in the shaft. The surface of the property in the vicinity of the main working shaft, which is on the Dutton claim, is a hive of industry. All sorts of improvement work is in progress. In a short time the company will be in shape to prosecute development on an economic and rapid scale. Considering the fact that its present surface plant is not large, it is doing splendid work and making better headway than could be expected. The new plant will be a hummer.

The various bins at the shafts through which lessees are working veins of the property contain a lot of fine looking ore, some of which is first class and some second. The second class is going through the concentrator.

The East Butte Extension Copper company has bought half of the Centerville claim, which lays between the Raven mine and the Mountain Consolidated in Centerville. It is known as the Adams school site. The other half of the property is owned by the American Consolidated Copper company. A large brick schoolhouse stands on the property. It is likely to be transformed into a boarding house for miners. The Centerville adjoins the Zella on the north, and the Zella is the claim from which it is said P. D. Delmas cleaned up about $75,000 in a few weeks at the time he operated the property under a lease from the Anaconda company. The Sneozer also adjoins the Centerville on the north and the Old Glory on the northwest. The purchase was made in the name of Frank H. Cooney, manager of the property of the East Butte Extension, but the property will become an asset of the East Butte Extension. As soon as it became known that the purchase had been made, the remainder of the stock in the company was taken.

The water of the company's ground on the east side is so heavily charged with copper that precipitating plants will be erected. The mines are being equipped with wood-lined pipes to prevent the iron from corroding and dissolving. Pipes at the Westlake shaft were eaten up recently in a few days. The company intends to sink a new shaft between the J. I. C. and Belmont mines as soon as machinery can be installed. The company is also installing a new air compressor to supply air to all of the mines in that locality.

The purchase of the Centerville is the first buy of ground outside of the East Butte section. The deed to it will be executed in the name of the East Butte Extension company by the managers of the school district. The purchase price was $2,600.

NEVADA'S GOLD CAMPS

Schwab Properties Being Worked to Their Full Capacity---This is a Bargain Season in Nevada Mining Securities.

Tonopah, Nev., May 26.—Arrivals from Rhyolite bring the information that grading is again being crowded on the Las Vegas-Bullfrog branch of the Clark road. While Indian Springs is still the terminal for stage coach connections, rails have been laid for sixteen miles this side of there, or nearly sixty-five miles out from Las Vegas to Johnny. This is over half way to Beatty, and the report is that the grading has been done for the greater portion of the remaining distance, some of the grading outfits being in sight of Beatty.

Since the purchase of the Montgomery-Shoshone by the Schwab syndicate and the passing of the control of the Montgomery Mountain company's properties to Samuel Newhouse, there has been unusual activity in the Bullfrog camp, and it is certain that production will begin on a heavy scale during the fall months. To prepare for its heavy part in the game the Shoshone Consolidated (Schwab) properties are being operated with as many men as can be possibly handled to advantage pending the breaking down and shipment of ore. About seventy men are on the pay rolls and it is expected the number will be increased to 300 before the end of the year.

Many improvements in the southern camp are contemplated for the present season, including the installation of heavy machinery at a number of the properties, but many are waiting for the completion of the Clark road and the saving in freight rates that it will afford.

A switch, it is said, will be put in to the Johnny mine right away and the handling of ore from that and adjacent properties will be undertaken by the new road as soon as that work can be done.

Tonopah and Goldfield men interested in the new camp of Fairview report that hauling of rich ore from the Nevada Hills company's mines to Fallon and Hazen has commenced. Trouble is being experienced in getting teams, so it is possible that reliance for the present will have to be placed in men who are engaged in freighting into camp. The Southern Pacific company, however, is about ready to begin construction of a branch road from Hazen to Fallon, and Fairview operators are confident that, once this work is under way, no trouble will be experienced in persuading the company to push right through to Fairview.

Goldfield, Nev., May 26.—L. M. Sullivan, head of the L. M. Sullivan Trust company, said today:

"This is bargain week in Nevada mining securities. The situation is so peculiar that the opportunity to buy gilt edged Nevada mining stocks at about 50 cents on the dollar may not come again during the next decade. In the East the insurance companies, in order to raise sufficient cash to pay San Francisco fire losses, are now engaged in throwing on the market the gilt edged railroad and industrial stocks, and the big men of Wall street are compelled to stand behind the market to avoid a crash. This makes money tight in the East.

"Here in Nevada, for the first time in the history of its mining camps, the banks find themselves compelled to refuse to loan money on any security whatsoever, which, of course, includes mining stocks. The failure of the San Francisco banks to open since the 'quake and fire, has tied up in the neighborhood of $2,000,000 of money belonging to the banks and trust companies of Nevada, and, to maintain an absolutely even keel, ready for any emergency, mining camp banks are not lending money to anybody, and have been compelled, in fact, to call in nearly all of their demand loans.

"Heretofore San Francisco banks have also been in the habit of loaning money on Nevada mining stocks. In fact, so liberal have the San Francisco and Nevada banks been in this regard men have been tempted to speculate on

THE COBALT EXCITEMENT

Prospectors and Fortune-Hunters Pouring Into the District---Mining Sharks May Reap Harvest--- An Exchange Established.

Montreal, May 26.—As the spring develops the activity of the Cobalt Silver Mining company promoters seems to be increasing. Advertisements of new companies are plentiful in nearly all the newspapers and periodicals, and there is every indication that the mining sharks will reap a rich harvest. The last occasion in which the small investor and speculator in mines was badly fleeced is now about eight or ten years past. The big boom in Rossland and other British Columbia towns attracted attention and money from all over the Dominion. When it flattened out it was found that all classes had been touched in their pockets, not even excepting eminent business men. The lesson taught by Rossland has not been altogether forgotten. Scepticism induced by it prevented an early acceptance of the reports that came from the new town of Cobalt, situated near Sudbury, in what is called New Ontario, on the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario railway. But the peculiar richness of the silver deposits was soon established to the satisfaction of the whole country and now prospectors and fortune-hunters are pouring in from mining centers in Canada, the United States and other countries.

One of the most interesting features about the situation is the announcement by the Ontario government that it intends to retain possession of one of the richest sections of the district, that known as the Gillies Limit, and to work it for the benefit of the province. The timber license runs till the fall of the present year. After that it is expected that the government mines will go into active operation. Any estimates at to what the results will be must necessarily be vague, but it is thought altogether likely that the provincial treasury will benefit to the extent of from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 annually. The people of the district are expecting, also, that when the government is fairly embarked on the new venture it will not be hard to induce it to erect a smelter, and thus give a further impetus to the development of the place.

The great enthusiasm felt by the miners caused them to establish a mining exchange a few months ago. The stocks of some of the principal mines are bought and sold, and the quotations published. But there are complaints that everything does not work as satisfactorily as could be wished. For one thing, it is said that in the camp everybody is a seller, and therefore the prices are not so good as they would be if plenty of buyers were in evidence. The buyers, needless to say, are scattered all over the Dominion; and they buy their shares, or the most of them, in Montreal or Toronto. Also, within the last few weeks a mining exchange has been inaugurated in Montreal. It is quite probable that here the bulk of the transactions to Cobalt shares will take place.

MARVEL OF WARREN DISTRICT

Is the Big Hoist at the Junction—Good Reports of Globe Property in Which Development Company Will Be Floated —Progress of Bonanza Circle Mines.

Bisbee, Ariz., May 26.—The big hoist at the Junction is the marvel of the Waren district. Never before has there been seen in the entire Western mining country such a magnificent piece of machinery as this Junction hoist. The first of its type to be turned out by the well-known Nordberg Manufacturing company of Milwaukee, it is little strange that it has been the leading topic of conversation among not only the technical men of the district, but the layman as well. It is a 4-cylinder Corliss reel, with cylyinders 18 inches by 42 inches, bushed down to 16 inches in diameter. Because of the present comparatively shallow workings of the Junction it is not necessary to use the extremely large diameter of the cylinders. Its cylinders are connected two on each side, placed at 90 degs. with each other. The cranks are set at 135 degs. A 1¼-foot reel carries 2,000 feet of ⅝ by ⅝-inch flat rope. Clutches, Clutches, brakes, etc., are all operated by steam auxillary engines. It will develop 1,500 horse power, weighs 200,000 pounds and rests an a concrete foundation 35 by 35 by 12 feet deep. Its engines and engineer platforms are 16 feet above the floor. Post brakes and disc clutches are among its other leading features. Its engines are so arranged that once the load is started, the cylinders on either side may be cut out, thus giving a material saving in power.

Joseph Hinckley, formerly foreman of the Oliver shaft of the Bonanza Circle, arrived in the city a few days ago from Globe, where he has been for the past six weeks assisting in the preparation that is going on in that camp for beginning development work on the properties recently acquired in that district by H. B. Hovland and H. A. Smith of this city. Mr. Hinckley has severed his connection with this company and has gone to Silver City, where he has accepted a position with the Burro Mountain Copper company, near that place, which has recently been purchased by I. L. Merrill, formerly superintendent of the Bonanza Circle companies of this district. Mr. Hinckley will take up his permanent residence in New Mexico, and his departure from the Warren district will be cause for regret among a large circle of friends.

Speaking of the development work planned at Globe by the Hoyland and Smith interests, Mr. Hinckley states that specifications are on file with the leading machinery manufacturers of the country for equipment necessary to begin the first development work. Morgan Clements, expert for the company, is at Globe, and has selected the site for the three development shafts which will be sunk immediately upon the receipt of the equipment order, which it is expected will now be placed before the 1st of June.

The three shafts will be sunk in three different groups, controlled by the Calumet & Arizona crowd. One on the Mallory claim, one on the Taylor property and the third upon the Byrd group. Mr. Hinckley, who is a practical miner, is of the opinion that Messrs. Hovland and Smith have secured some very valuable mining ground in the Globe district and predicts ore in paying quantities shortly after the development work has been inaugurated.

Every other mining man from this locality who has been in the Globe district speaks favorably of the new ground acquired there by Messrs. Hovland and Smith. The possibility of encountering the ore in paying quantities are greater than existed at the time the Calumet & Arizona first began development work in the Warren district. It is understood the development company will be floated about June 1 and that the stock has been largely oversubscribed.

At the Lake Superior & Pittsburg work is progressing on the foundation for the new hoist, which is to be a duplicate of that now in use at the Junction. A new body of oxides was struck on the 1,000-foot level recently which gives promise of being a large one. The new station at the 1,200 is now completed and drifting north and south has begun.

At the Pittsburg & Duluth and also at the Calumet & Pittsburg, work is progressing in the usual manner, except at the Hoatson shaft of the Calumet & Pittsburg, where sinking has been temporarily abandoned in order that the work of cutting a station at the 1,190 level may go on unhampered.

Water in the Calumet & Pittsburg continues to be handled at the rate of about 100 gallons per minute.

The drift between the Calumet & Pittsburg and the Junction has uncovered some new ore, but the work of drifting, of course, has not sufficiently developed the deposit to determine its extent.

The new hoist at the Oliver is practically in place. This is a counterpart of that now in at the Junction and of that to be installed at the Lake Superior & Pittsburg.

At the Oliver one of the most important installations of machinery is going on, if one may forget for the moment the magnitude of the work incidental to the installation of the three gigantic hoists. A 300-killotwat revolving field Westinghouse-Parsons turbine generator is being put in here. This piece of machinery is the first of its type to be turned out by the Westinghouse people. It is to generate power and light for the Oliver workings, and when installed will be the most powerful as well as one of the finest pieces of machinery in the entire West. Another machine of the latest design and type to be turned out by the Nordberg company is an electric pump of variable capacity. It will handle 600 gallons and will have a maximum lift of 1,200 feet.

Between the Oliver and the Irish Mag shafts there is soon to be installed an underground electric locomotive. This generator, which is of the latest three-phase model, will distribute a current of 200 volts, and will develop 3,000 revolutions. A Massey condensor from the Nordberg factory is now on the road and will take care of the steam from the big turbine and compressor. This should prove an interesting piece of machinery. It will easily be the largest of its kind in the district.

At the Douglas smelters of the Calumet & Arizona work is progressing apace with the production of the mines. The El Paso & Southwestern has just completed its new trestle and ore bins for the company, thus giving them a much needed room for a large supply of coke, coal and ore.

The management has now under consideration the installation of new reverbatory furnaces. Plans are now being prepared for their installation. While these, when installed, will be the first of their type to be used at the Calumet & Arizona, they will not be altogether an experiment, they having demonstrated good results in saving because of the economival handling of slag and eating of the flue dust.

The silica quarries will close down Junt 1 owing to the fact that the silicious ores from Globe now being smelted at the Douglas smelters make excellent fluxing ores. There will be practically no money saving in the smelting of the ores. It is in the time used in transporting silica from the quarries that the management thinks a saving can be made.

THE ALICE MINE AND MILL OF BUTTE COALITION COMPANY, Looking Across Walkerville.

LAKE SUPERIOR COPPER MINES

Atlantic's Suspension of Production—Arcadian Strikes Four-Foot Epidote Lode—Good Copper Values at the Tecumseh— Tamarack Busy Unwatering the Mine.

Calumet, Mich., May 26.—Owing to the settling of the ground the Atlantic mine has been compelled to suspend production entirely, and operations at the stamp mill have been discontinued temporarily. There has been a subsidence of the ground in the Atlantic mine for several years, but during the last two years it has been more pronounced than formerly. Numerous expedients have been adopted to keep the shafts in commission and prevent a general shutdown, but the hanging and foot walls of the lode in the shafts have come together to such an extent that the skips cannot be operated.

It is entirely uncertain when the Atlantic will be able to resume production. Every energy will be concentrated upon the reopening and retimbering of the shafts and all the miners that can possibly be used as timbermen will be put on the work. A few miners will be needed in reopening the shafts, but the remainder of the force, including other miners, trammers, surface employes and the mill men who are not needed, will be laid off for an indefinite period.

A short time ago the Atlantic closed its "B" shaft to permit retimbering. This work is still in progress, and it will be at least six weeks before it is finished. This week shaft "D" went out of service. Repairs to "E" shaft, which is used exclusively for the handling of men, will be retimbered while the work in the other shafts is under way.

It is expected that the work of rehabilitating the Atlantic will place the property upon a firm foundation and that it will be fitted for permanent operations. In the bottom of the mine the drifts penetrate promising ground, and the grade of rock is materially improved. There has been a change in the system of mining work in the Atlantic property during the past two years. This policy has been to drive as rapidly as possible toward the extreme limits of the productive territory, both in the shafts and drifts, in order that the extraction of values might be started at these extreme points, and then to permit the walls to come together as the subsidence of the ground progressed. As there would be no object in keeping the drifts open once the copper values have been taken out, the caving of the hanging would not result harmfully and timber costs would be elliminated. This course will be continued when operations are resumed.

There has been no formation intercepted in the Atlantic's exploratory work at its section 16 property that could be identified as the Baltic lode. The crosscut westward from the drift extended from the Baltic shaft is being extended further, as there is a possibility of the Baltic lode being found in that area.

J. H. Jasberg, president of the Finnish Mutual Life Insurance company and manager of the Hancock Finnish college, and Charles J. Tolonen, assistant cashier of the Citizens' National bank of Houghton, have secured an option on 500 acres of land lying four miles west of Hancock, upon which a favorable copper showing has been exposed. Three pits have been sunk in vein matter, each to a depth of ten feet, and a rock resembling an amygdaloid and containing copper values, has been exposed. The work will be continued and a diamond drill may be employed to determine if the formation is a lode in place.

At the Arcadian a four-feet epidote lode carrying good copper values, lying thirty-five feet east of the lodge upon which development is now in progress, was encountered a few days ago. The new lode was encountered in a crosscut of amygdaloid belt that is known to parallel the main vein at a distance of 100 feet. The crosscut is being extended from a point twenty-five feet north of the shaft, which has been sunk to the 200-foot level. A drift in fairly good copper ground has been carried that far. Work in the crosscut is being continued, for the original object of cutting the paralleling amygdaloid, but the epidote vein will receive investigation later. A drift is also being extended southward upon the lode in which the shaft is opened, and it exposes fairly satisfactory values. There are four lodes near the Arcadian's new shaft, and it is hoped that paying copper values will be found in one of these at depth.

Gradually, as the depth increases, there is an improvement in the character of the ground penetrated by No. 2 shaft of the Mohawk mine. After passing through many levels that contained barely enough copper to pay expenses with economical handling, the shaft is now in rock that equals the ground in No. 1 shaft in productiveness. For considerable depth both No. 1 and No. 2 shafts penetrated a light gray rock containing little copper and of a very refractory nature. This has been succeeded by a softer grade of rock with better copper values.

It is interesting to note that the Mohawk's best values are in the workings nearest the Calumet & Hecla's recent purchase in Keweenaw county. There is only a comparatively short distance intervening between the Mohawk's northerly shafts and the Bacon & Jacobs' tract, newly acquired by the Calumet & Hecla corporation.

At the Osceola Consolidated Company's Osceola branch, mining operations are confined to Nos. 5 and 6 shafts, the two southerly openings, and excellent results are being secured. No 6 shaft is down to the forty-first level and work is under way in the drifts from the thirtieth to the bottom. There are forty drills in commission, all that the present compressor capacity permits, and rock shipments average 1,050 tons daily.

Drifting is under way at the ninth level south of No. 6 shaft with the object of exploring the extensive area of virgin ground extending to the southern boundary. There is abundant room there for another shaft and it is possible that one will be started this year, providing the work in the ninth level drift reveals sufficiently encouraging ground.

ON THE MESABA RANGE

Monroe Mine Expected to Ship Million Tons This Year---Stripping at the Stephens---Hobart Very Wet Proposition.

The Steel corporation's Monroe mine, a Mesaba range giant located in the Chisholm district, is expected to ship a million tons of ore this season. The property has the distinction of possessing the largest pump and the best electric system on the range, and in other respects it is excellently equipped for heavy and economical production, it having cost something like three-quarters of a million dollars to bring the mine to its present stage. Returns are just now beginning. Milling is in progress at B and C shafts, and from 6,500 to 7,000 tons of ore, or about 150 cars, are sent to the shipping docks daily. This product, with shaft A in commission, it will be possible to double next season. Stripping is in progress at the newer opening, with three steam shovels and a large force of men employed. The ore at the Monroe is of excellent grade, is easily mined and there is enough of it to assure the operation of the mine for a number of decades to come.

Unless present plans are changed, it is understood that no ore will be shipped from the Stephens mine of the Steel corporation. However, the work of stripping is proceeding with three shovels engaged, and eventually a very heavy tonnage will be forwarded from the property. The mine sent out some ore last year, after being prepared during the preceding season for heavy production, and is now being developed on a much greater scale. The deposit at the Stephens is very large and the quality of the ore the best. The property is located north of Aurora. The company's big Burt mine, east of the Hull, is not expected to ship as heavily as last season, when more than three-quarters of a million tons were mined. This is because of the necessity of building a new approach to the big open cut, that in use last season having been left at a level too high for economical operations by reason of the extraction of the ore. Four large and powerful compound and triple pumps, recently ordered by the company for use at different mines, are building at a Milwaukee works.

The Hobart, a new mine being opened by the Rhodes Mining company at Sparta, bids fair to make a record as a wet proposition that will rival the Penobscot, famous in that respect, in the Hibbing district. Two vertical shafts, 100 feet apart, are being sunk, and on account of the large volume of water met with, the progress is very slow. At present there are six No. 9 Camerons and three Prescott sinkers engaged in keeping the water from drowning out the shafts. The pumps have a combined capacity of 3,000 gallons a minute, and are being operated to the limit. Despite the obstacles to overcome, however, before the ore body is reached, it is understood that a considerable tonnage will be forwarded from the mine this season. At the Brunt, which the Rhodes company also is opening, much better progress is making. Water is causing no trouble, in fact, the mine is comparatively dry, and pumping costs are consequently

THE MENOMINEE RANGE

Hollister Mine to Be Reopened by the Consumers Ore Company---Munro Property at Norway Has Resumed Operations.

Iron Mountain, Mich., May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Consumers Ore company, controlled by the Cleveland firm of M. A. Hanna & Co., has taken over the Hollister mine, Menominee range, and is preparing to reopen the property. A plant of machinery, consisting of boilers, hoisting engine and air compressor, is being installed. The workings will be unwatered and the shaft retimbered and repaired to its present depth of 150 feet, after which it will be put down 450 feet more and from that level systematic exploratory operations will be started. The property lies about four miles east of Crystal Falls. It was opened in 1888 by S. D. Hollister, but after shipping a few hundred tons of ore it suspended operations. Later it was reopened by Ishpeming parties, with Capt. J. H. Cundy in charge, only to again become idle within a year or two, at a time of disastrous depression in the iron trade, and with a record of but 4,100 tons of ore shipped altogether it has since been out of commission. The mine was unwatered during the iron boom of 1899-1900 by Ogilvhay, Norton & Co., of Cleveland, but no mining and but little exploring was done and the option was permitted to lapse. It is not improbable that the Consumers company will find large ore bodies at depth; in fact, diamond drill work done in the past has shown the existence of deposits beneath the present workings, and were it not for difficulties to be met with in the way of wet territory and difficult ground in which to sink it is likely that the Hollister would even now be on the shipping list. It having been under option to a number of different concerns. The Consumers company has taken the property under lease. Capt. Frank Seadden of Crystal Falls is superintendent in charge of the work.

The Mineral Mining company, which in a way is subsidiary to the Pewabic company, operating at Iron Mountain, is installing machinery at the old James property, in the Iron River district. It is likely, however, that the work of unwatering the shaft, which is down to a depth of 300 feet, will not be commenced until the middle of June or later. The erection of a new shafthouse has been completed. Louis Dober, of Iron River, on whose homestead was opened the Dober mine of the Steel corporation, and who in the past has done considerable exploratory work, is again turning his attention in that direction. He has secured options to a number of desirable tracts, among them the A. C. Nash farm, four miles west of town, and will begin his operations at the latter location. Reports that the Steel corporation's Riverton mine is about worked out and will shortly be abandoned are again in circulation. However, stories to this effect have been floated in past years about this time, but the Riverton goes on mining and shipping ore just the same and will no doubt continue on the active list for some years to come. The Lake Erie Ore company, the newly organized corporation which recently purchased the Section 12 mine of the G. W. Youngs Mining company, is controlled by members of the firm of Drake, Barlow & Co., former ore brokers at Cleveland. G. W. Youngs and his sons retain a one-tenth interest in the property.

The Munro property at Norway, recently unwatered, has resumed operations for the season and is again shipping ore to the Escanaba docks. Until different instructions are received, only one shift of sixty men will be employed. However, with the resumtpion at this mine, and at the Norway and Cyclops, and the steadily improving conditions and increase in output at the Aragon, Curry, West Vulcan and Saginaw, more prosperity is held out for the city this season than for several years past. At Pickands, Mather & Co.'s Vivian mine at Quinnesec, the night crew of about fifty men has been laid off, and it is understood that only one shift will be worked during the balance of the season. The allotment of ore the Vivian has been called on to produce is less than anticipated, and the output required can be mined without the necessity of work at night. The men whose services were dispensed with quickly secured employment at the Munro and other properties. Ramsdell & Bergeron of Norway have commenced exploratory work on a tract north of Brier Hill upon which they have secured an option. A churn drill will be used. Some test-pitting has been done, and ore running 48 per cent in iron has been uncovered. The concentrating works of the Pewabic Mining company at Keel Ridge are resuming operations after a six years' idleness, the starting of the plant having been delayed by the necessity of rebuilding the spur track from the main line of the Chicago & Northwestern road. H. G. Getzen has been appointed superintendent of the works, and Pietro Raffini is in charge of mining operations. The Winnifred Mining company, a branch of the new Rhodes corporations, has options to the Alpha and Atlas properties in Mastodon township, near Crystal Falls, and will do considerable work of an exploratory nature in that vicinity this season.

THE MARQUETTE RANGE

Fine Plant Being Installed at Cliffs Shafts Mine--- Shipping From Blue Mine to Start Within Three Weeks

Ishpeming, Mich., May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—What will be one of the finest plants of machinery on the Marquette range is being put in by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, at its Cliffs Shafts mine at Ishpeming. The equipment consists of a double cylinder hoisting engine, with two 10-foot drums, and an air compressor of a capacity sufficient to furnish power to fifty drilling machines. Each of the new cages, with its equipment, will weigh five tons, and the cars will each carry two tons of ore. The new hoisting plant will result in a large saving of fuel, and with an increase of 25 per cent in the working force, will permit the output of the mine to be doubled. These additional men will be taken on as soon as the new machinery goes into commission, at which time the Cliffs Shafts will have 500 names on its pay roll. The present air compressor will be retained in place for use in emergencies. New boilers were installed at the mine during the winter, and the pumping system also was improved. Still another improvement has been the construction of an addition of 100 feet to the coal dock, which materially enlarges the storage capacity. The new hoisting plant is being installed at the "B" shaft. Pending the completion of the work, which will require about three weeks, with three eight-hour shifts employed, the mine is being operated with the usual force of men, but all hoisting is being done through the "A" shaft, where a temporary engine has been put into commission at the crusher house.

It has recently been discovered at Negaunee that the unusual influx of water at the Steel Corporation's Bluo mine was due to a break in the city water main. The circumstances were pecular. Several weeks ago, at the time of the spring freshets, the mine was forced to ssupend operations for a few days because of an unexpected flow of water which had broken through into the shaft. This water did not flow in from the surface, and there was no way of changing its course. Apparently it had filtered down through the sandy sub-soil to the rock ledge, whence it found its way into the mine workings. It took several days to fork out the extra water, which had flooded the lower levels and drifts, and since that time an extra No. 10 Cameron pump has been required. A still hunt was instituted for the outlet to the supposed vug or spring with the result that the break in the water main, some distance away from the shaft, was disvovered. Water was found pouring from the break in large volume, a fact which is held responsible to a large extent for the poor showing made at the waterworks plant

Spring gowns and spring house cleaning cannot occupy people from everlasting to everlasting, but after their exertions in this direction, it appears that they have gone to sleep. A sleep and a forgetting it seems, for apparently it has occurred to but a hopeless few to sit down and write a few invitations and entertain a few friends. The hostesses to wake up and do this will be hailed as absolutely original persons, and their entertainments unique, although they may decide on an Oliver Wendell Holmes "giggle-gabble-gobble-git" affair. It will really create quite a stir. There have been a few weddings since Lent, with their attendant functions for the favored few, and a few dancing parties and fewer card receptions. Former years of several-functions-a-day happiness are things that people talk about now with wistful eyes and longing in their voices.

As there is to be no June assembly party, many of the members are planning to attend the Junior-Senior reception which will be given Saturday evening, June 9, at the Spalding hotel. This school affair is always a delightful one, and the reception this year in honor of the graduating class promises to be as beautiful and enjoyable as in former years.

Clubs and Musical

In view of the local interest which is felt in the California Big Trees, a parody has been written that will be of interest to many in Duluth. It is by Mrs. Lovell White of California, and has been dedicated to Speaker Cannon of the house of representatives with apologies to Mr. Tennyson. The efforts to have the Calaveras Big Tree bill at least read in the halls of congress is described by Mrs. White as follows:

All the clubs, all the clubs, all the clubs, onward!
Up to the halls of Congress marched the Five Hundred.
Forward, the female brigade,
"Save the Big Trees!" they said.
Up to the halls of Congress
Marched the Five Hundred.

"Beware of the female brigade," shouted
all Congress, dismayed.
"Can I make myself solid?" every man wondered.
Not theirs to wonder how,
Not theirs to smile and bow.
"Joe Cannon will stop this row,
And out of the halls of Congress
Throw the Five Hundred."

of them;
Cannon in front of them, shouted and thundered.

Stormed at with threat and yell.
Boldly he stood and well.
Told them "'twas a timber sell!"
Told them to go to ——
The noble Five Hundred!

AMONG THE PLANTS

The next two weeks will be the great planting time in the floral world, and perhaps the most important thing to remember is the firming of the soil around the plants. Don't be afraid of getting it too firm; either press it solid with knuckles or pound it down with the handle of the trowel. Send the trowel down straight and deep, so the roots of small plants, such as asters or pansies, can hang straight down, then push the dirt firmly against the earth wall, made by the back of the trowel, leaving a small depression next the plants, and into it pour a little water. Then, when the bed is all planted, level off the earth so as to cover the watered place with fine soil, and then let it alone, for the whole surface does not want wetting down, unless it is dust dry. The plants root a great deal faster in dry soil than they do in wet, and this constant drenching with water often kills them entirely. Of course, this only applies to beds in earth. The window box gets nothing from capilliary attraction, and must be kept moist, not wet, by a frequent use of the sprinkler.

In planting out potted plants, pour enough water into the depression to thoroughly wet the ball of roots, for they are generally dry. Your own good sense will tell you how much, and cover with fine, dry soil. If you have not sown all your seeds, hurry them in, for we are in hope that warm weather may come after this miserable stuff we have been having lately. Don't hurry the tender things, such as dahlias, coleus, asters, etc., out too early. We may have a sharp frost yet, and I have done nothing but fight for time this last week with those who wanted to run risks in planting too early, and in tender things you take all the risks and gain nothing. The first week in June is full early enough for dahlias, and the second is just a little better. Don't forget this lovely class; they can go in the vegetable garden and be grown and cultivated like corn, and there is no prettier cut flower, and they cost no more than geraniums.

Asters can be planted and do well up to June 20, for the beauties we grow now are early bloomers and are getting to be a summer flower instead of a late fall flower, liable to be caught by the frost, and they are cheap, cover a lot of ground and as beautiful as a chrysanthemum. Plant lots of them, and cut a lovely bunch for the table, mixed with a few sprays of mignonette, picked with the dew on it, and see if the breakfast does not taste better.

How beautiful some of our Duluth lawns were last summer with their beautiful flower beds, but you folks that don't happen to be rich can surely have a few flowers, even if they are not so costly, and the verbenas, the dwarf phloxes, the stocks and marigolds, don't cost much. They are pretty, and can, by a little care in arrangement of colors, be made beautiful. A few cents laid out in seeds well repays the outlay, and you can get an awful lot of comfort out of a dollar so spent for seed or plants. Besides, you are helping make Duluth what she should be, the Queen of the Northland.

Events in New York Society

New York, May 26.—(Special to The Herald).—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who has been exceedingly active as a whip throughout the coaching season, attended the Baltimore Horse show last Thursday with Mrs. Vanderbilt. They will go to the Philadelphia show on Monday at Wissahickon Heights.

Mr. Vanderbilt is to open new training quarters for horses at Newport and has appointed Tuesday, June 18, as the date for a "house warming." There will be only a few of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt there for the season at that time, but guests will be taken from here in Mr. Vanderbilt's private car, on which he always travels now in going between New York and Newport.

Although there will be many interesting details to mark the "house warming" which the occasion will be called, only the general form has yet been determined upon. The festivities will begin with a grand dinner which will be served in the dining room, which is a part of the establishment. There will follow dancing and a presentation of Mr. Vanderbilt's thoroughbreds in the ring. It is even stated that there may be an amateur circus, but this is doubted in view of the need of rehearsals and the impossibility of holding them.

There will be some riding and driving "stunts" for which ribbons and favors of various kinds will be offered. The entertainment, though informal, will be very elaborate, and will conclude with an early morning "supper."

The guests from New York will be entertained at the country places of Alfred G. Vanderbilt and his brother, Reginald C. Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Frederic Neilson is back in town after a visit to her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, at Sandy Point Farm. She will sail for Europe within the week and will spend the greater part of the summer at Marienbad.

Plans for June weddings are being announced and, invitations are being issued almost every day. One of the important marriages scheduled for next month is that of Miss Marie Adele Montant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Montant, to Mr. Huntington Norton. The ceremony is to take place at noon, Saturday, June 16, at "Ramsbroke," the country house of Mr. and Mrs. Montant, in Oyster Bay, L. I.

Miss Montant's bridesmaids will be Miss Edith Greenough, daughter of the late William Greenough; Miss Cecily I. Sheldon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Sheldon; Miss Jean C. Hancy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Hancy, whose engagement to Mr. William Keyser of Baltimore, was announced a short time ago, and Miss Ruth Kingsbury of New Haven, Conn.

Mr. Norton's best man will be his brother, Mr. Martin J. Norton.

The ushers will be Messrs. Louis Townsend Mantant, brother of the bride; James A. Blair, Jr.; Massey Holmes, Henry Gittings of Baltimore, and Grant Forbes of Boston.

Miss Adele Florence Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tevis Kelley, who is to be married to Mr. Amedee Valle Reyburn, Jr., Monday, June 4, in St. Leo's Roman Catholic church, will be one of June's first brides.

The wedding will be a large one, and the ceremony will be supplemented by a reception at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Kelley. Miss Kelley's matron of honor will be Mrs. Evermont Hope Norton, and her maid of honor Miss Nathalie Hillyer. The bridesmaids will be Miss Julia J. Calhoun, the daughter of Gen. and Mrs. John C. Calhoun, and Miss Annie Best, the daughter of Mrs. Clermont Best.

William Hunt will be Mr. Reyburn's best man.

The ushers are to be Messrs. Stuart MacDonald, S. Barclay Lottimer, Don M. Kelley, Frank Phipps, Valle Reyburn and Arthur Corbett.

Mr. Reyburn and his bride have arranged to sail for Europe June 12, to be gone all summer.

Miss Kelley is giving an elaborate "bachelor" luncheon for several of her young friends at her residence, 602 Madison avenue, today. Mr. Reyburn will celebrate his departure from bachelorhood by giving a dinner at Delmonico's Saturday night, June 2.

Dr. Frederick T. Van Buren, Jr., who was married to Miss Jessica Mohlman at the Church of Heavenly Rest, gave his farewell bachelor dinner on Wednesday night at the University club. Among his guests were A. L. and G. A. Mohlman, Dr. H. B. Wilcox, T. E. Ides, A. D. Baylis, T. M. Debovoise, A. D. Baldwin, H. E. Butler, T. A. Goodwin, Dr. T. A. McGraw and Dr. J. J. Russell.

From Newport comes word that the season is to be opened with wedding bells, which always gives it a lively sendoff. It will be the last week in June when the gay period will thus begin, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Anita Sands, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sands, to Mr. Minott. A large number of summer visitors will probably journey to Newport somewhat earlier than usual in order to be settled in their homes for the wedding. Thus it will not only start the season along merrily, but it will also have the effect of bringing a good sized villa colony to Newport for the beginning of July.

Among those who have already left town for the fashionable summer resort are Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Q. Jones, Dr. and Mrs. John J. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Warren, Miss Charlotte Warren, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Grand d'Hauteville and Mrs. Woodbury Kane. In all about thirty villas have already been opened, which is a very good record for the time of year.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, Jr., will pass the early part of the summer in Tivoli on the Hudson and later go to Southampton, Long Island.

BEAUTY!

HOW ACQUIRED.

Use of Mme. Ruppert's Face Bleach Assures Perfect Complexion.

It is said that beauty is but skin deep. Nothing is more true. But there can be no real beauty unless the skin is beautiful.

Nothing is easier to be had than a beautiful skin, if the proper remedy is used. Mme. Ruppert's Face Bleach has never failed in the past to naturally beautify the complexion. Its use imparts to the skin a girlish loveliness. This loveliness is not artificial, but natural, as the effect of Mme. Ruppert's Face Bleach is to restore the skin to childish freshness and bloom, leaving it wholesome and pure.

It is positively harmless to the most delicate skin, and while using it one may attend to regular household, office or social duties, it being impossible to detect its use, as it does not show after application.

Face Bleach is guaranteed to remove painlessly and harmlessly wrinkles and lines of care, freckles, tan, moth, pimples and blackheads, and in fact any disease or discoloration of the skin.

Call at our toilet goods counter and have its merits further explained.

We also sell Mme. Ruppert's Almond Oil Complexion Soap, an exquisite toilet soap; Mme. Ruppert's Gray Hair Restorative, for restoring gray hair to its natural color; Mme. Ruppert's Depilatory for removing superfluous hair, and a full line of her toilet requisites.

The EVENING STORY.

THE FRONT ROOM

By Hugh Pendexter.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles).

"She wouldn't knuckle under," reported Jethuel, gloomily.

His wife, a tall, sparse woman with heavy, dull eyes, paused in mixing bread and scraping one finger on the spoon, declared sententiously: "She's got ter."

There was a world of finality in this utterance, and Mr. Philbrick, scratching his weak chin in perplexity and remembering the gnarled oaklike solidity of his wife's character, gave one sidelong glance at her angular person and laughed: "Yas; I guess she has.'

"There's no guessin' about it, Jethuel. Whose house is this? Is it yours or Dyddy Philbricks?" And the dull eyes give a hint of hidden fire. "Drat her fer a quarrelsome old maid. Here I've slaved an' tuckered myself out fer ten years an' she a playin' th' great lady an' keepin' th' best room in th' house.

"It's best fer me, Jethuel, ter have that front room. She's had it fer years; now I'm goin' ter have it fer my sister. Mehitable is comin' next month ter spend a few week with us, an' I'm not goin' ter tuck her in th' attick."

With this assertion Mrs. Philbrick returned to her doughpan with increased vigor.

But her decision had been overheard by the object of their conversation. Jethuel observed her first, a little, slim, faded woman, who now stood in the doorway of the darkened hall.

"Who talks of upsettin' a dead man's will an' triflin' with the law?" demanded Miss Lyddy, in a shrill voice. Then she continued: "My father left this farm to Jethuel, an' he left th' front room, fire wood an' one cow, ter me. Who talks of makin' me quit my property?"

"Why Lyddy, we's plannin' ter make a few changes in th' old place, an' was figurin' on givin' you a different room, that's all," explained Jethuel, in a conciliatory voice.

"We want that room," said Mrs. Philbrick, in an even, determined tone.

"Tech it if you dare," replied the spinster, with none of her brother's weakness. "Jest dare ter tech or disturb a single shingle or board an' we'll see if there's any law in Maine. I've $400 in th' Waterford bank and I'll spend every cent of it a lawin' of you both." And with this parting shot she retreated to her castle, the much-wanted front room, while Jethuel escaped through the back door to evade the storm he knew would come.

It was the same old story of family dissension. When Squire Philbrick died he believed he had done justice to his two children by leaving a good farm to the son and a living and the best room in the house to the daughter. The room she was to occupy was specified in the will, and although Jethuel's wife had accepted the situation as a necessary evil she had not openly tried to oust her sister-in-law until this summer. Then listening to the promptings of her relatives she decided to effect a change. Jethuel had done well with the farm and there was no reason why the old, low structure should not be raised and remodeled and made the most pretentious of any on Pugsley hill. But the will and its specifications could not well be ignored, and for some time she kneaded the dough and cast her mind about in a futile effort to devise a scheme to evade the terms of the instrument.

Miss Lyddy sat sadly at the window opening out on Pitchmore hill road. Years back, when her slight form was replete with grace and her wrinkled cheek glowed with the blush of wholesome youth, she had sat at that same window and watched young Cale ride away to join his company in Portland. Years back she had sat there, waiting dumbly for the York county boys to return, only to learn that the youth of her favor must ever remain behind, a victim of the last cavalry dash of the war. So the room contained a ill that was dear to her and worth living for. The old-fashioned chest held the finery of her mother. On the shelves were quaint bits of crockery, while over the window, framed with the flag, was a tintype of young Cale, himself, taken in Washington, just before he joined the firing line.

"Let 'em try it if they dare," she murmured.

A few days later, workmen arrived.

"Don't dare ter tech my room," warned Lyddy.

"They ain't goin' ter," explained Mrs. Philbrick, triumphant. "They ain't goin' ter. But they be goin' ter cut your room out and, leave it, an' move th' rest of th' house up front about fifty feet; that's all."

"An' leave my front room all alone?" gasped Lyddy.

"That's about what," replied Mrs. Philbrick.

"But the will says I'm ter have a front room in th' house as long as I live," she remonstrated.

"Wal; ain't you got th' front room? Th' will don't say we can't remodel our part of the house, does it? An' course you say you are ter have a front room in our new house does it? 'Course you can't expect ter have two rooms. You can have th' front room of this house, or a back room in th' new house. Make your choice." As she delivered herself of this ultimatum Mrs. Philbrick's face took on a revengefully humorous look as she noted the perplexity of the other.

Miss Lyddy struggled with herself for a minute or two, and then drawing up her thin form to its utmost height, cried: "Cut it out and leave it!"

Mrs. Philbrick had expected a surrender. Receiving this defiance her black brows lowered and she nodded to the grinning, waiting workmen to go ahead. The task was a simple one. Proceeding with great care, they detached the front room and by the end of the week had moved the rest of the house forward about fifty feet. Miss Lyddy in the interim remained locked up in her narrow castle, only darting out to procure food from the kitchen. On these occasions Jethuel would beat a retreat to the barn. The front room was the rear room now, and standing by itself, surrounded by the cellar walls, it looked odd and desolate. Just what Lyddy would do in the winter worried Jethuel not a little; but his wife quieted him by declaring that with the first snow Lyddy would seek refuge in the back room and all would be well.

One day Lyddy opened her door and caught Jethuel, who was passing.

"Jethuel, you've dodged me fer some time. Now you pay heed a minute ter what I say. You an' Laura have deserted me, but lem'me tell you this, an' you be sure to tell her. I'll never come inter your house till she begs me on her knees an' prays me ter take th' best room, lookin' out on th' Pitchmope road. She nor you never will enter my room till she does this, an' also promises ter move this room so it will jine with th' new house. Now you've heard me, git! Only little Dan ever comes in here till what I've said has been done."

The 10-year-old youngster alluded to was the one person to whom his mother, Mrs. Philbrick, bowed her head. He ruled her, even as he ruled his spinster aunt. Probably if Lyddy had been asked to give up her room for his sake, she would have suffered. But the mother was too jealous of the boy's affections to be beholden to Lyddy in his behalf.

And so, with the exception of the boy, Dan, Miss Lyddy received no visitors. The boy's mother forbid him going there, but he disregarded her commands and called daily, knowing full well the weakness of her love.

It was after the carpenters had worked two days in raising the old house up a story that there occurred the first serious misfortune to come to the Philbrick household. Mrs. Philbrick had been frying doughnuts and had left her task to get an armful of wood. The fat boiled over, and when she returned she found the rear of the house ablaze, with Jethuel and the carpenters working desperately to stop the flames from spreading.

"Oh! Oh! Where's Daniel!" moaned Jethuel, as he saw his wife coming up the path alone.

"Dan'l in there?" shrieked the distracted mother, rushing for the blazing doorway.

"I have Dan in here. I fetched him through th' end winder an' down th' ladder. He's burned some," called Miss Lyddy from her doorway. Then she turned and closed the door and locked it.

"Lem'me in, Lyddy Philbrick!" shrieked the frenzied mother, beating on the solid old door.

Miss Lyddy came to the window and looked down on the distracted woman calmly. When she could make herself heard she said: "No; you can't come in here. Now listen; th' house is ruined, an' although th' men are savin' enough ter shelter you an' Jethuel, it'll be no place fer this boy. But if you say so, you can have him. If you do take him inter that ruin, all water soaked an' smoky, he'll probably die. Leave him here an' I'll take as good care of him as you would. But you two can't come in. You'll recollect I made a vow."

"I must be with Dan'l," choked the mother. "I must be with him! Lem'me in!"

Dan showed his frightened face at the opening long enough to sob; "I'm scared of th' fire, ma. I don't want ter come out."

His parents, even in their fright, observed that his hands and arms were bandaged.

"Now, Laura, no matter if it does go again th' grain, jest give in. Remember your vow an' knuckle. Why, we-ve got ter be with Daniel. Oh, Lawd, who knows but what he's injured intarnally!" Jethuel took on.

Mrs. Philbrick stiffened up, gulped back a sob, and then burst into tears. "It's hard, Lyddy," she choked, "but you saved him through th' winder. You was watchin' out fer him when I was away. I'm a determined woman; maybe I'm sot in my ways, but I'm a Christian. I beg of you ter take th' best room in our new house when its built," and Mrs. Philbrick kneeled in supplication.

"An' we'll move this room anywhere you want it," added Jethuel, joyfully.

"Come in," said Lyddy, simply, throwing open the door. "Come in. You an' Dan can stay with me, an' Jethuel can sleep in what's left of th' old place, or in th' barn. An' I guess th' insurance will jest about pay fer half of a new set of buildin's won't it, Jethuel?" she asked, cheerfully.

"Wal, whether it does, or don't, there's goin' ter be enough ter buy a new carpet for your room, Lyddy, an' some new curtains fer th' winders," declared Mrs. Philbrick, as she kneeled beside her son and again noticed how skilfully his burns had been treated by his rescuer.

IRONWOOD

Ironwood, May 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss A. Larcey, a well-known young lady of Ironwood, left Monday for Iron Mountain, Mich., where she will reside in the future. Before her departure a number of her young friends presented her with a very pretty gift which demonstrated the esteem in which she was held.

B. Anderson of Tacoma, Wash., a former resident of Ironwood, visited relatives in the city several days and returned to Tacoma, Tuesday.

Mrs. E. A. Seapark has been at Homer, Mich, for several days, visiting friends.

S. A. Reid spent Tuesday in Bessemer on a short business trip.

Mrs. J. E. Marshall and son visited friends in Ironwood, Tuesday.

Herbert Swanson spent several days at Crab lake on a fishing trip.

G. J. Alexander, James Devoy, D. E. Sutherland, George Brewer and H. F. Jahn, as a committee on arrangements for the proper celebration of Memorial day, have been hard at work all week, and arrangements are reported complete.

Mrs. I. W. Atchison of Gogebic, visited with friends in Ironwood, Tuesday.

August Anderson of Duluth, formerly of Ironwood, was in the city visiting his friends Tuesday.

Mrs. Conley and son left Wednesday on an extended visit with friends and relatives at Ishpeming.

Spangled Feather Hair Ornaments Are Newest

Butterflies and Queer Insects Composed of Lace and Tinsel Worn, Besides Empire and Half Wreaths of Some Artificial Flowers.

Hair ornaments are more varied in style this season than they have ever been before, for anything from a ribbon bow to silk flowers, and imitation feathers, is correct, provided there are spangles on them. The fashion of placing them on the coiffures is also varied, and gives enough latitude for a woman to wear them in a becoming place on her head, whether directly in front, at the back, or on the sides, and for these reasons will undoubtedly be popular this summer with afternoon and evening frocks.

The newest styles are the fluffy plumes in white, black, or the light pastel shades with gold, silver or iridescent drops of pearls on the ends of each feather, making a glittering drop that is most effective, for the ornament is comparatively high, and the bright ends fall directly on the hair. These are made in two designs, the short, broad one, that tall women will like and the high, rather narrow kind for women small in stature.

Another entirely new style of decoration is a butterfly made of velvet and silk net with plenty of bright spangles that glisten. In light pink, blue, a delicate green or pale yellow these insects are most attractive. They are made with a long, slender, velvet body, and two sets of these wings fashioned of velvet and net. They are made over small silk covered wires, so that they will hold their shape.

Not as unique, but quite as original, are the velvet and net quill-like ornaments that are worn on the side of a high coiffure. There are two of these imitation feathers in each of the decorations. They are made on wires, the quill ends being solid velvet in a light color, with half of the feather of velvet and the other part in net of a shade to match. The velvet half is prettily adorned with a very narrow piece of gold gimp put on in squares. The two quills are securely fastened together, and are tied with malline in a large double bow with short ends.

A pretty ornament of flowers is made in a tiara shape of white silk lines of the valley, with two deep red roses that fall gracefully over the ear. Another floral ornament is of forget-me-nots. It is made like a wreath, and entirely encircles the crown of the head. At one side of it there is a shrub-like bunch of the flowers that relieves its flat appearance and makes it particularly becoming to small women, for it gives the effect of height.

Bows of velvet and net with spangles, worn at the side of the hair or directly in front, are pretty and simple enough for a young girl, though in black with jet ornaments they are especial favorites of elderly women.

Nourishing Drinks for Invalids

Delightful Beverages That Allay Thirst and Take Place of Medicine.

By MRS. EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

In case of sickness or convalescence, it is often much easier to administer nourishment in liquid form than in the solid. Not only are liquids more quickly assimilated, but in the dilute form they assist in the rapid removal of waste material and, as in the case of feverish conditions, replace the water lost by evaporation. As is the case with solid foods, it is of primary importance that cold drinks should be cold, not simply cool, and hot drinks hot, not tepid. They must appeal to the eye and the nostrils as a prelude to an invitation from the palate.

Orange Juice.

Take a sweet, juicy orange, cut in two at the circumference, and squeeze out all the juice with a lemon squeezer. Strain or leave some of the pulp in, as preferred. Set on the ice until thoroughly chilled, then serve in a thin glass, crystal clear, set on a little china plate with a small doyley between glass and plate. Grape fruit is refreshing served in the same way, adding if desired a little sugar and a teaspoonful of sherry.

Oriental Sherbet.

Take two tablespoonfuls of rather tart jelly, preferably currant, grape, cranberry or apple, dissolve in a glass of cold water, then set on the ice until thoroughly chilled. Unless absolutely certain of the purity of your ice supply, it is not safe to use it in solution. Have all drinks chilled by standing against the ice, but take no chances of giving typhoid or other malignant germs lodgment in the body already weakened by disease.

Apple Water.

Slice a half dozen sour, juicy apples into an earthen pitcher, add a tablespoonful of sugar and pour over all a quart of boiling water. Cover closely and when cold strain and chill.

Oatmeal Water.

Put a quarter cup oatmeal in an earthen bowl, with a half cup sugar and the juice and thin yellow rind of a lemon. Cover with two quarts of boiling water, let it stand covered until the sugar is dissolved, strain and chill. Fruit vinegars may be used in place of the lemon.

Tamarind Water.

Mix preserved tamarinds with boiling water, cover and stand aside for half an hour. Strain, sweeten to taste and chill.

Pineapple Eggnog.

Beat an egg slightly with a silver fork, add three tablespoonfuls pineapple juice freshly expressed, a little sugar and as much water as is needed to fill the glass. Strain and chill.

Barley Water.

Barley water is both refreshing and wholesome. Put a scant quarter cup of barley into an earthen bowl and cover with two quarts of boiling water. When cold strain, sweeten, add lemon juice to taste and chill.

Rice Water.

Cover two tablespoonfuls of well washed rice with a quart of boiling water, add a few raisins and simmer gently for two or three hours. Strain, add a pinch of salt, sugar and lemon, or brandy, to season, chill and serve.

Irish Moss Lemonade.

This is especially excellent in case of any throat irritation. Wash thoroughly one-quarter cup Irish moss and soak an hour in cold water to cover. Pour over it one pint boiling water and let stand on the back of the range for half an hour. Strain, sweeten, add the juice of a lemon and chill.

Flaxseed Tea.

Wash a tablespoonful flaxseed, clean and put into an earthen bowl. Pour on two or three cups of cold water, let it stand an hour, stirring frequently from the bottom. Strain.

Flax Seed Lemonade.

Mix the juice of one lemon with as much sugar as it will take up. Add two cups boiling water, and pour this lemonade boiling hot over two tablespoonfuls flax seed. Let it stand several hours.

Crust Coffee.

Over two carefully browned slices of toast pour a pint of boiling water. Steep gently fifteen minutes, strain and serve hot, adding sugar and cream to taste.

Mulled Wine.

Put a half cup water into a porcelain lined saucepan (never use tin on account of the acid), three cloves, an inch of stick cinnamon, a good grating of nutmeg and a couple blocks of sugar. Cover closely, stand in a pot of hot water and simmer ten minutes, not allowing it to boil. Then add a half cup claret or port, let it just come to the boiling point, but not boil up, pour into a hot pitcher, cover and carry to the invalid. This is a sleep inducing and cold reproving beverage, a favorite with our grandmothers.

It may be varied and made more nutritious by beating the white of an egg to a stiff froth and the yolk to a cream, adding a tablespoonful of sugar and stirring into the wine just after taking from the fire.

Egg Wine.

Beat a new laid egg with a little water, beat a glass of sherry, and add to it half a glass of cold water and a little sugar. The amount of sugar is to be regulated by the taste and condition of the invalid. Pour the beaten egg, sweetened wine and water into a saucepan, set in a larger one of boiling water. Set over the fire and stir one way until thoroughly heated, but do not allow it to boil. Serve in a high tumbler set on a plate, accompanying it with a piece of thin, dry toast or plain, crisp biscuit.

Mulled Egg in Tea or Coffee.

Beat an egg until light in a small bowl. Stir into it a little milk or cream and sugar, then pour in a "shaker."

Egg Cocoa.

Put into a saucepan a tablespoonful of cocoa, a tablespoonful and a half of sugar, and a tablespoonful of boiling water. Cook until smooth and glossy. Have ready a pint of milk heated in a double boiler and one beaten egg, beat quickly and thoroughly with an egg beater and muddler, and serve in a heated cup with a tablespoonful whipped cream on top. Chocolate may be used in place of the cocoa, but, being richer, it is not so digestible.

Irish Crochet Makes Pretty Summer Blouse.

Blouse of Irish Crochet

Blouses of Irish crochet, Cluny or the beautiful braid laces that are being used with the softest of chiffon taffetas and liberty satins are in vogue for wear with light weight colored cloth and silk skirts just now and form particularly dressy models for summer wear.

They are all elaborately trimmed with embroideries, introduced in the form of yokes, cuffs, medallions and bolero-shaped insets, rather than insertions and edgings characteristic of the lingerie models.

One particularly dressy model which would be suitable for the most important of afternoon functions shows a pointed yoke and deep girdle of beautiful and heavy Irish crochet having a deep scalloped edge.

A feature of many of the newest lingerie waists, exquisitely hand embroidered and inset with fine Valenciennes lace, is the use of a single medium-sized medallion of baby Irish crochet, set in the center of the front just above the bust line. Another model shows a single rose in the center of the medallion, another a deep design, while a third, a unique design, is the figure of a woman's head.

An effective use of ribbons is seen in one model. These are in the form of richelieu pleatings of inch-width, one row set above another on a body of white chiffon cloth, and making for a most elaborate trimming effect are yoke, bolero fronts and sleeve insets of exquisite Irish crochet in rose pattern. The yoke appears in the back as well as the front of this bodice, but is round instead of pointed. The crushed girdle is built in one with the blouse and supporters by strips of featherbone.

Rocking the Baby Said to Induce Nervousness

Is it injurious to the health of infants to be rocked? Or is the swaying motion soothing and beneficial? Nurses and mothers for several years have argued these questions, and while some have absolutely refused to allow their little ones to be rocked, others have swung them to sleep in a cradle or hammock, rocked them in a comfortable armchair every time they cried, in the old fashioned way, and in both instances some of the little babies have grown strong and sturdy and others developed into nervous, excitable children.

As to the harm rocking actually does, one physician declares it depends entirely upon the constitution of the infant. "Some babies thrive on it, while the motion undoubtedly irritates and frequently disturbs the stomachs of others," she says.

"I can think of no better plan if the welfare of the little one is uppermost than to try a gentle swaying movement, holding the baby in one's arms. If the infant laughs or goes to sleep immediately there need be no fear that swinging in a cradle or rocking it in a chair will be injurious, unless its stomach is out of order, when the motion will often undoubtedly cause a kind of seasickness, such as grown-ups experience on a merry-go-round, when crossing the ocean, or frequently when riding in an elevator.

"But the baby whose stomach is too sensitive to stand being rocked will often cry when first put into the cradle, because the motion just at the start is most sickening, and causes the little one real nausea, or if it is swayed in its mothers' arms when she rocks vigorously it will sometimes show unmistakeable signs of nervousness by twisting its head from one side to the other, and squirming around as if to get into a comfortable position.

"I do not know that rocking has ever really harmed the brain of a child, but I am confident that it has made excitable infants excessively nervous and irritable, and in that way has done them untold injury.

"My opinion is that the more quiet and comfortable babies can be made the better off they are physically, and for this reason I always advise mothers and nurses to keep the little ones lying in their cots as much as possible, instead of placing them in a cradle that rocks, or putting them to sleep by swinging them in a hammock. There is no doubt in my mind that the infant who is always put on a cot and left there to go to sleep gets a much more refreshing rest than the little one who requires a lot of nursing and coddling before it will close its eyes.

"This last phase is purely nervousness and habit, for if a baby, even if it is only two months old, is rocked to sleep once of twice, and likes the sensation, it will remember and cry if the same attention is not lavished on it every time it gets sleepy, and often by wailing will get itself into such an excitable condition that rest is impossible for hours, until from sheer exhaustion it drops asleep.

"Habits of sleep once formed in a baby are difficult to break, whether the infant has learned to go to rest quietly and alone, or by incessant rocking, with a continual strain of some soft lullaby in its ears. So the mother who would not only do what is best for the nerves of her child, as well as for her own peace of mind, will do well to train the youngster to go to sleep quietly and without any attention, such as rocking and singing.

"Walking the floor with a baby, while not giving it the same sensation as swinging, etc., is another motion that I believe has a tendency to make a child nervous. The ceaseless tread of the feet up and down, the turn at certain angles, the rhythmic step, frequently make a grown person irritable, and must be almost intolerable to an excitable infant, who cannot choose but be tramped with, out of a mistaken idea that the walking is soothing.

"If babies could only talk, I feel sure that most of them would beg to be left in their cots, or, when held, kept in quiet arms and not swung or rocked as if they were out for amusement."

Sick Room Furnishings Should Not be Changed

A sick room should be bright, full of fresh air, and have a cheerful atmosphere, and, according to an experienced nurse, any patient lying in such surroundings will have better chances for recovery, and if inclined to be despondent will take courage and prehaps be imbued with a desire to get well.

"With these three essentials, that are possible in every apartment, whether, in a home where there is little money to spend on comfort or in a luxurious dwellign," she says, "the care of the sick is largely a matter of technical training. Though for the mothers who watch their children through light illness, I want to make a few suggestions.

"To begin with, let in all the sunshine possible, taking care to shade the eyes of the sufferer, so that she will not be annoyed when desiring to sleep, or if her optics are weak, they will not be strained by the brightness of the sun's rays. A screen placed near the bed in the path of the light will be sufficient, or, if there is none, a high-backed chair, with a towel or sheet placed over it should answer the purpose. The same rule should be followed at night in protecting the patient's eyes, for nothing causes more nervousness than a light shining into one's eyes when it is time to sleep. Shading a lamp or a gas jet is much more easily accomplished than in keeping out the sun, for a small shade or a reflector, properly adjusted, will keep the light from disturbing the patient.

"As a rule, I should say that if the sufferer is in the room that she is accustomed to occupy, I would not change the arrangement of the furniture, hangings or pictures, for in all probability she is fondly familiar with everything in the apartment, and any change if she is at all nervous will have a tendency to disturb. Of course, if there are chairs and other pieces so placed that they are in the way when waiting on the sick person, they must be moved to allow free passageway, or taken out of the apartment altogether. There is another side of this arrangement to be considered, too, and that is if there should be a picture, etc., that seems to irritate the invalid it should be quietly taken out, some time when she is asleep.

"As to ventilation, regardless of the kind of disease, whether cold, fever, or an infectious one, there should be plenty of fresh air in the bed chamber, that is readily secured by lowering one sash from the top and raising another from the bottom. Of course, it is not necessary to add that the individual in bed should never be permitted to lie in a draught.

"The greatest care should be taken to keep the room clean, and dust should not be allowed to settle on the furniture and remain there for a whole day, for it is neither an aid to the recovery of the sick one, nor is it pleasant for her to see the furniture with a coat of dust. I want to say this to the inexperienced nurse about cleaning in a sick room: A duster or a broom should never be brought in.

"A small whisk if carefully and diligently applied to the various parts of the carpets and rugs should remove all the loose dirt, without making much dust. And as for taking the lint from the furniture and hangings, etc., a soft damp cloth that gathers all the floating particles together instead of scattering them as a feather duster does, is the only thing that should be used. Dusting should not be confined to the morning or the afternoon, but removed whenever it is seen. While doing this the windows may be opened wide to help blow out the dust, if the patient is protected from taking cold by the addition of clothing.

"One help in brightening an apartment is by having cut flowers, fresh ones, in vases. Though care should be taken in selecting them to choose the varieties that have no sickening sweet odors, for they are often oppressive and never good for the sick.

"The moment the petals or leaves turn or begin to wilt or droop they should be taken from the room, or they may have a depressing effect on a nervous person. At night flowers should never be allowed to remain where a patient is.

"As to serving meals to the sick, every device that will tempt the appetite should be taken advantage of. The napkins should be spotlessly clean, the daintiest dishes used. The tray arranged in a pretty way, with nothing crowded, and whenever it is possible the toast, muffins, potatoes, etc., should be folded in small napkins or doilies. If tea, coffee or chocolate are served, instead of taking them into the room already poured in the cup, the beverages will not only be hotter, but will look better if taken in a pitcher or small tea pot. All the cooked foods should be placed on unusually hot dishes so that by the time they are carried from the kitchen to the bed chamber for the sufferer they will be warm and tempting.

"When the patient has finished with the meal the dishes and all trace of the food should be immediately taken out, for if left in a disorderly way, while the nurse sits down to amuse and talk with the sick girl, who feels better after eating, the plates, etc., become cold and the greasy pieces of meats, etc., will frequently sicken a person with a delicate stomach, so that she will not care for the next meal.

"The same rule applies to fresh linen and towels, bedding, etc., once soiled should be taken out of the range of vision of the patient as soon as convenient, so that everything she looks at will be crisp and fresh and will not offend her."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, mannufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Chiffon Veils in Gorgeous Hues

SATIN RIBBON EDGES SOME VEILS.

ORIENTAL PATTERNS POPULAR.

TULIP DESIGN IS LIKED.

Veils have taken a new lease of life this summer, and instead of the abandonment of the long chiffon hat covering with the arrival of warm weather, they have returned in force, in company with the face veil and in a greater variety of patterns than ever before.

Feminine vanity may have something to do with the mode, for every woman knows that the plainest of her sex is made more attractive and a pretty one correspondingly more beautiful by the addition of these long floating lengths of chiffon which frame the face so gracefully and becomingly.

So that womankind will welcome the return to the vail as a permanent accessory of the summer hat, and she may, if she wishes, provide herself with a dozen different styles and then not exhaust the stock in the shops. It might be added, however, if she has the money, for one of these bits of chiffon in the new designs costs in the neighborhood of $3, and some are still higher.

Very gorgeous is the design and coloring which ornament these fascinating chiffon veils, and it seems as if all the patterns of the Orient had been brought over for their adornment. One veil of black chiffon has Japanese iris scattered over its surface, another purple lilacs in all the different tones, while still a third shows bright yellow tulips which look as if they had been carelessly dropped there.

A charmingly white chiffon veil showed a small white pattern, dotted here and there over its surface with pink chrysanthemums to give plenty of color. Roses, hyacinths and all the colors of the rainbow are utilized in some fashion or other on the new veils, and while it might seem that such a wealth of color would detract from their becomingness, quite the reverse is true.

One very effective method of trimming the chiffon veils is by a broad black satin ribbon edge. Ribbon about four inches in width is folded over the edge of the vell and stitched, then pressed down. While veils are similarly trimmed, some have a hemstitched border of the material itself.

With the chiffon veils are, of course, worn the face veils, which are more dotted than ever, it seems. Double thread patterns, which are almost invariably becoming, are used, and the dots thickly cover the surface.

For a woman to whom a dotted veil is not becoming there is a pretty diamond mesh with just the suspicion of a dot in it, which is exceedingly pretty. There is of course a right and a wrong way of draping these veils. First of all, they are worn over small hats almost invariably, although the large brim sailors take the draping beautifully.

First, the face veil is put on and pinned in the back, the ends hanging down, not draped with it over the face. It is caught to the back of the hat, the ends falling in exactly the manner of the face veil. The material over the face is then thrown back and care must be taken to allow sufficient fullness so that the veil will not bind when thrown over the face. In length the chiffon is about three yards, the face veil one and a quarter yards.

WAS A REMINDER.

Congressman "Jim" Griggs, chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee, who is popularly known as Grim Jiggs, was in the capitol grounds in Washington, when he saw a robin tugging at a big earthworm. Try as hard as it could the robin could not dislodge the worm. "What does that bird remind you of?" Mr. Griggs asked a friend. "Nothing in particular. What does it remind you of?" "It looks to me like the Democratic party at the pork barrel," Mr. Griggs said.

MUCH DESIRED SUITOR.

Kansas City Journal: Out of 250 women who sought his hand, but one met the fancy of lonely John Halloran of Jersey City, who owns $30,000 worth of real estate, and has been advertising for a wife for the last year. Lonely John is 52 years of age. He has spent most of his life before the mast. He received hundreds of letters and dozens of applicants called. The women were too old, too young, too gay or too quiet. At a ball given by a lodge of the Shepherds of Bethlehem, however, John Halloran met the girl who suited him—Miss Adele Peters of West Hoboken—and became engaged to her.

The French Millinery Fashions Are Distinctive

If women desire to be distinctive in their headgear, as well as their costuming, there is every opportunity this summer, for all of the French styles show an individualism which is positively refreshing, a fact which is the despair of the novice in the millinery business. American women themselves haven't all been educated up to the prevailing modes from the French capital yet and the trimmers who have become initiated into those mysteries have their own troubles in trying to foist them on an unwilling clientele.

However, by fall women will all wonder why they didn't take to the simplicity of the French styles sooner and will fall over themselves in an endeavor to get their chapeaus made according to French ideas. One feather and perhaps a single pink rose will be the only flower on one of the popular mushroom shapes of burnt Tuscan straw, but, however trimmed, simplicity is the thing to be strived for.

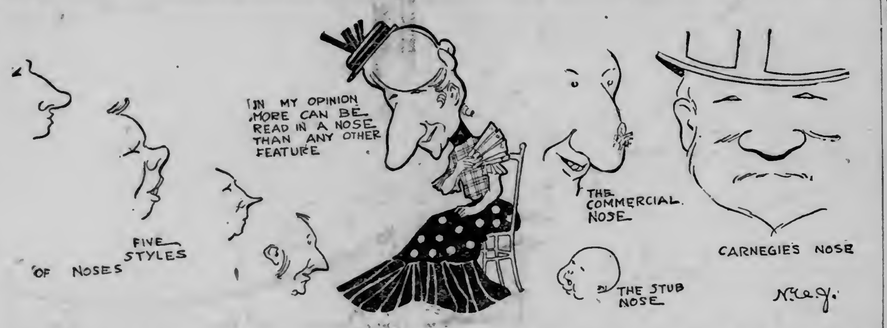
In these broad brimmed, low and high crowned hats, there are no daring angles described such as were shown in the early models, pitched high at the back and sides with deep bandeaux.

And while the bandeaux still play an important part of every summer hat, their presence is now far less conspicuous than formerly.

The ruche of maline still seems to be a favored mode of trimming, the ruche matching as nearly as possible the trimming beneath the brim. It makes no difference what the color of the hat may be; if one's hair is brown the ruche must be brown also if one would be in the height of fashion.

Hats with coarse satiny straw brim in dark colors are shown with soft Tam crowns of colored neapolitan and leghorn. There are leghorn shapes with wide floppy brims, bending prettily in shepherdess fashion and fine chipswhich are admirably suited to summer time trimmings of flowers, foliage, grasses, ribbons, with ostrich feathers for the dressier types. The vogue of the dainty lingerie frock is accounted responsible for the return to favor of the leghorn and other large hats wreathed in careless and becoming fashion with natural looking flowers and foliage.

Character Told Best by the Nose, Says Expert



IN MY OPINION MORE CAN BE READ IN A NOSE THAN ANY OTHER FEATURE FIVE STYLES OF NOSES
THE COMMERCIAL NOSE
CARNEGIE'S NOSE
THE STUB NOSE

If more women knew how to read character by the shape of noses there would be less difficulty in employing servants, fewer financial losses and not near so many cases of broken friendship, according to a prominent phrenologist, who declares that innumerable mistakes in dealing with persons could be easily avoided if each individual would make a sufficient study of noses to distinguish certain characteristics at a glance.

"Of course, other features of the face denote certain traits the same as the nose," says she, "and anything read in it may naturally be much modified and held in check by other salient characteristics, but in my opinion more can be read in a nose than in any other feature.

"There are five different styles of noses, with hundreds of variations, but these five are known as the typical noses, and on the lines of these all the others develop.

"Who has not seen and does not recognize the 'executive nose,' otherwise known as the Roman nose, that in shape has a ridge or point about one-half inch from the root or base between the eyebrows? It is accepted as the nose of fighters, of men of determined characters, who are strong opponents in any great cause. Napoleon was so sure of the warlike propensities that this shape nose denoted that he selected his staff officers largely by this one feature. Wellington, the great British general who won at Waterloo, had this executive nose, and the old-time Romans who are still remembered for their vigor, executive ability and their success in war, had such shaped noses. Hence the name.

"This same kind of a nose in women is called the 'pioneer nose,' but the qualities are executive, the same as with men, only with the fair sex this large hooked feature is not nearly so attractive.

"The Grecian nose, the type that stands for beauty, is long, straight and comely, well proportioned, and is found in persons of great refinement, those with literary or artistic ability. It frequently shows a splendid balance of mind. John Oliver Hobbes, the well-known English authoress, has this type.

"Everybody knows the 'commercial' nose, more often called the Hebrew nose, for it is a most clearly defined type. It is large, like the 'executive,' but has a hook lower down, about three-quarters of the length from the root or base, and at the end hooks around. It is the trading element that is found always when a person possesses this commercial type.

"The baby or snub nose that so many women have is the undeveloped shape, and while it is often found on a pretty face and is much admired, there is rarely much mental strength behind it, or, in my opinion, it would not be the baby type.

"A celestial nose is the straight pointed one that is called the sweet type, because it denotes gentleness and trustfulness. It is the dependent kind and fills its place beside the executive nose, giving comfort and help, but is never a leader or one that will take any initiative.

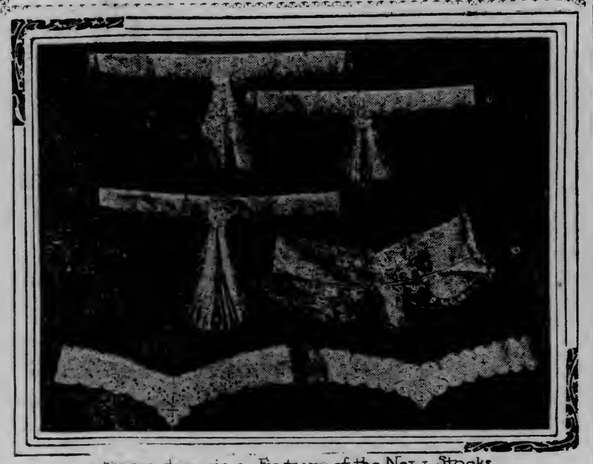
"With these five types there are as many variations and deviations as there are persons. For instance, the long pointed type on Grecian lines invariably shows that the individual is critical, intuitive, quick to suspect things that are not accurate and true to nature. Then there is the cogitative style of nose, with the broad wings and sort of flat bridge, such as Andrew Carnegie possesses. It is the kind that projects new ideas and advances new and practical theories.

"But always beware of the melancholic nose. It is unmistakable, for it is long and at the point dips down on the face. An individual with such a nose never sees the bright side of anytaing, is always gloomy and knows that any undertaking is a failure before it is really started.

"What a common type the impudent nose has become! It is homely, too, being broken in the center, with flaring nostrils. An irregular nose is a sure sign of a person with a bad temper.

"There are certain physical traits that are strongly shown in noses, and by their very formation denote predisposition to certain bronchial and lung troubles. Noses with narrow bridges, such as are seen in the Grecian and celestial types, by their very shape show that it is more difficult for a person to breathe through them than through the wide nostrils of the executive or commercial types, and that this difficulty in breathing naturally prevents the lung power that would be possible to develop with the broad, flaring nostrils."

Dainty Stocks of Linen for Shirt Waist Dresses



Embroidery is a Feature of the New Stocks.

Women still cling to the turnover collars and cuffs, and for a shirt waist dress there is nothing quite so pretty or becoming. To be sure the style of gowns now worn are not many of them made so that the turnovers can be added, but in nearly every woman's wardrobe there is at least one gown for which they are suitable. In the case of elderly women, who habitually wear high necked gowns, they are always in demand, and a woman never looks so neat and well dressed as when wearing one of these dainty sets.

There are several new designs, one of the prettiest showing a deep hem, covered with French knots rather far apart. Others are perfectly plain organdie, hemstitched, and still others are hand embroidered in some one of the many new designs in vogue this season.

Gowns for Use at the Seashore, Mountain or Home

One beauty of the Empire models is that they lend themselves to simple fabrics as well as rich and, therefore, come within the means of every woman. Two models shown in the illustration taken from La Nouvelle Mode will be found most serviceable to include in the summer wardrobe, for wear at the summer hotels, afternoon and evening, or at the mountains, or can be most appropriately copied in inexpensive fabrics for those who expect to remain at home during the summer months.

Rose pink liberty satin composes the first gown, combined with insertions of Alencon lace. A surplice effect is given the bodice by the manner in which the folds of the material are distributed. Fastened with a girdle of the rose pink with a full chou on the left side and with short elbow sleeves with caps of the Alencon lace falling over the shoulder, it completes a most fetching costume.

Made up in either wool or even cotton volle, with insertions of cluny lace, it would be quite as effective, and could be gotten up for probably one-quarter the expense of the satin. In soft white mulle with Valenciennes lace the gown would be a dream, and outside of the time taken to sew the insertion and material together the gown could easily be fashioned at home, for unlike the princess gowns, the Empire do not require the same skill in construction.

A black and white chiffon costume, sun pleated and trimmed with baby Irish lace, comprises the second model. This also is made on surplice, a feature which seems particularly suitable to this style of gown. The material is drawn loosely to the left side, where a deep buckle in French glit finishes it. A narrow bit of gold galoon also finishes the edge of and forms a collar effect about the neck; it also finishes the bottom of the bolero like bodice and trims the short elbow sleeves in the shape of two bands, one at the bottom and the other a few inches above a puff of the baby Irish lace. A guimpe of the latter lace is worn with the gown. Shallow ruffles of the black chiffon finishes the demi-trained skirt.

THE BRIDE'S ATTENDANTS

The Bride and her Attendants

A suggestion for the Traveling Gown

Fewer Bridesmaids the Fashion - Filmy Frocks and Dainty Accessories - Variety in Gowning the Latest Idea - Hats and Headdress.

To be invited to act as bridesmaid is considered a declaration of enduring friendship abroad. There all of the expenses fall upon the bride's family, and the gowns for the occasion are invariably furnished by the bride. She, too, gives her attendants some little souvenir of the occasion, and the latest innovation calls upon her to reward the ushers likewise with some little token of the event. The only thing that the groom furnishes are the bouquet for the bride and—himself!

Here we do things differently, and doubtless better. The bridesmaids usually order their own frocks, after due consultation with the bride as to color, design, etc. The bride presents some article of jewelry to her attendants, and the groom furnishes bouquets, and almost invariably adds some little gift of his own as well.

The long train of girls that formerly was considered necessary to the success of a church wedding is slowly but surely being curtailed. The mystic number seven (it is supposed to denote perfection in all things in the mystic language of Eastern adepts) is now the correct one: that is, six bridesmaids and a maid or matron of honor. Since seven ushers can doubtless fulfil all of the duties assigned to that assistant, this makes for a pretty balance in the march down the aisle after the ceremony. Where it is a home wedding, of course, this is not considered so important, but the church wedding is the choice of most, there being a laudable sentiment that the blessing of the church is a good thing to start off with, fashionable considerations taking a secondary place.

The fad for having all of the bride's attendants gowned alike is already a passe one. It savored too much of uniformity and a lack of ideas. The maid of honor—if there be one—is usually gowned after the same style, but in a different color from the others; and the attendants upon the June bride in this year of grace are more than likely to be gowned all in varying but harmonizing colorings.

Robe gowns are in the highest favor for this purpose. There are charming conceits in mull, batiste, chambray, the sheerest of linens, to say nothing of soft silks and embroidered crepes. One can find practically the same pattern embroideries in all colors, and this brings the gowns all into a certain harmony while allowing a delightful amount of latitude as to tint.

A famous Fifth avenue maker displayed the other day to a favored few the bridal toilet and the attendants' gowns that are to figure at a prominent Southern wedding. The bride chose a soft chiffon satin brocade through which glintings of silver threads gleamed in a soft and subdued manner that, nevertheless, suggested a costly richness. Her maid of honor wears a white embroidered crepe de chine—the real Chinese crepe and hand work—while the four bridesmaids are gowned, respectively, in the same material in pale blue, pale yellow, a faint rose tint and the softest willow green imaginable. Big leghorn hats loaded with plumes of the coloring of the gown are to be worn, and fluffy white chiffon parasols with long Directoire handles have each a huge bow of ribbon posed flat against the chiffon ruffles and another on the long handle, each the tint of the gown they match.

Empire and Directoire gowns are vastly favored for the bridesmaids, not only for their picturesqueness, but likewise for the opportunities for originality that they afford. One bride has painted the daintiest parasols and sashes to match for her train, the sashes to be tied loosely beneath the bust of the empire gown, the long painted ends falling to the hem, and a similar sash—of narrower width, of course—tied to the long handle of the painted parasol.

The lingerie gown has been taken up enthusiastically for the followers of the bride; and, indeed, instances are not lacking, where the bride herself has ordered the costliest of those none too inexpensive conceits to wear at her wedding. There is simply no limit to what one can spend on this seemingly simple item: and on the other hand, there is hardly any other type of gown that shows up each touch of elaboration to such perfection. Plain white frocks with sashes, shoulder knots—those a recent adoption—and other trimmings in a delicate color, are in vogue for country weddings; and Marie Antoinette baskets filled with country blossoms carry out the idea of simplicity that is supposed to attend the country wedding.

The element of the picturesque is supposed to enter into the gowning of the bridesmaids, since convention has done so much to limit the opportunities of the bride herself in this direction. The coming vogue of Louis and Directoire coats topping skirts of silk or lace or chiffon affords delightful chance for picturesque gowning, the coats being usually in Dresden printed silk, moire or one of the new Pekin stripes; and the skirt in a solid color, unrelieved by stripe or pattern.

Hats are usually of the picturesque order, although more than one June bride will have her attendants wear smart knots of tulle and ribbon, with an upstanding ostrich tip at the side.

Neck ruches of malinette—that novel malines that is absolutely damp and shower proof, and for which we have waited so long—with tiny little flowers and loops of ribbon tucked into their folds, make a charming appearance with a summery toilette; and there are some charming parasols berushed and beruffled with this filmy material—which looks the height of extravagance, so perishable does it appear—which will be hailed with joy by their lucky possessors.

Indeed, even for the bride's wear the dressmakers are advocating this novel fabric; for if the atmosphere be at all damp or humid the usual malines is wont to assume a limp and bedraggled appearance, although its first appearance may be but a few minutes previous.

The Bride and Her Attendants.

While there is evident in some quarters recently a return to the stiff white satin and brocades of former days, with quantities of real laces for trimming, the more girlish brides are emphatically declaring their preference for the soft chiffons, crepes de chine, embroidered silk mull and other filmy materials that harmonize so well with their slender and youthful appearance. The stiff white satin is much too trying to be lightly chosen for the one moment in all of her life when the necessity of looking her very best is imperative. The bride in the picture is most becomingly gowned in one of those soft chiffon satins that fall into such alluring godets and folds; and on which the exquisitely fine Irish crochet shows up to the utmost advantage. The gown follows the favored princesse mode—ever a fancy of brides—the pliable material taking kindly to the folds, which narrow upon the corsage, spread out in the skirt to fan plerts of goodly size. The chemisette is of finest Venetian rose point, backed with sheer chiffon and the deep ceinture of Irish crochet is cleverly raised in a deep upward point in the back, sloped considerably to the front, to be carried down the center in an unbroken line, widening out most becomingly at the foot. The veil is arranged in a Marie Antoinette bow on the top of the coiffure, caught with a coronet of orange blossoms, and allowed to fall in full and free folds clear to the hem of the train, thus adding both height and dignity to the central figure of the ceremony.

The bridesmaids are gowned, respectively, in the palest yellow for the maid of honor, and in rose pink for the other attendant. Both gowns are made of the beautiful chiffon veiling, all silk, as sheer as chiffon, with a trifle more body. They are "robe" patterns, with embroidery for the blouse, bolero sleeve and flouncings for the skirts. Lace blouses are worn beneath, the lace showing through the slashes of the veiling blouse, and on the sleeve, while the chapeaux are of white crin, prettily undulated as to brim and trimmed with ostrich plumes to accord with the frocks.

A summer-time sailor

Crowns of the Princesse Mode.

The latest and correct bouquet

Trimmings on and around the waistline are in the highest vogue, and this fact is taken advantage of to simulate the princesse effect where the gown is really constructed in two pieces.

Some exquisite models in real laces have recently declared themselves, and where expense is no object nothing more beautiful than one of those robes can be chosen. The tradition of handing down a wedding gown as a family possession is enhanced when the bride is lucky enough to be wedded in one of the real laces, all handmade, and who knows what beautiful thoughts, what sentiment, and oftentimes a prayer are wrought into the threads of the design by the maker, as her bobbins fly over the pillow upon which the pattern is made.

These real lace productions are mounted over chiffon, and the latest conceit has this chiffon sun-pleated. White liberty satin is the usual foundation, although some of the best makers are using plain white taffetas veiled with mousseline de sole.

Where the bride is tall—and our present generation of girls scale a goodly few more inches than their mothers and grandmothers did—some narrow ruffles are sometimes introduced as a foot trimming, but otherwise every effort is directed to securing length of line and dignity in the bridal gown.

Recent importations in wedding gowns show some innovations in the matter of trim and construction. One intended for a bride who tops the groom-to-be by a few inches is made with an extremely long train. The foundation of white taffetas shows a succession of overlapping ruffles of silk, each shirred over a featherbone cording and the same slight stiffening run into the hem of each ruffle in lieu of the usual pinking. Each ruffle is covered with one of plisse mousseline de sole, put on with a shirred beading, and the train of soft white satin is not caught to the foundation at any point between the side seams. When the wearer moves the train shifts ever so slightly and discloses those fluffy ruffles beneath, in which little bunches of artificial orange blossoms and lilies-of-the-valley are caught at intervals.

Evening weddings are altogether out of favor. In England the ceremony must be performed before noon, else it is not considered legal. On this side of the water the hour of 3 or 4 in the afternoon has come to be considered the most fashionable, as it is assuredly the most convenient. Being a daylight function, a decollete tage and jewels are decidedly out of place, but the top part of the gown is usually of lace, mounted over chiffon, but otherwise left unlined. The vogue of half sleeves, too, adds to the pretty effect, and such jewels as are worn are usually just a string of pearls, and, perhaps, a star or crescent wherewith to catch the coronal of orange blossoms that crown the long veil.

The oldtime method of draping the veil over the face is never observed any more. The later style calls for a coronal of the tulle, with orange blossoms interwoven, on the top of the coiffure, and long, straight folds dependent from there clear to the hem of the train. Shorter veils were in use last season abroad, many of them coming no farther than the waistline, but the effect was voted skimpy and altogether lacking in the graceful lines that the full length veil affords.

Veils of real lace are cherished heirlooms in some families, and they are being brought out again to the light of day now that that draping over the face is omitted. Where the lace is light in pattern they are delightfully effective; but, nevertheless, the roomy and filmy folds of tulle are usually far more becoming to the youthful beauty of the bride.

As for the question of flowers, there is quite a discussion. Recent brides abroad, some of them members of royal houses, have preferred to carry prayer books bound in exquisitely wrought covers. Ivory, silver, brocade, vellum—all elaborated in the costliest fashion—have been used for bindings, and the makers inserted in the place of the ritual of pure

The "shower" bouquet has practically displaced all others, and it is assuredly the prettiest thing imaginable—when it is correctly carried out. The exuberance of flowers and streamers that have been used by some trends more than a little to over-display, and the slight restraint that good taste and a sense of proportion impose are to be noted in what the best of New York's florists are making up for such occasions. The bouquet is carried on the left arm in the bend of the elbow, and the small prayerbook clasped in the hand. When the ceremony is about to commence the maid of honor takes the bouquet and the bride holds the book in both hands, the glove having already been removed. Many recent brides have gone to the altar without gloves, so that the pause in the ceremony necessitated by its removal for the placing of the ring is thus avoided and the hands are free for the signing of the registry in the vestry afterwards. To some the bare hands in conjunction with the elaborate gown seem to leave something lacking, and here the long mitt of real lace comes in charmingly, since it covers the hands and arms and still leaves the fingers absolutely free.

HAIL TO THE BRIDE!

The June Bride Takes Possession of the Scene-Exquisite Bridal Toilettes - Softly Draping Material and Real Laces the Thing.

The bride of the merry month of June is the center of attraction, and her gifts, her gowns, her bridesmaids and her honeymoon plans form almost the sole topic of conversation wherever two or three of her friends are gathered together.

Old-fashioned people used to declare that a woman's name should appear in the public prints—as the phrase used to run—but three times in her life, to wit, when she was born, when she married and when she died.

Today, in this day and era of personal journalism, not to have one's name in the papers is to declare one's self of no social importance whatsoever, and the prospective bride and her plans are discussed as freely in the columns of the newspapers as in the bosom of her family.

Like so many other traditions, the use of a stiff white satin for the bridal gown is now altogether passe. Occasionally one hears of some sentimental girl who orders one such, usually to please an elderly relative, one suspects, but by far the greater number are made of softly falling satins, of chiffons, silk, mulls, some of the new chiffon brocades or the exquisitely embroidered Chinese crepes.

The princesse gown has long been in high esteem for wedding purposes, and it must be confessed that its recent popularity offers no drawback to its use in this connection.

One thing, however, must be impressed upon the dressmaker by the bride who can see all sides of the ceremony, and that is that the fastening of the gown must not be down the center of the back. Only too often the fact is lost sight of that, for the entire ceremony, the bride presents her back to the congregation assembled, and no matter how thickly draped the veil of filmy tulle or of costly lace may be, an evident fastening or lacing of the gown down the back detracts much from its success.

The perfectly plain princesse gown is never turned out nowadays by any dressmaker with claims to modishness. The lining is, of course, plain and sheath-fitted, but over this the soft folds of chiffon, mousseline, brocade or what not that makes the gown are cleverly draped.

Wedding Superstitions

The old rhyme that had to do with the days of the week still holds considerable power in the choice of the wedding day in some districts. In Scotland one seldom hears of a Saturday wedding, while in both France and Ireland Sunday is the favorite day. The Romans considered Wednesday the luckiest of the week, and the old rhyme referred to carries out the same idea. It runs:

"Monday for health,
Tuesday for wealth,
Wednesday the best day of all;
Thursday for crosses,
Friday for losses,
And Saturday no luck at all!"

Just what luck followed Sunday's bride tradition sayeth not.

A January bride will be a good housekeeper, good-tempered and thrifty.

A February bride will prove an affectionate wife and a good mother.

A March bride will turn out a frivolous chatterbox, given to mischief-making and quarreling.

An April bride will be inconstant; not very intelligent, but fairly good-looking.

A May bride is handsome, amiable and likely to make others happy.

A June bride will be sunny-tempered, impetuous and generous.

A July bride is likely to prove quick-tempered, though ready to forgive and forget.

An August bride is usually practical, clever and a good housekeeper.

A September bride is said to be affable, discreet and well liked by all.

An October bride will be pretty, coquettish, loving, but intensely jealous.

A November bride is liberal and kind, but of a wild disposition.

A December bride is extravagant, fond of novelty and entertaining.

The old superstitions anent the wedding gown have been rhymed to suit almost every country and every class of wearer. The rhyme announces:

"Married in white, you've chosen all right.
Married in blue, you will be true.
Married in yellow, ashamed of the fellow.
Married in green, ashamed to be seen.
Married in gray, you'll live far away.
Married in brown, you'll live in the town.
Married in red, you'll wish yourself dead.
Married in black, for me you'll lack."

AT THE LYCEUM

Pictures of San Francisco Earthquake and Fire to be Shown Tuesday and Wednesday Evenings.

Moving pictures of the San Francisco earthquake and fire, for which Lou M. Houseman is sponsor, will be given at the Lyceum, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings, and Wednesday afternoon, Decoration day.

These are said to be the most realistic, the most complete and the most expensive of the films which are being exhibited all over the country just at present, showing the devastated city. These pictures are the property of the 'Frisco Picture company, and were taken right on the spot, at the time of the disaster, which laid low careless, beautiful, interesting, San Francisco.

The cameras depicted the scenes just as they were, and nothing has been lost in making the films. They show the burning of the city, the falling of tall buildings, the demolition of the famous Chinatown, the shooting of looters, and the mad rush for safety made by thousands of panic-stricken people.

It is remarkable that theater-goers are able to sit comfortably in a theater and witness the wrecking and burning of a metropolis, without stirring. The pictures are said to be so distinct and clear-cut that they make lasting impressions on the mind, and bring home to the auditors the awfulness of the experience which San Francisco had.

The views are shown in proper sequence. The first pictures were taken after the earthquake's first big shock, and the course of events after that was followed with powerful unerring cameras. They show the fire when it was comparatively insignificant, and its growth into a conflagration that caused the loss of almost $300,000,000. The views also show the refugees in the parks, and the wonderful relief work that was carried on in the stricken city.

These pictures cost a fortune in themselves, and are exhibited only under Mr. Houseman's direction.

THE NEW BIJOU

Vaudeville Program for Coming Week, Headed by Edith Donby and Company in the Playlet "Her Last Chance."

The Bijou offers another excellent vaudeville program for the coming week. The program includes many well known and recognized artists, headed by Edith Donby and her company who present the beautiful playlet, "Her Last Chance." Miss Donby is supported by clever talent and will no doubt be a big hit here, as in other cities.

A European novelty will be seen in Goto, the Japanese juggler, who came recently from the Far East and who offers many new stunts.

The Merritt sisters, two charming singers and dancers will be one of the leading features. They introduce the latest popular song hits and some expert dancing.

A special attraction will be Robert Athon and Rita Dawn, who present the pretty one-act comedy, "Mr. Seal of North Carolina." It tells a story of the Civil war in which there is some clever acting and excellent situations.

Armando brothers, Arabian acrobats and equilibrists, will be the gymnastic feature.

Morey Long will sing the new hit "Starlight," illustrated with beautiful colored views. The moving pictures will be all new, showing the latest subjects out, entitled "The Straw Ride" and "The Law of Pardon," which is said to be one of the best pictures ever produced.

Matinees will be given daily at 2:45. The evening performances begin at 8 and 9:30. There will be a special school children's matinee Saturday and there will be two performances tomorrow, at 2:30 and 8.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Lily Langtry and Mrs. James Brown Potter to Go on American Vaudeville Stage---The Breakdown of Thomas Q. Seabrooke.

New York, May 26.—Lily Langtry and Mrs. James Brown Potter will be seen on the vaudeville stage here in the fall, under contract with Percy G. Williams.

Not only these but the vaudeville manager has been tempting other prominent artists to join his list of "headliners." He has made an offer to Miss Ellen Terry to come to America again and to Mr. and Mrs. Kendal.

Chevalier has signed with Mr. Williams to return once more, and Gransby Williams, an English music hall artist, well known in London, but who never has been seen here, is coming over next season to appear in the Williams theaters.

Mrs. Langtry will first appear at the Colonial theatre, opening November 19. She has selected for her use a sketch employing three people, but the title or character she will play has not been announced. Her engagement is for six weeks and she will be seen at the Colonial and Alhambra here and the Orpheum in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Potter's contract calls for her appearance at the Colonial October 15 and is also for a six weeks' engagement. The sketch she will use is "Paglliacci," in which she appeared in London.

The sudden breakdown of Thomas Q. Seabrooke, the well-known comedian, as told in dispatches from New York last week, were read with regret by the many friends of the actor. Seabrooke, it appears, had been suffering for some time from insomnia, and after a restless night at a hotel in New York City he startled the patrons of the place by appearing in the lobby dressed only in his pajamas and a bath robe. A physician was hastly summoned, and after working with the player for some time recommended his removal to Bellevue hospital. He rallied there after a brief treatment, and late Thursday was able to accompany his wife to his summer home at Rye, N. Y. Seabrooke had been in a highly nervous state for some time. The latest word is that after his arrival at his home he quieted down materially and that he was recovering nicely. Overwork connected with hard rehearsals of a part he was to play in the new musical piece, "The Alcalde," and the fact that he had been unable to sleep for several nights are attributed as causes of his release. He will take a long rest this summer, and his friends do not fear any further difficulties.

Seabrooke has been before the public for the past twenty years and has been a star in comic opera and musical comedy most of that time. He is one of the best known of this class of comedians in America.

William Faversham has been on the sick list since "The Squaw Man" went on tour, his part being played acceptably during his absence by W. S. Hart, who was a prominent member of the supporting company when the play was presented in this city. Faversham is reported to have been a victim of diphtheretic tonsilitis, but has recovered nicely, and soon sails for a vacation at his country home in England.

The success of the present company playing "The Social Whirl" at the Casino theater in New York has prompted the managers Shubert to make the organization a permanent one. It will be known as the Casino company, and the present idea is to keep intact, playing various musical productions in the home theater the season through.

Marie Dressler retired from Joe Weber's company in New York at the end of this week. It is given out that the buxom Marie will undergo an operation, but it is whispered that differences between the comedienne and her manager may stand in the way of her appearing in Weber's theater again. The latter holds a contract for another season with Miss Dressler, and the squabble will likely get into the courts before it is settled.

S. Z. Poli, who controls a number of vaudeville theaters in New Jersey and New England cities, last week joined the new Keith-Proctor combination for ten years. By the terms of the deal the Poli houses will operate with the new circuit in complete harmony as to booking and handling acts for the weekly program. It is rumored that Weber and Rush and Percy Williams are other prominent vaudeville theater men who will join the new combination.

The stories of the new vaudeville syndicate revive the rumors that Klaw and Erlanger are looking toward that field with anxious eyes. For a time it was said that the big syndicate promoters were dickering with several other smaller combinations with a view of forming one big company, with a capital of $0,000,000. That deal is now off. The latest is that Klaw and Erlanger and the interests they represent may set about to build up an independent vaudeville circuit throughout the country, and their agents are now said to be looking over the various fields with a view of securing suitable sites for houses to eb added to this new chain.

Louise Dresser, well known in vaudeville is the latest addition to the all-star company Lew Fields is organizing for his Herald Square theater engagement in New York. It is also reported that Fields has made several overtures to Joe Welch, the impersonator of East Side Hebrew characters, and that Welch will likely join the Fields company. Welch has been coming to the front rapidly since David Warfield retired from this field, and both in vaudeville and as the head of his own company he has made good. His addition to the Fields company would be a good one.

Hattie Williams ended her long engagement with Sam Bernard last week and sailed for Europe for a short vacation. Early in August she will return to this country to take up rehearsals of the new musical comedy in which she is to star next season.

De Wolf Hopper finds one thorn in the pleasure he has in the success of his present starring medium, "Happyland." The tall comedian some time ago arranged for an automobile trip through the British isles this summer and, believing that this season would end about the last week in May, had expected to sail on June 2. But the demand for "Happyland" in the metropolis is such that it is scheduled for an indefinite run at the Majestic theater. In fact the Ranken-De Koven comic opera is expected to remain at the playhouse the entire summer. Therefore Mr. Hopper will do most of his automobiling between the theater and his estate at Douglas Manor, Long Island.

Adele Ritchie has been voted the most popular actress now playing in New York. The competition was held at the great advertising show last week at Madison Square garden. The prima donna of "The Social Whirl" received 10,670 votes. Marie Dressler came second with 9,050 votes. The next in line were Marguerite Clark of De Wolf Hopper's "Happyland" company; Maude Adams, Blanche Bates and Lillian Russell. As winner of the contest, Miss Ritchie was given an English bull pup—a splendid specimen of his ugly kind. This prize brings Miss Ritchie's kennel of canine pets up to four in number.

Arnold Daly has received the Bernard Shaw playlet, "How He Lied to Her Husband," presenting it as a curtain raiser to the brilliant Irish dramatist's satirical comedy, "Arms and the Man." "How He Lied to Her Husband," which is Mr. Shaw's satire on the audiences who took "Candida" seriously, was written especially for Mr. Daly. The young star has been studying "Hamlet" for several years and intends appearing in the title role of the great tragedy at the end of next season.

Sarah Bernhardt is not yet ready to retire. This remarkable woman's vitality and love of work will not let her fall into inactivity for at least another season—despite her advancing years. A tour of Australia is now being arranged for her. After her conquest of the Antipodes, who knows but what she may say farewell to the United States again? This much is certain: If the divine Sarah decides to return once more, the American stage and the theater-going public will be the gainer.

Preparations for E. H. Sothern's and Julia Marlowe's production of "Joan of Arc," which is to be made next season under the direction of the Messrs. Shubert are already under way. It will be one of the most elaborate ever undertaken by these stars and this management, demanding expenditure of several months of effort and many thousands of dollars. Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe are soon to give a Shakespearian carnival at the Academy of Music, New York, presenting in succession all the plays of the Bard of Avon embraced by their repertoire.

Fascinating actresses, like political rulers, are subject to annoyance by cranks. Margaret Anglin had an exciting experience last week at the stage door of the Shubert theater in Brooklyn. A persistent admirer, who also happens to be the author of the "greatest play in the world," tried to force his attentions upon the star of "Zira" and to insist that, then and there, she read his play. His attitude suggesting violence, Miss Anglin had the stage doorman detain him while her business manager called a policeman. At the station house, the man gave the name of Harry Friend. Since last October until his arrest, Miss Anglin has received scores of letters from him and night after night she saw him at the stage entrance of theaters where she was playing. Considering him harmless until the Brooklyn episode, Miss Anglin simply ignored him.

"Mexicana," like "The Earl and the Girl," "Happyland" and "Fantana," is proving to be what is known in theatrical parlance as a "repeater." This comic opera, with its splendid cast, including Christie MacDonald, Louis Harrison and Joseph Herbert, has been booked solidly over the Shubert circuit again for next season, and the longest periods reserved for it are in the cities where it was introduced this season.

Harry Bulger, the unique comedian, who will be featured by Henry W. Savage in a new musical fantasy by John Kendrick Bangs, Vincent P. Bryan and Manuel Klein, which will be produced in Boston at the Tremont theater shortly, is given to taking long walks through the upper parts of New York City. The other day while he was going through a stretch of woods that abound around Van Cortland park it began to rain and Bulger stood under one of the trees and before he was there long two laborers who were employed on the railroad near by joined him, one was a Swede the other an Irishman. It rained violently. The tree for about fifteen minutes made good refuge, then it began to leak. The cold raindrops began to fall down the Irishman's neck, and he began to complain. "Oh, never mind," said the Swede, "there are plenty of trees. As soon as this one is wet through, we'll ga bay another wan."

Joseph M. Sparks, who plays "Jerry McCarter" in Jesse Lynch Williams' play of American newspaper life, "The Stolen Story," now at the Tremont theater, Boston, Mass., tells the following story:

"In a small town in Pennsylvania there lives a woman preacher. One Sunday afternoon she heard a timid knock at the parsonage door. She answered it herself, and found a bashful young German standing on the step. He was a stranger, but the minister greeted him pleasantly, and asked him what he wanted.

"'Dey say der minister lifed in dis house, hey?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Yess? Vell, I want to git marriet.'

"'All right; I can marry you.'

"Whereupon the German jammed his hat on his head, turned and fled down the walk.

"'You gits no chance mit me!' he called back. 'I haf got me a girl alreaty.'"

A most interesting chapter in the annals of grand opera history is afforded by the recent cross-continent trip of the English Grand Opera company, which terminated at Rochester last week. Never before has an itinerary of this length been planned for a company of such magnitude, and no small amount of daring was necessary to carry it out; but the well known Savage "grit" has made this tour the most remarkably successful ever known for an organization of this character. Since the brilliant opera season in Boston of two weeks at the Tremont theater, over eighty cities, from Northeastern to Northwestern Canada, and from the South to the West and Central United States, have been visited, and over 16,000 miles of territory covered. Six superb productions and 150 artists, with full grand opera orchestra, have made the services of two special trains necessary. The expense of such an enterprise is of course enormous, and the mere item of railroad fares would suffice to pay the full expenses of many a small touring company. Throughout the Northwest, where grand opera partakes of the attributes of a novelty, the most brilliant triumphs were scored, cities as Portland, Or., Seattle, Vancouver, Tacoma, Spokane and Winnipeg lavishing an enthusiastic welcome upon the visiting songbirds, and have bidden them a hearty "Bon Voyage," and left all their latchstrings out for a return visit next season. A superb staff of skilled workmen, especially trained and systematized for the handling of the great mass of properties, scenery, wardrobes and electrical effects—a complete switchboard and connections being carried by the company, and the mechanical and artistic strength of the big show have almost been placed in rivalry. Ridiculous stage mishaps are unknown, and as complete and satisfying a performance of any opera is given in the far West as in the most exacting and critical of Eastern cities.

The operas in the company's repertory the present season with the number of performances given of each are as follows: "Aida," 15; "Lohengrin," 41; "Rigoletto," 31; "La Boheme," 25; "Tannhauser," 53; "Faust," 51; "Valkyrie," 50.

It was during the rehearsal of the new DeKoven, Ranken and Stange opera, "The Student King," at the Garden theater, the other day that Raymond Hitchcock, who plays "Rudolph" King of Bohemia, in the production, had a rather peculiar experience. He was standing at one side of the stage with an unlighted cigar in his mouth, when an officious fireman who was on a tour of inspection stepped up to him and said:

"Pardon me, but unless you stop smoking I will have to exclude you from this building."

"Sir," replied Hitchcock, "you may note that I am not smoking. This cigar is not lit. To have a cigar is not necessarily to smoke. Here, I have others in my pocket. I am guilty on three counts simply because I have three cigars. I have shoes on my feet, yet you would hardly decide from that, that I had walked to the theater, would you?"

The guardian of the fire laws was nonplussed a second, but he came to all right.

"No," he replied, "and neither would I want to testify that you rode over just because you have wheels."

BUFFALO BILL IN ITALY

Col. Cody Invades the Eternal City---Barbarian Invasion and Past Glories Recalled---Cowboys at St. Peters and Indians at the Vatican.

Rome, May 26.—The Roman journals had settled themselves down to the quiet recording of Lenten affairs; the world of society had turned from balls to teas; the world of politics, having assisted at the downfall of a ministry, was in the calmness of the beginning of a new ministry; neither the Simplon tunnel nor the Milan exposition was ready to be written up; so there was little to record. Suddenly there came the news that Il Selvaggio Occidentale di Guglielmino Buffalo was descending into Italy.

The reporters were aroused from their lethargy, the small boys rejoiced, and Rome prepared for the event. The peaceful guardians of Italian duties on the frontier, seeing these trains full of wild men, Indians and Cossacks, and with them the full equipment of war horses, etc., thought the barbarians had come again.

Memories of stories told in their youth come to their frightened minds; stories of Hannibal, who with his army of invaders crossed the Alps at this very spot; stories of Huns and Goths, and even of modern French troops. All these memories caused the men who wave the white cross of Savoy to shudder with fear and to demand credentials of this horde of strangers. This rumor of a barbaric host was denied later, and the detention of Il Buffalo at the frontier was explained by the illness of his horses and the necessary examination by veterinary surgeons; but we like to believe the barbarian story.

Most cities prepare for a circus or a wild West show with much brilliant advertising; by flaming posters, by extravagant newspaper notices. It is not so in Rome; all things which come to her must have a horizontal foundation and be of the stuff of which she has approved in centuries gone by.

One mild poster was placed on some Roman walls, with Il Buffalo in the center supported by a few Cossacks and a few Indians, which latter the Romans adore by the name of Pelli Rosse. The papers published historical accounts of the games and equestrian sports which, from the sixteenth and seventeenth century down to the present day, have delighted the Romans.

These games, to be sure, were held in the coliseum or under the shelter of Monte Testaccio, or in the Piazza di Spagna, the Piazza del Populo, or the Piazza delle Terme. A Pamphill carried off the honors in 1605, a Rospigliosi in the latter part of the seventeenth century, while the Duke Sforza Cesarini and the Marchese Massimi won the contests in 1747 in the Piazza Barberini. In 1770, in an amphitheater constructed in the wonderful grounds of the Villa Ludovisi, now a modern quarter of stucco hotels and villinos, the Prince Don Gaetano Boncompagni Ludovisi held a festa long to be remembered in history, where cardinals as well as princes formed an admiring audience.

Since 1770 there has been little in the way of equestrian shows except those to which the general public are not admitted, the biennial exhibition at Tor di Quinto, where the Italian cavalry perform feats at which even the Cossacks would look with awe. Thus were all the Romans reminded of their days of former grandeur; thus were the nobles reminded of their traditional love of horses, and thus was the church reminded that equestrian shows in Lent were of the utmost benefit to the clergy.

At half past 11 of the morning when Il Buffalo came to town, a luncheon to the Roman press took place in the little restaurant near the station, the host being the secretary of Buffalo Bill. The story of his life and the life of all his friends and the audacity and the bravery of Colonello Cody, with the eating of a few metres of spaghetti, occupied the company until the train came. Then with one accord they rushed to the station.

The rain fell persistently, but nothing dampened the ardor of the onlookers. The luncheon guests had the post of honor and their easy going Italian souls were stirred within them as they saw the wonderful precision and marvelous rapidity and, above all, the silence with which the men unloaded the cars, arranged the wagons, harnessed the horses and filled each wagon with its appointed load. Everything was accomplished according to the methods of the American army, and the Italians, slow-moving and voluble in all they do, looked on in deep amazement.

Of all the "most ardous riders" the Indians won the greatest approval. They were sympatica, as my cab driver told me the other day when we met Buffalo Bill and an Indian chief on their way to the Vatican. Magnificent specimens of manhood we Americans may think them, but never, never, "sympatica."

Outside the station in the rain waited the Italian small boy, as eager as his American cousin, only more quiet, clinging to the marble pillars of some church, or gazing from the foot of the Servian wall, that bit of wall which has watched the arrival of all Rome's guests, whether they were invited or uninvited. The Yankees, their coat collars turned up, their derbies over their eyes, drove the superb horses, and looked somewhat contemptuously at the "dagoes" by the street corners and on the sidewalk.

The men on the street corners, with their capes crossed over the left shoulder, their broad hats over their eyes, or the drivers of the water carts, standing like charioteers on their little two-wheeled vehicles, looked also somewhat contemptuously at the Yankees. "Those men could drive; yes, but were they not savages until a cousin Spaniard discovered them, while they, the watchers, were Romani of Rome; could there be anything greater?"

The reporters, seeing the calvacade well under way, hastened to the Hotel Continental to pay their respects to Il Buffalo. "Time had not changed the elegance of his figure or altered the pure lines of his aristocratic face—he had conserved the complete elasticity of his limbs, had guarded his eagle eye an dhis firm pulse which had won him renown in the field and on horseback." Thus the Roman public learned of Buffalo Bill.

The next day at 11—the opening performance was at 2:30—crowds began their slow march to the field where in days long gone by the foreign legions which formed the Praetorian guard had had their camp, and where now Il Selvaggio Occidentale was to take place. Roman cabs, driving here, there and everywhere, pedestrians of every rank in life, and carriages of prince and princess, duke and duchess, the descendants of the Pamphill, the Massimi, the Rospigliosi, the Sforza Casarini, the Boncompagni-Luddovisi, the living representatives of all Mr. Crawford's novels, the Orsini, and the Colonna, all were going to Buffalo Bill.

The aristocracy of Rome and the democracy of Rome joined hands in honor of America with all the strangers sojourning in Rome. Each nation saw something to admire, but the Americans who were there saw the uniform of their own country's army, saw the waving folds of "Old Glory," and heard the American music, and a longing came into their hearts, be they patriots or only dwellers for a day, a longing for their own land.

The diplomatic corps of every country accredited to Rome was represented. Royalty came and the little children of royalty had a performance all to themselves. Our friends the reporters, were there in force and rendered such charming accounts in their graceful Italian that those of us who read them felt that we had been part of a medieval tournament.

The wondertul machine-like order of everything, the quiet, especially at meal times, astonished the Italians who lunched with Buffalo Bill. How could so many people work so quietly and so quickly, and how could so many nations dwell together in unity? Was it because no wine was allowed on the table? Was it on account of the American colazione of "beefsteak, ham and eggs and most savory butter cakes, which were rendered deliciously sweet by an application of no less exquisite marmalade?"

"Our Latin excitableness," said the Italians, "cannot understand how so many persons of such widely differing races, where all only speak a single official tongue, the English, can thus be united and controlled. Possibly it depends on the peculiar gentleness of inflection which the English idiom possesses, spoken only by the Americans." Thus our often maligned tongue was at last justified.

The Italian public behaved with discretion and politeness; only once did they transgress. When the Cossacks appeared at the first performance they were loudly hissed.

"Naturally," said the papers, "the Roman public saw in this division of Russian cavalry the symbol of autocracy and the record of the violent oppression exerted by these brutal soldiers on the helpless throng, and so the Romans abandoned themselves to the delight of the hiss.

"They were wrong; all these Russians in the company of Il Buffalo are natives of Georgia, for the most part political refugees, and are to be honored. The hisses of the Roman public had lacerated the feelings of the Cossacks. They wore dresses, it is true, in the uniform of a Cossack, but of a Cossack who is not a wild animal. May the Romans make up to the Cossacks the insult they have offered them."

The Romans did, by applauding them at each ensuing performance. The little restaurant, near the station, which provided the luncheon for the press and the secretary of Buffalo Bill, gave a festa to the Cossacks; when they offered them wine, sang the revolutionary hymns of Russia and Italy, and drank to eternal brotherhood and liberty to all subjects of the czar. So we presume the lacerated feelings of the Cossacks were soothed.

Rain fell steadily during all the time that Il Buffalo was with us. Rome looked gray and old, her face lined with marks of her life's history. Proudly through her little streets walked the various members of Colonello Cody's family, seeing the sights of Rome. Negroes mingled with the loungers on the Pincio, cowboys, Baedekers in hand, stood awed in the great Basilica of St. Peter's, whose material greatness made them think of the vastness of the prairies, whence they had wandered to this faraway Rome. The Indians, the tallest, firm, strong stride learned in the forests, like veritable conquerors though conquered, walked through the streets of the city.

They bowed before the symbol of the cross in all the churches, for in their own tradition, as woven in their rugs, is the most superb looking of all, with a cross. What its meaning is to them no one knows, but it has a sacred significance. They gazed with awe and surprise at the statues in the Vatican collection, and when they turned again toward the living man, did their little grunt mean, "had the white man been as these gods, then we would have worshipped them; but weak and feeble as they are, could we think of them otherwise than with contempt?"

I wonder what they thought of the Raphael staze and the Sistine chapel? They were there, many of them, studying the frescoes with the same intentness they would give to searching out a trail in the forest. Did they think of Hiawatha, laughing water, as they passed the fountains of Rome?

Some of them threw coppers into the Trevi, American coppers with their own image stamped on the coin. Here in this mother city of the world, this Roma Aeterna, the presence of this race, so inscrutable, so unfathomable, yet of so royal a mien, makes one feel minded that one of the race of barbarians, of whose greatness we have read, had come again to Italy.

Buffalo Bill has gone. He has folded his tents, and with his Indians, his Cossacks, his cowboys, his horses and his implements, has departed for the hill towns. His posters are replaced by announcements of the next gala night at the opera.

The memory of the American agility and quietness rests with the Italian reporter. The joy of the tournament rests with the Italian small boy, who plays a Il Selvaggio Occidenale in all the streets. The memory of the Indian in hsi stately grandeur stays with all who have seen him; and we shall return once more to our study of the barbarian invasion with fresh vigor.

The journals alone feel the reaction; they have returned to the accounts of the quiet life of teas and a new ministry.

MARVEL OF THE WARREN DISTRICT

battery of boilers is being pushed at the utmost speed. It is probable that the pumps will be in operation within the next three weeks.

A station is being cut in the 1,000-foot level to accommodate the pumps, which have been on the ground for several weeks. Six water columns have been put in and one steam column, and workmen were busy this week laying the steam pipe to a connection with the boilers.

The new battery of boilers, which will be made necessary by the installment of the pumps and the large hoist which will shortly be put in place, are four in number and exactly treble the steam capacity of the plant. They have been placed for several weeks, but have not yet been steamed, the water connection not having yet been made. Workmen are now putting in the boiler feeds and connecting them with the water supply.

The two pumps that are bing installed are not of sufficient capacity to handle the water at the depth at which they have been placed, and they will within the next two months be replaced by larger pumps, which has been ordered for some time and which are now on the road.

Work on the oil pipe for the Saginaw mine is being pushed and it will probably be completed within the next week. The tank which will furnish the local supply for the Saginaw boilers has already been completed with the exception of the top and it will be ready to receive the oil as soon as the pipe line is ready to deliver it.

The line will tap the four big storage tanks of the Junction mine and these tanks will furnish it its supply. The oil can be handled from the Junction tanks to the Saginaw tank entirely by gravity pressure.

The new battery of boilers at this mine are at the present time being set and it will probably be ready to fire up within the next two weeks. It is being fitted for oil burners and when it is placed in commission the old battery of boilers will be cut out until they can be fitted for oil.

It is probable that a month or more will elapse before the entire string of boilers at this mine are ready to be fired by oil.

Considerable diamond drill work is being done on the American and Warren properties, and it is said that very encouraging formations are being brought up daily.

The striking of ore in the Saginaw and Warren properties will mean much to this district, extending as it will the proven copper area and disproving the estimates that have been placed upon ground that far east.

CANANEA-DULUTH LOOKING WELL

Bisbee, Ariz., May 26.—Dan McMillan, superintendent of the Cobre Granite mine of the Greene syndicate, and also superintendent of the Cananea-Duluth, arrived in town a few days ago from Cananea for a brief stay on business.

Mr. McMillan said, when asked about the Cananea-Duluth, that the property was making what he considered splendid progress and that he believed that later developments there would revolutionize things in the camp. The latter is making good headway all along the line.

At the No. 2 shaft of the Cananea-Duluth the gallows frame has been erected and as soon as the balance of the machinery for the hoist arrives it will be put in position and sinking resumed from the depth of 135 feet which has been attained. The shaft has ore from the eighty-foot level, some of it running very high.

In the No. 1 shaft they have a depth of 140 feet and expect that on reaching about the 200 level they will come into considerable ore. They now have good ore showing in the drift on the 100 level, the ore there, however, coming in as a surprise.

and shafthouse for the Mass Consolidated Mining Company's "C" shaft is nearly finished and the plant will be ready to enter service as soon as the installation of the equipment is completed. The plant at "C" shaft is patterned after that at "B" shaft. A large increase in production from the shaft will be possible as soon as the new equipment is in commission.

It is not expected that the Mass will increase its total production, however, until the Michigan's lease of the extra head expires. As soon as the Michigan discontinues rock shipments to the Mass mill the latter company will be able to make 100 per cent more copper. Charles A. Lamb of Chicago, president of the Mass company, examined the mine and mill this week. Mass and barrel copper continues to form an important item in the mine's yield, twenty-five tons being forwarded direct to the smelter this week. Nothing official can be learned regarding the reported purchase of the Nonesuch mine in the Porcupine mountain copper range of Ontonagon county by the Calumet and Hecla Mining company. It is admitted that negotiations with such an end in view have been in progress for some time, but the Calumet & Hecla officials do not say whether they have actually closed the deal or not. It is believed, however, that the big corporation now controls the Nonesuch.

At No. 19 shaft of the Calumet & Hecla, the northernmost opening on the Kearsarge amygdaloid bed at the company's main property, there is a satisfactory copper showing. No. 20, adjoining on the south, is fairly encouraging, but the values in No. 21, on the extreme southeastern corner, are not so good. In view of the fact that it is the history of the Kearsarge lode that the copper values increase with depth, it is natural to assume that the Calumet and Hecla's Kearsarge openings will be better after the work is farther advanced.

Sinking in the No. 1 shaft on the Kearsarge amygdaloid lode at the Tecumseh has reached a depth of 600 feet and is now penetrating the richest copper values yet opened upon the property. The shaft has just reached the 600-foot level and the plat will be cut soon. The work has not been started, but the copper values are good and visible in all four walls of the shaft. No steps have been taken for the reopening of No. 2 shaft, which was bottomed in the ledge rock last fall, and it is not known when work will be resumed at that point. The excellent values in No. 1, however, make it certain that No. 2 shaft will be opened to equal depth eventually.

All three shafts at the Tamarack mine which were closed down a few weeks ago, after the fire broke out again, have been opened. There are no signs of fire in the underground workings now, but the large volume of water which accumulated in the shafts during the period of idleness must be drained before operations can be resumed. The unwatering of the workings is being conducted by means of three bailers, built especially for the work, which are in commission in three of the four operating compartments of No. 5 shaft. Each of these bailers has a capacity of 2,000 gallons and in the course of a full day the three hoist more than 9,000,000 gallons of water. A fourth bailer is at the shaft and may be installed in the remaining compartment, which is at present used for handling men and supplies. The water rose 150 feet from the bottom of No. 5 shaft, the deepest opening, during the period the workings were sealed, and this means an immense volume through the workings. In addition to the bailers in No. 5 shaft, the workings are also being drained by the use of the pumps which are located underground. All of these are in commission with the exception of the one in the bottom of No. 2 shaft, which was drowned out, being submerged by thirty feet of water.

Fire broke out in the Tamarack early in January, and the greater portion of the property has been idle since then. At no time, however, have operations in No. 3, at the North Tamarack branch, been interfered with, as that portion of the mine is not connected with the remainder of the property. No. 3 is the deepest shaft in the world, and its production has been crowded to the limit of the rock house facilities. Upwards of 1,100 tons of rock daily has been hoisted there for the last four months, the extreme operating depth being over a mile beneath the surface of the earth.

As every indication points to the fire in the Old Tamarack being out, it is probable that production from Nos. 1, 2 and 5 shafts will be resumed just as soon as the workings can be drained of the accumulated water. At this period of the year the seepage is increased by the spring rains, and consequently the inflow of water in the mines is larger than usual.

An experiment, which is awaited with interest, is being made at the Champion stamp mill, where a Hancock jig was placed in commission a few days ago. This is a new type of stamp mill machinery in the lake district, but important results are anticipated from its use. It is expected to form an important part in the graded crushing system, and eliminate the use of a number of smaller jigs.

Nearly all the work on the new power plant for the Challenge mine of the St. Mary's Mineral Land company is completed. The new Nordberg hoisting engine is installed, and the air compressor was received this week. It will be ready for operation shortly. The hoist, compressor and boiler under one roof and the plant will be adequate for all the work that is planned at the shaft now in use.

Diamond drilling on the Keweenaw Copper company's lands is progressing steadily, but no important results have been secured lately. On the Resolute tract a drill is in service, and another is located on the Mandan property. The recent acquisiiton of the Washington property by the Keweenaw interests gives the latter a large area of the underlay of the Montreal river lode, which has been located in the Mandau and Medora tracts by diamond drills. The Keweenaw company also gains a good mill site and considerable frontage on Mosquito lake, with valuable water power privileges.

There is a possibility of another shaft being started at the North Kearsarge branch of the Osceola Consolidated company this summer. There is a great deal of room north of No. 3, the most northerly surface opening at that branch of the mine. The drifts in that direction have passed through irregular values, the rock at times containing excellent showing of copper, while again very little metal was in sight. These drifts have penetrated upward of 1,600 feet and a distance of 1,400 feet remains between the face of the openings and the northern boundary line of the property. As this distance is too far to drift without another surface opening, and the territory unexplored is believed to contain much promise, it is likely that a shaft will be sunk for the purpose of proving its value. Recently the northernmost drifts from No. 3 shaft have been in a better grade of ground than formerly.

partly borrowed money. The decline in stocks is easily explained by these facts. Many of the declines, however, are really remarkable, as in many cases the stocks have intrinsic value far in excess of the price at which they are now selling.

"There is a rift in the clouds though, and, in my opinion, the flattening out of the market will be of very short duration. I do not anticipate that the opportunity to buy stocks at bargain counter prices will last over a week or ten days. As soon as the insurance companies begin to pay their losses in San Francisco, a lot of the money distributed in this way will be immediately invested in Nevada mining stocks. In fact I have telegrams today from two representative brokers in San Francisco, asking me to secure for them options on big blocks of stock of New Manhattan and Bullfrog flotations, saying that they expected a lively demand in San Francisco for these stocks as soon as the insurance companies began to settle.

"Again, I have it on indubitable authority that the banks in San Francisco will all open their doors within a few days of the payment of the insurance losses. Further, the president of the San Francisco Stock and Exchange board telegraphs me that the exchange will open within five days after the banks open. As soon as the banks in San Francisco open their doors and release hundreds of thousands of dollars of Nevada money tied up at present, Nevada banks will resume lending money on Nevada stocks. When that occurs I predict the beginning of one of the strongest "bull" movements in Nevada mining stocks that has been chronicled in the history of the West.

"The physical condition of the mines of Manhattan, Goldfield, Bullfrog and Tonopah is improving hourly, and the discoveries in the new camp of Fairview bid fair to outrival anything yet opened up in Nevada. There never was a time when the mines looked so well, and there never was such a paucity of cash. Therefore, as soon as there is a loosening up of bonds, stocks cannot help but seek much higher levels."

ager of the Copper Chief Mining company, and a party of Butte and Missoula men interested in the company, spent a day this week at the mine near Silver Star and visited the prospects in the neighborhood. The Copper Chief, the Ora Plata and the Green-Campbell are all of them pushing work. The new concentrator at the Green-Campbell is practically complete and will be in readiness for operation June 1. The work of stringing wires and arranging to install electric power for the mine and new concentrator has been completed. The Copper Chief company has made arrangements to have the line extended to its property for lighting purposes, and will have several arc and incandescent lamps installed. Work of setting the poles will begin in a few days. There are now twelve men working on the Copper Chief, sinking the shaft and in development. They are making five feet a day on the shaft, which is now down 100 feet. At this level they have opened a rich-looking body of ore, which has not been fully explored, but which measures more than ten feet wide, and several assays from which run more than 10 per cent copper. The new hoist and boiler are in place, but the timber for the uprights and braces was delayed. It arrived yesterday, however, and the hoist and engine will be working Monday. Not far from the Copper Chief, the Oro Plata company is sinking and has two men at work.

One of the most important transactions in the mining arena of Butte that has been made for some time, was consummated Tuesday by the execution of a deed to 115 acres of mining ground in the eastern part of the city in favor of the East Butte Copper Mining company. The mineral rights conveyed aggregate nearly six full claims, and the surface rights ample for a concentrator site, shaft and dumping ground, also passed to the company. Seven-eighths of the ground belonged to Charles Cannon of Helena, while the other eighth was owned by the old banking firm of Hoge, Brownlee & Company. The price paid for the entire tract was $51,000. The Cannon interest was purchased by the company several months ago, but it was not until yesterday that a deed to the other interest was secured. The ground is near the mines of the East Butte company, and makes the total mining area owned by the company 132 acres. Before the transfer was made, the trustee was offered a profit of $100,000, or $150,000 for the mineral rights alone.

The company will sink a deep shaft on the new property some time in the near future.

The Reins Copper company is making rapid progress with its development, and will soon know what it has in the way of a commercial ore producer. It is now drilling two crosscuts from the 1,200-foot station, one north, and the other south. The face of the former is sixty feet, and the latter thirty feet. The north opening must be close to the vein, for on the 800-foot level the vein is not more than thirty-five or forty feet from the station. The exact location of the south vein is not known. The company has placed two pumps on the 1,200-foot station, and the water is, therefore, not interfering with the work of cutting for the veins, although the flow is fairly good. A little time will be required to drain the ground between the 1,200 and 800.

THE MARQUETTE RANGE

in the expected saving since the installation of meters. How long the break would have remained undiscovered had it not been for the trouble experienced at the Blue it would be hard to estimate, as none of the water which escaped from the main found its way to surface, but instead had worked out a subterranean passage for itself.

A force of forty men is now employed at the Empire property, which John T. Jones of Iron Mountain is opening in the Cascade district, south of Negaunee. The work in hand consists of crosscutting and drifting from the main shaft through the ore, so that everything will be in readiness for mining a large output as soon as shipping can be commenced. This will be within three weeks, or whenever the Chicago & Northwestern road finishes the construction of the spur track it is building into the property, and it is possible to get in the crusher plant and the larger hoisting machinery which will replace the present equipment. An auxiliary shaft or winze, eight feet square, into which the ore will be blasted when production starts in earnest, is now being sunk. Chutes will be placed beneath the winze, and through them the ore will be handled for hoisting to surface, where it will be fed to the crushers as required. The company has decided to install an endless belt conveyor, on which the crushed ore will be carried to the cars. The force of miners now employed will be considerably increased as soon as shipping is started, and if no unforeseen delays occur in installing the crusher plant a large tonnage will be secured by the milling system, which makes possible the removal of a much larger body of ore in a given time than any other method.

Work on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad's new ore dock at North Escanaba has been vexatiously delayed by the slowness in arrival of timber. It was anticipated early in the spring that the big structure would be in readiness for use by the first of June, but it will doubtless be later than July 1 before the pier goes into commission. A second coal dock, of large capacity, is also to be built by the company. A site between the two ore docks has been selected. The piling will be driven this year, a contract for which has already been awarded, and the super-structure erected next summer. At its coal dock at Marquette, the Lake Superior & Ishpeming road, controlled jointly by the Cleveland Cliffs and Jones & Laughlin companies, has completed the construction of a 200-foot addition. The extension makes the dock double its former capacity, and when fully stocked will hold enough fuel to last the company through the winter months, between the closing and opening of navigation.

Captain W. J. Treblicock, who has been superintendent of the Mansfield mine in the Crystal Falls district of the Menominee range for the past year or two, has been transferred by the steel corporation to the Baraboo district of Southern Wisconsin, where it is understood the big company will test the mineral possibilities of a number of different properties, using the diamond drill extensively in the work. This move of the steel corporation has been learned with general surprise. During the time of the rush for properties in the new field, the steel corporation held aloof, and it was considered that it had little confidence in the district. Now, however, after a number of different concerns have met with discouragement there, among them the Pittsburg Steel company, which at least was recently reported as having quit work entirely in the Wisconsin territory, the giant corporation of them all quietly slips into the field and without a blare of trumpets begins the work of ascertaining for itself the possibilities of the region. Captain Trefilcock left Crystal Falls for North Freedom with the expectation, it is said, of remaining there a considerable length of time, which is taken to indicate that the steel corporation's reported search for ore in merchantable quantity and quality will be thorough. He is succeeded at the Mansfield by John T. Mason, who has been in charge of operations at the Michigan.

An important program of betterments is to be carried out during the next two years at Pickards, Mather & Co.'s Sunday Lake and Brotherton mines, in the Sunday Lake district of the Gogebic range. Included in this is the sinking of a four-compartment shaft at the Brotherton, 8x24 feet in size, and fitted with two skip-roads, one ladder-way and a pump-way. The shaft will be supported by steel sets, and will be covered by a steel shafthouse. It will go down at the rate of about 45 feet a month, it is expected, and it is figured that it will be in readiness to begin regular duty in about two years' time. Operations at the mine will be much facilitated by this new shaft, and by means of it much ore which is not now available will be brought to the surface. A new boiler house in which will be installed two large high pressure boilers is to be erected shortly, and in addition a new air compressor of a capacity to operate twenty drills will be doing duty within the course of a few weeks. At the Sunday Lake a triple compound pump of a capacity of 1,000 gallons a minute is to be added to the equipment. Combined, the two mines last season shipped 215,000 tons of ore.

at the minimum. A vertical shaft, 8x18 feet in dimensions, is going down. It is expected to make a shipment of 100,000 tons this season.

The Leonard mine at Chisholm and the Lincoln at Virginia have been added to the season's shipping list, at the latter property a 4,000-foot spur track to D shaft having recently been completed by the Missabe road. At the Genoa mine, the Iron Range road is extending a spur to No. 3 shaft, sunk last winter. In order to obtain sufficient room here for the storage of ore cars it will be necessary to extend the track over the old cavein above No. 2 shaft, to accomplish which considerable filling will be done. Ground for this purpose is being taken from the site of the new stockpile ground.

Hibbing is the most recent town on the Mesaba to be invaded by the Western Federation of Miners, a branch of the union having just been organized there. All told, the organization has been successful in securing a considerable membership on the range, and it is now announced that a newspaper is to be established. The publication will, it is stated, be printed in three languages, English, Austrian and Finnish.

It is expected that this season the Republic Iron & Steel company will double its output of last year, when about 300,000 tons measured the outgo. The bulk of the 600,000 tons will come from the Mesaba, the remainder from the Negaunee field of the Marquette range. The Kinney, which has been stripped for open cut mining, will be the company's largest producer.

The Pitt Mining company has added two sixty-five ton locomotives and a seventy-ton steam shovel to its equipment. The new machines will be used at the Wacutah mine.

The Drake & Stratton Stripping company is now employing more than 1,200 men, in addition to its steam shovels, on the Masaba range, and expects to move 9,000,000 yards of earth during the year.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J. McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT

Payroll Now Largest in the Camp's History---Seven Thousand Miners Employed---General Drainage Tunnel Not Undertaken Yet.

Colorado Springs, May 26.—Cripple Creek's payroll is the largest in the camp's history. Seven thousand miners and employed. Besides, hundreds of lessees and leasing firms are at work. While the output record does not show the increase due to this condition, the burning of the Dorcas and other mills affords in part the explanation. Increased mill capacity will show largely increased tonnage if not greater gross value. Cyanide plants are treating a growing tonnage of low grade ore, thus keeping the average value down.

The proposed general drainage tunnel has not been undertaken yet, owing to diversity of interests represented. There is no question as to its necessity, nor as to its great economic value; but differences as to the method of raising the funds, more than any other cause, have delayed this $1,000,000 enterprise. Deep mining has already proved the value of drainage.

Bebee & Large, lessees, have realized $30,000 net in three weeks from smelter returns from their strike in the W. P. H. mine, Cripple Creek. The ore comes from an 18-foot winze and a 12-foot drift extending from it. The third car of coarse rock was settled for at $130.90 a ton. Select sylvanite ore carries $11.17 a pound. The company receives 50 per cent royalty.

The El Paso mine is outputting 100 cars monthly of $30 ore. The lower workings are still flooded. The water is flowing out of the shaft at the 600 foot level at the rate of 1,500 gallons a minute into the old drainage tunnel, making a total of 4,000 gallons a minute from the old bore.

The Cox-Durbin lease on the American Eagles mine of the Stratton estate is outputting a car daily of $30 ore. The seventeen leases on this mine are in ore, some of which carries $2,000 a ton.

Fifty-four sets of lessees, employing 300 men, are operating on Stratton's Independence mine, Cripple Creek. The majority are shipping, the monthly product being 2,500 tons of $35 ore. The company is realizing monthly royalties approximating $30,000.

The Portland shaft No. 1 has been newly equipped with a modern engine capable of hoisting from the 1,100-foot level. A good tonnage is coming up Shaft 3 from the 1,300-foot level. The veins in the new part of the mine, while not as wide as in the old, are longer, with values more equally distributed. The average values are $35 per ton, the same as in the Stratton's Independence adjoining.

The Fulton-Marguerite company asks for $1.25 a thousand shares as a contribution to cancel bonded indebtedness. The company owns thirty-six acres on Raven, Gold, Bonaparte and Tenderfoot hills. Failure may result in a new company being organized.

Colorado City will offer inducements to J. M. and Frank Howard of Pittsburg, Pa., to locate their Dorcas mill alongside the three plants of the United States Reduction & Refining company, the Golden Cycle and the Portland mills. These plants represent an aggregate of $7,500,000 in modern processes adapted to Cripple Creek ores, with a combined capacity equal to the camp's total output. Colorado City is already the milling center of the Pike's Peak region.

The Neville lease on the Pirito claim, Cripple Creek, is in a foot of ore carrying $140 to $200 a ton values. The rock shows rusty gold and sylvanite.

The Boulder county tungsten fields are to be developed by modern methods. The Wolf Tong company, which recently bought the Trevarton ranch, will install a plant and develop a vein which promises good results.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Work Begun on Remodeling of Kildnan Mill at Pluma---Aerial Tramway From Bald Mountain to Deadwood Proposed.

Deadwood, S. D., May 26.—The Iowa Mining & Milling company is one of the newly organized, with ground on Deadwood creek above Central City. George V. Ayres of this city is president of the company and a number of the officers and directors are from different parts of the state of Iowa.

Work has at last begun on the remodeling of the Kildonan mill at Pluma for the Horseshoe Milling company. Manager McLaughlin is authority for the statement that the company never had so much ore ready for treatment as at the present time. Old claims are producing steadily and the work of opening up the new ground is going ahead well. This property has some of the largest shoots of silicious ores ever uncovered in the hills, and of a higher grade than the average cyanide ore. It has always been understood that this property possessed one of the largest ore reserves of any proposition in the hills. A large number of men will be employed at Pluma on the mill, and this camp will once more be a busy place. The mill, which was formerly a chlorination plant, will be changed into a wet cyanide mill, with a capacity of 300 tons a day.

Mining men and members of the Business Men's club of this city are very much interested in the prospects for building an aerial tramway from Bald mountain to this city for the purpose of transporting ores to the mills here. A number of companies operating have their mills either in Deadwood or near it, and the expense of freight has been a serious one for them to meet. It is now proposed to organize a company for the purpose of constructing this tramway, which would be from seven to eight miles in length, according to the route chosen. It is estimated that ore can be transported in this manner for less than one-half as much as is now paid. The cost of the road would be from $13,000 to $14,000 a mile, but the saving in transportation would be so much that it would soon pay for itself.

Lead, S. D., May 26.—Excitement prevails in the Bald mountain district because of a new strike just made by the Dakota company. An excellent shoot of silicious ores was opened on the north end of the Mono claim and assays give an average of from $12 to $14 a ton. This ore was encountered very near the surface, and it is impossible as yet to determine the exact extent of it. This is the second new body of ore which the Dakota has encountered within the last few weeks.

MINING IN UTAH.

Salt Lake City, May 26.—When dividend checks from the Silver King Mining company of Park City began to reach shareholders a day after the usual monthly distribution time, it was found that they called for only half of the amount that has been regularly paid since February, 1901. A letter accompanied the checks, explaining that the reduction had been made owing to the fact that litigation was pending against the company, and that it was the intention to add largely to the company's property holdings in the district. The Silver King company has paid over $10,000,000 to its shareholders since December, 1893, when the initial distribution was made.

The Silver King company has closed a deal for the purchase of the Woodside company's nine patented claims, adjoining its territory on the northeast and took over fifteen other patented claims belonging to the E. P. Ferry estate at the same time. The purchase price was not made public, but it is believed to have been not far from $250,000, one way or the other.

Following its drainage and trespass suit against the Silver King company, the Magnolia-St. Louis company has filed a suit in equity and asked for an injunction restraining the Silver King company from entering its ground from any of the King workings, pending the final determination of the cases. The damages asked by the plaintiff company amount to $9,000,000. The equity action was commenced when the Silver King company filed its answer to the suit at law, denying that it had taken any ore from ground of plaintiff company to which it was not entitled.

The Boston Consolidated Mining company has awarded a contract for the stamps which are to be used in the new 3,000-ton concentrating mill, now under construction at Garfield.

Col. E. A. Wall has just ordered a compressor plant for his Starless mines adjoining the Utah Copper company's property. Large bodies of copper ore have been developed in this ground, and the expectation is that Col. Wall will, within the year, build a large mill to handle the ore.

Duncan MacVichie, general manager of the Bingham Consolidated company's properties, has returned from a trip into the Deep Creek country, along the western boundary lines of the state, where he has valuable holdings. He declared that it was too early to discuss conditions, but he admitted that, with the building of the Eastern Pacific, now under way, that region would jump rapidly to the front.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Wholesale Business is Strong for This Time of Year.

New York, May 26.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Ample rains throughout the farming regions provided the most important commercial factor, large crops being essential to a maintenance of national prosperity at the maximum position recently attained. There is an unusually liberal volume of wholesale business for this time of the year. Mercantile collections are still somewhat irregular but at most cities, payments are improving and the financial situation is more encouraging now that the San Francisco banks have resumed without any disturbance. Manufacturing plants are well occupied and building occupations are heavy, but there are indications of a lower level for commodity quotations for the month of May. Customary summer quiet is noted in some departments, although there is less than the usual interruption and preparations are already in progress for a very active fall season. Labor conditions have improved, the only new disturbance of note being locally among painters while the steel industry is strong.

Absence of interest as the feature of the primary market for cotton goods, the lethargic attitude of purchasers being assumed in anticipation of obtaining concessions. No cheapening of cost is noted in the hide market but there are more evidences of uncertainty and increasing efforts to restrict purchases on the part of tanners. Failures this week were 188 in the United States, against 211 last year and eighteen in Canada compared with twelve a year ago.

THOMAS AND TAGGART ARE FOUND GUILTY.

Kansas City, May 26.—George L. Thomas, a freight broker, and L. B. Taggart, a clerk, working for Thomas, in the United States district court here late yesterday were found guilty of the charge of conspiring illegally to give rebates to shippers. The jury considered the case only thirty minutes before arriving at the verdict. Attorneys for the defendants will file a motion for a new trial. The court will not pronounce sentence against Thomas and Taggart until the motion for a new trial is disposed of.

It is Dangerous to Neglect a Cold.

How often do we hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and has gained its great popularity and extensive sale by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by all leading druggists.

WHO IS SAMUEL UNTERMYER?—By DEXTER MARSHALL

SAMUEL UNTERMYER AND ONE OF HIS PRIZE COLLIES.

Who is this Samuel Untermyer? This lawyer who, not long ago, as counsel for the international policyholders' committee, which is doing its full share of fighting in the insurance war, intimated that Charles A. Peabody, new president of the Mutual Life, was a mere figurehead and the representative of the Standard Oil's interests; who was counsel for H. H. Rogers and the Rockefellers in their Frenzied Finance fight with Lawson of Boston, and whose name is constantly in the news dispatches.

"S. U.," as he is sometimes called by those in his office and those out of it who know him well, to distinguish him from "M. U."—Maurice Untermyer, his younger brother—is of compact build, neither tall nor short, neither slender nor fat; with strongly featured face, gray eyes set far enough apart, rather long, bristling hair, nearly black, which he wears pompadour, and big, drooping mustache of rather sandy shade.

His voice lends itself equally well to thunderous denunciations before a jury or cool, unimpassioned argument before a full bench of judges; to the persuasive and insinuating or the compelling and scarifying cross-questioning of a victim on the witness stand, or the unctuous telling of a crocking good story. His conversation shows that he is a keen judge of human nature. Though a Democrat, he believes in federal jurisdiction over two things now controlled by the state—corporations and divorce. His age is 48. Sometimes he looks it; sometimes he doesn't. He was born in Lynchburg, Va. His father was his mother's second husband; her first husband's name was Guggenheimer, and Randolph Guggenheimer of the law firm of Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall is Samuel Untermyer's half-brother.

Untermyer, the father, was a tobacco planter. Like the Guggenheimers, who served in the Confederate army, he was devoted to the Confederate cause and had showed his faith in it by investing heavily in Confederate bonds. He was on the street in Lynchburg when the news of Lee's surrender was told him; he had a weak heart, and the shock killed him then and there. Mrs. Untermyer and her boys were left almost penniless.

Manifestly, Lynchburg, half ruined by the war, its business demoralized and its commerce gone for the time, was no place in which to bring up her boys, no place for them to begin the battle which they would have to fight if they would make a place among men for themselves after they had reached man's estate. So she realized on what little property she had left and removed to New York, where her sons—half brothers—studied law; they are now of the law firm of Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall, prominent, prosperous and progressive. They had plenty of hard work to do before they were ready to practice law, and they have never got out of the habit of working which they acquired then.

"S. U." was 11 when the family reached New York. He attended public school two years and entered the College of the City of New York at 13; at 15 he was out of the institution and at work in a downtown law office as an errand boy. Before he was 17 he was representing the firm in the justice's courts in little cases, of which he handled hundreds before he was of age.

The habit of working was being fastened upon him for life in the years of his later teens, for besides doing his allotted work in the law office to which he was attached, he went through the Columbia law school, of which Theodore W. Dwight was then the head. In those days "S. U." used to get to work in the office bright and early every morning; from 3 to 5 p. m. he attended law school, and, to make up for the time thus taken away from the office, returned to it every night at 7 and worked until 10. Sundays he worked as hard as other days.

He was graduated from the law school at 20, in 1878, was admitted to the bar at once and was made a partner of his half brother, Randolph Guggenheimer, without any unnecessary delay.

Samuel Untermyer's first important case came in 1883, when he was 25.

There was a firm of brewers in Philadelphia doing business under the style of Bauer & Betz. Henry Dalley, Jr., a New York lawyer and counsel for Bauer, planned to mulct Betz in a large sum, and notes for $140,000, signed by the firm name, were given by Bauer under Dalley's advice. Dalley, who had been a partner of Charles O'Conor, sent Bauer away and had $50,000 of the notes discontinued. Betz, finding that he was liable for the notes, sued Dalley, Moore, his partner and others, alleging conspiracy between council and client.

This was the first case on record in which a lawyer was charged with conspiracy with his client to defraud, and it caused an immense sensation. Dalley was a lawyer with a big practice—$150,000 to $200,000 a year—while young Untermyer had yet to win his spurs. Dalley engaged Francis N. Bangs, W. A. Beach, William P. Fullerton and Hamilton Odell, leaders of the bar then, to conduct the case for him. It was tried before a jury, with Justice Van Brunt presiding. Untermyer got no one to help him, being confident that he was right and that he could make the jury see it as he saw it. He won, too, the verdict being for $52,000 and costs. It was a hard-fought battle, though, and for a day and a half the verdict was in doubt, one juror standing out for Dalley. In thirty-six hours of fighting the other eleven men brought the recalcitrant juror to terms, however. On appeal to the General Term of the Supreme Court the finding in favor of Betz was affirmed in 1886.

The case was the real beginning of Samuel Untermyer's legal career as a man of daring, ingenuity, resourcefulness and persistence. It was the end of Dalley. It ruined him completely. Mr. Untermyer has said since and more than once that he wouldn't undertake such a case now—that he wouldn't dare to, for, despite the righteousness of his cause, the chances were fearfully against him. Dalley died soon after the case was tried, and it is an interesting circumstance that in later years Mr. Untermyer acted as legal adviser for his widow, who after Dalley's death was swindled by her husband's partner.

The Untermyer practice increased amazingly following the verdict in the Betz-Dalley case, and today, twenty-three years afterward, it is one of the most profitable in New York, where lawyers are paid better than anywhere else in the United States, if not in the whole world. But at first it wasn't mostly all business practice, involving broad and profound knowledge of the intricacies of corporation law, as it now is.

Among the early cases of the young lawyer's growing practice were the Beadleston divorce suits, two of them—the Beadlestons being of the celebrated family of brewers—famous in their day; after these came another divorce suit, equally famous. By this time Mr. Untermyer was pretty well known to the brewing interests of this country and he went to London, where he interested British capital to the tune of $80,000,000 in American breweries, British syndicates being formed with that aggregate capitalization to buy them out.

When an attempt was made to remove Asa Bird Gardiner, then New York's district attorney, Untermyer defended and saved him. Later Gardiner did something foolish and was ultimately removed, but that is neither here nor there. When Wertheim of Paris, one of Count Boni de Castellane's creditors, brought suit in New York to prevent the trustees of the Gould estate giving the count his wife Anna's full income, Untermyer represented Wertheim and won his case.

He also represented David Belasco in his litigation with the theatrical syndicate and he was counsel for the petitioners against the Sheldon plan of reorganizing the United States Shipbuilding corporation—in which Lewis Nixon was a figure. This plan sought to wipe out the bondholders and was in Charles M. Schwab's interest, but the result of the suit was the abandonment of the plan and the adoption of another which saved $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 for the bondholders. Whittaker Wright, the English bubble blower, was one of Mr. Untermyer's clients and so was C. W. Morse, the banker, ice king and steamboat owner, in the celebrated Dodge-Morse case.

In the early stages of the insurance war Mr. Untermyer was counsel for James Hazen Hyde, as every newspaper reader must know, and therefore is intimately familiar with all the ins and outs of the situation from beginning to end.

Where "S. U." Does His Work.

Mr. Untermyer's office is on the thirteenth floor of a steel and brick and stone and glass skyscraper at No. 30 Broad street, near the part of that famous thoroughfare which is monopolized daily during "Exchange" hours by the bellowing, screaming, gesticulating "open board" of brokers.

The suite occupied by his firm fills the floor completely, and the man who wishes to meet the counsel for the international policyholders' committee must have an advance appointment to do so, and even then must pass several guards and answer all questions put to him before passing the door which opens into Mr. Untermyer's personal office.

It is a rather large, square room, high of ceiling, and furnished with handsome, solid looking chairs and desks—not roller topped, but flat, his own being near the center of the room, with a big, strong, swinging chair in front of it. Nearly every day the decorations of the room include great bunches of cut flowers, brought from the greenhouses of his up-river home. The lofty windows which light the room look out upon the harbor; through them, in the hot summertime, the sea breezes blow, bringing with them the salt smell of the sea; from them he can watch the squalls that sweep over the water and the ships that come from every port, bringing trade to the New World's metropolis.

Despite the strictness of those who guard this room, an astonishingly large number of men pass in and out of its doors every day; but every one who does so has something worth discussing with its occupant, or he couldn't get in. No matter how important the subject of the visit, though, its discussion must be direct and not long drawn out, for there is rarely a time when a visitor is not waiting outside to take the place of whoever is inside. This most visitors recognize; if they don't, "S. U." does, and he presses the conversation to a close, whenever it threatens to be too extended.

He has a desk-telephone, of course, and many of his consultations with his clients, even when bearing upon important questions, are carried on over the wire. The way he can break off a face-to-face conversation on a matter of moment and talk into the receiver about something of equal moment, without being in the least fazed or losing the thread of the interrupted discussion meanwhile, shows his powers of concentration and detachment admirably.

He works ten months of the year in this thirteenth story room, and plays two months. He gets to the office early, earlier sometimes than some of the clerks, and, despite the many interruptions by visitors and by the 'phone, he gets through with more real grinding work in a day than many a lawyer of ability and standing could accomplish in a day and a half without any interruptions at all. When he goes home, most nights, he takes a choice selection of legal papers with him, especially on Saturdays, and each morning, when he comes in, brings with him, completed, the work he took away the night before.

His friends say he'd like to work twelve months in the year, instead of ten. He laughs when any one talks to him about his industry.

"I don't really work very hard," he told an acquaintance recently, "neither do a lot of the men who are credited with unusual industry. Often such a man doesn't do nearly as much as many another man who isn't credited with accomplishing anything extraordinary at all. Besides, my work is a pleasure to me, and that makes all the difference in the world. It is so with many men. Through circumstances—chance, if you choose to use the word—they are successful. Being successful encourages them, stimulates them, as wine stimulates; their work becomes easy, because they are accomplishing what they wish to do.

"It isn't so with the man who isn't winning—perhaps through no fault of his own. To him the same work that, with success, would be easy, becomes difficult and unpleasant, and he can accomplish little. When a man becomes successful he gets a reputation for working hard, but most of the hard workers, most of the world's really great men, are never heard of by the rest of the world at all."

All the same, it would be difficult to convince those who know "S. U." best that he isn't one of the hardest worked lawyers alive today.

Where "S. U." Lives and Plays.

Mr. Untermyer's town house is at No. 675 Fifth avenue; his country house is Greystone, up the river, near Yonkers, formerly the estate of the late Samuel J. Tilden, which Mr. Untermyer has owned since 1900. There he plays, off hours, during the summer months of the ten in each year which he devotes to work. There he relaxes himself as only a man of intense intellectual activity may.

He doesn't shoot, he doesn't fish, he doesn't play golf, and he doesn't ride at present, though he used to spend a good deal of time in the saddle, and probably will take up riding again, not so much for the pleasure of it as because he needs the physical bracing which riding gives him. He keeps an automobile, "not for the pleasure of riding in it, but for locomotion." It is sometimes driven pretty fast when he is in it, too, for he is fond of high speed. He used to drive horses, singly, in pairs and tandem, and he is a good driver, but he isn't driving much nowadays.

His one exercise at present is walking, and some of his friends who know him as a pedestrian say he never gets tired on foot, particularly at Greystone when inspecting the place.

Greystone is a fine estate. It is on the banks of the Hudson, well above the river, and commands a wonderful view of the Palisades opposite and equally fine vistas for miles up and down the broad stream. It covers 105 acres, almost equally divided by the highway running north and south parallel with the river into two parts, one containing fifty and the other fifty-five acres. One part is given over to cultivation, and there his farmer lives and raises the vegetables that supply the Greystone table, the hay that feeds the Greystone horses, and other useful crops.

The mansion, which stands on the river division of the estate, is old-fashioned, roomy and comfortable. Built of gray stone, it looks almost as solid as the Palisades opposite, and harmonizes perfectly with the rather broken surface of the surrounding country.

There are many things about Greystone in which Mr. Untermyer takes great pride. Possibly he likes the greenhouses best, though he is fond of his kennels and his chicken yards; he gives a lot of his personal attention to all three.

Those who know all about dogs say that the Greystone kennels are second to none as to the quality of the dogs they house, though there are plenty of kennels with larger canine population. Mr. Untermyer's dogs are all collies; they are of pure breed and have taken many prizes. His chickens number about a thousand, and, like the dogs, include several prize winners. They are a well trained lot, too. The chicken shown in the accompanying photograph hopped up on the block to pose for its picture as sedately, and posed as well, as ever a human being posed in any photographer's studio.

But, after all, the greenhouses are the pride of Greystone. They are large, and their blooms include about every known variety of flower from American Beauty roses to rare orchids and the lawyer who owns them is never better contented than when he is among them.

Besides his horses and his automobiles, Mr. Untermyer keeps a steam yacht, the Scud, for "locomotive purposes" only, perhaps; but to sail down the river from Greystone to the city in the morning and back again in the warm weather cannot be an unpleasant method of locomotion.

There is a legend among some of Mr. Untermyer's acquaintances that he was something of an amateur baseball player when a boy, but it is founded on a rather slender basis of fact. After he got to New York he was too busy even as a boy to play baseball much, but he did play ball with his brother, whom, according to the Virginian custom, he generally called "brother." Once when the two were playing together "S. U." was a little in doubt as to whether he would be able to catch and hold a rather "hot one" that was coming toward him, and in his uncertainty he called out desperately, "Brother, help me catch this ball!"

This is the true version of the story; old friends occasionally jeer him good-naturedly when they see him by calling out his boyish plea for help to catch the ball.

Mr. and Mrs. Untermyer have three children, two sons and a daughter. Alvin, 23, is a graduate of Princeton, and is now studying for his father's profession in the New York University Law School. Irene, the daughter, is about 20, and Irwin, 18 or 19, is a stu-

MR. UNTERMYER IN COURT.

In court, and out of it as a matter of fact, "this man Untermyer's" proceedings impress you with the notion that he has positive confidence in himself, thorough knowledge of what he is talking about and no fear of constituted authority. Here's a story in point:

Some years ago he represented the plaintiff in a very curious case. A man presented an institution of learning with a statue of his deceased father, as his own personal gift, but had the cost of making the statue charged to the corporation of which he was the head, and which his father had founded and built up. The other officers and stockholders objected, naturally, and took the case into court.

Untermyer, fully convinced that the corporation should not pay for what had been given as its president's gift, went at his side with the vehemence and evident certainty of winning for which he is so well known, but the judge, erroneously, as Untermyer held, got it into his head that there was a legal flaw in the complaint which invalidated it. Untermyer fought strenuously against this decision, but without avail; the judge had made up his mind and a non-suit was the result. Now, few lawyers, even big ones, would have taken this decision as Untermyer did. He had to submit, of course, but he didn't submit without a protest.

"Very well, your honor," he said, his eyes flashing and his head thrown back, "I shall appeal from this to a higher tribunal!" and marched out. In effect he told the judge that he would have him reversed, which, in fact, he did, but most lawyers would not have dared to talk so straight from the shoulder, for fear of being held up in contempt of court proceedings.

This incident illustrates the Untermyer method in court admirably. It is the antithesis of Joseph H. Choate's method; this lawyer-diplomatist makes it a point to conciliate everybody. Judge, jury and opposing counsel, at the start, to get them into a comfortable, satisfied frame of mind, and keep them so. Untermyer begins to fight at the start and fights his way through to the very end of the case, every time, carrying all before him by the vigor and zeal of his attack and the persistent pressing home of his points.

"Possibly he sometimes 'overtries' his cases," said a well-known lawyer, talking about him the other day, "and he does not always win, but then, you must understand that because of his reputation a large number of astonishingly hard cases are brought to him constantly, and that he never balks at a case because it is difficult. He is a phenomenally good trial lawyer, and he combines with the trial lawyer's qualities those qualities which enable him to comprehend thoroughly the ins and outs of business, and the intricacies of the laws bearing upon it. These qualities and his courage are his greatest assets."

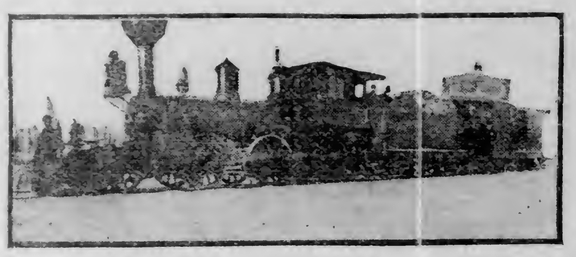
AN OLD RAILROAD RELIC



TYPE OF WOOD-BURNING LOCOMOTIVE NOW ALMOST OBSOLETE—ONE OF THE LAST IN USE NEAR HERE.

In some of the old iron scrap heaps in the cities of the Northwest may be found some of the old type of wood-burning locomotives which have outlived their period of usefulness, and which, like all other outlived machinery, has been replaced by engines of modern type that burn coal.

The accompanying picture shows one of the last of the old wood-burners in use in this part of the country. It did service formerly as an ordinary railway locomotive, in the days when the trains would stop at every station long enough to permit of the train crew loading up the tender with a few cords of wood to carry the train through to the next woodyard. The coal-burning locomotive, a type of higher power locomotive and more economical in operation drove the wood burners off the railroads, and they did their last service on the various logging railways that builded from the railroads out through the big pine forests. Wood was found in plenty, and coal was too expensive, at first, causing the loggers to have consideration for the coal-burners, but as the years went by, the ambitious logging concerns learned that while coal was a more expensive fuel than wood, they could haul longer trains, larger loads and make more trips per day with the coal-burning locomotives than with those taking wood.

taking wood.

One after another the logging concerns began taking up with the higher power locomotives, those that would carry their trains straight through from the camps to the banking ground from the camps to the banking grounds without stopping at the top of every hill for the firemen to coax the steam up to get the power to haul the train-load to the top of the next grade. As fast as these became worn out the old wood-burners were consigned to the scrap heaps, until there remain only a few in use in the Northern woods. The accompanying picture shows one of the last of the old type of engines in use in this part of the country. This engine was used until recently to pull trainloads of logs over the St. Croix & Duluth road from the various camps of the Empire Lumber company to the banking grounds on the St. Croix river, thirty miles from Dedham, Wis.

THE LITERARY WORLD

"Thrills of a Bell Boy," by S. E. Kiser--"In Honor of James Whitcomb Riley"---"By Love's Sweet Rule," By Gabrielle E. Jackson.

Samuel Ellsworth Kiser, of the Chicago Record-Herald, whose quaint philosophy and deep understanding of the springs of human nature have fitted him for the manufacture of deliciously charming verses, has put out in book form his "Thrills of a Bell Boy," a number of vastly amusing verses concerning the love affairs and day dreams of a bell boy. It is something after the fashion of his "Love Sonnets of an Office Boy," which spread the country over through the columns of newspapers. Mr. Kiser understands boy nature, and better still knows how to write it out in very pleasing rythm. The little book is illustrated by John T. McCutcheon in his best style, and that is saying much. It is published by Forbes & Co., Chicago.

As "Broke of Covenden," now in its fifth American edition, was one of the distinctively important books of season before last, and has continued to hold that eminence ever since, the announcement of another novel by John Collis Smith is of more than usual importance. Its title is "Henry Northcote," and it will be issued in the autumn by Herbert B. Turner & Co., who are also the publishers of "Broke of Covenden."

In connection with the publication of Mrs. Ward's new novel, "Fenwick's Career," which some critics declare to be based in a measure upon the life of the painter Romney, it may be of interest to know that the old Romney cottage near Dalton-in-Furness, England, where the artist's youth was spent, is about to be pulled down. The elder Romney bought the place in 1772, and settled down to his trade as cabinet-maker there. His son George, then 11 years old, assisted him, but the lad soon showed his native talent and spent most of his time copying pictures in chalk on the walls of the workshop. Later, like Mrs. Ward's hero, he went up to London to make his way. The cottage is picturesquely situated on the brow of a red sandstone cliff, and has served as a landmark for some years.

The Bobbs-Merrill company of Indianapolis has issued a neat booklet entitled "In Honor of James Whitcomb Riley," in which are published the proceedings of a meeting of the Indiana State Teachers' association held in Indianapolis Dec. 28, 1905, to pay the respects of the association to the Indiana bard, whose verses have delighted and endeared the hearts of millions. There are addresses by Edwin Robert Hughes, president of Depauw university, and president of the association; Senator A. J. Beveridge of Indiana, Charles R. Williams, editor of the Indianapolis News, Meredith Nicholson, the Indiana novelist and by Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal; with a response by the poet himself, together with a sketch of his life. Altogether it makes a little volume that all lovers of Riley's verses will be glad to have in their libraries.

"By Love's Sweet Rule" is a charmingly wholesome book for girls, written by Gabrielle E. Jackson. It deals with the experiences of a motherless lassie of 14 years whose father brings her a companion whose sweet character touches up the story with lights of love and sunshine. It is a book that parents can safely give their girls, knowing that they will enjoy reading it, and that incidentally they will be the better for it. It is published by the John C. Winston company, Philadelphia.

The new book by the Williamsons, "Lady Betty Across the Water," is the diary of a charming, witty and beautiful young English girl, who comes to America under the wing of a member of the New York smart set. The habit of going to Europe has become so universal among the Americans that there are few American readers of Lady Betty's experience in America who will not have to compare them with European experiences and impressions of their own. Lady Betty has been called a twentieth century feminine Columbus. She is a real discoverer of many odd things in American life and in her diary succeeds in giving us a distinctly amusing view of ours lves "as ithers see us."

"The Untamed Philosopher" is the whimsical title of a new book of humor by Frank W. Hastings which is to be brought out in the near future by the C. M. Clark Publishing company of Boston. The book is a series of deliciously funny essays on such things as marriage, work, love, country, church, wrecks, politics, sundries, etc. The second part of the book bears the sub-title, "With the Plugonians of Pligolta," which is described as "A Tale of Hens and Some Other People." The author takes an imaginary trip to the land of Plugolia, which is, of course, a satire. The book bears this unique dedication. "To the everlasting, ever-present, ever-dignified, ever-plentiful and never-murmuring weather these evidences of demerit are inscribed." Those who have read the advance proofs of "The Untamed Philosopher" do not hesitate to predict for it the brightest kind of a future.

The aim of John Spargo's forthcoming book on "Socialism" is to give in popular language a clear statement of the principles of modern, "scientific" socialism and a sketch of their historical development. The evolution of socialist theories, from the Utopian idealism of Robert Owen to the scientific theories of Karl Marx and his followers, is clearly shown. The Macmillan company announces Mr. Spargo's book for early issue.

Fox, Duffield & Co. announce that the publication of George Brandes' "Reminiscences" has been postponed until the early autumn. The great Danish critic, who is an expert in English as well as many other languages, himself follows the proof of the translation carefully, and as proof sheets have to be sent to him at his summer home in Norway, there has been unavoidable delay in making the book ready.

No man, perhaps, stands higher in the insurance world, as an authority and expert, and above all as an independent thinker and reformer who has for ten years been progressing what has happened, than the Hon. William A. Fricke, ex-commissioner of insurance in Wisconsin. Coolly and impassionately Mr. Fricke, in Moody's Magazine for May, analyzes the result of the legislative investigation in New York. His article, "Misdirected Insurance Legislation," should be read by all policyholders.

In the National Magazine for May, there are notable articles by Gen Bernardo Reyes, Mexico's minister of war; by Charles Ferguson, "Wanted—Cities With a Sane Ideal;" by Charles Warren Stoddard, "The Pink Countess," in addition to "Affairs at Washington," by Joe Mitchell Chapple and "Note and Comment," by Frank Putnam.

Two widely contrasting yet equally sympathetic and valuable estimates of the late Carl Schurz are contributed to the current Harper's Weekly by Mark Twain and W. D. Howells—estimates which are so universal in their application and so humanly interesting that they have a far larger purport and significance than their particular inspiration would imply. This same issue of the Weekly contains also numerous features of diverse and immediate interest. Henry Harrison Suplee writes authoritatively of "The Sermon in San Francisco's Stones;" the true significance of the sultan of Turkey's new railroad between Damascus and Mecca is set forth with humor and charm by William Tyler Bliss, illustrated with some exceptionally interesting and unusual photographs.

INTERESTING DOCUMENTS

Valuable Relics of Early History of Duluth Being Collected by Secretary of Old Settlers' Association.

Documents which will in time become most valuable relics of the early history of Duluth, are being collected and preserved by W. S. McCormick, secretary of the Old Settlers' association.

Mr. McCormick was appointed permanent secretary of the organization two years ago, and he is making a systematic effort to collect all the interesting documents of this nature that he can locate, with the intention of classifying and preserving them for future reference.

In this he is being aided by the members of the society, many of whom have turned over to him the papers which they happened to have in their possession.

The papers date back as far as 1865, and many of them give an interesting insight into the conditions existing in the city at that time.

One of the papers is a petition to the council, signed by John C. Hunter, and dated April 6, 1872. It reads as follows:

"Being about to erect a brick building at the corner of Fifth avenue west and Superior street, I desire that the grade of First avenue west be established according to law, so that the construction of said building may conform to the established grade. I would also like to ask your honorable body to instruct permanent and suitable sewerage for the crossing at the corner of First avenue west and Superior street, and your petitioner will ever pray."

A petition signed by about 120 citizens, most of whom were saloon keepers, is another interesting document.

The petition protests against the too rigid enforcement of the saloon. It pointed out that the saloon license in Duluth was larger than in any other city of the same size in the country at that time and that in no city in the state was the law so vigorously enforced as in Duluth. The petitioners claimed that the liquor dealers had been paying the license regularly all winter, and losing money in the business, and that with the approach of summer, when they hoped to make good their losses, the council and police stepped in and began to rigidly enforce the law. They argued that liquor licenses formed the largest part of the city's revenue, and called attention to the hardship caused the families of the saloon keepers, many of whom lived over their places of business. Another argument was that vessels ran blind pigs during the summer months, and swindled the poor saloon men out of their just dues.

"Wherefore we suggest," the petition reads, "that it is but simply justice that the instructions to the city police be so modified that between the hours of 9 a. m. and 1 p. m. on Sunday all places of business named in said section 5, shall be absolutely closed and locked up, and that during the other hours of said day, said places shall be closed but not locked to the exclusion of peaceable, quiet and well disposed persons, who may wish to meet for social intercourse under such restrictions regarding quietness as are just and proper, so as not to oppress those whose money contributed so largely to the financial support of the city, and who respectfully request of you what they consider to be their rights, under the circumstances, all of which is respectfully submitted."

The records do not show what was done with the petition.

In these days of numerous candidates for office, it does not seem possible that anyone, in cold blood, should resign the office of mayor of the city of Duluth, but among the documents is one signed by Sidney Luce, who is said to have been the second mayor of the city. It is dated Feb. 18, 1873, and reads as follows:

"To the president and common council of the city of Duluth. Gentlemen: Having determined upon leaving Duluth for an indefinite period of time, and requiring the little time I expect to remain with you for the settlement of my private affairs, I hereby tender you my resignation as mayor of your city.

"Thanking you all cordially for the kindness and consideration with which I have been treated by you, I am,

"Very respectfully,

"SIDNEY LUCE."

Hogs of the four-legged variety, apparently used to cause the overworked poundmasters in the old days, infinite trouble. Scattered through Mr. McCormick's library, are numerous reports from the poundmasters. Each contains a list of the hogs impounded during the month, and a report of the fees collected. One report contains the quotation "One hog was taken forcibly from the pound by Mrs. ——." The quotation brings up the pathetic picture of the brave poundmaster defending the impounded hogs against the would-be rescuer in petticoats.

Among the documents are many relating to the troubles over the diggins of the Duluth ship canal, and there is to be found a copy of the injunction restraining the city of Duluth from proceeding with the work. The paper reads as follows:

"The President of the United States of America, to the City of Duluth, W. W. Williams, E. T. Williams, Richard R. Coburn, and H. W. Wheeler, greeting. Whereas, on the twenty-fourth day of May, 1871, at the place of holding the United States court in the city of Topeka, the United States of America, by C. K. Davis, their attorney for the district of Minnesota, exhibited before the Hon. Samuel F. Miller, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States of America, and one of the judges of said circuit court, its bill of complaint in equity, which was filed in said circuit court on the second day of May, 1871, against the City of Duluth, and the said W. W. Williams, E. F. Williams, Richard R. Coburn and H. W. Wheeler, setting forth among other things that the said defendants were about to excavate and were engaged in excavating a canal from Superior bay, so called, to Lake Superior, across a strip of land called Minnesota Point, by means whereof the plaintiffs at the mouth of St. Louis river, the entrance to the harbor or bay of Superior, will be materially injured, and applied to said judge in vacation for a provisional injunction as prayed in said bill to enjoin the defendants from digging or excavating said canal or any other canal across said point, and reasonable notice of such application having been given to said city, and said Richard Coburn and said H. W. Wheeler to resist such application and the proof and argument of counsel as well for the defendants as for the complainants having been had before said judge.

"And, whereas it was by said judge ordered that a provisional injunction as prayed for in said bill be allowed, that the writ of injunction of the United States of America be forthwith issued by the clerk of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota, under seal of said court, against the City of Duluth, its officers, agents, contractors and servants and all persons acting by its instigation, authority and procurement or otherwise, and also against the said other defendants, commanding and enjoining them and every one of them under the penalty of the law that they do forthwith and absolutely desist and abstain from digging, excavating and constructing, or causing to be dug, excavated or constructed, the said canal or any canal across the said Minnesota point, which shall connect the waters of said bay with the said lake until the further orders of the court.

"Now, therefore, you, the said City of Duluth, and your officers, agents, contractors and servants, and all persons acting by your instigation, authority or procurement or otherwise, and you, the said W. W. Williams, E. F. Williams, Richard G. Coburn and H. W. Wheeler, and each and every one of you, are hereby enjoined and commanded under the pains and penalties of the law to forthwith and absolutely desist and abstain from digging, excavating and constructing, or causing to be dug, excavated or constructed, the said canal or any canal across the said Minnesota point, which shall connect the waters of said bay with the waters of said lake until the further order of the court."

This formidable document is dated June 9, 1871, and it is an interesting relic of the bitter fight to enable boats to gain ready access to the Duluth side of the harbor.

Another paper in the collection is a petition signed by Mayor J. B. Culver, James D. Ray, as vice president of the council, and William Van Brunt as city clerk, requesting the United States government for an appropriation of $250,000 for the improvement of the harbor. The petition was forwarded at the time the canal across the Point was being excavated.

These are but a sample of the kind of documents that are being collected by Mr. McCormick in the interest of the Old Settlers' association. Aside from those which are being preserved in the library, this is the only effort that is being made to preserve for future reference the important papers and historical documents of the city. If the complete history of Duluth is ever written, these will prove of great value in arriving at the facts regarding many important incidents of the early days.

Some of the papers preserved by Mr. McCormick are the originals, and others are but copies of the originals. There are many of the old residents of the city still living who probably have the originals or copies of even more valuable papers than are included in the collection, and Mr. McCormick is anxious to obtain as many of these as possible, for the association's collection.

"I wish that any of the members of the society or others who have such papers, would let me have copies of them for this collection," said Mr. McCormick. "The pioneer settlers of Duluth and Superior are passing away one by one, and what papers they have may become scattered or lost at their death. Ten or twenty years from now, when all the old-timers are dead and buried, it will be a difficult matter to arrive at the incidents in the early days of Duluth, and such a collection as this will be about the only means of gaining any information regarding that picturesque epoch in the city's history.

"As secretary of the Old Settlers' association, I am willing to do all I can to preserve as many of these records as possible, and I would like the co-operation of all the early pioneers of the city, in this work."

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE.—Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made and executed by Matthew Phelan, a single man, mortgagor, to F. P. Sheldon, mortgagee, dated the 21st day of July, 1904, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of St. Louis County, Minnesota, on the 22nd day of July, 1904, at eight o'clock A. M., in Book 91 of Mortgages, on page 407. That the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at this date is Five Hundred Forty-one and no-100 Dollars ($541.00); that the premises described in and covered by said mortgage are the Southeast One-fourth of the Southwest One-fourth (SE¼ of SW¼), and the South One-half of the Southeast One-fourth (S½ of SE¼) of Section Thirty-four (34), and the Southwest One-fourth of the Southwest One-fourth (SW¼ of SW¼) of Section Thirty-five (35), in Township Sixty-seven (67), North, Range Twenty-one (21) West of the 4th P. M., situate in St. Louis County, Minnesota; that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such cases made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said premises, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the front door of the courthouse in the city of Duluth, in said County and State, on Monday, the 2nd day of July, 1906, at ten o'clock A. M., to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage, together with the costs and expenses of such sale, and Twenty-five Dollars ($25.00) attorney's fees, as stipulated in said mortgage.

SELLS-FLOTO ALMOST DUE

Big Show Will Soon be Here to Delight Children.

The Sells-Floto circus will give two regular exhibitions and all the incidental circus stunts in Duluth on Monday. The big show will probably arrive from the Twin Cities tomorrow, and the work of putting up the tents in the West end will begin as soon as possible.

Of course, there will be no performances of any kind Sunday, but the circus grounds will be a scene of gaiety and activity bright and early Monday morning. The long parade is scheduled to reach the down town business district at 10:30, and the usual "free show on the grounds immediately after the parade" will be given.

The afternoon performance will begin at 2, and the evening performance at 8, and doors will be opened an hour earlier to permit of the inspection of the menagerie.

The circus performance is said to be a dandy, and includes the acts of such people as the Peerless Potters, aerialists of international fame. The Ty-Bell Sisters, another European feature, performing most astounding feats in mid-air, finish their act with whirlwind cloud swings, on suspending wires. De Carlo, Stokes and Clemmings, a trio of flying comedy meteors; the Warren Sisters, Cecilia Fortuna and the Sisters Mondaluson, all famous arena stars. The Martell family, premier bicyclists of the world; the Alpine family, expert high wire artists, wonderful cake walkers on a double strand. Herbert, the frog man, who does everything that a great big, live, green fog does, a contijointal wonder. Mlle. Hilda, the elastic Venus, anatomized marvel; the wonderful Marvellos eccentric dancers; Kitty Kruger, premier equestrienne; Vallecita and her ferocious group of trained lions, leopards, tigers and panthers, performing in a forty-foot ring entirely enclosed in a steel ribbed cage; the "Girl in Red," mysterious foreign arenic feature; Christopher Seitz, Europe's most famous elephant trainer, and the Sells-Floto herd of performing elephants, and Lew Sunlin, trainer of domestic animals, with his troupe of educated bulls, trained comedy mules and performing whippet dogs.

WHITE SOX SHOULD BE TENDERED AN OVATION

Two Time Pennant Winners Will Open Home Season, Monday.

"Al" Cummings Has Signed to Pitch During the Summer.

The opening on Monday should prove nothing short of an ovation for the White Sox.

The team has twice won the Northern league pennant, and O'Dea has another bunch that looks like a winner. The boys have been playing good ball on their trip, and will return home in the first division. The pitchers have been performing well, but the team has hardly been fielding up to the mark. O'Dea, however, can be relied on to remedy this defect, and he should have the infield working well together before many days.

It will be no runaway race for the White Sox this year, but they have a good fighting chance for the pennant, and that is all the fans want. If they show a disposition to work hard and play the game until the last ball is pitched, there is little doubt but that they will be given the proper kind of support.

The opening of the season in Duluth will occur on Monday, and the fans are hoping that the northeaster will be turned off long enough to permit the game being played.

The Fargo and Duluth players will assemble at the city hall at 2:30 o'clock, and will be driven to the park in tallyhos. The procession will include the aldermen and city officials and will be headed by Flaaten's band.

At the park, Mayor Cullum will make a short speech, and throw the first ball over the plate.

It is unfortunate that the Floto-Sells circus is billed for the same day, but it is not likely that the conflict will hurt the attendance at either materially. The fans who desire to see the circus can attend in the evening, and take in the ball game in the afternoon.

The grounds are wet and soggy after the long spell of cloudy weather, but a few hours' sunshine will dry the diamond, and the fans are hoping that the skies will clear before Sunday night.

"Al" Cummings, the former Duluth high school player, and later pitcher for the Wisconsin university team, has caught on with the White Sox, and will join the team about June 15.

Cummings had every opportunity to enter professional ball last summer, but steered clear of it, not caring to jeopardize his amateur standing at the university. He is now nearing the end of his course, however, and has pulled out of college athletics, devoting all of his time to study. He will take advantage of the opportunity offered to spend the vacation in a pleasant and profitable manner, and he should prove a valuable addition to the pitching staff of the White Sox.

"Al" has everything in the line of curves, good control and plenty of speed, and he is a heady player.

His work at the university will keep him from joining the team until about June 15.

The Western towns in the circuit will have an opportunity to see the Copper country teams perform, June 1. Lake Linden will come to Duluth for four games on that date; Houghton will go to Grand Forks, Calumet to Fargo and Hancock to Winnipeg.

This will be the first chance of sizing up the comparative strength of the teams in the two divisions of the league, and many fans predict that it will be a surprise to the Western teams. The Copper country is used to a fast article of ball, and judging from the games that have been played there this season the teams are fully up to the standard of former years.

Up to the present time the eastern and western teams have been playing among themselves, and it is possible that one division will pull away from the other in the league race when they are opposed.

Copper Country News: There promises to be merry war in Hancock and Houghton over baseball this summer. Houghton has it on Hancock now in the matter of team quality, but Hancock and Manager Wreath are out for new players, and before the summer is over the race will be a pretty one. The rivalry extends to the matters of transportation, umpire, personal appearance, the relative merits of the Hancock and Houghton drinking water, and most everything else that can make the subject of an argument. The Hancock amateur team's adherents are bucking Ripley Park, and they opened the old Hancock Driving park Sunday with a brass band, which helped to reduce the attendance at Ripley. This promises to be a really interesting baseball season.

Grand Forks has protested the two games won by Winnipeg on the opening day. They claim that Sessions, who pitched the first game for Winnipeg, is still owned by Minneapolis, and that he had no right to pitch for the Maroons.

The second game is protested on the ground that President Price had not authorized a double header.

President Price will be in Duluth for the opening game here next Monday, and it is possible that Secretary Glass may also come up from Lake Linden for the day.

SPORTING COMMENT

Of course, if it came to a choice between a ball game and a circus, there might be cause for some hesitation. But when one can see both in one day!

* * *

Fargo and Winnipeg players should have gotten all the bad plays out of their systems, in those three horrible exhibitions this week. It would never do to allow anything like that to become a habit.

The position of Boston and Washington in the American league, calls to mind the old story of a man buried to his neck in the London mud. "Oh, that's nothing," he said, when rescued. "I was standing on top of a coach and four." Boston seems to be the coach and four, still going down.

Chicago beat Northwestern at chess. The contest is said to have been brutal in the extreme, and the president may be asked to call a meeting to eliminate all forms of roughness from the game in future.

A rank outsider won the Brooklyn handicap, and the bookmakers made a killing at the public's expense. There is no use denying it; betting is sinful.

The Toledo fans with a winning team, are as pleased as a bunch of kids with a new red wagon.

If there is fine weather Monday, the S. R. O. sign should be out at Athletic park, and seats on the top beam of the fence should bring about fifteen cents premium.

Training for the Duluth Boat club regatta during the last week was about as pleasant and exhilarating as playing tennis in a snow storm.

"Weather permitting" is the stereotyped introduction to all stories on the sporting pages of the Duluth papers this week.

Said the weather man to the northeaster,
Which has been hanging around since last Easter,
"You can't stay till December,
"Or even September,
"You don't own this town. You've just leased her."

John L. has a new outlet for the surplus coin and energy of retired pugilists. He advises them to buy Duluth real estate, and sit around and write checks. That beats tending bar in a gilded thirst emporium, and besides it's more respectable.

Frank Hall says that anything Sullivan handles is on the square. If Mr. Hall, who is one of the sporting promoters of the good, old-fashioned school, wants something to keep him and John L. busy, he ought to tackle the wrestling games in earnest. It's a wide field.

Two new thirty-two footers of a very speedy type have been added to the Duluth Yacht club fleet this week. A thirty footer, close hauled and heading into a southwest gale on Duluth harbor, makes life pretty nearly worth living.

Even the corner lot teams are discouraged with such weather as this. The "West End Sluggers" haven't played the "Holy Terrors" for four days.

The high school sophomores didn't do their duty by this year's freshman class and show the members of 1909 where they belong. The freshmen walloped the sophomores at football last fall, and now they're cleaning up everything in sight in baseball.

Winnipeg turned out 7,000 people to their baseball games on Victoria day, and yet they say baseball is distinctively an American game.

Chicago has cut out the rough, boisterous football games with Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, and has gone to the effete East for a nice, gentlemanly contest with Cornell.

The National league baseball standing looks familiar again. New York, Chicago, Pittsburg, Philadelphia ——— Brooklyn. You can read it with your eyes shut.

Imagine a prize fighter by the name of Aurelio Herrara, when he could so easily change it to Michael O'Hara. Duluth once had a ball player whose first name was Claude, but he didn't last long.

Houghton and Hancock fans are enjoying a good, old time baseball duel. Time was when Duluth and Superior used to enjoy such sport as this, but you can't maul a man around in the mud when he's down and out.

PECULIAR PLAYS.

Even Players Puzzled Sometimes on Things That Come Suddenly.

Columbus, O., May 26.—There are many peculiar ways in baseball and even the players themselves are puzzled at times as to a correct definition of the rules. Bobby Quinn of the Columbus club tells of a peculiar play that came up the other day and which the players have been unable to agree upon as yet. In a game there was a man on third base and as the score was close the runner decided to take a desperate chance and try to steal home.

Just as the pitcher took his position on the slab, facing the batter and with a notion to pitch, the runner at third base started on a sprint for the plate. The catcher saw the play from third base and instead of waiting for the ball to come over the plate ran ahead of the batter and got the ball and touched the runner out. The umpire called the man out at the plate, but a protest was made, the claim being that the pitcher had made a balk and that the runner should be safe.

Bobby Quinn claims, and with apparent right, that the run scored, as the pitcher was in position to deliver the ball and had made the motion to do so, which must be construed as a balk, in view of the fact that the ball did not go over the plate or even up to the plate. Then again the catcher had no right to go ahead of the catcher's box to prevent the ball going over, and that, too, would give the runner the right to score. Here is another point for the rules committee to decide.

DECLINED THE OFFER.

Buffalo Man Refused to Sell Handy J. for $12,500.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 26.—Horsemen generally regard the 4-year-old trotter Handy J., owned by A. H. Miller of this city, as one of the greatest green racing prospects in the country. This youngster, it will be remembered, was driven a mile at Cleveland last July as a 3-year-old, by W. B. McDonald, in 2:10½, the last half being covered in 1:03½. At that time Mr. Miller refused an offer of $7,000 for Handy J. More than one horseman, however, has kept the colt in mind, and the other day a Cleveland man came to Buffalo to buy him, and, seeking Mr. Miller out at the Iroquois, made him an offer of $10,000 the first crack. Mr. Miller refused this offer, and the Cleveland man came back with one of $12,500, which was also refused. Mr. Miller has owned quite a few high-class trotters and pacers during the last ten or twelve years, and none of them has been what may be called a really great horse, although he has long wanted one of that kind. Handy J. seems to stand an excellent chance of becoming great before next fall, and while the Cleveland man's offer was an unusually large one for a green 4-year-old that has never yet faced the starter, Mr. Miller feels that he will get more enjoyment out of the ownership of such a sensational trotter as Handy J seems likely to be than in the money he would have received for him had he taken up the offer. The colt cost Mr. Miller a very small part of what he can sell him for, and his refusal to part with him shows how true a sportsman he is. That he will fulfil the promise he gives of becoming a great racehorse is the wish of all who know the Buffalo man. Handy J. is now in W. L. Snow's stable at Hornellsville, and is in fine condition. He has been entered in nearly all of the big early closing purses, and will probably face the starter for the first time during the Buffalo grand circuit meeting.

SPORTS AT STANDSTILL

Wet Weather Has Paralyzed All Kinds of Outdoor Athletics.

Storm is Seriously Interfering With Training of Oarsmen.

Sports of all kinds have been at a standstill in Duluth during the week, on account of the weather.

The oarsmen have attempted to keep up their spring training, but they have been able to get out only about every second night, and then it did not prove a very satisfactory business. The cold wind, the rain, and the rough water, were not a very attractive proposition, and the rowing squad has not been a very large or enthusiastic body this week. The coaches and the oarsmen themselves are earnestly hoping for a change in the weather conditions, as the time for training is getting short, and every day is important now.

The tennis courts are a sea of mud several inches in depth, and the tennis players have been impatiently waiting for the sun to appear and dry up the top of the mile-and-a-half route.

Golf is out of the question in such weather as this. Even the most enthusiastic golfer would hardly essay a round of the links through water to his knees, and the grounds have been deserted for a week or ten days.

It is planned to open the season formally on Decoration day, with the same old proviso regarding the weather.

A few of the more enthusiastic yachtsmen have been out several times on the bay during the week, but even yachting is not a very enjoyable sport in a rainstorm, with a northeaster blowing.

Most of the members have their boats all fitted out, and the yacht club would assume its usual festive appearance at the first suggestion of fine weather.

The storm has also delayed work on the additions to the yacht club and the boat club, and progress has been slow during the week.

WOMAN TRAPSHOOTER.

Mrs. A. W. Butler of Chanute, Kan., Holds the Title.

Chanute, Kan., May 26.—Mrs. A. W. Butler, the woman trapshooter of this city, who did some excellent shooting at the Missouri and Kansas shoots held at Coffeyville last week, is the champion lady trapshooter in the United States, winning that title in the Grand American handicap shoot at Indianapolis, where she contested with Mrs. Nellie Bennett, of Denver, for championship honors.

She has been trapshooting for four or five years and during that time had made some remarkable scores. She conceived a passion for the dog and gun when she was yet in her teens and made frequent hunting excursions in the vicinity of her home in Illinois. She developed quickly into an expert field shot and bagged many birds. She first distinguished herself in the Illinois state tournament by making scores that compared favorably with the best scores made by professional shots. At Taylorville, where she was equally successful in ranking up with the best shots, she surprised and excited the admiration of the talent by firing 300 shells from a gun which were charged with three and three-quarters drahms of powder. This remarkable feat in a woman which can be accomplished by but few men shots, was the occasion of much comment among the experts in attendance. It was remarkable how a little woman like Mrs. Butler could stand the violent rebound 300 times in succession of a gun containing such a heavy charge of powder.

Mrs. Butler is a little below medium height. She is strong and lithe and weighs not more than 115 pounds. She is a brunette with expressive dark eyes and is considered a pretty woman; moreover, she is educated and refined. She is of that type of what many another society woman would be did she possess the environment, for in that happy, free life midway between town and country she has found that with which club life and society have no issue. Mrs. Butler is the wife of Arnold W. Butler, a well known Chanute oil man, who is himself a splendid shot. It is a close race between Mrs. Butler and her husband as to who is the better shot. Some times one wins one day and the other the next. This celebrated family of expert shots and their dog, Blck, a splendid Irish setter, are well known in the Southwest. They make frequent field trips and never fail to bag plenty of game when game can be found.

BEACON LIGHT AS DERBY CANDIDATE

Tom Hayes' Colt Looms Up for Race at Latonia.

Cincinnati, May 26.—Beacon Light is the nag that the Louisville contingent will back to win the Latonia Derby, which will be run on June 2, the fourth day of the spring meeting.

Beacon Light is by imp. Star Shoot, and is trained by Tom Hayes and owned by him and H. P. Headley, the breeder. His last three races have been very good, so good that Trainer Hayes declared that he would be willing to bet that Beacon Light beats Sir Huon in this event. As the latter will be the top-heavy favorite, Tom Hayes wants some odds for his wager, and up to date he has had no takers.

While Beacon Light has won his last three starts he did not carry over 100 pounds, nor did he go farther than a mile. Still, those that have seen his races have declared that he is a much improved colt and will prove a dangerous factor in the Derby. Tom Hayes is one of the best of Western trainers, and when Beacon Light goes to the post on June 2 he will be as fit as a fiddle and will be able to go every step of the mile-and-a-half route.

Of course there is no question as to Sir Huon's capabilities. He is a rattling good colt, in the opinion of many the best one that has come from the West in years. He has a lot of speed, can go six furlongs as fast as a printer and still be able to carry his flight of speed farther. To hear some of the trainers talk that saw him "prepped" for the Kentucky Derby one would imagine that this son of Falsetto would be able to make the measure of Sysonby at his best. In the race for the Latonia Derby he will have to carry 127 pounds, 10 more than he did at Louisville, and go two furlongs farther. He looks as if he would be able to do that with ease, while he is a giant he is well put together and good to look it. Trainer Pete Coyne had him well keyed up at Louisville and he stood the journey over the cuppy road better than some of the seasoned horses behind him. Since that stepofthe mile-and-a-half route.

He is not likely to until the Derby is run. That will not mean that he is short, as Pete Coyne knows exactly how to handle him.

Fit and well, Sir Huon looks like the one best bet for Derby day, but that kind of propositions have not fared well at Latonia. For a favorite to win this event is the exception, not the rule.

COMING BOUTS.

California Boxers Will Get Busy In the East.

Chicago, May 26.—Al Kaufmann, California's promising young heavyweight, has joined the exodus from the coast, and has started East looking for trouble. He wants to meet Sam Berger or Gus Ruhlin, and, if successful, will hunt another match with Jack O'Brien, the much-sought.

Tommy Burns is training near this city for his mill with Fitzsimmons at Eassington, Pa. Burns is rapidly developing into a simon-pure heavyweight of the short, stocky type. He is only 24 years old, and has hardly reached the zenith of his powers. At present he weighs 194 pounds, and is in pretty fair shape at that. He expects to meet old Bob weighing 195, and professes to believe he will have an easy time with the old fellow. He may be fooled a whole lot. The veteran is liable to turn a trick when least expected, as he has done on several well-remembered occasions.

RUHLIN AND FERGUSON

Will Appear In a Six-Round Bout in New York.

New York, May 26.—Gus Ruhlin and Sandy Ferguson are billed to mix things at New York this month, six rounds at catchweights. The event will signalize Ruhlin's first appearance for something over two years. However, Gus has always lived carefully and will probably show up in fair condition. Ferguson would have made a great fighter had he done likewise, but the nearest he has ever come to anything like training, or even temperate living, has been in the past few months, when, according to report, he was obliged to do so through force of circumstances, resulting from a little "enforced hospitality."

These heavyweight battles, however, will do the game in New York no good and should be held back, for a while anyway.

KING KELLY POORLY PAID

Worked for Years for Salary Now Paid for a Season.

Tim Murnane Defends Kelly From an Attack by Anson.

Boston, May 26.—The utter collapse of the Boston Americans has caused much apprehension among the fans as to the future of Jimmie Collins as a manager.

The Boston Americans must now commence to build up a team from the foundation, and this is no small matter, with all other clubs hustling for the best of the young talent. With plenty of money behind a liberal management and a keen knowledge of the possibilities of a winner, Boston will be well taken care of, and the reconstructed team soon as big a favorite as the old one. Speed is necessary in baseball, and the gradual slowing up of our team has been more noticeable to outsiders than to those who follow the boys closely. This is often the case. With the exception of Grimshaw every old member of the Boston team has materially slowed up this season, even after the finest chance for preparation, and this finding will have a bearing on the trip usually mapped out for spring practice.

It was just twenty years ago this summer that our leading Boston Baseball club commenced to weaken, until the owners found it necessary to look about for players to strengthen up. The one man wanted by the public was Michael J. Kelly of the Chicago club, and before the next season came around Boston had secured this wonderful ball player for the sum of $10,000, proving the finest investment ever known in baseball, for Kelly was a wonderful attraction, both at home and on the road. Why he quit Chicago was never told, as far as I can find out, although I heard the story from Kelly the next season while traveling with the Boston club, and it would not now be brought partially to light but for a chapter I read some time ago in Capt. A. C. Anson's book, "A Ball Player's Career," of which the following are extracts: "Kelly was fond of whisky. He was a good fielder when not 'bowled up.' The last time that I saw him was at an Eastern hotel barroom, and during the brief space of time that we conversed together, he threw in enough whisky to put an ordinary man under the table. After leaving Boston Mike went to Altoona to manage a team for Al. Johnson, but whisky got the better of him and he was a failure. He died some years ago in New Jersey, a warning to ball players. Money slipped through his fingers like water through the meshes of a fisherman's net." Now, isn't that a swell biography of the greatest genius the game ever produced, a player never fined by an umpire, a player who never used a foul word or injured a player on a ball field? Considerate of every one from the bird in her nest to the king of Old England, had he been a disturbing element, a weak hearted, ordinary tramp, he was entitled to more consideration from a man of Anson's standing in the community. Talk about your muckrake writing, was not that the limit? I wonder how Old Anse got away with it in Chicago?

"Kelly spent money like water," says Anson. The books of the Chicago club show that Kelly received $12,700 for his seven years' work for the Chicago club—about $1,800 per year, starting with $1,300 and finishing with $2,500 the year he led the league in batting, and all this time when not catching he played the outfield, and was the greatest drawing card in the business. Several ball players not in Kelly's class have received as much money for one season as did the King receive for his seven years with Anson. In fact, the very year that Anson or the Chicago club disposed of Kelly, Anson's stipend was close to $12,000, for he received 20 per cent of all money that came to the Chicago club for the sale of players. Kelly was a prominent figure on the diamond from 1878 to 1884. He went from Boston to New York and finished the season a success in 1894, and was receiving big money doing a vaudeville sketch the winter of '94,, when he caught cold on the boat coming from New York and died at Boston, not in New York, as Anson says. He was given burial by loving friends with one of the largest funerals ever known of in Boston. An army of baseball enthusiasts were sincerely sorry for poor Mike's sad end.

Let us see what this man Kelly did for Anson. Until Kelly joined Chicago Anson never led a championship team. In fact, for twenty-one years Anson managed Chicago, and the records show but five pennant victories. Those five years Mike Kelly was with the team playing remarkable ball. In his seven years with Chicago Kelly stood fifth as a batsman in the whole league and led all in a walk as a base runner and run-getter. Anson was never able to land another pennant after Kelly left him.

In 1880 Kelly came to realize that he was not being treated fairly and decided to lead the league in batting, if possible, and if he succeeded he would then declare all off with the Chicago club. It was a hot race that season for batting honors between Dan Brouthers, Anson and Kelly, but H. Michael was out for a record and the two big sluggers were forced to the mat for the count, while King Kel romped off with the honors. "No more Chicago for me," said Kel, and he meant it. The Chicago management realized that Kelly was in earnest, and simply got all the money it could for his release. Boston doubling his salary from the start.

In the six years that I traveled with the Boston club, where Kelly was the headliner, I never saw him unfit to go out and play his best game. He was bright and entertaining, would give his last penny to a friend, loved a social glass, but never lost his head, and ever extremely kird to women and children, and to know him as I did was to love him.

THE FIRST "CHARLEY HORSE"

How a Famous Baseball Term Originated at a Race Track.

"Ever hear how the term 'charley horse' originated?" asked Hugh Nicol, now baseball coach at Purdue university, the other day. "No? Well, I don't believe I ever saw it in print myself. Joe Quest coined the phrase, away back in the summer of 1882, in Chicago.

"It's a race horse story and it happened this way. Chicago was having an off day. Our schedule called for some eighty odd games in those seasons, and we had more spare time than the big leaguers have now. There was racing down on the South side, and some of the boys took great interest in it. Tom Burns, then playing short for Anson; Corcoran and Goldsmith, the pitchers, and Ned Williamson followed the ponies to some extent. The tip had gone out the night before that a horse named Charley was a sure winner for that afternoon. If that horse had any other name, I've forgotten it. The tip was touted as a cinch; it simply couldn't lose, and we all got on.

"Those of us who didn't care so much for the jumpers were persuaded to lay down a few dimes by those who did, and we were all in with the exception of Joe Quest. No amount of argument could induce him to bet a copper on that horse. We all got permission to go to the track, and all lined up in the betting ring when our horse Charley was due to start. Quest in the meantime had been getting some lively chaffing for his unwillingness to bet on what was a dead sure thing.

"The horses got away to a good start, and Charley jumped to the lead. Every stride he increased it, and through the back stretch he was a dozen lengths to the good. Joe Quest became the center of a ring of jolliers. 'Mike' Kelly, afterward the $10,000 beauty, whacked Joe over the head with his cane and every man of that dozen slapped him on the back and merrily jostled him around in their joy over a sure killing. Joe was doing what he could toward watching the race.

"In the last turn Charley stumbled, went lame in his right hind leg, and the field closed up. Quest threw a fit: 'Look, look!' he shouted, as the first horse passed Charley. 'Look at your Charley horse now.' And he kept it up. He had it all to himself, and it was all his. Charley finished outside the money, and we didn't hear the last of 'our Charley horse' the rest of that day.

"It was during the progress of the game the next day that the term came to be applied to ball players. We were hooked up with New York on the old lake front grounds. Corcoran and Kelly were working. Capt. Anson was on first, Quest, Burns and Williamson were playing the infield, and Flint, Gore and myself were in the outfield.

"We had the Giants 3-4 and were at the bat. Quest was down the left coach line and was doing a famous job. Joe always was a good coacher. Gore had rapped out a single and Williamson was up. He was a pretty sure hitter; but Gore was a good sprinter and Quest figured he could do the trip to second, and sent him away. About half way down Gore stepped into a pocket and sprung a strain, just the way the racing pony had done the day before, and Quest sang out: 'There's your Charley horse—he'd made it all right if it hadn't been for that old Charley horse.'

"Gore was nalled, but the term stuck. He had a Charley horse for a couple of weeks afterward, and it's been called by that name ever since."

NO FIGHT AT LOS ANGELES

Squabble Between Fighters and Managers Over Weight.

Each Side Made Charges of Sharp Practice by Other.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 26.—There was no fight between Battling Nelson, the lightweight champion, and Aurelio Herrera last night as scheduled. After an almost interminable wait of two and a half hours the crowd was dismissed at ten minutes to 11 o'clock because Herrera refused to weigh in. Before the crowd of 4,500 was finally dismissed there was a squabble between the fighters and their managers over the weight. Both sides made charges of sharp practices on the part of the other in the matter of weight. As near as can be learned the situation which led up to the calling off of the fight was as follows:

The articles of agreement called for the weighing in at 6 o'clock p. m., both men to scale 131 pounds. The men were on hand at the stipulated hour. There were scales there, but Herrera claims they were out of order and could not be adjusted. After half an hour's argument Jacobs sent Herrera to dinner. After that he refused to allow the Mexican to weigh in. Nelson offered to go to the baths to weigh in but Jacobs declined.

The following statement was made by Jacobs:

"I had Herrera at McCarey's office at a quarter to 6 o'clock. I tried to balance the scales, which by the way, were the scales Nolan had brought in from Nelson's quarters, but could not do so. They were six or seven pounds off. We argued and squabbled until 6:15 and then I sent Herrera to eat. After that I would not consent to weigh in. I claim the weight forfeit because I was on hand at the hour to weigh, and I also claim the appearance money because I had my man in the ring at 8:30. I lived up to the articles and I do not think we are to blame for the fiasco."

Nolan, Nelson's manager, said:

"I had Nelson at McCarey's office at 6 o'clock. We found the scales out of order. I wanted to go to the baths and weigh, but Herrera refused. I then stated that I would claim weigh forfeit, and went back to the baths. Nelson came into the ring, as you saw, and made the proposition to fight him at 140 pounds. That is something that a champion in his class never offered to do before. He had everything to lose, and I did not approve of it, but he wanted to fight, and wanted to satisfy the crowd."

Manager McCarey, of the club, said: "Twice during the afternoon the scales were tested and found correct, but at 6 o'clock when they came to be tested they were fifteen pounds off, and it was impossible to get the men to come to an agreement. I am very much disappointed over the fiasco, but I could do nothing to bring them together."

RECEIVE 1905 PENNANT.

Bunting Will Be Hoisted at Athletic Park On Opening Day.

The 1905 pennant of the Duluth ball club was received this morning from the A. G. Spalding company of Chicago.

It is a handsome banner of silk, and will be hoisted at Athletic park at the opening of the league season Monday.

A telegram was also received this morning from Secretary Glass, stating that he had received formal notice that the Northern and Copper country league had been raised in the classification from a D class to a C class league.

MRS. STOUT WINS AGAIN.

New York, May 26.—For the fourth time in her career as a golfer, Mrs. Charles T. Stout, of the Richmond Country club, Staten Island, won the woman's Metropolitan golf championship title yesterday. She defeated Miss Georgianna M. Bishop of the Brooklawn Golf club, Bridgeport, Conn., by one up in the final eighteen hole round on the links of the Englewood Golf club at Englewood, N. J.

TO KILL OFF THE INDEPENDENTS

Was Sole Business of an Employe of Standard Oil.

Cleveland, May 26.—A total of nineteen witnesses were called by Interstate Commerce Commissioners Prouty and Clements in the Standard Oil inquiry here yesterday. Testimony bordering on the sensational was obtained from several witnesses. That of George L. Lane of Mansfield, Ohio, a former employe of the Standard Oil company, was regarded as particularly important. According to his evidence, Lane was for about fourteen months, in 1901 and 1902, employed by the Standard Oil company for the particular purpose of driving all independent oil peddlers in a dozen or more of the principal cities and towns of Northern Ohio out of busines. He said he was employed by C. M. Lyons of the Cleveland office of the Standard Oil company to go to certain designated places and use every means, fair or foul, to force the independents to quit.

"My instructions," he said, "were to kill them and I was told that if I could not do the job, somebody else would be sent to take my place. I worked in Youngstown and surrounding small towns, Canton, Girard, Warren, Ravenna, Massallion, Mansfield, Elyria, Oberlin and other places. In all of the towns, with the exception of Youngstown, the independent peddlers were forced to abandon their business. In Youngstown a man named William H. Vahey was encountered and, despite everything we could do, he held his trade. We gave oil away by the barrel and tank load, but it did no good. Vahey's customers threw it away."

WILL HOLD UP ITS END

Copper Country Fans Confident That Their Teams Are Winners.

Houghton and Calumet Have Struck Fast Gait at Opening.

Houghton, Mich., May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although cold and wet weather has interfered considerably with the Northern-Copper Country league games at this end of the circuit, the fans have had a fairly good opportunity to size up their respective teams, and, after one week's playing, the fans are beginning to feel assured that the Copper Country end of the league will hold its own—and perhaps a little better—with the teams representing the towns in the West and Northwest.

Taking the games played thus far as a criterion, the Calumet and Houghton teams have Hancock and Lake Linden beaten a mile for the leadership in this section. Both the Giants and Aristocrats seem to have struck their stride at the very beginning, and should they continue to show their present form, when they travel west, the teams at that end of the circuit may well fear for the results of the games.

Calumet has a steady team, which will doubtless be carried through the season. Manager Jack Morrison and Paul Grimes are showing great form in the box, and as for "Bubbles" Foulkes, he is the biggest surprise that copperdom baseball has seen in many a moon. Foulkes was a very likely candidate for the baseball branch of the Down-and-Out club last year, but this season he has composed a more effective player or he has hit upon a wonder-working charm, for the best stickers in this end of the league have gone down before his little left wing.

The Calumet team is showing good form, both in the field and at the bat, and unless the unforeseen happens, the Aristocrats may be counted upon to make a strong run for the flag.

As for Houghton, the team as a whole is a surprise, both to the Houghton fans and those in the other towns of the county. The backers of the Houghton team were not saying much, but they were evidently sawing wood. About April 1, there was hardly a fan in Houghton who would not have said that the baseball sky in his town was overcast with clouds. All thought that there was nothing being done, but when Manager Cassiboine's crowd gathered around him, it was soon made evident that Houghton had the cream of the available ball players and that the Giants were not to be lost in the shuffle by any means. As evidence there are the four victories over the Hancock team in the opening series.

Beecher is the only man on the Houghton pitching staff who has done anything but ordinary work in the box. His two shut out games—one against Hancock and the other against Lake Linden—show that he has the goods, and he can be counted on as a fixture. Hastings' arm is in bad condition, and he fell down in the ninth inning last Saturday on that account, but he is a good fielder, and he can be counted on to do enough to earn his salary until his arm comes around. Barry, the Decatur wonder, may not be a goldbrick, but he has yet to demonstrate the fact. His work has been anything but phenomenal as yet, but the wise ones are saying: "He can deliver the goods," and until he does deliver them, the fans are saying nothing but awaiting developments. Pete Wagner, the local twirler, has pitched but two innings thus far this season, relieving Barry on Monday. In the two innings but six men faced Wagner, and he may yet be able to deliver the goods, though Manager Cassiboine is a little wary about putting him in the box for a time. When Whittemore, the new first baseman Cassiboine has signed, joins the team the line-up will be complete, and will doubtless go through the season substantially as it is at present.

Lake Linden is a most unfortunate aggregation. Just as the season was about to open, Shortstop Schubert was taken ill, and it will probably be some time before he will be able to get back into the game. Lynch, who is playing the short field at present, is doing some good work, but he has not the ability of Schubert, especially at the bat. Then Kurke, the catcher, has not yet reported, and Wegman is woefully weak in the arm and with the stick. The Lakes have a good quartet of pitchers, but they, too, seem to be having hard luck, and Dr. Glass' bunch is making rapid strides toward the bottom of the well. But when Schubert, Kurke and Schurch, the last named the St. Thomas college pitcher, report, the Hopefuls may get back into the game as strong as ever, and nobody in the Copper country would be surprised if they figured in the home stretch.

Hancock is the team about which there is the most speculation. Can Wreath gather around him a bunch, which will dispell the bad impression created by the loss of so many games at the opening of the season? That is the question being asked and the close observer of things baseball would be inclined to answer "Yes." As baseball goes it looks as though Hancock has been playing in hard luck. It is manifestly necessary that some team must hold the bottom place in the percentage column and it looks as though fate has decreed that Hancock shall hold the honor (?) for a time at least. But the way the Hancock boys play, even in the face of adversity, shows a perseverance which should count in the long run, and Hancock may yet be able to make a good showing in the race.

There is no apparent reason why the team should not win a fair percentage of the games. The team has done no rank fielding and at Calumet, Wednesday, mid-season form was shown. Then the way the Patriots batted out a victory over Lake Linden Thursday, betokens something. There is such a thing as a team getting over a slump like the Hancock team has experienced and the Hancock fans are living in hopes that their representatives will justify their expectations.

SCHEFFANER OPTIMISTIC

Believes Future San Francisco Will be Well Built City.

Tells of Proposed Plans That Were of Vivid Interest.

Paris, May 25.—Herman Scheffaner, vice president of the San Francisco architectural club, has just been interviewed upon the proposition for the beautifying of San Francisco. Among other things, he said:

"I know my fellow citizens and my faith in the future of my birthplace remains as firm as ever. Profiting through sad experience the San Franciscoans will rear their city as strongly proof against fire and earthquake shock as human skill can make it.

"In 1905, when never a thought of the present horror was present in the minds of her citizens, plans on a monumental scale had been prepared for still further beautifying the California metropolis.

"These plans were prepared by the famous architect, Burnham of Chicago, collaborating with the foremost architects, artists, sculptors and landscape gardeners of the West.

"The project had been formed by the Civic league for the beautifying of San Francisco, an organization composed of the most prominent and wealthy citizens under the direction of James Phelan, former mayor of San Francisco, patron of arts, and multimillionaire; Claus Spreckles, the sugar king, and Nathan Fohrmann, president of the Merchants' association, who had thoroughly studied the beauties of the world's fairest cities.

"These plans, which I propose to describe, have now a vivid interest, since it is, according to them that San Francisco is to be built.

"Necessarily, the plans were forced to conform to the already existing and permanent park of the city, in which great edifices of granite, marble and brick abounded.

"From the ferry depot, with its graceful tower patterned after that of La Giralda, in Seville, Market street, extended southwesterly, diagonally intersecting the streets to the north and stopping at right angles the streets to the south. At the far end of this main artery of the city are two impressive conical hills, the Twin Peaks.

"The magnificent city hall was invisible from Market street, hidden by rows of insignificant business buildings, which it was intended to clear away.

"Close by, at the junction of Market street, with Van Ness avenue a beautiful wide boulevard, with fine residences, a vast circular colonnade was to be built, with fountains and allegorical groups of statuary.

"This will form the core of the city, the hub from which many new streets will radiate, much like those of Washington or Vienna.

"Golden Gate park, with its lawns, forests, flowers and drives, will be extended by means of its "pan-handle" for miles into the city, close to this central point.

"It was proposed to surmount the Twin Peaks with colossal statues and tremendous electric beacon lights. This idea was suggested several years ago by the noted Adolf Sutro, after he had erected a statue, "Light Defeating Darkness," upon Mount Olympus, a local hill.

"The various other commanding heights which give the city its impressive and picturesque aspect and compared to which Rome's hillocks sink into insignificance will probably also be treated in a similar manner, so that San Francisco, whether seen from the bay or the ocean, will lift her sky line with undiminished grandeur.

"Telegraph hill was, it was proposed, to be terraced with sloping walks and gardens with marble steps and overhanging galleries, and its famous castle, mediaeval in style, rebuilt in stone.

"The eminences of Russian, Nob and Rincon hills, of Parnassus and Pacific heights, it was designed to crown with imposing masses, artistically reared to form one harmonious whole.

"All streets will certainly be planted with trees and the more important thoroughfares lighted with large arc lamps swung from ornamental standards.

"A wide driveway with rows of trees and shaded walks will completely encircle the city from Golden Gate park to the water front, to Black point into the military Presidio, thence along the precipitous cliffs by the Golden Gate to the famous Cliff House and to the boulevard along the shores of the Pacific.

"A part of the mission (so named from its settlement by the Spanish Franciscan fathers) is, according to the 1906 plan, to be embraced by this great loop, over twenty-five miles long, winding and rising and falling according to the ground. California street, where it rises steeply from the heart of the banking district in Montgomery street—which formerly marked the shore of the bay—to the summit of Nob hill, it was suggested, should be covered with an elaborate structure of winding inclined planes beneath which a tunnel was to run for the cable cars that glide up and down these soaring streets, where no vehicle dare venture.

"It was also decided to extend the fire limits beyond which no wooden houses must be built far over their present boundaries. The wires of the electric trams, which had so disfigured the streets, were to be placed underground, and their poles, with those of the telephone and light services, were to vanish, all eye sores were to be removed from the general scheme.

"The board of harbor commissioners and the board of public works were preparing plans for other improvements, such as the construction of new quays and docks of granite to replace the wooden wharves.

"The building of a magnificent new opera house was, likewise, assured, which was to excel in splendor and size anything in the Western hemisphere. A new continental railway line, the Western Pacific, an enterprise of the Goulds, is under way, its terminus being at San Francisco."

CHEAP COURTING.

Boston Herald: There lived in the town of Epping, N. H., an old man who was noted for his penuriousness. One winter the schoolteacher boarded at his house, and she had a beau who came once a week to spend the evening with her. This, of course, necessitated heating and lighting the parlor.

Nothing was said about this item of expense at the end of the term, when the teacher paid her board bill, but the next day, happening to meet the young man on the street, the old man accosted him, and, after a few preliminaries about the weather, remarked:

"You know we've been to some little extra expense this winter running that fire in the parlor for you and teacher. I didn't say anything to her, but I thought perhaps you'd be willing to make it right."

"Why, yes," replied the young man, "I am willing to pay anything reasonable, of course. How much do you think you ought to have?"

"Waal," drawled old Mr. B., "I guess 'bout 10 cents will do."

A GARDENERS' HOME.

Kansas City Journal: John M. Hunter of New York, president of the National Gardeners' association, composed of landscape and decorative gardeners of the country, is touring California with the object of finding a location for a national gardeners' home, which is to be established in that state. He expresses the opinion that Golden Gate park, San Francisco, is the most beautiful in this country.

Winnipeg, Man., May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a game marked by perpetual wrangling on the part of the Winnipeg players regarding the decisions of Umpire Bassen, Duluth won out here yesterday by the score of 8 to 6.

The Maroons began their kicking in the opening inning, and grew gradually more aggressive, until in the sixth they made a combined assault on the umpire. Hippert, the Winnipeg shortstop, was at bat, the score standing 5 to 5. The umpire called two strikes on him, and with his bat uplifted the player rushed at Bassen. The other members of the team joined in the rush, and for a moment it looked as if the umpire would fare badly. The Duluth players closed in about him, however, and protected him from assault.

The batting of Barto was the feature of the game, aside from this little exhibition. The center fielder had a single, a double and a triple out of four times up.

Wilson was put to the bad in the fifth inning, and Zeider fared but little better. The White Sox got but eight hits, but they came when needed, while Morton kept the twelve hits of the Maroons well scattered.

No Copper Country Games.

Houghton, Mich., May 26.—(Special to The Herald).—Both games scheduled in the copper country yesterday were postponed on account of wet weather.

Secretary Glass of the league yesterday received official notification of the raising of the organization from Class D to Class C.

PEOPLE WILL TALK.

We may go through the world, but it will be slow,
If we listen to all that is said as we go.
We will be worried and fretted and kept in a stew;
Too meddlesome tongues must have something to do.
For people will talk, you know, people will talk;
Oh, yes, they must talk, you know.

If quiet and modest, you'll have it presumed
Your humble position is only assumed—
You're a wolf in sheep's clothing, or else you're a fool;
But don't get excited, keep perfectly cool.
For people will talk, you know, people will talk;
Oh, yes, they must talk, you know.

And then if you know the least boldness of heart,
Or slight inclination to take your own part,
They'll call you an upstart, conceited and vain;
But keep straight ahead, and don't stop to complain.
For people will talk, you know, people will talk;
Oh, yes, they must talk, you know.

If threadbare your coat, and old-fashioned your hat,
Some one of course will take notice of that,
And hint rather strong that you can't pay your way,
But don't get excited whatever they say.
For people will talk, you know, people will talk;
Oh, yes, they must talk, you know.

If you dress in the fashion, don't think to escape;
For they will criticise then in a different shape;
You're ahead of your means, or you tailor's unpaid;
But mind your own business, there's naught to be made.
For people will talk, you know, people will talk;
Oh, yes, they must talk, you know.

They'll talk fine before you, but then at your back,
Of venom and slander there's never a lack;
How kind and polite in all that they say,
But bitter as gall when you are away.
For people will talk, you know, people will talk;
Oh, yes, they must talk, you know.

The best way to do is to do as you please,
For your mind (if you have one) will then be at nease;
Of course you will meet with all sorts of abuse,
But don't think to stop them, it isn't any use.
For people will talk, you know, people will talk;
Oh, yes, they must talk, you know.

A VINDICATION FOR DOCTOR PIERCE

Decision by the Supreme Court of New York State, Against the Ladies' Home Journal.

A verdict has been rendered in favor of the plaintiff in the libel suit brought against the Ladies' Home Journal (published by the Curtis Publishing Company) by the WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, of which DR. R. V. PIERCE is President.

The suit was for $200,000 damages, and was brought by Dr. Pierce against the Curtis Publishing Co. for making false statements about one of his standard family medicines, known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In the May number of the Ladies' Home Journal (1904), Mr. Edward Bok, the editor, stated that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription contained alcohol and other harmful ingredients, and Dr. Pierce had in the action alleged the defendant maliciously published this article containing such false and defamatory matter. Dr. Pierce further claimed that no alcohol is, or ever was, contained in his "Favorite Prescription"; that said medicine was a vegetable preparation and contained no deleterious ingredients whatever; that Mr. Bok's statement pretending to give some of the ingredients of said medicine was wholly and absolutely false.

The retraction printed by the Curtis Publishing Co. two months after the libelous statement appeared stated definitely that analyses had been made at their request and that the "Favorite Prescription" did not contain either alcohol, opium or digitalis. But the business of Dr. Pierce was injured from the effects of the publication of the original libel and the matter was brought before a jury in the Supreme Court of New York State who promptly rendered a verdict in the Doctor's favor.

During the trial of the libel suit Dr. Lee H. Smith, Vice-President of the World's Dispensary Medical Association, stated under oath that the ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription were extracted from the following native roots: Golden Seal, Blue Cohosh, Lady's Slipper, Black Cohosh and Unicorn, by means of pure glycerine. He was asked how he knew, as a physician and experienced medical man, that the "Favorite Prescription" was a cure for the diseases peculiar to women, and he stated that he knew such was the fact because of his professional experience and the many thousands of women whose ills had been cured by this "Prescription." This experience was corroborated by the standard Medical Authorities of the several schools of medicine endorsing the various ingredients in the strongest terms. Dr. Smith being asked to give his authorities, read from the standard works, such as the United States Dispensatory; The American Dispensatory; Organic Medicines, by Grover Coe, M. D.; Materia Medica and Therapeutics, by Professor Finley Ellingwood of the Bennett Medical College of Chicago; "New Remedies," by Professor Edwin M. Hale, M. D.; Text-Book of Therapeutics, by Dr. Hobart A. Hare, Professor in University of Pa.; Laurence Johnson, M. D., Prof. in University of New York; Professor John King, Author of "Woman and Her Diseases"; Wm. Paine, M. D., Author of "New School Practice of Medicine"; Professor John M. Scudder, M. D., Author of a treatise on "The Diseases of Women"; Horatio C. Wood, M. D., Author of "Therapeutics"; Roberts Bartholow, A. M., M. D., Prof. of Materia Medica, Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia.

An alcoholic compound for women is something no woman should take and yet "Favorite Prescription" is the only tonic and nervine put up for sale through druggists, especially for woman's weaknesses, that does not contain alcohol and that too in large quantities. Womanly weakness will always bring nervous irritability and a nervous condition, for which alcohol is the worst thing in the world. What a woman thus afflicted needs is a vegetable tonic and invigorating nervine like Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which will build up her delicate system and bring about a healthy tone.

Many women owe their present good health to the fact that they consulted Dr. Pierce by letter, giving him all possible information about their condition, symptoms, etc., and received in return good medical advice which cost them nothing. This is why we advise you to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce by no means confines himself to prescribing his well-known proprietary medicines. He tells you in the most common-sense way what ails you, what you ought to do, what line of treatment should be followed out in your particular case, and if your case does not indicate the need of his proprietary medicine, he tells you plainly and frankly what you do need, and the best possible method of improving your health.

Dr. Pierce does not claim for his "Favorite Prescription" that it is a "cure-all." It is recommended as a most perfect specific for woman's peculiar ailments. So uniform are the results which follow the use of this remarkable remedy, that it can be truly affirmed of "Favorite Prescription" that it always helps and almost always cures. Ninety-eight per cent. of the women who give this medicine a fair and faithful trial are cured and remain cured.

It is a powerful invigorating tonic, imparting health and strength in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. The local, womanly health is so intimately related to the general health that when diseases of the delicate womanly organs are cured the whole body gains in health and strength. For weak and sickly women who are "worn-out," "run-down" or debilitated, especially for women who work in store, office or schoolroom, who sit at the typewriter or sewing machine, or bear heavy household burdens, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proven a priceless benefit because of its health-restoring and strength-giving powers.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea, or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womanly organs. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Cures obstinate cases. "Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhœa, excessive flowing, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions and irregularities, prolapsus or falling of the pelvic organs, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation, and ulceration, inflammation, more or less pain and tenderness over the lower abdomen accompanied with "internal heat."

What Some Most Eminent Medical Men Say of the Ingredients of Which Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is Composed.

GOLDEN SEAL ROOT (Hydrastis Canadensis).

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., says: "It stimulates the digestive processes, and increases the assimilation of food. By these means the blood is enriched. * * * * The consequent improvement on the nervous and glandular systems are natural results." He continues: "In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett College, Chicago, says of Golden Seal: "It is an important remedy in disorders peculiar to women. In all catarrhal conditions, especially if there be muscular relaxation and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. Roberts Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Med. College, says of Golden Seal: "Valuable in uterine hemorrhage (flooding), menorrhagia (profuse menstruation), and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation). Locally good in leucorrhœa, ulceration and erosion of the cervix (neck of uterus), unhealthy and sloughing sores and ulcers of the leg."

From the foregoing extracts it will be seen that Golden Seal root is a very efficient curative agent in most of the weaknesses and ailments affecting the organs peculiarly feminine. But there are several other unsurpassed remedial agents for the cure of woman's maladies found growing in the forests of this blessed land of ours, and these Dr. Pierce knew to be of such great efficacy as to make it advisable to combine them in just the right proportions, with the Golden Seal root, in making up the compound known as his "Favorite Prescription." Thus, he believes he has produced the most happy combination of the most valuable remedial agencies known to modern medical science for the cure of woman's peruliar weaknesses and maladies.

BLACK COHOSH ROOT (Cimicifuga Racemosa).

Prof. John King, M. D., in the American Dispensatory says: "This is a very active, powerful and useful remedy. It possesses an undoubted influence over the nervous system. In small doses the appetite and digestion are improved." He continues, "Upon the reproductive organs it exerts a specific influence, promoting the menstrual discharge.

"Its action is slow, but its effects are permanent. It has been used successfully as an antispasmodic in hysteria, epilepsy when due to menstrual failings, periodical convulsions, nervous excitability, and many other spasmodic affections."

Horatio C. Wood, M. D., Professor University of Pennsylvania, says: "Of unquestionable value in chorea (St. Vitus's dance)."

LADY'S SLIPPER ROOT (Cypripedium Pubescens).

The United States Dispensatory says: "Cypripedium (Lady's Slipper) appears to be a gentle nervous stimulant or antispasmodic. Dr. E. Ives, of New Haven, Conn., commends the remedy in hypochondriasis (melancholy and depression of mind), neuralgia and morbid sensitiveness of the nervous system generally, and especially of the eye."

Edward M. Hale, M. D., Professor in Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, says: "Useful in hysteria, chorea (St. Vitus's dance), nervous headache, neuralgia and 'fidgetyness."

BLUE COHOSH ROOT (Caulophyllum Thalictroides).

The American Dispensatory says: "Blue Cohosh is used by Indian squaws, they employing a decoction of the root for two or three weeks previous to labor to facilitate childbirth."

Prof. John King, M. D., says: "Blue Cohosh has enjoyed a well-merited reputation, for when used by delicate women, or those who experience prolonged and painful labors, for several weeks previous to confinement, it gives tone and vigor to all the parts engaged in the accouchement, facilitating its progress, and reliving much suffering." Prof. Hale testifies that Blue Cohosh acts as an anti-abortive by relieving the irritation upon which the trouble depends." Dr. King says, "It has been employed to relieve irritation of the reproductive organs dependent on congestion. It controls chronic inflammatory states of the organs and gives tone in cases of debility. In the sexual disorders of the female it is indicated by tenderness and pain in the uterus. In debilitated patients, it has been very successfully used in cases of hysteria to overcome the attack, and to relieve ovarian pain, or irritation when accompanying that disorder. Chronic ovaralgia, leucorrhœa, amenorrhœa (suppressed menstruation) and dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation), are conditions in which it has been most successfully employed."

UNICORN ROOT (Helonias Dioica).

The American Dispensatory (prepared by Professors King and Scudder), says: "Helonias, or Unicorn root, has been found very beneficial in dyspepsia, loss of appetite, and for the removal of worms. It is more especially applicable in indigestion, dyspepsia and mal-assimilation, where the trouble is reflex from, or associated with, wrongs of the female reproductive apparatus. Such digestive disturbances as depend upon uterine and ovarian irritation, or upon lack of uterine activity, in chlorotic anemia (thin, or watery, poor blood), are benefited by it. It is valuable in atony (weakness) of the generative organs." Prof. King says: "Have found this plant to possess a decidedly benefical influence in cases of sexual lassitude in both sexes, the result of excesses, especially in those instances where there are symptoms of gastric (stomach) derangement with impaired memory, mental apathy, or indifference, and an enfeebled condition of the general system, with weakness or dull pain in the renal, or lumbo-sacral (small of the back) region. In diseases of the reproductive organs of females, and especially of the uterus, it is one of our most valuable agents, acting as a uterine tonic, and gradually removing abnormal conditions, while at the same time it imparts tone and vigor to the reproductive organs. Hence, it is much used in leucorrhœa, amenorrhœa, dysmenorrhœa and to remove the tendency to repeated and successive miscarriages. A particular phase removed by it is the irritability and despondency that often attends uterine troubles. In painful menstruation it has been found especially adapted to those cases in which there is pelvic fullness, a sensation as if the pelvic organs were distended with blood, and the aching, bearing-down organs feel as if they would fall out of the body. Its action here is very decided. It is considered useful by some for the relief of the vomiting of pregnancy. Helonias is a decided tonic to the urinary tract."

Dr. John Fyfe, Editor of the Department of Therapeutics in The Eclectic Review says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) one of the chief ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription:

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator and always favors a condition which makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system, cannot fail to be of great usefulness and of the utmost importance to the general practitioner of medicine. In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent."

He continues: "Helonias (Unicorn root)—through its tonic and alterative influence—acts equally well in amenorrhœa (suppressed menstruation) and in menorrhagia (flooding or profuse menstruation). It is especially called for in cases of amenorrhœa which are accompanied by general debility and an atonic (weak) condition of the digestive organs, as it increases the appetite and promotes digestion and assimilation. When there is atony (weakness) of the generative organs and a tendency to miscarriage its tonic influence upon the sexual system will aid much in bringing about a normal condition of the structures involved. In sterility and impotence its curative power is unmistakable, and within a reasonable time it will restore to healthful activity all cases not dependent upon organic wrongs, and in leucorrhœa and in defective menstruation it is a frequently needed remedy."

The following are among the leading indications for Helonias: "Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhœa; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flowing), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa, (suppressed menstruation), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and an anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading and predominating ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias.

We invite all those who would like to read more extended extracts from eminent medical authorities treating of ALL the several ingredients entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines, to send for a booklet recently compiled by Dr. Pierce and published by the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N. Y., which will be sent FREE to any one requesting a copy of the same, by postal card or letter. Ask for the little book of extracts compiled by Dr. Pierce.

NEWSPAPERS CENTURY OLD

Curious Relics Fall to the Ownership of a Duluth Man--Some of Their Interesting Features--Development of the Newspaper Strikingly Illustrated.

Albert H. Mather of 1103 Fifty-first avenue east, through the death of his sister, Miss Mary Mather, who died in St. Louis last year, and who was a well known antiquarian and bibliopolist, has recently come into the possession of some very valuable old books, manuscripts and newspapers, of ancient date. Among a bundle of old newspapers are two, found in excellent condition, which were published nearly a century ago. The Boston Gazette, published Thursday, Oct. 11, 1810; and "The Genius of the Lakes," printed at Erie, Pa., Saturday, June 22, 1816.

Taking the Boston Gazette as a pair of spectacles or a medium through which to read the drama of human events representing Boston a hundred years ago, things generally must have been distressingly tame in that seaport.

The Gazette, as one reads its peculiar print, small columns of disjointed news thrown promiscuously together; unmistakably breathes the still air of Goldsmith's deserted village, if the Gazette is a real index of life lived and acted out in that notorious place a hundred years ago.

If the old editor and pressmen, compositor and newsboy, who had the getting up of the Boston Gazette, could get a glimpse of one of the modern daily newspapers which has the capacious ability of engulfing all that the old sheet contains in its front page with a few columns to spare; could enter one of the great buildings with its modern equipment and facilities for newspaper work; its army of night and day workers; its typewriters, telegraphers, editorial and reportorial staffs, and the sight of its massive, complex printing presses turning out its thousands of copies, one wonders what the exclamation would be.

The truth is, the modern newspaper reader can hardly appreciate the great miracles which have been performed in the art of printing and newspaper work, unless once in a while he gets a glimpse of a newspaper printed a century ago. Those who are in the habit of having brought to their front doors the Duluth Evening Herald the year round, with the latest news gleaned from worldwide sources scarcely a few hours old; and the news, local, state and national, strikingly full of living interest concerning all realms where men and women live, move and have their being; who sometimes are a little impatient because inclement weather once in a while detains the news carrier a few minutes out of his usual time of delivery, are hardly capable, when taking the evening paper into the sitting room for a couple of hours with its wells of information of the whole world's doings, of realizing the thousand and one agencies which are ever at work, to bring such a thing to pass.

The Boston Gazette, which Mr. Mather has in his possession, though printed as a general newspaper, with the following heading, "Price $4 per annum, printed semi-weekly, $2 in advance—12½ cents per single copy," is no more like a modern newspaper than ancient alchemy is like modern chemistry or astrology like modern astronomy. In looking it over it seems more like a simple advertising medium, with a column or two of peculiar miscellany dovetailed in. Advertising of every kind covers the front page of the Gazette, from pills down to lottery tickets, making it as dead a piece of printing to modern eyes and thought as one could possibly imagine. Running through the advertisements, one is strangely moved with the many auctioneers who seem to be having a great time in Boston about 100 years ago. The Evening Herald of Thursday informs Duluth and vicinity that the first auctioneer's license ever taken out in St. Louis county, was taken out this week, and that the auctioneer would attend his auctions in dress suit, and some of us exclaimed: "There is something new under the sun!" but verily, not so. It looks from the Gazette that the auctioneer was high mucky muck, generalissimo, etc., in Boston a hundred years ago, and that they must have been doing something more than playing cricket or quoits on Boston Common during waking hours. Everything seems to have been sold under the hammer. Vessels no sooner run into Boston port and got their things wharfed than the auctioneer seems to have been on hand with his hammer, in his swallow tailed coat and his throat well oiled, for the notices of sales include everything which the modern wholesale houses handle in these days.

General shipping intelligence runs also promiscuously through the sheet, and you are liable to stumble upon, after reading a sale to be of salt and lemons, some sailing vessel standing ready for hire.

The modern theater-goer would have to get a half holiday to attend the theater in those days from the following announcement of a play which is given as printed: "At the Boston theater, a famous comedy entitled, "The School of Reform," will be given tomorrow evening, October 12. Doors open at quarter past 5, and the curtain to rise precisely at a quarter past six. Boxes, $1; green boxes, 75c; pit, 50c, gallery, 37½c." One can imagine the rest, with its candles, colonial dames, gentlemen of leisure, and the rag, tag and bob-tail making up the procession.

In what one would term in a modern newspaper, "City Briefs," the following item is found: "For the Trial of Speed and Strength. A match will take place this day, at the Washington Course, one mile from the Medford hotel, between the 'Lily' and the 'Fly Catcher.' To start precisely at 4 p. m. and run four miles." Emphasis seems always to be placed on 'precisely', but one wonders who Lily and the Fly Catcher are, and of course who came out best, and as to whether there were any stakes, and how much.

The dramatic critic had a snap on that Gazette, which we conclude from the following brief notice: "The new Comedians were cheered with a friendly welcome, and evidenced, throughout their respective personations, a disposition to deserve the high distinction thus rendered them."

A schoolmaster has the following inserted concerning primary tuition at an evening school: "Gentlemen who wish for private and confidential lessons may be accommodated by their humble servant, Andrew Campbell."

From what some have learned from a nationality in the scholastic profession bearing that name, let us hope that those Boston gentlemen who needed a few private and confidential lessons, got off easily; for we never found very much humility in a Scotch schoolmaster. We got the Three Rs, some of them with a burr; we got a thorough training in text-books, and we give him credit for it; but we learned never to look for humility from Campbell, the humility was on our side of the desk.

The other paper, "The Genius of the Lakes," printed at Erie, Pa., June 22, 1816, is decidedly a better paper, with more local coloring in its items. But most of the small items on foreign affairs were between three and four months old before they reached the editor. There seems to have been something of a poetic type about the editor, for as short as the sheet is, Thomas Moore's poem on "Love and Reason," and other "selected poetry," are printed; the column winding up with this epigram: "From the same cause we often perceive, Different effects rise, Thus Slop by Drugs contrives to live, While every patient dies."

Among other items are found an announcement of a meeting to make preparation for the Fourth of July, a plea to give congressmen more than $6 a day when on duty, a strong argument for a great harbor at Erie, and small but glowing account of America's great natural wonders.

The only up-to-date thing one can see as he glances from one to the other of its four very small pages is the severe conversation about the weather, which feels very Duluth-like at this season of the year. The philosophers seem to blame it to the spots on the sun, the "Feds" to the rise of Democracy in the late New York elections; while others to the northwesterly winds, and I guess the last is about the nearest we can come to it in this Northland. We will give the dead prognosticator our thanks, but we will take notice tonight in The Duluth Herald what that fellow Richardson of the United States weather bureau has to say with his flags and telephone about the northwesters for Sunday.

But just the same, no surer way of seeing that the world has made great strides along all lines than in comparing newspapers from decade to decade. The modern newspaper has become one of the great educators of the twentieth century. There is not a living, worthy interest but what it handles for the betterment of mankind generally. Man's ingenuity has been as marked in the realm of newspaperdom as in any sphere. The modern newspaper, tossed on the front porch of millions of homes every night and morning, read in the homes, on the cars, in the counting house; studied in the schools; its printed white wings seen in workshops, in fact, hungered after in far off Alaska by those who have followed the Call of the Wild, and even being printed daily on our Atlantic greyhounds, is one of the miracles of human progress.

MEMORIAL DAY MEMORIES

How the Waifs of the New York Juvenile Asylum Fought "fer Lincoln"---Lads Who Campaigned With Grant at Fort Donelson and Shiloh.

New York, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—When on Memorial day in New York City the veterans of the Grand Army march to the tomb of their buried leader where he lies in state on the bank of the Hudson, one of the bands that regularly joins the procession is the Boys' band from the New York Juvenile asylum at Chauncey, N. Y. Forty strong, in dashing uniforms of gray, it moves with martial importance, for it has traditions to bear, and it plays a really inspiring music to which the old warriors lift their feet with as much enthusiasm as ever of old.

Why these youngster musicians are always chosen to accompany the veterans is a matter of conjecture among the bystanders, but there is a peculiar fitness in their selection. Not only are there several asylum boys "growed out of knowledge" among the marching ranks of the G. A. R., in the memorial parade of New York City, but many more died forty years ago doing distinguished service in the original army of the republic.

At the opening of the war the New York Juvenile asylum was housed in a big barracks on Washington Heights, sheltering nearly a thousand children. Six hundred and ninety-nine of these were boys, and as the great trouble grew more and more imminent the lads became so deeply stirred with the war impulse that the asylum could not hold them, and all who could do so managed to get away and enlist. About a hundred of these abandoned or erring waifs joined the army, not alone from the New York headquarters of the asylum, but from homes in the West where they had been placed with prosperous farmers, fiercely sympathizing fosterfathers who aided and abetted them in most instances to go out and fight.

The asylum boys in particular felt that they had a highly personal interest in the Civil war. For the great man at the head of the nation, Lincoln himself, had sent to them a special message. In a conversation with the late George H. Allen, the western agent for the asylum, during which the two discussed the eternal problem of giving to handicapped young lives the opportunity to win, Lincoln said to tell the boys that "they must follow truth, justice and humanity, if they wished to become useful and honorable men."

The words were enshrined in a huge frame and hung upon the wall of the assembly room, where every morning they excited the contemplation of the youngsters assembled for singing and prayer. Many took the words quite literally to heart, and in the end managed to live up to them. The Civil war, when it broke, was "Lincoln's war," to them, and for the sake mainly of the personal message he sent to them, the Asylum went wildly partisan "fer Lincoln," and mad for war-glory that should show him that they heeded. Had he taken the side of the South they would perhaps have been as enthusiastic in that cause.

A county judge in the West today, Michael H., historian of a Grand Army post in Illinois, recollects that the words of Lincoln gave him his first definite impulse in the right direction, though, having been sent to the Asylum for stealing a push-cart of apples, he writes, too, that "the apple caused the fall of Adam and the rise of Mike." He joined Battery B of the First New Jersey artillery, a division that saw some spirited action, and Mike, his comrades tell, "stuck to his gun like a friend and a brother."

The Illinois regiments, from the home state of Abraham Lincoln, won the greatest number of recruits from the Juvenile Asylum. Several indentured in the West, finding themselves too young for the regular service, enlisted as drummer boys and drummed Illinois regiments to victory. Two who had become great friends, and were living on neighboring farms, joined the Eighth Illinois, when it mustered in at Cairo, Ill., on a hot day in July, 1861. The two comrades fought side by side at the siege of Fort Donelson, and fell there, giving their lives to the precarious victory of Grant, which made possible the more significant victories of Shiloh and Vicksburg, that gave Grant's greatness an opportunity. In other words, the young heirs of the Asylum's care today would not be drumming veterans to a Grant's tomb on Memorial day had their gallant young forerunners died in vain before Fort Donelson.

Several Asylum boys fought with the Ninth Illinois at bloody Shiloh, and were among the regiment's 357 killed on the first day of battle, the terrible 6th of April, when the flesh was sown with dead in a strip some four miles long and two miles wide. There were Asylum boys in Nelson's division when it came bringing first reinforcements to the hard-pressed Union soldiers at Shiloh, whose "glittering bayonets, moving in perfect order, brought hope to the Federals."

One lad who lived in Champaign County, Illinois, with a good-hearted farmer whom he delighted to worry with malicious and mischievous tricks, was hanging over the fence one day plotting new vexations when he saw the famous Lead Mine regiment of Illinois volunteers go by through the dust of Champaign City. There were no more chores in the farm-yard for him. He was off and away and joined the regiment on the day it left Cairo with Gen. Grant to bivouac on the Tennessee. There were two other Asylum boys in the same regiment, and all three did brave service in the severest engagements of the Tennessee company. The regiment received its baptism of fire at Fort Donelson when it went to the relief of the Forty-sixth Illinois. It gallantly supported Sherman at Shiloh and Grant at the terrible artillery duel of Vicksburg, where it held the position directly in front of Fort Hill, regarded as the key to the enemy's fortress. It took part in the assault on the enemy's works, and was selected to be the storming party when a breach was made by the explosion of a mine. The match was applied, the regiment rushed in, and a frightful conflict ensued, in which the Lead Mines lost eighty-three fighters. When the city surrendered they were given the advance, as the conquering army marched in to take possession, and in further recognition of their valor the flag of the Lead Mine regiment was raised upon the courthouse to denote the Federal possession.

An Asylum boy was first lieutenant in Logan's crack regiment. Others enlisted in the Stanton Legion, and some in Rev. Capt. Todd's famous Missouri regiment. One was with Sigel in the fierce little skirmish at Centerville, and another was a bearer of dispatches to Gen. Grant, and had been with Gen. Lyon, "the heroic Lyon," when he fell at Wilson's Creek the year before. Some were with the Thirteenth Illinois when it was first at Chickasaw Bayou; two joined the Lincoln Rifles, and one was with Clark at the capture of Ponchatoula in Louisiana.

When Corcoran's regiment, the Sixty-ninth returned to New York, bringing back its banners perforated with the bullets of Bull Run, and New Yorkers gave it a vast, prolonged ovation, one little Asylum lad, carried off his feet by enthusiasm, broke away from the House of Reception where he was temporarily detained, and enlisted as a drummer boy. A number of others joined the famous Irish brigade and followed its fortunes through Malvern Hill, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, dropping off, one here and one there, to swell the grand total of 1,352 killed and wounded, almost half the regiment's strength.

The Asylum boys of the early '60s left no records of failure behind them. Their names fill a hundred honorable places in the immortal muster roll of the Grand Army of the Republic. The Asylum boys of today who are marching in their places have, of course, no opportunity to go out with a gun and fight "fer Lincoln"; but even to their young philosophies it becomes evident that there are other battles to be fought, battles which it may be said are going on all the more bravely in memory of the Asylum boys who won theirs forty years ago.

THE WESTERN COAL INDUSTRY

Chicago, May 25.—The Black Diamond, official newspaper of the coal industry, reviewing the Western trade tomorrow, will say:

Interest in the Western trade this week centers in the joint conventions of operators and miners being held in Indiana and Illinois, and the strike situation in Ohio. While no actual progress has been made toward a wage agreement in any of these states, there is evidently a disposition on the part of the miners to make concessions. The operators in all three states are standing firm and are determined that they will secure an advantage or continue the present suspension of their properties until it is granted. In all three states the miners are somewhat disorganized, owing to the failure of their union to pay strike benefits. The disaffection to which reference was made in this column a week ago is increasing as the financial resources of the miners are further depleted, and they have no means of replenishing them. This is the only feature of the situation which gives indication of weakness and which may possibly result in wage agreements in some of the fields now idle. If it does not bring an agreement immediately, it may inside of the next thirty days, and it is a safe estimate of the outlook to say that by June 15 at the latest the men will have yielded and have returned to work in the states where they are now idle on the 1904-1905 wage basis. As was stated above, there is a possibility that the disintegration of their forces may occur at and time, when the miners' leaders will be forced to accept the offer of the operators or have an open rebellion of their membership on hand.

In Ohio the outlook for such a rebellion is already indicative of a breaking up of the union forces unless something is done by their leaders. The reason that some of the mines in that state were not started on Monday as was expected is found in the fact that the operators by waiting a few days could avoid any trouble at the mines, and their men might return to work in a body. In the interest of peace no action was taken, and it is freely predicted by leading operators of that state that all the mines will be working on ore before June 1, with a full complement of men at the wage scale which was rejected at Indianapolis. Unfortunately for the miners of Ohio last year was a poor one, the average earnings at the high rate of wages paid being much less than in most of the other states. As a consequence when the present strike was inaugurated the miners had very little money to meet their individual obligations, and practically they have received no strike benefits, so that they are reaching a point where they must return to work to insure three meals a day and even the necessities of life.

It follows that if the miners of Ohio return to work at the old scale that those in Indiana and Illinois will follow on about the same basis. There seems to be no doubt but that the rank and file of the miners' organization is now ready and willing to return to work at a fair scale of wages, and that in many instances owing to the fact that they have received no strike benefits their loyalty to the union is wavering. Any concession on the part of the miners of an adjacent state would therefore almost surely result in a stampede in the two states mentioned.

For these reasons it is a safe conclusion that the trouble is drawing near its end, and that the miners will have had their long idleness without any compensation in return for it—in other words, that the operators will win a victory. In this connection it is only fair to say that the standpat operators of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are stronger and more united today than at any previous time. The signal victory of the operators in the anthracite region had a strengthening influence with them, and since then not an operation has signed up the provisional wage scale in any of the states, with but one or two exceptions. In addition most of the operators receive daily reports of the sentiment prevailing among their miners, and they know better to what extent the feeling prevails in antagonism to the union at present than do some of the national and state officers of the miners' organization. They also know that steadfastness at this time means the ultimate achievement of th ends aimed at in Indianapolis, so that there will be no break in the ranks anywhere.

Notwithstanding the fact that the strike is now in its seventh week in the principal bituminous regions, there is no shortage of coal anywhere.

In the anthracite trade the demand for coal has not improved in the West to the extent expected. Most of the shipping companies in Chicago complain that they are receiving a very small volume of orders, although it is now the latter part of the month and only a few days remain in which buyers can secure the advantage resulting from the May discount. In all probability there will be a flurry of business next week until the June discount goes into effect, but the situation is scarcely as active as was expected this month, which can be interpreted as meaning that the trade will take in its coal late this season. This will have a bad influence, because it will crowd an unusual amount of activity into a few months, when the car supply will be bad, and there will be other difficulties in the way of prompt transportation. Coal will be needed at that time, so that special urgency in its movement will be demanded by retailers and other large buyers.

Some coal is moving by lake to Western dock points, but dock companies report about as much dullness in the demand as those located at Chicago. All retail Western coal merchants say that business is very quiet and express much disappointment. A number of consumers took in their coal in April, notwithstanding the higher prices which prevailed, and others seem to be in no hurry to stock domestic bins at this time, evidently believing they can secure all the coal they may require later. Evidently the 40 cent discount which prevails does not offer sufficient advantage to prove an incentive to liberal buying.

HIBBING

Hibbing, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. James Walsh and Darrel Clancy of Duluth have been visiting their sister, Mrs. Frank Turnbull of Mahoning street.

The boys of the Susquehanna mine office are about to start on their fine new tennis court. Mining Engineer John A. Steele has already driven the stakes, and the actual work of leveling and construction will be pushed on rapidly. It is hoped that the fence between the Susquehanna office and the Episcopal church can be removed so as to make more room for the court, and Rev. Frank Durant, pastor of the church, is in communication with Bishop Morrison of Duluth regarding this. If the permission is gained it will make room for an elegant and elaborate court, and will afford much amusement for the boys at the mining office, their friends and the family of the Episcopal minister.

Father Gamache of the Catholic church is preparing a finer flower garden this year than ever before. The 50-foot lot that was purchased by the Catholic congregation last fall has been cleared up and fenced in with the other church property, thus enlarging the beautiful garden to twice its former size. Mr. Gamache takes great pride in his flowers, which last year attracted a great amount of attention for their rare beauty and large quantities.

Edward Stoffel and Miss Whiting drove over from Chisholm last Wednesday evening.

Grear H. Thompson, superintendent for the Drake & Stratton company, has purchased and brought to Hibbing his elegant new automobile. The machine is of a very late and improved type, and of a large and generous build. Mr. Thompson has built a very neat little house for his auto, at the rear of his residence.

W. C. Northey, formerly proprietor of the Hibbing Mercantile company, who recently closed out his business interests to again enter upon mining work, accepting a very fine position with the Mahoning Ore & Steel company at Leetonia, Ohio, and left for that city Tuesday morning. Mr. Northey has been about a mile and a half west of Hibbing, has moved with his family to the Mahoning location and is occupying the house recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. George Lerch.

James Nolan has been grading the lawn about his magnificent new home on Third avenue, and has planted sarubs and trees, thus helping to beautify that section of the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed will soon move into their new home on Fourth avenue and Mahoning street, which they recently purchased from W. C. Northey.

Claude M. Atkinson, postmaster-to-be of Hibbing and editor and owner of the Mesaba Ore a weekly publication, is among the progressive Hibbing men who are striving to set a good example by doing their le sto build up and beautify the grounds around their respective homes. Mr. Atkinson has set out trees and graded his lawn, and made other very beneficial improvements.

John Brahaney is being visited by his sister, Mrs. Catherine McCormic of Campbellford, Ont., whom he has not seen for twenty-five years. His niece, Miss Mary McCormic, who is a graduate trained nurse of Buffalo, N. Y., is also visiting him.

Mrs. J. M. Dixon went to St. Paul and Minneapolis the fore part of the week to visit friends.

Thomas York of the Swan River Logging company was in Duluth Monday.

Ed La Chance left Thursday morning for Duluth on a business trip.

Harry Masseau went to Duluth Thursday.

J. B. Connors, W. G. Close and Frank Ansley have shipped in several cars of fine cattle, and will let them graze on the fields around Hibbing.

Among the visitors of note who came to Hibbing during the week was R. W. Hitchcock of Bemidji, Minn. He is the late editor of the Bemidji Daily Pioneer.

D. D. McEachin, manager of the Itasca Mercantile company, went to St. Paul on a business trip Wednesday.

The good people of Hibbing who enjoy dancing are looking forward for the coming of June 1, when a benefit dance will be given at the Close hall. This will be to benefit the Episcopal church, and those interested in this church are striving hard to make the dance a success.

The city is building a sidewalk from the end of Sellers street to the Penobscot location, west of town. This is a very fine improvement and will certainly be appreciated by the people of that suburb, who have had to travel through all kinds of mud in order to reach town. The folks who like to take moonlight walks will also be helped considerably by the building of this walk.

E. B. Dunning, for several years chief bookkeeper and assistant manager of the Itasca Mercantile company at their Hibbing store, departed Thursday noon to enter upon his new vocation with the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company of Duluth. On Tuesday evening a very delightful party was given in honor of Mr. Dunning at the Close hall. About twenty-five couples were present and the evening was largely spent in dancing to music furnished by Heine's orchestra. The best wishes of the people of Hibbing go with Mr. Dunning.

A memorial service will be held on next Monday evening by the Modern Brotherhood of America at Central hall. Judge Brady, Sr., will be the principal speaker of the evening. A general invitation is extended to the public. A lunch will be served following the program, for which there will be no charge.

Word was received here Thursday by Manager Murphy of the Superior hotel, from Village President and Mrs. Frank Ansley, stating that their little 16-months-old daughter had died at the hospital in St. Paul, from heart failure. The death occurred at 9 a. m. Mr. and Mrs. Ansley took the little child to the Twin Cities the early part of the week for treatment. It is expected that they will return with the remains within a few days.

W. A. Landis has come from Osakis, Minn., to take charge of the soda fountain at Hibbing pharmacy.

John L. Sullivan is booked to appear at the Power theater on May 31 and June 1, 2, and 3, with the Frank Hall Vaudeville company. This ought to draw a large crowd, as there are many anxious to see the ex-prize fighter.

Hon. Frank A. Wildes, Jr., the well known Hibbing attorney, will speak at the Episcopal church Sunday evening on "The Spirit of the Law." Special music, assisted by the orchestra, will be provided. Rev. Frank Durant, pastor of the Episcopal church, believes in popular services, and is getting the laymen of the town to preach the sermons alternately at the Sunday evening services.

Mrs. Burdsono is putting a plate glass front onto her confectionery store on Third avenue, and is also making other improvements of considerable note.

Mrs. M. H. Pearce will leave for an extended trip as soon as school closes. Mrs. Pearce will go to Cincinnati, Ohio, to visit relatives and friends, and does not expect to return to Hibbing until the fall of the year.

Miss Caldwell, the drawing teacher at the Hibbing public schools, has found it necessary, because of poor health, to make a radical change, and will depart the fore part of the week for several weeks' outing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Chapman, about 40 miles northwest of Hibbing. Miss Caldwell has found it necessary to give up her work at the public school, and also has given up all her private pupils. She has turned her music pupils over to Miss Joerns, the new teacher of music from Duluth.

The Masons have started on their fine new temple, which is being erected on the corner of Mahoning street and Third avenue. F. C. Norlander of St. Paul has the contract, and has already started excavating for the basement. The store of D. G. Brose has been temporarily moved into the street, and upon completion of the Masonic temple, Mr. Brose will occupy the lower floor, and his old store building will be moved.

The tiny restaurant on Third avenue, known as "Barney's Place," which was closed for some time, owing to the death of "Barney" H. Flaherty, is now again opened under the management of a nephew of the late proprietor, who came to Hibbing several days ago to take over the property.

At the last meeting of the village council an ordinance was passed prohibiting any one from replacing their old wooden sidewalks with anything other than cement, along Pine street and Third avenue. Accordingly much work has been done along the improvement line, and a great number of the property holders along the business streets are substituting fine cement walks. The old wooden walks were in many places worn to a very dangerous degree.

The residence owned by R. M. Sellwood, and occupied by the family of the late Capt. Harry Thomas, was vacated this week and the newly appointed superintendent for the Sellwood string of mines has begun moving into the home.

W. J. Barrett of Proctor visited Hibbing Tuesday.

Frank A. Wildes, Jr., state inspector of mines, made a business and official trip to Virginia last Wednesday.

Ed Stoffle, cashier of the Chisholm National bank, was in Hibbing Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Newhinney are rejoicing over the arrival of a fine 12-pound daughter.

J. C. Saunderson of Sturgeon Lake, and well known in Hibbing, went to Duluth early in the week to make final proof on his claim.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will hold their monthly sale of home baking and home cooking at Mrs. James Butchart's store on Saturday afternoon. These sales are drawing many people, as there is always plenty of the best articles there to be obtained. Everybody is invited to come.

Clark Hamilton of Duluth was in Hibbing Tuesday.

Elinor Shonberg of the Hibbing pharmacy, went to Bear River the fore part of the week to locate and file on a claim.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Osherman are spending the week with friends and relatives in Superior and Duluth. Mr. Osherman is in charge of H. Bloom of Superior, during the former's absence.

The Modern Samaritans are planning on giving a fine and elaborate dance on the evening of June 29. It will be known as the midsummer dance, and will be appropriately furnished with electric fans, and ice cream will be served, besides other suitable refreshments.

David Graham, W. J. Ryder and O. W. Randall attended a meeting of the Knights of Pythias lodge at Chisholm on Monday evening. They went to witness the second rank conferred upon three candidates, and report that they had a very enjoyable time.

The dance which was to have been given by the Royal Neighbors about two weeks ago, and which was postponed until Friday night of this week, met with a fine success, and the ladies realized in a financial way all they anticipated, and are delighting over the grand success of their undertaking.

Edward Yates, who is very well known in social circles here, and who has been employed for some time as mining engineer at the Laura and Winnifred mines, resigned his position and left last Friday for Cananea, Mex., where he has accepted a very desirable position with the Greene Consolidated Copper company. His friends in Hibbing wish him the very best of success. Mr. Krum, a mining engineer, has taken the place vacated by Mr. Yates in Hibbing.

Services will be held at the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning at 10:45 and in the evening at 7:30. Both sermons will be preached by the pastor, Rev. Charles P. Bates. A cordial invitation is extended to all to come and participate in the worship. It is especially requested that all remember that the free reading room, wherein all the magazines can be found, is always open every afternoon and evening, and the young men and boys of the men of Hibbing are especially urged not to miss this opportunity of getting near to the good books and magazines as this is the only chance offered in Hibbing. Visitors are always welcome. The free reading room was established and is being supported by the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, and their friends, which is an organization of moral and Christian principles composed of yonug men of Hibbing. Now is a good time for any young man desiring to become a member to hand in his name.

E. C. Clemens, D. D., presiding elder of the Methodist churches in the Duluth district, gave a lecture for the benefit of the Hibbing Methodist church on Thursday evening. His subject was "Heading the Procession." The church was filled with a large and appreciative audience. His talk was a combination of instruction and humor, full of keen wit, leaving many opportunities for laughter, and also deep and serious emotions. The lecturer is possessed of much of the wit that his cousin, Mark Twain, also has, and the people of Hibbing are ceerainly proud to have Mr. Clemens come for their benefit and are glad the project met with such excellent success financially, about $60 being realized, after paying all expenses. Rev. Charles Fox Davis, pastor of the Lester Park Methodist church of Duluth, accompanied Dr. Clemens. Miss Marion Herrick sang the "Holy City" in a very pleasing and sweet manner, and her accompaniment was played by Miss Joerns. The new pews are now in the Methodist church, and the work of re-modeling the building is about finished. The reopening will be celebrated June 24, when an excellent program will be rendered, for which music practice is already in progress. All the ministers who have at any time had charge of the Hibbing Methodist church have been invited to take part in this service. The carpet and furnace will be put in the building some time this summer. The new parsonage is now completed with the exception of decorative work, and Rev. Rupert Siwinnerton expects to move into it during the coming week. Services will be held at the Methodist church next Sunday morning at 10:30, and evening at 7:30. The pastor, Rev. Rupert Swinnerton, will preach at the morning service on "God's Remedy for Sin." His subject in the evening discourse will be "The Bible Heaven." Special music is being prepared for the service.

George Cobb, Jr., enteralned about fifty of his friends at his home on Third avenue and Superior street on Thursday evening. This happy event was to celebrate Mr. Cobb's birthday. A good time was enjoyed by all, and delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Cobb, assisted very ably by friends. The young people of Hibbing know that George Cobb is a royal entertainer, as well as a fine speaker, and wish him many happy returns of the day. Many different kinds of games were played to pass away the evening hours in revelry, and the joyful merry-makers broke up about 11 o'clock.

BROOKSTON

Brookston, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Joseph Gfroerer, who has been local station agent since last August, is about to give up his duties here to accept a more lucrative position on the Dakota division of the Great Northern. PROCTOR

Proctor, May 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The work on the new buildings in the railroad yurds are progressing rapidly. The depot and general office building presents a very pleasing appearance. The second floor will be divided into offices for general superintendent, chief dispatcher, train master, road master, etc. The first floor will contain two waiting rooms, a baggage room, and general agent's and ticket office. The telephone exchange will also be located in this building. It will be ready for occupancy about July 1. The foundation is in and most of the steel up on the new engine storage house, which will contain sixteen tracks, each long enough for two engines without tanks. The foundation of the transfer table has been extended to accommodate the enginehouse. Work on the big reservoir is being pushed. This, when completed, will insure a permanent water supply for shops and engines at all times.

The Great Northern Power company is unloading at Proctor some of the steel which is to be used in constructing the steel towers for the power wires on its right-of-way from Thompson to Duluth. The right-of-way passes within a mile of Proctor, southeast of the town.

Deputy Game Warden Green and Thomas Storey of Duluth, were in town last week Saturday, to investigate the matter of the Midway trout. Complaint had been made to the warden that Ole Gulbrandson had built a screen across the Midway, in order to keep all the trout in the upper end along which he owns considerable property, and that he had also posted notices forbidding all persons to fish in such domain. The screen and edict combined, as may be inferred, stirred up a good deal of wrath among local fishermen, and the warden was asked to look into the matter.

The Proctor branch of the National Protective legion met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Thomas Arthur. The installation of officers took place at this meeting. Most of the officers are the same that served last term, and were installed as follows: Mrs. William Granger, president; Mrs. Alex Brayden, vice president; Mrs. J. B. Fitzgerald, past president; Mrs. Helen Keahling, secretary; Mrs. William McCollum, treasurer; Mrs. Thomas Arthur and Mrs. J. H. Whalen, trustees; Mrs. Ed Hannan and Mrs. William Greene, sentinels; Mrs. Hank Smith, chaplain. Refreshments were served, and a pleasant social time enjoyed.

Mrs. J. C. Tryder has returned from Duluth, where she underwent an operation at St. Mary's hospital.

U. A. Burnham of Duluth has come to Proctor to make his home with his son, H. S. Burnham. Mr. Burnham is a member of the G. A. R., and fought in the Seventy-sixth regiment of New York.

Arthur Bainsville will build a house soon on East Third street, just beyond the Catholic church corner.

The regular meeting of the village council was called for Monday evening at the hall. The only members able to be present were Councilmen McEwen and Pusher; there being no quorum, the meeting was adjourned.

A special meeting will be called for some evening next week.

The next meeting of the Protective legion will be held with Mrs. Alex Brayden, on June 19.

Friday afternoon Memorial day exercises were held at the schools. An interesting program of recitations and patriotic songs was given by the pupils, and addresses were delivered by two members of the Duluth G. A. R. posts, Capt. John Randall and Veteran R. W. Mars. The addresses were heard with much interest and pleasure by the pupils, and helped to impress upon them the significance of the day.

Mr. Randall was captain of the land forces in the war, and Mr. Mars held the rank of chief engineer in the navy.

U. A. Burnham of Proctor will address the pupils of the Whittier school in Duluth.

Word was received last week by Mr. and Mrs. George E. McEwen of the death of Mrs. McEwen's mother, Mrs. James Riddle, at her home in Eustis, Florida. Mrs. Riddle was taken sick very suddenly, May 15, and died on Thursday, after an illness of only four days. The funeral was held on Friday, the 18th, and burial was made at Eustis. With Mrs. Riddle, at her death were her husband, her daughter, Miss Elva Riddle, and her two sons, W. A. Riddle and C. E. Riddle. Surviving Mrs. Riddle are her husband, James Riddle of Eustic, Florida, and seven children; Miss Elva Riddle of Eustis; C. E. Riddle of Bayonne, Fla.; Rene Riddle of Tampa, Fla.; W. A. Riddle of Tampa; Arthur L. Riddle of Chicago; Mrs. George E. McEwen of proctor, and E. F. Riddle of Duluth. LITTLE CUCKOO SPARROW'S EXCITING EXPERIENCE

By MAUD WALKER

Cuckoo Sparrow was not very old, and, having been but a short time out of his mother's nest, he was perhaps more venturesome than wise. One day, noticing some tall church spires and buildings a long distance away from the grove of trees in which he lived, he conceived the idea of going to them and satisfying his curiosity concerning them.

But before starting for the town—for town it was where the church spires and buildings were—Cuckoo Sparrow went to the tree where his mother lived and told her of his intended journey.

"Now, my dear, foolish son," said Mrs. Sparrow, holding up a warning wing, "don't do anything so rash. There are many dangers in that strange place, and many a venturesome bird who has gone there never returned. Great beings without wings walk about on long legs and have for nests those immense things built on the ground. Take your mother's advice and be satisfied to live a happy, uneventful life in this protecting forest, where food in plenty abounds, where soft winds come to swing us to sleep every night in our nests and where the sun smiles through the leaves at early morning just as we begin our morning songs."

But Cuckoo Sparrow, like many another wayward bird, shook his little head, flipped his tail and flapped his wings as he said:

"Now, mamma dear, you are a bit old-fashioned and stay-in-nest. But I am young, brave and full of curiosity to see the world. I know you mean well, but"—

Cuckoo Sparrow did not finish the sentence in words, but from the way in which he turned his little, round head to one side, cocked up his eye, lifted his tail and folded his wings Mrs. Mamma Sparrow knew full well what he meant.

"Well," she sighed, "if you insist on going I cannot prevent it, for ever since you left my nest and found your own food you have been your own master. All I can say is that you go in opposition to my wish."

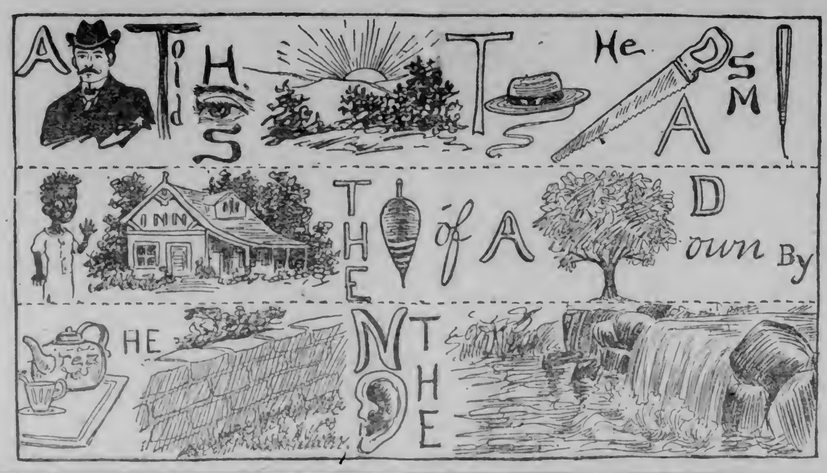
"Now, mamma dear, you must not take so gloomy a view of my going forth into the world," said Cuckoo Sparrow. "When I return you will be glad I went, for you will have the pleasure of hearing about all the strange sights I shall have seen and of my thrilling adventures. So now adieu. I am off."

And Cuckoo Sparrow lifted his strong young wing and soared off toward the town, about a mile distant, while his poor mother sat watching him with anxiety in her heart.

It did not take Cuckoo Sparrow so long to cover the distance as it would take a boy or girl to do so, and after about 10 minutes flying he perched himself on the very top of a tall church spire and began to look about him in the streets below. There were strange beings darting hither and thither, some disappearing inside those immense nests his mother had spoken of, while others kept coming forth from other nests. Some of these nests were much larger than others and all were placed in rows.

Cuckoo Sparrow did not know that these "large nests" were houses and that the "strange beings" darting about, in and out of them, were people. But such was the case.

After Cuckoo Sparrow had seen all he could from long range, without harm to himself, he became desirous of getting a closer peep into one of those big nests. "I'll just fly about and see if I can find an opening in the top of one of them," he said to himself. Pretty soon he alighted on the top of a chimney that erected itself above the sharp comb of a two-story dwelling-house. "Ah, ha!" said Cuckoo Sparrow, peeping down into the dark hole that seemed to be bottomless, "what have we here? I do believe, upon my gizzard, that this opening leads inside this big nest. As I hear no sound nor see no light, I think I'll just take a dip down and explore the place below." And so saying, Cuckoo Sparrow dropped, head first, down the black as night chimney into a long, winding way that led through the thick wall of the house.



He soon found himself at bottom, and such a black, dirty place it was, all filled with queer stuff that rattled whenever he moved about. Then he could see through a crack into a larger space where were assembled a number of the immense beings he had seen walking about on the long legs, darting hither and thither. As one of these beings came quite close to Cuckoo Sparrow's hiding-place the little fellow became frightened and decided to get away as fast as he could. But when he looked about for the opening through which he had flown down he could see nothing but inky blackness. Then he ran about his small prison, striking his body against the noise-making mese of strange, rustling stuff which filled the floor of his quarters. It was this noise that caused certain sudden developments in the case of Cuckoo Sparrow.

Now, the place wherein the self-imprisoned bird was hopping about so frantically, seeking some door of escape, was nothing other than a fireplace which, not then being in use, was half-filled with refuse in the shape of old papers. It was this which made the rustling noise, and the rustling noise caught the ear of a big boy who was in the room.

"Hist!" cried the big boy, going near to the fireplace which was closed by a perforated sheetiron cover. "I do believe there is a bird in the grate. Hey, there, kids, go shut all the doors in the room and close the windows! I'll let him out in the room and then we'll catch him. We can put him in the old dead mockingbird's cage."

Several boys and girls who had been addressed as "kids" ran and closed the windows and doors. Then the big boy took the iron shield from the grate and out flew the startled Cuckoo Sparrow. Round and round the room he darted, his little heart palpitating with fear, for all those awful beings were frantically chasing after him.

And how he did struggle to keep his freedom, even after the children had cruelly exhausted him and lay rough hands upon him. But his fighting was of no avail, for one hand of the big boy closed over his quivering little body and held him fast.

"Git the cage," the big boy cried. And the other boys and a girl ran wildly from the room to obey. In a few minutes they came rushing back with a rusty bird prison that goes by the name of cage. Into this horrid wired thing the big boy put the wayward little Cuckoo Sparrow, who now wished with all his heart that he had not disobeyed his wise old mother. All the scenes of his happy life—happy up till the present hour—passed across his mind's eye, and he sat, drooping and heavy-hearted, in a corner of his prison.

Opened the door and said "Shoo! Fly home again."

For several days he moped in the cage, refusing to eat and drinking only when his thirst forced him to do so. And all the time those horrible beings (horrible to him)—those boys and the girl—stood about his prison, sticking their fingers through the bars to poke him up, some saying "I guess he's sick; he won't eat nor sing," and others saying "Well, if he dies, we'll feed him to the cat."

At last, on the fourth day of his captivity, company in the form of a woman and a little girl came to visit at the home of his jailers, and for once Cuckoo Sparrow's tormentors let him alone in their excitement over the arrival of company. Late in the afternoon the visiting little girl saw the unhappy captive in the cage. She went to him and began to talk to him in her sweet, sympathetic voice. "Poor Birdie," she said; "you are pining your life away in that cage. It is cruel to keep you here, and if you'll make use of the opportunity I am now going to give you, it will not be many minutes before you are in the trees and sky again. Ah, here is an open window in the room! I'll set your cage near it for just a second, then open your door, and—well, you'll understand the rest. But we must be quick, for I've slipped away from the children who caught you, and very shortly they'll find me. So—here goes!"

As the little girl said this she lifted the cage from the hook from which it hung near the window, placed it on the open window ledge, opened the cage door and said "Shoo! Fly home again."

It did not take a second bidding, and almost before you could wink an eye poor Cuckoo Sparrow was going through the air on very, very weak wings toward his home, in the distant green grove. Once or twice the half-starved fellow was forced to light in the grass and gobble up a worm, for he found his strength had given way during his unhappy imprisonment, and some nourishment was quite necessary before he could reach his home.

A little later he darted into the great protecting tree where his mother sat, bowed down with grief, for she was mourning her beloved, though wayward, son as dead.

"I'm home again, mamma, dear," chirped Cuckoo Sparrow, alighting on the limb beside her. "And, what is more, I mean to stay here, too."

Then the dear Mrs. Sparrow reared her pretty head, opened her throat and sent forth the most joyous and thrilling melody she had ever sung. And when her neighbors heard the rapturous music they understood the cause, and they joined in the anthem of Mrs. Sparrow's thanksgiving till the woods rang and rang again.

And when they all assembled to welcome the truant home again Cuckoo Sparrow told of his terrible experiences in the prison within one of those huge nests where dwell the strange, big beings that have no wings and walk on very, very long legs.

A Potato Menagerie.

There is much fun for little ones in making a potato menagerie. Take half a dozen large, solid potatoes and after carefully peeling them cut animals from them. The only tool necessary is a good, sharp penknife. It requires some practice to become a skilful "potato-cutter," but the trouble is well rewarded after the boy or girl sees his collection of animals placed in a nice row on a table in front of him. There should be an elephant, a giraffe, a hippo, a horse, a lion, a cow, a bear, a hog, a cat and a dog.

After completing the menagerie the animals may be colored with water colors and ink. A hog may be left potato color save for spots made of ink. The giraffe is also left the natural potato color and spotted with ink.

It is quite surprising how lifelike these little animals will look, and they will keep for many days in good condition.

RIDDLE.

I went into the woods and got it. I sat down to look for it, and the more I hunted for it, the less I liked it; so, not being able to find it, I came away with it.

The Fate of Wicked Johnnie

Little Johnnie sat and'd a tree,
To watch a bird's nest,
Out on a limb was very large—
Let Johnnie tell the rest!

The parent birdie found her nest
Empty, then saw it all;
And, sobbing for sorrow, she said:
"Ma, what a really fall!"

And Johnnie, as he scampered ran
With need no clothes and free,
Began to marvel at birdie's lie—
Had fallen from tree, or flown?

ANNIE JAMES.

Pearlo, Prince of the Province of Pomo — A Fairy Story, by Helena Davis.

Once upon a time there was a boy who did not believe in fairies. This was a great many years ago, so many, in fact, that we do not know the year, for it was the age before histories were written. But the story of this little boy's experiences was found written on a tablet of stone that was buried under the centuries' accumulated debris.

The story, translated into English, follows:

Now, there lived in the Province of Pomo a little boy 12 years of age. His father was but a poor shepherd, who minded his flocks on the mountainside, near a beautiful lake.

One day the poor shepherd fell ill and sent his little son—by name Mizzah—to watch the flock from going astray. As Mizzah sat on the mountainside in the warm sunshine he became drowsy, and stretching himself on the green grass he fell into a deep sleep. While he slumbered thus a thief crept down over the mountainside and drove away Mizzah's flock, taking it deep into the forest, where other thieves waited to help him get the sheep out of the province altogether, a distance of five leagues.

Pretty soon Mizzah awoke and looked about him for the flock, but not a sheep was in sight. Becoming anxious, the little fellow jumped to his feet and ran up the mountainside, calling to his flock, as his father was wont to do when the sheep wandered. But in vain did Mizzah search for his flock, no sign of them did he see.

Then he sank to the ground and began to weep, for he feared to go home and tell his parents of his carelessness in neglecting the duty he was set to perform. As he was thus engaged a low voice fell upon his ear, and lifting his face from his hands he detected a small glistening object in the sand a few feet from him. It was no larger than a pea, clear as crystal and glistened as a dew-drop glistens when the sun shines full upon it.

"I am a fairy," spoke the voice, soft as the wind and like the music of a lark. This voice startled Mizzah, for it seemed to come direct from the radiant object at his feet. "Do you believe in fairies?" the voice questioned.

"No, I do not believe in fairies," replied Mizzah. "All my life I have heard of them, but I have never, never seen one."

"And must you see to believe?" the voice asked.

"What a foolish question," replied Mizzah. "But what are you that can talk, and are the shape of a tiny pebble?"

"I am Pearlo, Prince of this Province," replied the voice. "For thousands of years before people came to inhabit this mountainside I was prince of the fairies that dwelt here, but the human family have driven many of my people away, and those who remain seek safety in hiding themselves in the forms of pearls, flowers and butterflies."

"I don't believe you are a fairy," declared Mizzah. Then bethinking him of the lost flock of sheep he sprang up, crying: "If you are a fairy tell me where my sheep have wandered. Just an hour ago they were here, but now no sign of their whereabouts can I find."

There stood a handsome, youthful Prince.

"If I guide you to your sheep will you then believe in fairies?" asked the sweet voice.

"Yes, if you lead me to my flock and assist me in driving them home I shall believe all that you say, for then you will have given me proof of your fairy power," exclaimed Mizzah eagerly.

"It shall be as you desire," the voice asserted. "And the only reward I ask for leading you to your stolen flock is that you believe in me and my power, and that when you become a man and have sons and daughters of your own you will teach them the truth concerning fairies."

"Not only shall I teach my sons and daughters, when I have them, to believe in fairies, but during all the years that must pass before I am a man I shall tell of your power as a fairy prince if you but bring back my father's flock," declared Mizzah.

"All shall be well with your poor father's flock," promised Prince Pearlo, of the Province of Pomo. Then of a sudden a veil-like mist fell before Mizzah's eyes, and when, after a few minutes, it melted away there stood a handsome youthful prince, clad in purple velvet and golden ornaments, before Mizzah.

Mizzah's eyes looked for the pearl-like pebble that had spoken, but it had disappeared. The Prince, understanding Mizzah's astonishment, smiled and said: "Blow, winds, blow!" Immediately the winds came sweeping over the mountainside, then the Prince waved his arm about his head, called out in a clear tone "assemble!" Suddenly a flock of butterflies filled the air, swarming about the Prince and Mizzah. "Go," ordered Prince Pearlo, "to the lower side of yon hill over by the lake; surround the thieves who drove away this boy's flock of sheep and bring them back, sheep and thieves." Then turning to Mizzah the Prince continued to speak as the butterflies went off through the air in the direction designated by the Prince. "Those butterflies will surround the thieves who have your sheep, then they will change their forms to those of men, and, with glittering swords drawn from their sheaths, they will take the thieves captive and bring to you your flock of sheep."

Then the Prince sat down on a big stone, motioning Mizzah to a place beside him. In a few minutes they saw coming over the faraway hillside the flock of sheep being driven by four black-browed, evil-looking men who were forced to come against their will by a dozen strong knights in armor, who carried swords and battle axes.

"Why," gasped Mizzah, "there are our sheep! But where did all those splendid soldiers come from?"

"Twenty minutes ago you saw those same fine knights in armor flying about here in the form of butterflies," replied the Prince. "Now do you believe in fairies?"

Mizzah grasped the hands of Prince Pearlo and bowed low over them, kissing the Prince's brow affectionately. "Yes, yes, fairy Prince," he exclaimed, "I do believe in fairies. You are wonderful, and as good as you are great! What would have become of us had our flock been taken from us? We must surely have starved."

At this minute the flock, driven by the four thieves—who were guarded by the five knights in armor—came up the mountainside. "Oh, Prince Pearlo of the Province of Pomo," spoke one of the knights, bowing low before the prince; "here are the thieves and here also is the flock belonging to your young companion."

"You have performed your duty well and quickly, sir knights," respouded Prince Pearlo. "Now you may sit you down and rest till I have dealt with these wicked men as their dishonesty deserves to be dealt with." Then turning to Mizzah he asked: "Since these evil men have attempted to rob your honest and hard-working parents, and, seeing as I do that this is their hundredth offense, what punishment do you suggest shall be meted out to them?"

For a moment Mizzah hesitated, thinking earnestly over the question put to him. At last he said: "Oh, good Prince of Pomo, since you have the power to change butterflies into splendid knights, mayhap you can change these thieves to stone, that I may see them every day on the mountainside as a reminder of the day when I so far neglected my duty to my flock and fell asleep, thus giving the thieves a chance to come in and steal our sheep. And I may also point to the four big stones and tell the people of the village the story of their miraculous appearance here."

"A very wise suggestion," exclaimed the Prince. "And after these thieves have become stone they will no longer be a menace to the people of the Province of Pomo. So it shall be as you say."

Even as he finished speaking Prince Pearlo waved a tiny wand above his head. A mist again came over Mizzah's eyes, and as he passed his hands across them to rub away the strange, mysterious veil he heard a low groan fall from the lips of the four thieves. Then his vision became clear again, and there, in a group—rudely thrown together—were four huge bowlders on the spot where the black-browed, evil-doing thieves had stood.

Then, turning to speak to the Prince, Mizzah, to his great astonishment, saw that he, with his knights, had disappeared, and nothing remained on the mountainside save Mizzah and his flock.

And when Mizzah told the strange story in the village at the foot of the mountain he pointed to the great pile of bowlders as proof of the truth of his story, for otherwise the people would have doubted him, saying it was all a child's dream.

And so it came about that the people all came to believe in fairies, and from that day to this the mysterious workings of Prince Pearlo's descendants are felt among the dwellers in the Province of Pomo, the land where the fig trees bloom and the grapes purple under the sun.

IRISH WIT.

An Irishman, brought before the justice of the peace on a charge of vagrancy, was thus questioned:

"What trade do you follow?"

"Shure, yer honor, I'm a sailor," Pat made answer.

"What—you a seafaring man? I doubt whether you were ever at sea in your life," exclaimed the irate justice.

"Shure, and does yer honor think I came over from Ireland in a wagin?" grinned Pat.

An Irishman who had blistered his fingers by endeavoring to draw on a pair of new boots, threw them aside, exclaiming: "Pshure, an' I'll niver be able to git 'em on till I've worn 'em a day or two."

Rosebuds.

Two little rosebuds bloom side by side
Close to the garden wall;
One just reaches the wicket gate;
The other is not so tall.

One stands here the whole year through,
And one comes and goes at her will;
One never speaks nor moves from her place,
While the other is never still.

One little rosebud grows on a bush,
The other runs round on two feet;
But both are rosebuds just the same—
Very rare, and so very sweet.

LITTLE BIOGRAPHIES OF BIG MEN.

A SKETCH OF THE EARLY LIFE OF THE POET, JOAQUIN MILLER.

BY MARY GRAHAM.

"Joaquin" Miller—whose real name is Cincinnatus Hiner Miller—was born in Indiana in the year 1841. In 1853 he went with his father to Oregon and for a time worked on a farm there. This marked the beginning of a wild Western life, full of change and adventure for the boy "Cin" Miller.

While still a boy in his teens he became restless and found the life of a farmer too confining and uneventful for him. At 16 years of age he journeyed on foot to California, where he found employment as a miner. But that restlessness of spirit, that longing for change which for so many years dominated his strange life, took hold on him once again and he left California to become one of that band of adventurers that followed Walker to Nicaragua. Then he joined a tribe of Central American Indians and lived with them for almost four years, a hazardous and most exciting life, a life of hardship, privation and romance.

At the age of 20 he returned to Oregon and began the study of law. But study was not to his taste, and this new occupation was soon abandoned for something more congenial, and he found himself in the saddle riding between the gold districts of Idaho as express messenger for the mining camps. This lasted only a few months, when again he sought a new occupation, becoming editor of a little weekly newspaper.

Joaquin Miller, Poet of the Sierras.

In 1866 Joaquin Miller became ambitious for political honors, and was elected judge in Eastern Oregon, keeping the bench for four years. During these years he spent much time in reading and composing verse, becoming known as a poet of unusual ability. But although he was then first known to the world as a poet, it was not the beginning of versifying with him, for in his early teens he had listened to the promptings of the Muse Poesy and had written many soulful verses, which at times he was wont to recite with feeling to his frontier comrades as they sat around their campfires at night
